Homer L. Landis, born Jan. 17, 1874, at Wernersville, Berks county, received his literary education in the public schools in the vicinity of his home. His musical training began when he was only six years old, at which time his father taught him to sing by note, and even during his childhood he was a vocalist of local fame. He commenced to study instrumental music at the age of ten, and one of the happiest days of his life was the one on which his father purchased him his first violin. His versatility and success are of course largely due to application, but nevertheless he has natural gifts of a high order, which have been carefully cultivated. He is one of Prof. Arthur Whittich's violin pupils. Since 1885 he has been engaged in teaching all the string instruments, having pupils on the violin, guitar, mandolin, etc. His first pupil was his newsboy. His association with local bands began about twenty years ago and was continued until his business interests became so pressing that he had to relinquish some of his musical work. In 1889 he began to be identified with different bands in his village and in this connection learned to play different brass instruments, as well as the drum and clarinet. He became especially proficient on the baritone and slide trombone. In 1895 he became associated with the Minnehaha Band of Womelsdorf, with which he played the baritone and slide trombone for a number of years, and he was also the leader of this band for some time. In 1897 he became affiliated with the famous Ringgold Band of Reading, with which he played for over two years, severing this connection because his increasing business interests left him so little time to do his work justice. He is considered one of the finest musicians in his section of Berks county, and is known as a composer as well as performer, his masterpiece being his "Pioneer Hose No. 1"; his "Reading and Womelsdorf Electric" is one of his most popular compositions. Mr. Landis prizes highly a musical relic which has been in his possession for some time, an old melodeon which in spite of its age is well preserved and still a fine instrument.

But though music is so important a factor in Mr. Landis's life he is also an excellent business man. In the spring of 1892 he engaged in the weaving of rag carpets, and he also manufactures jute carpets and carries a large stock of such merchandise ready for sale. He manufactures between three and four thousand yards of rag carpet a year, for which his establishment has a high reputation, his product ranking with the best quality turned out in this section. He also manufactures the "Durable Rug" from old carpets, and the new rag rugs called "Puritan Rugs," having a large patronage in this line, extending not only over his own county but into surrounding counties and New Jersey and New York States. Since 1898 Mr. Landis has in addition to his other affairs conducted a baking establishment in Robesonia, manufacturing what is known as the genuine home-made bread, for which there is a constant demand. Mr. Landis resides in his own home on Main street, Robesonia.

On April 17, 1897, Mr. Landis was married to Miss Emma Lina Spengler, formerly of Hamburg, daughter of George W. and Mary (Heffley) Spengler, of Heidelberg township. Mr. and Mrs. Landis have had three children, Milford Leon, Edna May and Max Spengler, all of whom have musical talent. Mr. Landis is a Democrat and interested in local politics, the movements of which he follows closely.

GABEL. The first ancestor of whom there is definite record is (I) John Gabel, who was probably from Switzerland, and he died on board the ship which was bringing him to America. His widow landed at Philadelphia about 1735, with Heinrich and an elder daughter who later married a man by the name of Moyer. The widow Gabel lived at Philadelphia a year or so, when a man named Jacob Latshaw, of Colebrookdale township, Berks county, came to Philadelphia to find a housekeeper. He was pleased with Mrs. Gabel and took her, as well as her children, back home with him. At first she was his housekeeper, but later they were married. They moved to Chester county and had a family. Heinrich Gabel married in Colebrookdale township, and became a large land owner.

George Gabel, head of another branch of the Gabel family, and a man of substance, was a Hessian soldier who remained in this country after the Revolution. He located here at a very early day, before records were kept of realty transactions in Ruscombmanor township, where he died in 1825. His relationship to the Boyertown Gabels, if any, was very remote. He made his last will and testament Feb. 16, 1815, died Oct. 7, 1825, and the will was placed on record in Will Book D, page 463. He and his wife had these children: Henry, Adam, George, Sarah, Christiana and Susanna.

Henry Gabel, son of George Gabel, married Catherine Hill. They lived in Earl township, and had issue as follows: Polly (m. Jonathan Heist); Jacob (died at Reading); George (m. Susanna Brumbach, 1816-1883); Catherine (lived in Amity township); Henry (died unmarried); Sally (m. Samuel Brumbach), and William (was deaf and died unmarried).

(II) Heinrich Gabel, son of John Gabel and the Widow Gabel, and the direct American ancestor of the Gabel family to which Ephraim G. Gabel belongs, was born in Alsace, Germany, May 16, 1734, and died March 9, 1828, aged ninety-three years, nine months and twenty-three days. He is buried at Boyertown in the Mennonite graveyard. He located in Colebrookdale township in 1736, having been brought to this locality by the man who afterwards became his step-father. Here he was reared, and in early life worked upon the farm, in the employ of Rutter Bros., pioneer ironmasters of Berks county. They bought 1000 acres of land from the Penns, and some of this came into the possession of Heinrich Gabel. It included what is now the property of Daniel Gabel, Jacob and John Baer, William Eddinger, and the Stauffer and Bechtel farms. Heinrich Gabel was a large property owner, and was probably a member of the Mennonite Church. He came with his mother to Colebrookdale township when only two years old, and spent his life in the same locality. He made his will April 5, 1815, and this was probated March 22, 1828, and is on record in Will Book 6, page 182. He married Elizabeth Brownback, who was born in 1741, died in 1817, aged seventy-five years, eleven months and nineteen days. They had children as follows: (1) Jacob, born May 9, 1774, died Sept. 29, 1823, aged forty-nine years, four months and twenty days; his wife was Catharine, daughter of John and Magdalene Hoch. She was born Dec. 19, 1784, and died May 24, 1886, aged 101 years, five months and five days. Both are buried in the Mennonite graveyard, Boyertown. Jacob was a farmer and owned the farm now owned by Daniel Gabel in Colebrookdale township. (2) John. (3) Elizabeth married Jacob Bechtel. (4) Hannah married John Schants, of Lehigh county. (5) Maria married Jacob Kepner. (6) Magdalena married Jacob Hoch. (7) Catharine married John Gehman. (8) Susanna married a Mr. Kunsenhauser.

(III) John Gabel, son of Heinrich and grandfather of Ephraim, was born on the homestead July 25, 1766, and died Aug. 21, 1830, aged sixty-four years and twenty-six days, and is buried in the Mennonite burying ground at Boyertown. By occupation he was a farmer, and owned a large property which is now cut up into a number of farms, it having consisted of more than 400 acres. John Gabel was a very large man, weighing more than 400 pounds at the time of his death. In height he was over six feet and was of fine proportions, and possessed magnificent strength. He had a very kind heart, and was a very liberal man and good citizen. He married Elizabeth Schantz, who was born in Lehigh county, in 1772, and died in 1855. She and her husband had children as follows: Henry married his cousin, Elizabeth Gabel, and settled in Pottsgrove township; Susan married Joshua Bechtel; Catharine married Daniel Bertolet; Elizabeth married John Shanaman; Jacob settled in Canada, and married and died there: Abraham (born Oct. 11, 1799, died Oct. 23, 1885, aged eighty-six years and twelve days) conducted the store, oil mill and farm at Gabelsville, becoming worth over $100,000, married Elizabeth Ludy (1805-1855); David; Peter, born in 1805, died the same year; Maria (1814-1869), married Levi Koch, who bought his father-in-law's farm and lived upon it; Rebecca died after attaining maturity; Frank settled in Indiana; John went with his brother Jacob to Canada; and Daniel.

(IV) David Gabel, son of John and father of Ephraim, was born in Colebrookdale township, on the same farm, in August, 1808, and died in February, 1880, aged seventy-two years. He was a farmer and owned the homestead, which consisted of about 150 acres of good land. He built an addition to the barn and remodeled the house, and through his tireless industry became a wealthy man. He was an excellent mechanic and did all his own iron work, sharpened his plows and other tools. Mr. Gabel was also a good woodworker, and was always kept busy. Later he sold the upper farm property in 1856, and bought the adjoining farm of 104 acres; still later he bought another tract of forty-nine acres from Henry Gabel, his first cousin, and on this tract he erected the mill, replacing a stone and frame mill property standing to the north of the mill now in use. He also put up the house and barn standing by the mill. This property he sold to his sons, Ephraim and Henry, before his death, and it is now owned by Daniel, the youngest, who bought it in 1904 from Henry. He married Mary A. Gabel, his first cousin, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Hoch) Gabel, and they became the parents of children as follows: Ephraim G.; Hannah; William died in 1865; Lavina died in 1886, unmarried, and she and her grandmother were buried at the same time, having died a day apart; Elizabeth married John H. Boyer, a farmer of Amity township; Kate married Horace Harbold, of Amity township; Henry G., living at Larned, Kans., is a miller by trade, his mill having a capacity of 200 barrels of flour per day; David is of Morysville, Colebrookdale township; Jacob is a well known cattle dealer of Boyertown; Daniel G. conducts the Gabel mill at Gabelsville; and a daughter and a son died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Gabel were members of the Mennonite Church, and are buried in the graveyard of that denomination at Boyertown.

(V) Ephraim G. Gabel, a son of David and now a retired farmer of Boyertown, was born in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, on the farm owned by Aaron Houck, which was one of the old Gabel farms, Sept. 10, 1835. He obtained his education in the subscription schools of his neighborhood, where the teacher was paid two and one-half to three cents per day for each pupil. Mr. Gabel only attended public school fifteen days, Colebrookdale township being the last to adopt free schools. He was reared upon the farm, and when seventeen he began learning the miller's trade at Gabel's mill, which he followed until he was twenty-one. He was in the business with his father for three years, and with his brother Henry three years more. In 1873 he moved to Boyertown, where he has since resided. When he located here he and his brother David engaged in the coal, flour, feed and hardware business and continued in it until 1884, when he sold his interests to Benjamin Yost, and has since lived retired. He is a man of substance, and resides in a large brick house at Third and Chestnut streets. He owns a house in Boyertown, one at Pottstown and one at Engelsville. Since 1895 Mr. Gabel has been a director in the Lead & Zinc Mining Company, of Joplin, Mo., a very flourishing industry.

In his religious belief Mr. Gabel is a Mennonite. He has always refused public office, preferring to attend to his own affairs. In 1864 Mr. Gabel was married to Sarah Schaffer, born in May, 1834, daughter of John and Esther (Hoch) Schaffer. They have one daughter, Miss Amanda, who is at home with her parents. She is an artist of rare genius both with her pencil and in oils. Not only has she produced some canvases that are very valuable, but she has done some excellent work in dry point etching and her china painting is beautifully artistic. Miss Gabel was educated in the Boyertown high school, and she is a young lady of exceptional talents.

(V) Daniel G. Gabel, manufacturer and dealer in high grade flour, feed and grain and prominent in the affairs of Colebrookdale township, residing near Boyertown, was born in the vicinity, Oct. 26, 1855. He obtained his education in the district schools, and when eighteen began to learn the milling business with his brother Henry G., with whom he was employed for seven years. In 1881 Mr. Gabel rented the mill property from William K. Grim in Colebrookdale township, and this he operated one year, when he began farming on the Gabel homestead, and there remained until 1902. Two years later (1904) he bought the milling business from his brother Henry G. This mill was built in 1860 by David Gabel, his father. It is located one-half mile northwest of Boyertown, and is the center of considerable milling business. Mr. Gabel is a successful business man, and has an up-to-date mill. He has a full roller process and gives employment to three men, and enjoys a large local trade, selling his flour at Boyertown and Pottstown, and throughout Chester county. He makes three brands of flour, the leader being the "Violet," which is a patent process flour. The other brands are the "Mayflower" and the "White Rose," and he also handles one of his brother's products, "Kansas Patent." In addition to his flour trade, Mr. Gabel has a large trade in bran, middling, maizeline, cottonseed meal, linseed meal, cakemeal, rye, corn and oats, etc. He owns the old original homestead of the Gabel family where Heinrich Gabel lived and died. The property now consists of 111 acres, although it was originally larger in extent. On the old homestead is a historic house built early in the eighteenth century by the Rutters who were the first settlers on it. The present barn was built by John Ehst, in 1840.

In religious belief, Mr. Gabel is a member of the Mennonite Church. He was twice married. On Jan. 24, 1880, he married (first) Emma Bechtel, born Nov. 1, 1853, and died April 22, 1882, aged twenty-eight years, five months and twenty-one days, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Ehst) Bechtel. Two children were born of the first marriage: Elmer, born Dec. 27, 1880, died Jan. 29, 1902, aged twenty-one years; and Emma died in infancy. On Nov. 5, 1887, Mr. Gabel married (second) Hettie Bertolet, daughter of Daniel and Esther (Bertolet) Bertolet, of Oley township. To this union were born two children: Edna B.; and Daniel B. (died in infancy). Miss Edna graduated from the Sternberg School of Music at Philadelphia, June 27, 1908. She is a fine musician and a charming young lady. Mr. and Mrs. Gabel reside in a fine, large house, which is beautifully and artistically furnished, and surrounded by grounds that are well laid out. Mr. Gabel is a man who is very liberal in his convictions and is willing to allow others to hold their own opinions even if they are not the same as his own. Among other heirlooms much prized is an old fashioned china closet filled with china much of which is almost priceless and has descended to him from long dead ancestors.

(IV) Abraham Gabel, son of John and Elizabeth (Schantz) Gabel, was born Oct. 11, 1799, and died Oct. 23, 1885, aged eighty-six years, twelve days. He conducted the store, oil mill and farm at Gabelsville, and at his death left an estate of $100,000. He was a Mennonite in religious faith, and his remains rest in the Mennonite cemetery at Boyertown. He married Elizabeth Lüdy (1805-1855), and they had seven children: Mary married Jonathan Dottery; Daniel L.; John died at Gabelsville; Frank lived at Amityville; Amos died at Gabelsville; Elizabeth married Jacob Gabel (her first cousin), son of John Gabel; and Josiah lived at Lehighton.

(V) Daniel L. Gabel, son of Abraham, was born at Gabelsville, Colebrookdale township, Feb. 5, 1836, and died July 29, 1904, aged sixty eight years. When a young man he worked in a mill at Pottstown, Pa., but later became a clerk in his father's store. When only twenty-six he engaged in a general merchandise business at Pikesville, where he had a store for three years. He then came to Kutztown, where he kept a store for three years, and then went to Philadelphia, in 1866, and embarked in a queensware business. This he conducted for several years, and eventually took two partners and enlarged his business, which was located at Third and Arch streets. Several years later the property burned, and he then became a traveling salesman, following this line for twenty-seven years, and was very successful. At the end of that time he purchased and for three years conducted the "St. Almo Hotel," at Philadelphia, when he retired to Lyons, in Berks county, where he lived until his death. His widow then sold her home at Lyons and came to Kutztown, where she now resides on White Oak street. In addition to this property she owns her father's farm near Bowers in Maxatawny township, which consists of 150 acres, and is one of the best farms in the county.

Mr. Gabel was reared in the Mennonite faith, but when he and his wife went to Lyons they united with St. John's Lutheran Church of Kutztown.

In 1861 Mr. Gabel married Mary A. Sell, a daughter of John and Susanna (Swoyer) Sell, of Maxatawny. Her paternal grandfather and great-grandfather were both named George, and they both owned the homestead that is now her property. Mr. and Mrs. Gabel had children as follows: Annie died unmarried at the age of forty-one years; Edwin died in infancy; and George died at the age of eighteen years.

The Gabel family is one of the oldest, as well as most substantial of those who have done so much to make Berks county what it is today. Members of it may be found all over the country, and wherever they are there is prosperity, substance and integrity. The virtues which distinguished the forebears have descended to the younger generations and make them very desirable residents of the several communities where they are now located. It is to such men as Heinrich Gabel that the country owes so much, and his name is revered not only by his descendants, but others who appreciate the part he took in the development of Berks county.

HOLLENBACH. For over a century and a half members of this family have been actively interested in the agricultural, business and political affairs of Berks county, Pa. In this article, especial mention is made of the life and lineage of Jacob Hollenbach, a substantial citizen, director of the poor, farmer and cattle-dealer of Windsor township, and his nephew, William J. Hollenbach, representative citizen, party leader, and the present efficient steward of the Berks County Almshouse.

John George Hollenbach, the progenitor of the family in America, emigrated to this country on the ship "Neptune," which arrived in Philadelphia Sept. 24, 1754. In 1759 he was a citizen of Windsor township, Berks county. On the same ship on which he came, was one Michael Hollenbach, who, says tradition, was his brother, and who settled in Albany township, prior to 1759.

Heinrich Hollenbach, son of John George, married Elizabeth Moyer, and to them were born children as follows: Daniel, 1781-1866, m. Catherine Stein, 1784-1862. John m. a Kistler. Heinrich, 1791-1874, m. Marie Magdalena Moll, 1800-1871. Elizabeth, 1798-1883, m. William Lewars. Jacob, 1807-1871, is mentioned below. Maria m. Calvin Goodman. Eva, 1811-1871, m. Jeremiah Jacoby, 1811-1855. Catherine m. Samuel Ruth. Kate m. a Mr. Butz, of Genesee county, New York.

Jacob Hollenbach, son of Heinrich, was born Jan. 10, 1807, in Windsor township, and died March 15, 1871. When a young man he learned the trade of a carpenter, which occupation he followed for a number of years, but finally purchased the farm of 130 acres, in Perry township, which is now in the possession of his son, Jacob. He was a well-known and influential citizen of his day, and at the time of his death was in comfortable circumstances. On Jan. 2, 1830, Mr. Hollenbach was married to Rebecca Kistler, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Stein) Kistler, of Albany township, and to this union there were born children as follows: Henry m. Catherine Reber; Johannes died in his twenty-third year; Nicholas is mentioned below; Caroline m. Reuben Kauffman; Rebecca m. Levi Freeman; Lydia m. Moses Elting; Amelia m. Solomon Koller; Mesitta m. Aspin Kershner; and Jacob.

Jacob Hollenbach was born on the homestead in Windsor (now Perry) township, Sept. 9, 1847. He was reared on his father's farm, and attended the district schools of his native locality until he was eighteen years of age. As an occupation he chose farming and cattle-dealing, and he now owns the homestead, which is a good, fertile farm of 130 acres in Perry township. In politics Mr. Hollenbach is an uncompromising Democrat, and is a man of influence in public life. He served three years each as auditor and councilman of the borough of Hamburg, and in June, 1903, was elected director of the poor by the people of Berks county, with whom he has always been very popular. Through his extensive business dealings throughout the county, he became well-known to the people as an honest, upright citizen, and, although his election was opposed by the political machine and bosses, he was triumphant in one of the hardest fought elections in the county's history. He and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church of Hamburg, where Mr. Hollenbach has resided since 1880. He owns a fine double residence of Denver stone at Third and Walnut streets, he having one part of the residence, while his daughter, Mrs. Trexler, has the other part.

In 1867 Mr. Hollenbach was married to Catherine Loose, daughter of Benneville and Polly (Schwoyer) Loose, and to this union there were born children as follows: Wilson, who died at the age of eight years; Maurice, who died when five years old; Laura, m. to Frank Trexler; and Carrie, m. to Harry Seiders.

Nicholas Hollenbach, son of Jacob and Rebecca (Kistler) and grandson of Heinrich and Elizabeth (Moyer), was born June 29, 1832, in Windsor township. He married Annabella Miller, a native of Berks county, and daughter of Jonathan Miller. Mr. Hollenbach is a prosperous farmer of Tilden township, where he owns valuable real estate and is one of the substantial citizens. In politics he is a Democrat. In religious belief the family are all members of the Lutheran Church.

William J. Hollenbach, son of Nicholas and Annabella (Miller), and a popular and influential political factor in Berks county, was born in Tilden township, Nov. 26, 1864, the only child of his parents. In his boyhood he was sent to the township schools, and after he had completed the studies offered there, went to the Hamburg high school. At the age of sixteen he was graduated there. In the spring of 1880 he was granted a provisional certificate to teach public school by Superintendent D. S. Keck. But his tastes did not lead to the teacher's profession, and after leaving school he learned the trade of a tin and sheet iron worker. He was thus engaged for sixteen years, but at the end of that time his father's farming interests were such as to demand more attention than he could give, and for ten years the son devoted nearly his entire time to looking after his father's property. He also represented several firms who manufactured harvesting machinery and farm implements, and gained considerable reputation as a salesman throughout Berks and the adjoining counties.

From an early age Mr. Hollenbach was interested in political matters, has been a zealous worker for the Democratic party, and now is regarded as one of the influential leaders in Berks county. He has held a number of responsible positions and has shown himself a practical and efficient man in each. When Tilden township was separated from Bern, Mr. Hollenbach was made the first registered assessor, and he has also served as school director for sometime. He has been several times chosen a delegate to county conventions, and he has served as Democratic county committeeman. He is now filling his second term as justice of the peace, for Tilden township, and during this time has been called upon to settle a number of estates. On April 7, 1905, he was elected steward of the Berks County Almshouse, which responsible position he is filling with high credit, and under his administration many improvements have been made at the county home.

In domestic as in public life Mr. Hollenbach has been fortunate. He was married, on Sept. 12, 1885, to Miss Kate Seaman, daughter of Elias and Angelina (Kauffman) Seaman, a farmer of Tilden township. They have an only son, Herbert S., born Nov. 17, 1886, who is a most promising young man. After graduation from the Hamburg high school he began teaching, and was successful. He has also taken a course in the Kerst Business College, learning stenography and shorthand, and is now stenographer and typewriter in the office of A. S. Deysher, of Reading. Mr. Hollenbach is also prominent in fraternal circles, and is an active and influential member of Symmetry Lodge, No. 100, Hamburg, I. O. O. F., in which he has held office.

ALFRED R. BRUNNER, a conservative business man and respected citizen of North Reading, was born at Greshville, in Douglass township, Berks county, Aug. 14, 1843, and died Nov. 2, 1908.

George Brunner, his great-grandfather, was born in Germany, and on his coming to America, he located in Douglass township, Berks Co., Pa., where he passed the remainder of his life engaged in farming. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran. He and his wife had a family of nine children, five sons and four daughters.

Peter Brunner, son of George, was born on his father's farm in Douglass township, but in his youth went to Colebrookdale, where he followed the trade of carpenter, cabinet maker and builder. He had been reared in the faith of the Lutheran Church, and never departed from it. Mr. Brunner was twice married. His first wife, Miss Mathias, bore him four children: Charles, deceased, who was a farmer in Union county, Pa.; Mrs. William Livingood, of Swamp, Montgomery Co., Pa.; Angeline, deceased, wife of John Firing, of Bernville, Berks county; and Samuel, mentioned below. He married (second) Susan Fillman, and their children were: Frederick, deceased, a farmer of Union county; Peter, deceased, a shoemaker at Unionville, Pa.; Jacob, deceased, a farmer and contractor at Monocacy, Berks county; Aaron, deceased, a shoemaker at Reading; Henry, a shoe merchant at Philadelphia; David, deceased, of Temple, Pa., where he was engaged as a shoemaker; Maria, deceased wife of John Bishop, of Reading; and Angeline, who married John Firing, of Pottstown, and is now deceased.

Samuel Brunner, son of Peter, was born in Colebrookdale township, Jan. 11, 1806. On reaching manhood he engaged in farming at Greshville, and also to some extent followed shoemaking. For many years he was a deacon and elder in the Lutheran Church. He married Maria Riegner, daughter of Conrad and Catherine (Schider) Riegner, the former a farmer at Swamp, Montgomery Co., Pa. Two sons and five daughters were born of this union: Alfred R.; Frank R., a leading physician at Eshbach, Washington Co., Pa., who perished in the Boyertown Theatre fire Jan. 13, 1908; Mary Ann, m. to William N. Clemmer, of Lanark, Ill.; Catharine, m. to William Steake, of Chambersburg, Pa., now deceased; Esther, deceased; Sarah, deceased wife of Levi B. Stauffer, of Boyertown; and Emma, m. to Albert Bickel, of Landsdale, Pa. Mr. Brunner m. (second) Mrs. Mary Boyer, and the four children of this marriage were: Amanda, m. to Henry Boyer, of Reading; Caroline, m. to Jeremiah K. Grant, an attorney at Reading; Clara, deceased wife of Aaron Koch; and Samuel, a grocer at Boyertown. The husband and father passed away in June, 1870.

Alfred R. Brunner, son of Samuel, received his education in the public schools and in the old German pay schools. Prof. J. S. Ermentrout, then county superintendent of schools, licensed him to teach in 1862, and he taught two terms at the Oberholtzer school in Washington township. He was only fourteen when he learned shoemaking under his father, and at this he worked four years. During the summers between his schooling he worked at this trade. In the spring of 1864 he entered the employ of Peter Y. Brendlinger, at New Berlinville, and clerked for six years. In 1870 he engaged in the general merchandise business at Greshville on his own account, and continued there successfully for nine and one-half years, at the end of that time going to Topton. There he formed a partnership with Charles K. Hagy under the firm name of Brunner & Hagy, but after a year and a half he returned to Greshville, and there remained three years engaged in merchandising. He then lived in Earlville for six years. In 1890 he came to Reading and opened a grocery store at Thirteenth and Greenwich streets, where he had a large trade. He carried a fine line of groceries, and some notions and dry goods. Success attended his efforts, and he made himself a very popular citizen in that section of the city. In 1905 he erected a handsome three-story brick residence at No. 601 North Thirteenth street, commanding one of the finest views in the city. In politics Mr. Brunner was a Democrat, and in religion a Lutheran, being a member of Grace Lutheran Church, of which for a time he was deacon.

On Oct. 18, 1869, Mr. Brunner was married (first) to Clara E. Keely, born 1847, died 1879, daughter of Henry B. Keely and his wife Edith (Ludwig). To this union were born: Harry K., a clerk in the Reading post-office; Lawrence K., a clerk in his father's store; and Bertha, m. to Lawrence Leaver, a prominent man of affairs at Roselle Park, N. J. Mr. Brunner married (second) Jan. 13, 1883, Lovina (Rambo) Fretz, widow of Lewis Fretz, and of this union were born two children. Miss Stella is at home, and Helen died in infancy. In 1904 Mr. and Mrs. Brunner took a western trip, visiting in Ohio, and then going on to St. Louis to attend the World's Fair.

BOWMAN. Among the prominent and successful farmers of Brecknock township, Berks county, who worthily bear a name that for generations has stood for industry and integrity, may be mentioned John M. Bowman and Israel M. Bowman, both descendants of sturdy Mennonite ancestry.

(I) The Bowman family was planted in America by Wendell Bowman, the great-great-grandfather of John M. and Israel M. He was born in Switzerland, and was one of the founders of the Mennonite faith in Brecknock township, coming into the Allegheny Valley prior to 1750. He owned considerable land, and was rated among the well-to-do pioneers. He was twice married, but his children were all by his first marriage. These were: Christian; Wendell and Joseph, who both settled in Canada; Susanna, who married a Bechtol, and also went to Canada; Elizabeth, who married Daniel Gehman; and Esther (born July 31, 1790—died Sept 11, 1827), who married Henry Weber (born June 7, 1794—died Jan. 16, 1873).

(II) Christian Bowman, son of Wendell, was a well-known farmer in the Allegheny Valley, making his home in Brecknock township. In 1777 he built the Bowman Mill, which is still in the family, being now owned and operated by Noah M. Bowman, the great-grandson of the builder. Christian Bowman adhered to the faith of his fathers, and was active in the Mennonite Church. He is buried at the Allegheny Meeting House, and his grave is marked by a sandstone, whose inscription has long since been effaced by the elements. He married Nancy Huber (or Hoover), and their children were: Joseph; Lizzie, born Nov. 20, 1785, who married Jacob Good, and died July 6, 1866, aged eighty years, seven months, sixteen days; Samuel, mentioned below; Daniel, who settled near Bowmansville, Pa.; Maricha, who married Samuel Weaver; Mary, who married Jonas Good; and Sallie, who married Jonathan Weaver.

(III) Joseph Bowman, son of Christian, was born Jan. 22, 1784, and he died Jan. 9, 1841, aged fifty-six years, eleven months, seventeen days. He was a well-known miller, owning and operating the Bowman Mill in Brecknock township. He also cultivated the fifty acres of land belonging to the mill property. He was strictly honest in all his dealings, and was a successful man in business. He was buried at the Allegheny Meeting House. He married Nancy Hoover, and they became the parents of three sons and three daughters: Elizabeth, who married Samuel Bowman, of County Waterloo, Ontario, Canada; Isaac, who married Judith Gehman; Benjamin; Esther, who married Joseph Gehman; Nancy, who married Jacob Mosser; and Jacob.

(IV) Benjamin Bowman, son of Joseph and father of Israel M. and Noah M., was born Dec. 16, 1816, and he passed his entire life engaged at farming and milling, owning the Bowman Mill in Brecknock township, and becoming very well-to-do. He died Nov. 13, 1861, and was buried at the Allegheny Meeting House. He was a consistent follower of the Mennonite teachings. He married Lovina Mosser, who was born Jan. 29, 1819, daughter of John Mosser. She died Oct. 8, 1881, aged sixty-two years, eight months, nine days, the mother of nine children, namely: Eliza, born Jan. 29, 1842; Susanna, Sept. 22, 1843; Lydia, June 29, 1845; Anna, Nov. 5, 1848; Israel M., Sept. 6, 1850; Noah M., Oct. 7, 1852; Leah, Nov. 26, 1854; Lovina, Feb. 1, 1858 (died Feb. 22, 1858); and Benjamin, April 8, 1859 (died June 18, 1860).

(V) Israel M. Bowman, son of Benjamin, was born on the old Bowman homestead Sept. 6, 1850. In 1874 he began farming on the property where he now makes his home. He has forty-three acres of good land, which he purchased in 1884, and this he devotes to farming and trucking. He attends Reading market every week, and has a stand at the Deppen market, Tenth and Chestnut streets, and is well-known for his fine produce, his stand being one of the most popular in the market. He is courteous and obliging, and is of strict honesty and integrity.

On Oct. 21, 1873, Israel M. Bowman was married to Annie Burkhart, born Nov. 25, 1850, daughter of Isaac and Susan (Zimmerman) Burkhart. They have eight children, as follows: (1) Noah, born Sept. 22, 1874, is a minister in the Mennonite Church, and lives near Bowmansville, Lancaster county; he married Tilly Geigley. (2) Benjamin, born Aug. 27, 1877, is a farmer near Terre Hill, Lancaster county; he married Alice Good. (3) Lydia Ann (born Nov. 24, 1879), (4) Lizzie (Jan. 16, 1882), (5) Katie (Sept. 26, 1883), (6) Susanna (March 31, 1886), (7) Israel (Jan. 23, 1888) and (8) Martin (May 23, 1891) are all at home.

(V) Noah M. Bowman, son of Benjamin, and present owner of the Bowman Mill, on Allegheny Creek, Brecknock township, was born where he now resides, Oct. 7, 1852. He attended the township schools, and later was given the advantage of private instruction. In 1870 he went to Adamstown, Pa., and there for fifteen months worked for Henry Mohn, thoroughly learning the miller's trade. He then returned home, and began for himself in the Bowman mill, continuing for two years, when he sold out to Jonathan Good. Thirty-three years later he re-purchased it from the Cooper estate, and since 1904 he has again been the owner and operator. He and his family are members of the Allegheny Meeting House, in which he has been a deacon since 1880.

On March 17, 1872, Noah M. Bowman married Susanna Good, who was born June 11, 1852, daughter of Jonathan and Lydia (Gehman) Good, farming people of Cumru township. Fourteen children were born of this marriage, namely: Lydia, born Oct. 28, 1873, married Phares Good, of Lancaster county; Annie, born Feb. 10, 1875, married Samuel Weber, of Lancaster county; Lovina, born Sept. 5, 1876, married Benjamin Martin, of Lancaster county; Joseph, born Feb. 17, 1878, married Isabella Mosser, and lives on his father's farm; Susanna, born Oct. 14, 1879, married Harry Horning, of Lancaster county; Jacob, born March 24, 1881, married Annie M. Stauffer, and lives in Lancaster county; John, born March 5, 1883, died Nov. 11, 1887; Samuel, born Dec. 31, 1884, died Jan. 13, 1887; Noah, born Oct. 25, 1886; Henry, born Aug. 13, 1889; William, born Dec. 18, 1891; Enos, born July 29, 1893; Abel, born March 30, 1896, died April 3, 1896; and Sally, born Feb. 22, 1898.

(IV) Jacob Bowman, son of Joseph and brother of Benjamin, was born in Brecknock township, April 19, 1823, and he died July 10, 1860, aged thirty-seven years, two months, twenty-one days. His life was devoted to agricultural pursuits. Both he and his wife were members of the Mennonite Church, and both are buried at the Allegheny Meeting House. He married Catharine Moore, born March 10, 1826, and she died Jan. 7, 1901, aged seventy-four years, nine months, twenty-seven days. This marriage was blessed with three sons: Joseph, who died aged eleven years, and Jacob, who died aged nine, both of diphtheria in two weeks' time; and John M.

(V) John M. Bowman, son of Jacob, was born in the Allegheny Valley, in Brecknock township, Aug. 21, 1859. He was reared upon his father's farm, and there became thoroughly familiar with everything that pertains to the up-to-date and successful management of a farm. In 1885 he began for himself on his own farm, which he acquired after his mother's death. This is the old Bowman homestead, which has been in the family name since 1751. The present house was built in 1863, and in 1891 Mr. Bowman built his substantial barn 100 x 40 feet. There are 124 acres in the farm, all under a high state of cultivation. Mr. Bowman attends the Reading market twice a week in summer and once in winter. He has a stand in the Deppens market, where he disposes of all his produce.

In 1889 John M. Bowman was married to Sallie C. Reifsnyder, born Aug. 19, 1865, daughter of Samuel and Caroline (Becker) Reifsnyder. Samuel Reifsnyder was a farmer and butcher near Center Church, Lancaster county. Mrs. Bowman was the second born of his six children, the others being: Charles, of Lancaster county; Isaac, who lives on the homestead; William, near Churchtown; Irwin, near the homestead; and Minnie, who married John Troop, a farmer of Cumru township.

(III) Samuel Bowman, mentioned above as son of Christian, was born Dec. 1, 1789, and he died Jan. 19, 1857, aged sixty-seven years, one month, eighteen days. From John B. Good, who knew him intimately, it is learned that in his childhood his mother noticed that he was different from her other children, and was much concerned about him. When he entered school he evinced a natural fondness for learning. The only language used was Pennsylvania German, but he determined to learn English, and with the aid of the dictionary applied himself and made wonderful progress. After he had attended the township school until he had learned there all that he could, he went to Churchtown Academy, and there learned to converse in English. He also studied surveying at the Academy, and in this attained much skill, practising it successfully many years. "His clear head and logical mind were eminently fitted for practical geometry. His love of justice and equity and his high character for honesty and uprightness of purpose all combined to make him afterward a most successful surveyor. In his library were found some of the best classical authors in the English language. From 1815 to 1820 he was, during the winter months, engaged in school teaching. Surveying, scrivening and ordinary labor took up the rest of his time. As a teacher he acquired a wonderful reputation among his neighbors for the great amount of knowledge he possessed, and was especially famous for his success in keeping good order and governing his school. Some of his pupils are still living, and acquainted as they are with modern school discipline, say, 'It was not so in Sam Bowman's school.' His life was one of constant and unremitting toil of mind and body. He had a laudable ambition to be esteemed as a correct and competent business man, and all who knew him and had any business transactions with him can bear testimony to the ability and honesty with which his affairs were conducted. He was a man of great power and worth, the ideal leader and adviser around whom his neighbors flocked for advice; the centre of a community which he founded; the father any settlement may be proud of. Like the mighty oak in a great forest, he was the giant among those who gathered around him. I am digressing from my subject but no sketch of any place is complete unless something is known of the founder. It is true, most admirable biographical sketches of this marvelous man appear in several of our county histories, but his noble rugged character is deserving of a wider acquaintance, and for that reason I have at some length referred to him. In 1820 Mr. Bowman built a house on the southeast corner where the road leading from Reamstown to the Plow Tavern crossed the State road. The house was arranged for keeping a country store. Here he commenced the mercantile business immediately after the building was finished, and was succeeded by his son-in-law, J. B. Musselman. This was the first house in the now thriving village and from whence the name of the place was derived. . . . Now the village of Bowmansville contains over an hundred houses, many of beautiful modern design, four churches—two Mennonite, one Lutheran and Reformed, and an Evangelical Methodist—and a handsome substantial two-story school-house. In 1840, just twenty years after the first house was erected, a post-office was established at Bowman's store, and named Bowmansville. Mr. Bowman was appointed postmaster, the only office, outside of justice of the peace, he would accept, the latter only for the convenience of acknowledging his official papers." [From a paper read by A. G. Seyfert before the Lancaster County Historical Society.]

The Allegheny Meeting House, so frequently mentioned in the above sketch of the Bowman family, is one of the landmarks of Berks county. The following families have been represented in each generation among its most active members: Gehman, Good, Horning, Bowman, Moseman, Eshelman, Messner, Redcay and Musser. The ministers who have officiated there, in the order given, were: Christian Gehman, Samuel Good, Bishop Jacob Moseman (a native of Germany), Peter Musser, Benjamin Horning, Abraham Gehman, Henry Good, Abraham Gehman, and Noah Bowman.

FISHER OR FISCHER FAMILY. (I) Wilhelm Fischer, an alien by birth and native of Germany, was the founder of a very large and prolific Berks county family. He settled in a section of the country now embracing Spring (formerly Cumru) and Lower Heidelberg (then a part of Heidelberg) townships and owned about one thousand acres of land. He was a farmer by occupation, exceedingly industrious, and was known as a man of sterling qualities. During his lifetime there was little clear land in Lower Heidelberg and Spring townships, and he often heard the howling of wolves in the forest around his primitive home, a typical log cabin dwelling. Frequently he stood in fear of the Indians who still roamed the forests after the date of his settlement and whose attacks endangered the lives and property of the hardy settlers. He adhered to the German Reformed faith, and the Hain's Church in Lower Heidelberg township was his spiritual home. His mortal remains were laid to rest in the graveyard of that old established house of worship, and there, too, sleep scores of descendants of this noble pioneer. Among his children were: Frederick, Wilhelm, George, Michael and Daniel.

(II) Frederick Fischer, son of Wilhelm, the emigrant ancestor, born March 5, 1750, died Oct. 17, 1828. He lived in what is now Spring township, where he originally took up a tract of seventy-three acres. At that time only two acres were cleared, all the rest being timberland. The Indians had cleared the two acres, upon which they raised maize, and there Frederick Fischer put up a primitive house and barn. He was a farmer, but also followed his trade, that of blacksmith. His wife, whose maiden name was Gertraut Faust, was born Feb. 5, 1751, and died Oct. 31, 1827. She bore him nine children, four daughters and five sons, namely: Peter, John, William, Jonathan, Catharine (who married Jonas Fry, of Lancaster county), Barbara (who married a Beck and a Lash) and one son and two daughters who died young. When Mrs. Fischer died there were forty grandchildren.

(III) Jonathan Fischer, son of Frederick and grandson of Wilhelm, born March 31, 1794, died Oct. 14, 1854, aged sixty years, six months, fourteen days. He was a farmer and made much fine wine, his vineyard covering one acre. He was well known in Reading and in the surrounding district, was the founder of Kissinger's Church, and contributed largely to the erection of the church edifice in 1852. He is buried at that church. In 1820 he married Maria Magdalena Baum, who was born in 1801 and survived him, dying in 1869, and their children were: Elijah, born in 1821, who died in 1853; Henry B., living on the homestead in Spring township, who has children, Franklin and Mary E.; Lovina; Amelia, and Elizabeth. The home of Jonathan Fischer was three miles from Reading, and he always walked back and forth.

(II) Wilhelm Fischer, son of Wilhelm, the first ancestor in America, was born Oct. 23, 1766, at the old homestead in Spring township, and died there March 4, 1842, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. He owned a farm which his sons cultivated, he himself following the blacksmith's trade during the greater part of his life. He was a skilled mechanic, and made the different kinds of hardware used in building in his day, such as nails, hinges, locks, etc., as well as farm implements, such as hay and manure forks, hooks, harrows, plows, etc. He owned and lived on the place now known as the "Wheatfield Ore Farm," in Spring township. On June 27, 1790, he married Margaretha Krick, who was born Aug. 29, 1773, and died Feb. 23, 1852, in her seventy-ninth year. They sleep their last sleep in the graveyard adjoining the Sinking Spring church. Their children were as follows: William, who lived and died in Butler county, Pa.; Jacob, who settled in Lebanon, Pa.; John, who was never married; Peter F.; Margaret, who married William Mohn; Ann, who married Absalom Ruth; Susanna, who married Joseph Ruth; Mrs. Daniel Bensing; and Mrs. Peter Rollman.

(III) Peter F. Fisher, son of Wilhelm and grandson of Wilhelm, was born Sept. 14, 1808, in Cumru (now Spring) township. He died Feb. 7, 1889, in Lower Heidelberg township, aged eighty years, four months, twenty-four days. He was a carpenter, and followed that trade five years, when he commenced farming, which he continued until he was seventy-five years old, owning a farm of over 100 acres in Spring township. The remainder of his days were passed in retirement. He was a short man, but well-set and strong. His wife, Ann Maria Bensing, was born in Heidelberg May 12, 1814, daughter of Peter Bensing, and died Feb. 21, 1894, in her eightieth year, at Fritztown. Seven sons and five daughters were born to Peter F. and Ann Maria Fisher, namely: John, Mary, Michael, Abraham, Peter, Isaac, Catharine, Hannah, William B., Rebecca, Adam and Annie. The father of this family was a Reformed member of the Sinking Spring Church, where he is buried.

(IV) William B. Fisher, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township, residing on the Charles W. Potteiger farm, was born July 28, 1855, in Spring township. He was reared to farming, which has been his life work, and until twenty-three years old remained with his father, after that engaging as a servant for two years, near Lancaster, Pa. For one year he lived on a farm near Wernersville, in the spring of 1880 commencing agricultural pursuits on his own account. He was on his father's farm the first four years, and during the next four years lived on the old George Krick farm in Spring township, thence moving to Hendelton, in Cumru township. There he lived for six years on George Hendel's farm and for six years on Isaac Spatz's farm, in 1899 moving to Lower Heidelberg township, upon the old original Hain farm, at that time owned by Calvin Seitzinger. He remained upon that place three years, and then lived in Maiden-creek a year before settling at his present home, in Lower Heidelberg. Mr. Fisher has always been successful in his farm work, and is thoroughly enterprising and up-to-date in his methods, which have produced satisfactory results. His stock is particularly fine, his cattle and horses being worthy of especial note.

In 1881 Mr. Fisher was married to Amanda Leid, a daughter of Edward and Mary (Spatz) Leid, of Lancaster county, and granddaughter of William Leid, also of Lancaster county, who was a well-known cattle dealer for many years; he died at the age of eighty-one. A family of twelve children has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, eight sons and four daughters, namely: Edward, born Oct. 9, 1881, died when two months old; Mary, born July 10, 1882, is the wife of Adam Sheidy, of Wernersville, Pa.; Adam, born Sept. 24, 1883, is a resident of Chicago, Ill.; John, born Sept. 24, 1883, is unmarried, and works with his father; Martin, born Oct. 19, 1885, is on a cattle range at Lee, Mont.; Samuel, born April 6, 1887, is married and living in Spring township; George, born Aug. 28, 1888, married Lizzie Wenrich, and they reside on the old Fisher homestead in Spring township—the property settled by a Fisher who emigrated from Germany; Clinton was born Feb. 11, 1891; Levi, Aug. 11, 1892; Katie, May 2, 1895; Lillie, Sept. 21, 1896; Carrie, Aug. 7, 1900. Mr. William B. Fisher and his family are Lutheran members of the Wyomissing (Gouglersville) Union Church. He is a Democrat in political sentiment.

(II) Michael Fischer, son of Wilhelm, the emigrant ancestor, was born on the old homestead Nov. 19, 1769, and died on his farm near Wernersville, Pa., Dec. 16, 1845, aged seventy-six years, twenty-seven days. He owned a farm of 127 acres located one and a half miles south of Wernersville, which his family cultivated. He was a weaver, and made all kinds of cloth and linen goods in demand in his day. He was a man of prominence in local affairs, serving as overseer of the poor in his district for many years; this office was abolished by Act of Assembly on March 29, 1824, after which directors of the poor were elected. Michael Fischer was much esteemed, and he was widely known for his uncompromising honesty. Like his father, he is buried in the graveyard at Hain's Church, of which he was a member. He married Elizabeth Hemmig, born Aug. 29, 1774, died July 22, 1845, aged seventy years, ten months, twenty-three days. The children born to them were as follows: Christian, born July 1, 1793; Michael, born Jan. 4, 1795; Daniel, born Sept. 27, 1796; Catharine, born Aug. 15, 1798; Philip, born Jan. 25, 1800; Wilhelm, born Jan. 15, 1803; Sarah, who married John Stump; and Elizabeth, who first married Daniel Fisher and later Isaac Boyer.

(III) Wilhelm Fisher, the sixth of the family of Michael Fischer, and a grandson of Wilhelm, the ancestor, was born Jan. 15, 1803, and died upon his tract of land near Wernersville. He was a well-known man in his community, having passed all his life in the district where he was born, and, furthermore, he was enterprising and thrifty. Under his father he learned plain weaving, but he also acquired the art of fine weaving, and did well at his trade. He lived upon a tract adjacent to his father's farm, consisting originally of six acres and 131 rods, to which he later added thirty-one acres. Here in 1837 he built a log house which is still standing. He married Ellenora Boyer, and to them were born children as follows: Peter, born May 13, 1826, who was a soldier in the Civil war; Abraham, born Nov. 17, 1831, a carpenter by trade and also a farmer, who married Catharine Miller; Jeremiah B., born May 20, 1838; Polly, the wife of Emanuel Eberly, residing near Fritztown, where he followed carriage-making for many years, now living retired upon his farm; and Lavina, born Jan. 21, 1842, who married John H. Steffy, and died May 17, 1898, in her fifty-seventh year (they had no children). Mr. and Mrs. Fisher worshipped at the Hain's Church, and there they are buried.

(IV) Jeremiah B. Fisher, third son of Wilhelm, grandson of Michael, Sr., and great-grandson of Wilhelm, the emigrant ancestor, was born May 20, 1838, upon his father's farm south of Wernersville. He attended the local district schools until he was eighteen years old, after which he took up fence making, a business he was engaged in many years, and in which he became very skillful. He next entered the employ of Jacob Lippy, at that time of Lancaster, later of Reading, where his sons are now successful business men; Mr. Lippy had a portable sawmill, at which Mr. Fisher worked for many years. A number of years ago Mr. Fisher commenced the manufacture of birch oil from birchwood, which is plentiful in the South mountains where he lives. The oil is of good quality, and markets readily in Philadelphia, New York, Lebanon and Reading, and he sells considerable to the Grand View Sanitarium. One of Mr. Fisher's best customers is William H. Luden, the confectioner, of Reading. Mr. Fisher has a valuable tract of land, upon which he raises an abundance of fruit and considerable truck. As may be judged from the various interests he has, he is very industrious, and by good management has attained success in his various ventures. He is a man of the highest honor and scrupulous in all his transactions, being respected wherever he is known.

On Nov. 9, 1863, Mr. Fisher was married to Melinda Stoltz, daughter of John Stoltz, of Upper Tulpehocken township, and seventeen children have been born to the union, namely: Catharine, Ellen I., William, Charles, Sallie, Mary, Eve, Alice, George, Jacob S., and seven who died young. Mr. Fisher and his family are Reformed members of the old Hain's Church, where members of his family have worshipped for so many years.

BRUMBACH. The early home of this old and honored family of Pennsylvania was in Switzerland. This family has been identified with the interests of Berks county, particularly in the manufacturing line, since prior to the Revolutionary war. Among its prominent members are Daniel C. Brumbach, one of the leading and substantial citizens of Boyertown; and Edwin H. Brumbach, postmaster and merchant at Manatawny.

(I) Hermanus Brumbach, born in 1751, died in 1803, and was buried at Amityville, Berks county. He was a farmer and weaver in Oley township. His will was probated in 1803, was written in German and signed in a good firm hand. His sons, Samuel and Jacob, were the executors. His wife, Maria Catherine Pott, born in 1749, died in 1832, and was buried at Amityville. Their children were: a daughter died young; John, born Dec. 5, 1774, died young; Mathias, born Oct. 9, 1776, m. Mary Custer, died Feb. 5, 1852, and is buried at Norristown; Samuel, born 1780, died 1801; Jacob, twin to Samuel, born 1780, m. (first) Dorothy Bear, (second) Susan Gumbert, and died Aug. 7, 1878, at an advanced age, and was buried at Reading; John (2), born Nov 5, 1783, m. Catherine Engle, died in advanced age and was buried at Boyertown; George, born June 8, 1787, and died at Pleasantville Dec. 5, 1875, in 1809 m. Elizabeth Koch (born Aug. 27, 1784, died Aug. 29, 1860), and his will, probated in 1875, was written in German; Abraham, born Aug. 2, 1789, m. Elizabeth Albright, and died Jan. 23, 1872; Daniel, born Feb. 20, 1792, m.

Catherine Spohn, and died March 29, 1884, at Shanesville, and is buried at Hill Church; David, born April 5, 1794, died Nov. 18, 1876, m. (first) Deborah De Turck (born Feb. 10, 1795, died May 10, 1855), and (second) Mary Muthard (1799-1889); and William, born Aug. 6, 1795, m. Susan Moses, and died April 27, 1852.

(II) Daniel Brumbach, son of Hermanus, was born Feb. 20, 1792. He followed agricultural pursuits in Earl township, Berks county. He married Catherine Spohn, and they had the following children: Levi, a resident of Sinking Spring, who has passed his eighty-second birthday; Daniel; Samuel; Susanna; Lydia, m. to William Deysher; and Mrs. William Fry, who lived in Reading.

(III) Samuel Brumbach, son of Daniel, was a cabinetmaker and undertaker in Pine township, Berks county. He lived and died in the family faith of the Reformed Church, and for many years served as an official. His first wife was named Mary Clouser, and they had the following children: Mabry C., a cabinet maker at Boyertown; Henry, deceased, formerly of Boyertown; Hannah, residing at Boyertown; Morris, a farmer in Oley township; Sophia, wife of Harry Lechner; Horace, who died young; Daniel C.; and Samuel, who died at Boyertown.

(IV) Daniel C. Brumbach, son of Samuel and one of Boyertown's leading and substantial citizens, was born in August, 1840, in Pike township, Berks county. For twenty-eight years he conducted the undertaking and cabinet furniture business at this place, and was one of the organizers of the Boyertown Casket Company, the leading industry of the borough. It was organized in 1884, with a capital stock of $20,000, and this was increased in 1897 to $100,000. The company has a large eight-story office building on Arch Street, Philadelphia. In the eighties Mr. Brumbach erected the Brumbach Building, on the corner of Philadelphia Avenue and Washington Street, Boyertown, which is 38x115 feet in dimensions and three stories high, of brick construction. A part of the building is utilized as a dwelling, and the rest is used for the furniture business. He is a director of the Union Manufacturing Company and a director and vice president of the Franklin Improvement Company. This concern gives employment to from 300 to 400 people and is a very successful corporation. It owns also the building which is occupied by the Eisenlohr Cigar Manufacturing Company, one of Boyertown's best structures, three stories in height and with dimensions of 175 feet with an 80-foot ell. It is regarded as one of the best equipped factory buildings in Pennsylvania. Mr. Brumbach was chairman of the building committee during the erection of this structure which does credit to the architects, builders and owners and to the borough. In his political views Mr. Brumbach is a Democrat. For six years he was a member of the town council, and for three years served as treasurer of the school board. During the Civil War he became a member of Company A, 128th Pa. V. I., which was assigned to the Army of the Potomac, and he participated in the battles of Antietam and South Mountain. While his company was at Maryland Heights, he was prostrated with fever and for four months was confined in different hospitals but finally was able to return to his company and was honorably discharged in 1865. He is a member of Gen. Cook Post, G. A. R., of Boyertown.

Daniel C. Brumbach married Caroline Moyer, daughter of Isaac Moyer, of Pike township, and they have had five children, as follows: Frank, a cabinetmaker of Boyertown; Amandus, deceased, who conducted an undertaking business at Allentown; and Ella, who married James Brown, of Kutztown (successor to D. C. Brumbach in business), and they have one son, Harold; and Carrie and Daniel, who are both deceased. Mr. Brumbach is a member of the Reformed Church at Boyertown, and he has served for a number of years as a deacon and elder. Since 1905 he has been president of the Fairview Cemetery Board. In 1903 he made a western tour, taking in the scenic part of the country west of the Mississippi, which has interested thousands, including Denver and surroundings, and Pike's Peak; and in 1907 he took another enjoyable trip, starting from Allentown and taking in Niagara Falls, Chicago and parts of Kansas, and returning by way of Chicago and Harrisburg.

(II) David Brumbach, son of Hermanus, born April 5, 1794, for some years conducted a woolen mill in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, and in his earlier years was a mill operator in Tulpehocken. In 1841 he settled in Oley township, Berks county, where he acquired a farm of 113 acres, and this he cultivated until his removal to Friedensburg, where he lived retired until his death, Nov. 18, 1876. He is buried at the Reformed Church in Oley. He m. (first) Deborah De Turck, born Feb. 10, 1795, died May 10, 1855. To this union were born: Isaac, deceased; Eliza, m. to Abraham Herbein; James D.; Alfred, deceased; Percival, of Reading; Hiram, deceased; and two that died young.

(III) Isaac Brumbach, son of David and Deborah, lived to be seventy-eight years old. He followed farming and also operated a sawmill. His farm of eighty acres was situated in Oley township, and his death took place at Friedensburg, and he was buried at Oley Church. He was prominent in the affairs of his section and for years served as a school director. He married Rachel Hoch, who bore him four children: Jacob, who died young; Ezra, of Oley Township; Deborah, m. to William Schollenberger; and Wellington. After the death of his first wife he married Mary Ann (De Turck) Geiger.

(IV) Wellington Brumbach, son of Isaac, was born in Oley township, March 31, 1861, and was reared a farmer. When quite young he went into the sawmill owned by his father and worked there until he was fourteen years old, and then devoted some four years entirely to farming. After this he learned the shoemaking trade with David Diehl, and has followed this industry ever since. In 1880 he located at Friedensburg, and on Oct. 3, 1887, settled at his present place of business. His fraternal affiliation is with the Knights of the Golden Eagle. He is a Democrat in politics. Like the other members of his family, he belongs to the Reformed Church, and since 1902 has served in the church at Friedensburg as a deacon. On Dec. 24, 1887, Mr. Brumbach married Katie M. Rothermel, daughter of Amos and Elizabeth (Moyer) Rothermel, and they have had five children: Marion, Florence, Emma, living, and Earl and William, deceased.

(III) James D. Brumbach, son of David, was born in Tulpehocken township, Aug. 18, 1828, and was brought up to the woolen business. When thirteen years old he accompanied his parents to Oley, and assisted on the farm until he became of age. After his marriage he farmed for his father on the property which now belongs to Ezra Levan, and remained there for seven years, when he bought the Solomon Ely farm on which he has resided for the past forty-three years. Here he has twenty-eight acres on which he has made many improvements. For fifteen years he also engaged in a mercantile business at various points, spending three years at Griesemersville, six years at Spangsville and six years at Manatawny, and then sold out to his son Edwin. On Sept. 22, 1906, Mr. Brumbach suffered a severe loss by fire, his large double brick house being destroyed while the family was attending the funeral of Mrs. Polly Schaeffer, wife of Miles, who lived in a part of the house. Mr. Brumbach lost $1,000 above the amount of his insurance. It is his hope and expectation to spend his remaining years on this farm. On Dec. 25, 1855, he was married to Susan Herbein, daughter of Levi and Sarah (Herbein) Herbein, of Oley. Of their children: Levi died aged four years;

Ammon lives in Philadelphia; James resides in Reading and Edwin H. at Pleasantville.

(IV) Edwin H. Brumbach, son of James D., was born at Spangsville, Oley township, Berks county, Pa., Feb. 24, 1869, was reared on the home farm and obtained his education first in the public schools and later in Oley Academy. For a time thereafter he engaged in clerking in his father's store at Griesemersville and after his marriage turned his attention to operating the home farm which he successfully continued for five years. He marketed his produce at Reading, making periodical visits. When his father removed to Pleasantville and acquired his own store building there, Edwin H. served as his clerk for eight years, and in the spring of 1902 purchased the business and has continued the enterprise, but with a larger scope. Since April 10, 1906, he has been postmaster, having been assistant for some years previously. Mr. Brumbach and his family are members of the Reformed Church of Oley, in which he served four years in the office of deacon. In politics he is a Democrat. His fraternal connections are with Minnehaha Lodge, No. 154 K. of P.; and Manatawny Lodge, No. 461 K. G. E.

On Oct. 19, 1889, Edwin H. Brumbach was married to Mary Alice Griesemer, daughter of Jacob and Mary Ann (Dilaplaine) Griesemer, of Oley. To this union have been born three sons and one daughter, namely: M. Edna and Ed. Lloyd G., twins, born April 2, 1892; J. Leroy, born April 19, 1894; and C. Lester, born Jan. 11, 1903. In 1904 Mr. Brumbach took an enjoyable trip, starting from Reading and going by way of Allentown, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Suspension Bridge, Cleveland and Toledo, Ohio, and Chicago, to St. Louis, spending several weeks at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. His return trip was made through Cincinnati, Ohio, Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Md., and Philadelphia, taking ample time to see the various points of interest in the cities named. On this journey he traveled through ten different States, and covered a distance of 2,800 miles.

BAUSCHER. The emigrant ancestor of the Bauscher family came to Pennsylvania from Germany, but the origin of the family is French. Tradition says that Daniel Bauscher (who in 1790 spelled his name "Boutcher") came to this country from the Palatinate in 1765. In 1790 he was a resident of Albany township, Berks county, and lived on the farm which is still in the family name. The Federal census of that year records him as the father of three sons (above sixteen years of age) and two daughters. He was, however, the father of seven children, namely: Philip; Jacob, who settled in Windsor township; Anthony, who removed to the Glades, Westmoreland county, Pa., and who is the forbear of J. N. Boucher, Esq., of Greensburg, Pa.; Henry, who removed to Somerset county, Pa.; Peter, who located in Hamburg; and two daughters, one of whom was Barbara.

Philip Bauscher, son of Daniel, bought land of John Penn in Albany township, Berks county. He is buried at New Bethel Church. His children were: Jacob; Christian, 1799-1875; Maria, m. to Peter Laubenstein; Kate, m. to John Dietrich; Rachel, m. to John Dietrich; and Leah, m. to John Hartzel.

Christian Bauscher, son of Philip, was born in Albany township in 1799, and died there in 1875; he is buried at New Bethel Church. He was a farmer on the old homestead, and retired from active work about ten years before he died. He married Maria Dietrich, daughter of John Dietrich, and their children were: Catharine m. Andreas Kunkel; Lydia m. Nathan Trexler; Abbie m. Jonas Werner; Nathan, a farmer living now at McKeansburg, m. Brigitta Smith, and has children—Ella, David, Levi, Sarah, Amanda, Amelia and Ida; and Henry.

Henry Bauscher, son of Christian, was born on the old Bauscher homestead in Albany township May 25, 1832, and there passed his entire life, dying on the same farm, May 3, 1909. His early education was obtained in the old pay schools of his day, and later he went to Montour county to learn English and attend school. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence and judgment, and he was successful as a farmer and useful as a citizen. The old Bauscher farm, which he owned, contains 190 acres of the best land in the township, and under his practical, systematic care it was greatly improved and developed. The tenement house, a stone building, was erected by his father, Christian, in 1852, but the modern brick house, now occupied by Miss Annie M. Bauscher, was built by Henry Bauscher in 1882. The large Swiss barn was built by Christian.

Henry Bauscher was modest and retiring in his disposition, but he had too keen a regard for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship to remain in the background when the moral or material welfare of his community was in need of support and assistance, and he was ever one of the progressive and enterprising men of his community. He was industrious and honest, and he well merited the high esteem in which he was held. In politics he was a Democrat, and for many years served most efficiently as school director. He and his family were members of the New Bethel (Corner) Church, of Albany, which he served many years in the offices of deacon, elder and treasurer. He and three generations before him are buried in its graveyard.

Mr. Bauscher was twice married. On Oct. 7, 1854, he m. Sarah Kunkel, born Oct. 2, 1837, died Sept. 29, 1863, the mother of five sons: Lewis W., born 1855; Oliver, born 1856; Daniel, born 1860; and Wallace and Thomas, twins, born 1862, the former dying in 1862, and the latter in 1863. On Nov. 9, 1867, Mr. Bauscher m. (second) Sarah Sassaman, born Sept. 6, 1835, daughter of John and Salome (Altenderfer) Sassaman. She died April 6, 1908. To this union was born one daughter, Annie M.

Miss Annie M. Bauscher is a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1886. She taught school sixteen terms, and by appointment of the State superintendent of public schools was a member of the examining board for permanent certificates of teachers of Berks county for three years. She has traveled extensively, and is a lady of culture and refinement.

Daniel Bauscher, son of Henry and Sarah (Kunkel), was born on his father's farm in Albany township Oct. 18, 1860. He lived at home until the spring of 1886, when he began farming on his present place, located near Trexler, in Albany township. He has 127 acres of good land in what is known as the "potato" belt. He plants from ten to twelve acres of this vegetable, and is prosperous. In politics he is a Democrat, and since 1908 has been a member of the school board. He and his family are members of New Bethel (Corner) Church, in Albany, belonging to the Reformed congregation, of which Mr. Bauscher was deacon for two years.

On Aug. 2, 1885, Mr. Bauscher married Louisa Stibitz, born June 2, 1860, daughter of John Stibitz, of Schuylkill county. They have had six children, all living, namely: Sadie J., William G., Abner N., Fred O., Mahlon A. and Mabel E.

RHOADS. One of the best-known names in Berks county is that of Rhoads. The early spelling of the name was Roth, but through the school teachers of the children of the family it was changed to Rhoads early in the nineteenth century. The ancestor of the Pennsylvania Rhoadses must have come to America about 1710. In a manuscript history of Oley township, Berks county, now preserved by the Pennsylvania Historical Society at Philadelphia, is the following: "About 1725 three brothers named Rhoads, or Roth, also prospected this section of country for a home. As they threaded their way through Oley, one day, they halted at the beautiful spring where now stands the farm house of Jacob K. Kauffman, near the Yellow House. They finally took up land on the All Sort Range, in Amity, and settled thereon, and many families of that name have descended from them, some of whom are still in possession of the ancestral estates." These three brothers were Mathias, Jacob and John. A John Rhoads is buried in the old graveyard at Amityville, just east of the present church building. The inscription on his stone reads: "John Rhoads, who departed Octob. the 19, 1767." Catharine Rhoads, widow of the John Rhoads, who died in 1767, made a will Nov. 20, 1784, probated Aug. 6, 1786, in which she mentions sons, Adam, John and Mathias (who married a Mariet ———, and had daughters, Susanna and Catharine).

MRS. SARAH BAUSCHER

HENRY BAUSCHER

In this article two separate lines are shown, one descending from (I) Jacob and the other from (Ia) Mathias.

(I) On Dec. 28, 1812, Jacob Rhoads of Amity township made his last will and testament, which was probated July 8, 1814. His wife's name was Susan (or Susanna), and their four children were: John, born Nov. 29, 1775, died Feb. 19, 1850, married Mary Weaver (born March 19, 1781—died Aug. 3, 1860, daughter of Jacob and Anna Weaver), and had three sons and three daughters; Hannah married Abraham Hill; Elizabeth; and Daniel.

(II) Daniel Rhoads, son of Jacob and Susan, was born in 1752, and died March 12, 1825. He and his wife Magdalena (born 1760, died Dec. 11, 1813) are both buried immediately east of the Amityville Church in the old graveyard. In the will he made in 1823, admitted to probate in 1825, he mentions these children: Jacob (born May 19, 1784, died March 17, 1848), John (born Sept. 17, 1787, died May 20, 1861), Samuel (born July 8, 1796, died April 25, 1838), Daniel (had a son Ammon, a resident of Oley, who had two sons), Solomon (born May 13, 1798, died Feb. 17, 1873), Adam (born March 9, 1800, died Aug. 31, 1888), Abraham (born Jan. 20, 1802, died April 24, 1865) and Mary. Two sons, Peter (born 1791, died 1822) and David (born 1792, died 1812), both passed away before the making of the will. Of these children Abraham married Hannah, born Feb. 2, 1816, daughter of Daniel and Hannah Lorah; she died Dec. 25, 1883. He had one son, Daniel L. Rhoads, who lived near Yellow House, was president of the National Bank of Boyertown, and is buried at Amity. None of his children are living.

(III) John Rhoads, son of Daniel and Magdalena, born Sept. 17, 1787, was a miller along Monocacy creek. He died May 20, 1861, aged seventy-three years, eight months, three days. He married Catharine Pyle, and among others they had three sons, Abraham, John and William. Abraham lived near Monocacy Hill and several of his sons are there; William, a butcher, lived in Amityville, married a Hine, and had sons: Capt. Samuel H., of the famous Ringgold Battery, and Charles, of Reading. The brothers, Abraham and William are buried at Amity.

(IV) John Rhoads, son of John and Catharine (Pyle), was buried at Amityville. He devoted his years to farming. His wife, Catharine Idyl, bore him four children, namely: Jeremiah, of Indiana county, Pa.; Isaac, of near Yellow House (had a son, Jacob, living at Richmond, Va., and John, who died young and is buried at Amity); Rachel, who married Isaac Bowman, of Oley township; and Maberry A.

(V) Maberry A. Rhoads, son of John and Catharine (Idyl), was born in Oley township Aug. 31, 1835, and died Oct. 1, 1896, aged sixty-one years, one month; he was buried in Amityville cemetery. In his young manhood he learned the milling business, but farming engrossed the greater part of his attention. For over fifteen years he was a member of the church vestry. On Oct. 19, 1858, he married Mary Ann Schaffer, born Jan. 18, 1841, daughter of Samuel and Christina (Hartranft) Schaffer, of Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county. Thirteen children were born of this union, namely: Rosa E., who married W. L. Weiss, of Amity township; Calvin C.; Kate T., who married Frank Hamer, of Amity township; Annie, who married Samuel Dunn, of Douglass township; Effinger M.; Harvey M.; Mary, who married H. L. Wise; Newton I.; Edgar D.; Charles G.; Amelia; Carrie, who married Edgar Heist; and Irvin, born 1883, who died in 1903.

(VI) Newton I. Rhoads, proprietor of the "Washington House, Amityville, was born Nov. 26, 1873, son of Maberry A. and Mary Ann (Schaffer) Rhoads. He acquired his education in the public schools of his native town, Douglassville, and in Amityville Seminary. When he was sixteen he commenced to learn the trade of miller, and this he followed for six years. The dust affecting his health, however, he was obliged to seek a change of employment. He learned the butcher's trade, and was engaged at it for three years, when he was made supervisor of Amity township. On Dec. 19, 1901, he took charge of the "Washington House," at Amityville, which he has since conducted with great success. He has sixteen rooms, and keeps his place in a manner that makes it very popular with the traveling public. Fraternally Mr. Rhoads is a member of Washington Camp, No. 213, P. O. S. of A., Amityville; Bright Star Castle, No. 448, K. G. E.; Monocacy Lodge, No. 444, I. O. O. F., Douglassville; and the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of Reading. He and his family attend the Reformed Church at Amityville. In politics Mr. Rhoads is a stanch Republican, and since 1906 he has been the very efficient and popular township auditor. On Sept. 15, 1894, he married Louisa Belles, daughter of William and Fietta (Greth) Belles, of Richmond township. Mrs. Rhoads was reared in the family of Judge Sassaman. Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads have five children, two sons and three daughters, as follows: Paul N., David W., Mary A., Maud and Pearl M.

Ezekiel Rhoads, son of Samuel Rhoads, was born Jan. 26, 1810, on the old homestead farm in Amity. He made farming his life work, and at his death in 1889 was buried in Amityville cemetery. He married Susan Bertolet, and they became the parents of six children, as follows: Calvin B., who was at one time mayor of Wilmington, Del., died there, and was buried in the Amityville cemetery (he married Camilla Johnson); Franklin B.; Louisa, who married L. A. Bertolet, of Wilmington, Del.; Catharine E., widow of Daniel L. Rhoads, of Yellow House; Harriet Ann, who married H. K. Bechtel, of Reading; and Amos, who located in Dayton, Ohio, where he died in 1872, aged thirty-six years.

Rebecca Rhoads, sister of Ezekiel, married Samuel L. Boyer, a noted church chorister and teacher of vocal and instrumental music.

Franklin B. Rhoads, son of Ezekiel and Susan (Bertolet), was born in Amity township July 24, 1838. He attended the old pay schools, where the salary of the teacher was from two and one-half to three cents a day. The school-house was located where the chapel now stands in Amityville. The education here acquired was supplemented by attendance at Freeland Academy in 1857. He then engaged in teaching and for six terms in Amity and one in Douglass he was a very popular teacher. He then began to farm the homestead of 145 acres, and for seven years gave this work his exclusive attention. In 1886 he moved to Boyertown and became teller of the National Bank of that city, a position he held until Jan. 1, 1908. In politics he is a Democrat, and for three years served as borough auditor. In June, 1861, he married Rebecca Lorah, daughter of John Lorah, of Amity township. Nine children blessed this marriage: George, deceased; Lottie, at home; John, of Reading; Susan, who married John R. Guldin, of Yellow House; Daniel, of Hazleton; Mary, who married Frank S. Sailor, of Reading; Chauncey, of Reading; William L.; and Maud, who married Llewellyn Leinbach, of Oley.

William L. Rhoads, son of Franklin B. and Rebecca (Lorah), and the present assistant superintendent of the great Boyertown Casket Company, was born in Amity township, on the old Rhoads home farm, Nov. 11, 1874. He attended the public schools of his native town of Boyertown. As a boy he learned the printer's trade, serving a full apprenticeship. He then became an employe of the Boyertown Casket Company, beginning in the finishing department, of which two years later he was made foreman. In six more years he became assistant superintendent of this large industry, where some 325 people are employed. In 1894 Mr. Rhoads married Annie S. Fryer, daughter of Benjamin R. Fryer, and they have three children: Rebecca E., Mary L. and W. Lester. The family reside in their own home on North Reading avenue, which was built by Mr. Rhoads in 1904. In politics he is a Democrat, and in the spring of 1908 was elected as school director of the borough. Fraternally he belongs to Washington Camp, No. 104, P. O. S. of A.; and Popodickon Tribe, No. 388, Red Men, both of Boyertown. With his family he attends the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd, in which for some time he served as deacon.

(Ia) Mathias Roth (or Rhoads), the ancestor of many of the name in Berks county, was a native of the Rheinpfalz, Germany, born Nov. 8, 1717, perhaps a son of one of the three brothers referred to in the foregoing. He died in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, March 13, 1795, and is buried at Amityville Church. He was an extensive farmer, and owned much land in Colebrookdale township. His last will and testament, which he made Nov. 14, 1786, is very fair and equitable. He made ample provision for his "dearly beloved" wife, Anna Elizabeth. His children were: Jonathan; Solomon; Catharine, who married Thomas Willson, of Pottsgrove; Barbara, who married Peter Yerger; and Anna Elizabeth, who married Peter Bastress. At his death Mathias left a large estate, and he had for many years been looked upon as one of the substantial men of his locality. As early as 1760 he was a taxable in the Colebrookdale district, being assessed at £10 that year, and paying 15s. tax.

(IIa) Jonathan Roth (or Rhoads), son of Mathias, was born March 18, 1751, and died Sept. 3, 1819, aged sixty-eight years, five months, fifteen days. He was bequeathed a gristmill, a sawmill, two tracts of land (on one of which were the aforesaid mills), one containing sixty acres, eighty-five perches, with allowance of six per cent for roads, and the other, forty-five and one-half acres, with its respective appurtenances. Jonathan Roth married Dorothea Elizabeth Linn, born Dec. 12, 1756, died April 16, 1824, aged sixty-seven years, four months, four days. They made their home in Colebrookdale, and there reared their eight children: Jacob married Margaret Kline; Elizabeth married Dieter Geiger; Margaret married Abraham Wartman; Maria married Christian Schaner; John married Catharine K. Boyer; Hannah died young; Henry married Elizabeth Schaeffer; Catharine married Mathias Ritter.

(IIIa) Jacob Roth, son of Jonathan and Dorothea Elizabeth (Linn), married Margaret Kline, and their children were: Lydia married Bastian Buchert; Daniel married (first) Catharine Yerger, and (second) Lydia Freyer; Jacob, born Dec. 25, 1806, married Sarah Romich, and had a large progeny (he is buried at Boyertown); Hannah, born Aug. 16, 1804, married David Wise; Dieter married (first) Elizabeth Brandlinger, and (second) Kate Reifsnyder; Samuel married twice; Rebecca married Abraham Hanberger; Maria married John Peltz, of Roxboro; Catharine, born Oct. 14, 1807, died Nov. 14, 1809.

(IVa) Daniel Rhoads, son of Jacob and Margaret (Kline), was twice married. By his first wife, Catharine Yerger, he had the following children: Levinus (who lived in Reading), who married Catharine Rahn; Samuel, of New Hanover, who married Rebecca Guldin; Lydia, of Reading, who married (first) Henry Spadler, and (second) John Yerger; John, who married (first) Mary Kohler, and (second) Mary Palm; Henry, who married Mary Freyer; Jacob, of Gilbertsville, who married Lavina Davidheiser; and Mary, of Frederick, who married Daniel Botz.

(IIIa) John Rhoads, son of Jonathan and Dorothea Elizabeth, was born June 28, 1788, and died July 4, 1860, aged seventy-two years, six days. He was a prosperous farmer in Colebrookdale, where he owned land, a part of which is still in the family. On it has been found iron ore in large quantities, which is at present being worked by the firm known as the John Rhoads Mining Company. John Rhoads married Dec. 13, 1818, Catharine K. Boyer, who was born Jan. 22, 1803, daughter of Henry Boyer, who with his brother Daniel founded the beautiful borough of Boyertown. Thirteen children were born to John Rhoads and wife, as follows: Jonathan, born 1820; Henry, 1821; Benneville, 1823; Rebecca L., 1825; Sarah, 1827; Elizabeth, 1828; Mahella, 1830; Dr. Reuben B., 1831; Julius, 1834; Catharine, 1835; Dr. Thomas J. B., 1837; Emma, 1839; and Angelina, 1841.

(IVa) Dr. Reuben B. Rhoads, son of John and Catharine K. (Boyer), was born Oct. 29, 1831. He was brought up on the home farm, and acquired his literary training in the public schools and Mt. Pleasant Seminary. For some time he engaged in teaching, and then began the study of medicine under Dr. Henry W. Johnson, of Boyertown, completing his professional studies in Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1857. He located at Zieglerville, in Montgomery county, where he practised until 1862, when he enlisted in the United States service as assistant surgeon in the 169th Pa. V. I., for nine months. His first assignment was in the smallpox department of the hospital at Camp Curtin, Harrisburg, whence he was transferred to Pittsburg, where he took charge of the hospital at Camp Howe. He was then sent to Fort Keyes, Gloucester point, at Yorktown, where Brig.-Gen. Tyndale was in command, and Dr. Rhoads was appointed by him brigade surgeon. Returning to Zieglerville after his term of enlistment had expired, he practised there for a year longer, and then moved to Amityville, where he was engaged until 1882, when he was elected warden of the Berks county prison. At the expiration of his term of office, he went to Boyertown, and engaged in the coal and lumber business, being associated with his two sons, John G. and Benjamin J., both of Reading. This line he followed with great success until 1893, when he retired. He built a fine brick residence at the corner of Apple street and Reading avenue, and there he continues to make his home. He enjoyed a large practice in his professional work, and it was with considerable regret that his clientele saw him enter the business world. In politics Dr. Rhoads is a Democrat, and he served as school director of Amity township, and also at Boyertown, and was burgess of Boyertown from 1903 to 1906. He has frequently served as delegate to county conventions, and twice to the State conventions. He and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown. Dr. Rhoads has always been much interested in agricultural work, and before his removal to Boyertown had large nurseries at Amityville, where he was engaged in experimenting with the cultivation of small fruits. He still retains his interest in this line and is active in the work of the Patrons of Husbandry.

On May 10, 1859, Dr. Reuben B. Rhoads was married to Kate W. Gilbert, daughter of the late Adam R. and Mary Ann (Weaver) Gilbert. Five children have been born to them: Ben Jonson, of Reading; Laura K., who married Harvey Breidenbach, of Camden, N. J.; Mary Ella, who married George G. Guldin, an employe of the United Traction Company, Philadelphia; John G., twin to Mary Ella; and Maggie Elizabeth, who died in her thirteenth year. Among Dr. Rhoads's many treasures is an old grandfather's clock, made some hundred years ago. It shows the moon's phases, and the date, and still keeps excellent time.

(IVa) Dr. Thomas J. B. Rhoads, son of John and Catharine K. (Boyer), was born on the old Rhoads farm, now within the corporate limits of Boyertown, Sept. 26, 1837. There were no "public schools" in those days, as we use the term now, but Dr. Rhoads attended the school kept by Henry G. Stetler, and under him was prepared to enter Mt. Pleasant Seminary at Boyertown. He was but eighteen years old when he engaged in teaching, having first charge of the Wise school in Colebrookdale township, and later of the Gablesville school. He was not satisfied with teaching, and under Dr. Henry W. Johnson began his preparation for the medical profession, spending long evenings studying physiology and anatomy, and then he placed himself under the direction of his elder brother, Dr. Reuben B. In the fall of 1858 he entered Jefferson Medical College, graduating therefrom in the spring of 1861. He at once opened an office in Gilbertsville, Montgomery county, and in the following year he was commissioned assistant surgeon in the army by Governor Curtin. He was assigned to the 169th P. V. I., then at Gloucester Point, opposite Yorktown, Va., where his brother was acting surgeon. This regiment was ordered in 1863 to march toward Gettysburg and intercept General Lee, but by the time they reached the Potomac they found Lee's army had arrived first. The regiment was mustered out July 28, 1863. Dr. Rhoads returned home, and took up his residence in the house occupied by his former preceptor, Dr. Johnson, and soon, backed by his reputation won in the army, he was favored with a large practice. In 1868 he erected the commodious home he has since occupied, at the corner of Philadelphia avenue and Chestnut street. In addition to his practice he has conducted a drug store. For twelve years he had as a partner in his practice his brother-in-law, Dr. Leidy. With the exception of inflammatory rheumatism Dr. Rhoads has been blessed with excellent health, and he has never been obliged to take a rest except when he had a leg broken in a runaway accident. He is not only the family doctor, but he is the friend and adviser of his patients in many ways, and is greatly beloved all over the county.

While Dr. Rhoads has given over forty-eight years of service to his profession he has not neglected other lines of activity, and he has assisted in developing various industries that have been of great benefit to his community. In 1874 he assisted in the organization of the National Bank of Boyertown, and was its president until 1882. In 1883 he organized the Farmers National Bank of Boyertown, and has ever since been its president. He is a director and treasurer of the Boyertown Mutual Fire Insurance Company; trustee of the Fairview Cemetery Association; and secretary and treasurer of the John Rhoads Mining Company. He has been active in public affairs, is ex-burgess, was one of the first councilmen, and served as school director for many years. He is president of the board of health; treasurer of the Friendship Hook and Ladder Company; past commander of Gen. George Cook Post, G. A. R., of Boyertown; and a member of the Pennsylvania German Society, the Berks County Historical Society and the National Geological Society. His religious connection is with St. John's Lutheran Church.

With all his varied interests, Dr. Rhoads has kept abreast of the progress of medical science, and has added much to medical literature. He has composed two large volumes of poems, one of which was published several years ago, and the other recently. Most of this writing was mentally arranged as he drove through country roads on long night drives. The first volume is entitled "Uncle Jeff's Reminiscences of Youth and Other Poems," and we append one gem, a favorite of the good old Doctor's:

THAT OLD TIN BOX OF MINE.

Who has not seen that old tin box of mine?
My close companion well nigh twoscore years,
This I have lugged along through rain or shine—
The truth of which in that old box appears.

Some carry costly leather-covered chests,
With nickel-plated bindings all around,
Wherein, in separate compartments, nests
Of tiny bottles in each space are found.

A handsome thing to look at, I admit,
If lugged with ease from place to place in town,
But when it comes to practice, not a bit
More handy than the old tin box I own.

When I hung out my shingle years ago
At Gilbertsville, one pleasant morn in May,
I carried saddle-bags wherein to stow
Things I might need to see the sick each day.

But when I went to war I stowed away
Those saddle-bags to let them have a rest,
Nor have I ever used them to this day,
Because I like my old tin box the best.

There every bottle in its proper place
Comes readily to hand in darkest night,
When quickly its location I can trace
Without the aid of artificial light.

This could be done with others, it is true,
In handsome chests with nickel lock and key,
But then why should I change to something new?
No reason in the world that I can see.

Unless it be to keep up with the times,
Or, else, perhaps, to show a little style;
In my perambulations I sometimes
Gaze on this tin box with a secret smile.

To see the dented corners, battered lid,
The stout tin bottom and the paper key;
Then note the fact that in that box lie hid
The means that brought success in life to me.

The taunts and jeers about that box of mine
By customers whose friendship I revere,
But served to bind still closer and entwine
That old tin box to me from year to year.

I've lugged it in the winter's frigid air,
And sweltered in the summer's scorching sun
In toting it in weather foul or fair,
By day or night when I was called upon.

Why should I now discard this box of mine
That served my purpose for so many years,
And substitute a case more neat and fine?
A doubtful move to me such plan appears.

It caused no corner in the price of tin
When to my order that tin box was made,
Nor when the well-known remedies within
Were stowed away did drugs decline a shade!

Now when life's summit by me has been passed,
While 'round this box so many memories twine,
As long as needed, or while life shall last,
I am bound to stick to that tin box of mine.

On May 10, 1862, Dr. Rhoads married Theresa Fiazetta Leidy, and to this union four children were born: (1) Ellen O. died aged four years, four months, sixteen days. (2) Katie N., born Nov. 12, 1866, married Prof. Elmer J. Conner, of the Pierce Business College, Philadelphia, and died Nov. 28, 1893. (3) Henry C. died in infancy. (4) Thomas Leidy, who has the rank of major on the medical staff, Division Sergeant, U. S. A., Manila, P. I., married Frances Kohler, of Allentown, who died in San Francisco, Cal., in 1902, leaving a son, Thomas Collier, born Nov. 2, 1900, who now makes his home with his home with his grandparents at Boyertown.

(IIIa) Henry Roth (or Rhoads), son of Jonathan, married Elizabeth Schaeffer, a daughter of one of the Hessians captured by Washington at Trenton on Christmas night, 1776, who remained in this country and became a prosperous farmer in Exeter township, Berks county. She was a sister to the celebrated Captain Schaeffer of the Exeter Troop. Henry Roth and his wife Elizabeth had three sons: (1) Jacob, the eldest, died on the farm left him by his father at an advanced age, and is buried at Boyertown. He had three sons, Jacob (who lives on his father's farm), Henry (of Gilbertsville) and William (of Boyertown), all of whom are married and have children. (2) Elam C. Rhoads married but died childless. His farm lay principally in the borough limits. He was a thrifty genius, industrious and saving, followed his trade of millwright for a considerable time and afterward engaged in agriculture, and accumulated quite a property. He left considerable to churches and one thousand dollars for orphan home purposes and the cemeteries of Boyertown, besides a good sum to the poor and deserving of the neighborhood. (3) Samuel died of consumption in the prime of life, and is buried at Boyertown.

(IIa) Solomon Roth, son of Mathias, born July 8, 1757, died Feb. 2, 1798, at the old homestead, Colebrookdale (now Morysville), and is buried at the Amityville Church. He received from his father two certain pieces of land, one tract of 159 acres, 126 perches, and the other of forty-eight acres, 141 perches, and their several appurtenances. He married Elizabeth Kepler, and their children were: Peter, born Dec. 8, 1793, died Aug. 31, 1795, and is buried at Amityville; a daughter died in childhood, and is buried at Amityville; David married Ann Catharine Schnell, and both are buried at Boyertown; Mary (or Molly) married Adam Gresh. After the death of Solomon Roth, his widow married (second) a Drenkel, of Reading, and after his death she resided for a short time with her son David. She married (third) John Feary.

(IIIa) David Rhoads, son of Solomon and Elizabeth, married Ann Catharine Schnell, and they became the parents of two sons and five daughters, namely: Elizabeth married Samuel Spatz, and is buried at Boyertown (she had children, David, Angeline, Susanna, Catharine and Hetty); Rebecca married Jacob Riegner, and is buried at Boyertown; Maria also married; Solomon married a Gilbert and had three children, Samuel (a United Brethren minister who lived at Philadelphia), David (died young) and Hetty (married Adam Barriett and lived in Philadelphia); Catharine married a Schearer and is buried at Boyertown; John lived on the old Rhoads homestead (he had one son, Percival, whom he lost while in the service of his country, during the Civil war, and several daughters, only one now living, Mrs. Thomson, of Philadelphia); Harriet married Israel R. Laucks (once recorder of Berks county) and is buried at Reading.

ANDREW FICHTHORN, son of Andrew and Catherine (Hartman) Fichthorn, the former for many years a gunsmith, was born in Reading Nov. 22, 1822, and died in that city June 25, 1903. He was one of a large family comprising the following: John, Daniel, George, Charles, William, Louis, Susan (m. William Call), Catherine (m. Adam Fasig) and Andrew.

Andrew Fichthorn, of the above family, attended the public schools of Reading, and when a young man learned the carpenter's trade, which, however, he did not follow for any length of time, turning his attention to the saddling trade, at which he was engaged for several years on Penn street, below Fourth. He then embarked in the tanning business on Chestnut street, near Third, under the firm name of Fichthorn & Bro., and in 1865 engaged in the same business at Sinking Spring, Berks county, continuing there until 1870, in which year he returned to Reading. He then engaged in the real estate business, in which he continued actively until his death. In politics he was a Republican. He was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, and was very active therein.

On June 1, 1845, Mr. Fichthorn married Rachel R. Reiff, daughter of Jacob and Hannah Reiff, of Gratersford, Montgomery county. She died April 7, 1905, aged seventy-nine years, the mother of eleven children: Clara C. resides at the old home, No. 30 South Eighth street; Andrew R. m. Miranda Eberly, and has two children, Kurtz A. and Luke E.; Anna M. m. Dr. C. F. G. Bergner, the well-known Penn street druggist; George L. m. Matilda Wentzel, and has eight children—George A., Harry, William, Florence, Estella, Edith, John and Ralph; Martha E. m. Samuel Yocom, of Reading, and has two children—Samuel A. and Clara A.; Jacob W., engaged in the confectionery business at No. 813 Penn street, m. Rebecca Quillman, and has two children—Grace V. and Clarence J.; J. Walter D., a clerk in Reading, m. Rosa E. Selig, and has two children—Emma E. and Mary A.; Hannah E., a graduate of the Reading high school, taught school in the city for twenty-three years, and died Feb. 1, 1906; and Grace V., Mary M. and Daniel C., died young.

BURKHART was originally a German name, some of the ancestors of the Berks county family spelling it Burghart and some Burckhardt, Burkhart being a somewhat Anglicized form.

Joseph Burkhart, grandfather of Elmore A. Burkhart, was born March 19, 1800, in a log house which stood in the orchard belonging to Mrs. Miese's farm, then in Bern township, now in Penn township. The house has been removed to Bernville, and is now owned by Levi Ludwig. His father's name was John, and his mother's maiden name was Jennings. She died when Joseph was only a few days old, and he was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. John Brossman, with whom he remained until he was of age. When he had arrived at a proper age he was sent to learn the trade of chairmaker with Philip Kline, on the farm now owned by Miss L. Deppen, of Washington, D. C.

On June 20, 1822, Joseph Burkhart was married to Catharine Fuchs, daughter of Christian and Catharine (Clemens) Fuchs, the latter supposedly of English descent. Catharine (Fuchs) Burkhart was born March 11, 1803, in Reading, and was baptized by the Rev. Mr. Boas—sponsors were Matthias Eisenbeis and Catharine Kutz (both single). When she was nine years of age her father died, and her mother put her older children with her relatives, Harry going to Jacob Conrad, at Conrad's mill. While he was there Mr. Conrad came to Reading and took Catharine home with him, to visit her brother. Mr. Conrad offered her to John Geiss, one of his neighbors, who brought his wife over to see her, and they took her home. She was there six months before her mother, supposing she was still at Conrad's, knew about it, John Geiss going to Mrs. Fuchs at the end of that time to come to some understanding about the length of time Catharine was to remain at his home, and what she should receive at the expiration of her time. It was agreed, among other things, that they must send her to school, and in due time to catechetical lectures for confirmation, and they complied with all these terms, Catharine being confirmed at Northkill Church, by Rev. Daniel Ulrich in the fall of 1820. She lived twelve years at the home of John Geiss.

After their marriage on June 20, 1822, Joseph and Catharine (Fuchs) Burkhart made their first home in a house owned by Henry Filbert, on land now owned by Morris F. Rentschler. During his residence there Joseph Burkhart continued to work at the chair-making trade for Phillip Kline. This house was torn down many years ago, a few cherry trees now marking the spot, which naturally is very interesting to all the family. After a few years' residence at that place Joseph Burkhart and his wife removed with the two sons born to them in their first home to the house formerly owned by Benjamin Miller, now the property of Isaac H. Wenrich, and thence a little later (1826) removed to the upper end of town (Bernville) where he bought a one-story log house from Michael Porst, standing on the ground now occupied by the double brick house of Dr. George Hetrick. Mr. Burkhart added a story to his log house, and there lived with his family for about twenty-five years, at the end of that period removing to the lower end of town and buying a lot upon which he built a new home. There he passed the remainder of his life, making chairs and carrying on a confectionery store. He died April 23, 1874, aged seventy-four years, one month, four days, and his wife passed away July 16, 1876, aged seventy-three years, four months, five days. They are buried side by side in the Northkill church cemetery. This worthy couple had a family of six sons and four daughters, viz.: John F., Daniel F. (deceased), Rebecca (Mrs. William E. Huber, living in Reading), Enoch (of Lykens) and Henry F. (twins, the latter dying at Shartlesville), Matilda (Mrs. John Fritz, who died at Birdsboro), William F. (died at Shoemakersville), Sarah (Mrs. Benjamin Lins. who died in Reading), Sybilla (Mrs. Harry Laut, who died in Germantown) and Cyrus F. (of Philadelphia). Four of the sons volunteered for service during the Civil war, Daniel F., Henry F., William F. and Cyrus F., all returning home safely.

John F. Burkhart, eldest of the family of Joseph and Catharine (Fuchs) Burkhart, was born Nov. 23, 1823, and in 1838 commenced his apprenticeship to the trade of tinsmith with George Kershner, of Friedensburg, Oley township, walking home and back every three or four weeks. After his trade was learned he worked for Samuel Schell and Henry Witman as a journeyman in Bernville, in 1848 starting in business for himself at that place, where he has ever since remained. He retired from active business in April, 1908, having given sixty years of his life to work. He is now the oldest resident in Bernville, and though eighty-five years of age enjoys good health. He has prospered by steady industry, and no citizen of the place is more highly respected or honored than he. He is the oldest surviving member of this branch of the family, and one of its most creditable representatives in any generation.

In the Philadelphia Record, Feb. 16, 1908, appeared the following: "To be known as the 'Grand Old Man' of Bernville, Pa., is not the only honor John F. Burkhart is entitled to. He is the town's oldest business man, and the oldest tinsmith in the Blue Mountain region. Mr. Burkhart has been highly esteemed in his native town ever since he was a boy. In youth he was a bright scholar, a regular Sunday-school attendant of the Lutheran Sunday-school, which was held in the early period in the Union Church, known as the Northkill. Later he became Sunday-school superintendent and labored most faithfully for more than thirty years.

"In early life the citizens of his township, before the town was a borough, elected him to numerous offices, and as school director he worked hard for the advancement of the public schools. When the village grew and became a borough, his neighbors called him to council and later he was elected their burgess. He ruled over the town in a non-partisan way, though he was a Republican, and his fellow citizens of all parties always gave him a rousing majority at election time.

"Nearly sixty years ago Burkhart became a tinsmith, and it is said that there is no tin roof within eight miles of Bernville that he did not sit upon with solder in his hand welding together the seams.

"When he began his apprenticeship everything was made by the tinsmith in shop or store. Factory goods were unknown, and Mr. Burkhart well recalls how he made the first 'fat lamp' . . . the lamp used by all citizens sixty years ago . . . Another masterpiece of his youthful days as tinsmith was the 'mam', the nursing bottle of every child in Bernville.

"Sixty-seven years ago this town had meagre facilities, and newspapers were scarce in Berks county. The leading one in the Schuylkill Valley was The Reading Adler, which catered to the Pennsylvania German people, and arrived every week in the Burkhart home, opposite the town pump. He being a German scholar, his neighbors often gathered around this pump on a warm summer day, and heard him read the news of the outside world."

On April 25, 1847, Mr. Burkhart was married to Anna Margaret Wenrich, whose mother was Anna Maria Lamm. They celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding on April 25, 1897, surrounded by a large family of descendants—children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Their children were: J. Henry; Orlando J. m. Elizabeth Gundy, has two children—Edgar and William F.—and lives in Reading; James M., a jeweler in Reading, m. (first) Agnes Clay, and (second) Bessie Bartling, and has children—Edna May, J. Arthur, Joseph Clayton, George and Bartling; Mary C. m. John A. Schock, of Mt. Zion, Lebanon county, and has had children—Ida L. (deceased), Ella M. (deceased), Walter E., Margaret C. and James B.; Daniel A. and Elmore A. are mentioned below; Paul F., a tinsmith at Bernville, m. Alice Hieter (deceased), and had children—Chester D., Leroy H., John A., Margaret E., Catharine L. and Lydia R.; Annie M. m. Samuel T. Bordner, of Bernville, for thirty years a prominent educator and at present clerk of the Quarter Sessions of Berks county, and has had children—Thomas B., Margaret M. (deceased) and Catherine A.; and Sarah M. m. John I. Mattis, of Philadelphia, and has a son, Clayton I.

J. Henry Burkhart, son of John F., was born Nov. 1, 1847. He taught school for twenty-two years, but was a tinsmith by trade. For many years he was organist at St. Paul's Church, near Schaefferstown, Pa., and was choir leader in his own church at Bernville. He died April 22, 1907, and is buried in Haag cemetery, Bernville. In politics he was a Republican. He married Amanda Reifsnyder, daughter of Charles Reifsnyder, and she makes her home in Bernville. Their children were: Laura C., m. to Dr. P. S. Mogel, of Bernville, has two children, J. Vincent and Paul B., and lives at Reading; Sallie A., m. to W. D. Heffelfinger, of Bernville, has had children—Warren (deceased), Annie (deceased), Arthur, Amelia and Rachel; Martin L. died aged three years; Mary, m. to Dr. C. D. Gruber of Bernville, has had children—May, Anna and Flora (deceased); Henry W., a tinsmith in Philadelphia, m. to Millie Bailer, has sons, George H. and J. Warren; and J. Paul is of Bernville.

Daniel A. Burkhart, son of John F. and Anna Margaret (Wenrich) Burkhart, was born in Bernville in 1859, and is now a manufacturer (of tin and sheet iron ware, spouting, tin roofing) and jobber at No. 150 South Twelfth street, Reading. He was educated in the schools of Bernville until thirteen years of age, when he was thought old enough to learn a trade, his father taking him into his tin shop. He remained with his father until March 31, 1879, when he went to Birdsboro, and there he was employed by Albert Fritz for two years and for a like period by John K. Snell at No. 605 Penn street, Reading. He then was employed by D. C. Schnader until July 5, 1890, when he embarked in business for himself, establishing his present concern at No. 150 South Twelfth street. Mr. Burkhart is doing a very large business, employing skilled help and turning out work that makes a market for itself. His manufactured goods include, in addition to those above mentioned, heaters, ranges, furnaces, cooking utensils.

Mr. Burkhart married Rosa Davis, daughter of Cyrus Davis, of Penn township, and they have one daughter, Mabel R., who is attending the Reading high school. The family belong to the Lutheran Church. The pleasant family home is located at No. 1256 Spruce street. Mr. Burkhart is a member of Sirius Castle, No. 63, Knights of the Golden Eagle.

ELMORE A. BURKHART, son of John F. and Anna Margaret (Wenrich) Burkhart, was born in Bernville, Sept. 22, 1862. He acquired his education in the schools of his native locality and for three years taught school in North Heidelberg township. In 1881 he came to Reading and accepted a position with the Reading Hardware Company, beginning as order clerk, from which capacity he has been promoted from time to time until he is now assistant purchasing agent for the Company. He is known to be an able executive, and his services are held in high esteem while he is very popular with his fellow employes. Mr. Burkhart is fraternally connected with Camp No. 113, P. O. S. of A., at Bernville. He is a member of Grace Lutheran Church of South Eleventh street, where he has always been active, holding the offices of deacon and secretary. In political matters he is a Republican.

On June 23, 1886, Mr. Burkhart was united in marriage with Grace B. Hoffman, daughter of Michael and Mary J. (Smith) Hoffman, and to this union there has been born one child, Carrie E., a graduate of the Girls' high school, class of 1905. The family home is located at No. 522 Douglass street.

CYRUS T. FOX, manager for many years of the Reading News Bureau, which he established in 1887, and latterly connected with the Department of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, has been identified with journalistic work continuously since his graduation from the Reading high school, June 30, 1864, at the head of his class. He is also a political factor in the State of Pennsylvania, as well as a leading authority in horticulture.

Mr. Fox was born March 12, 1847, at Reading, Pa., youngest son of Frederick Fox, whose ancestors were among the earliest settlers of the English-speaking residents of Berks county. After receiving his education in the public schools of Reading, Mr. Fox entered the office of attorney John S. Richards of Reading, where he studied law, but upon the death of Mr. Richards abandoned the legal profession for agricultural pursuits. As early as the year 1858, he had manifested a fondness for farm life, and had engaged in fruit culture and gardening on the farm of a relative in Oley township, Berks county. From 1865 until 1872 he served as manager of the Chesterwood Experimental Gardens, in Lancaster county, giving the same much of his personal attention. Almost from boyhood he had been a contributor to a number of newspapers throughout the State, including the Lancaster Inquirer, Lancaster Examiner, Reading Evening Dispatch and the Farm Department of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal. For several years he was the Court reporter of the Reading Times, of which latter newspaper he became city editor in 1872, a position he continued to hold until Sept. 1, 1887. From July 1, 1895, until April 15, 1896, he was editor of the Reading Daily Review, and in July, 1897, he resumed relations with this journal, serving as editor and business manager until January, 1899. In 1893 he served as president of the Reading Press Club, and was present in his official capacity at the organization of the International League of Press Clubs at Pittsburg in the same year. In 1902 he was president of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association, and in 1904 he was elected corresponding secretary thereof; he had been one of its organizers in 1871, as he was also of the National Editorial Association at Cincinnati in 1885.

While connected with the Reading press Mr. Fox organized the Reading News Bureau, for furnishing special matter to daily newspapers in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and other cities; also articles to leading agricultural and horticultural journals, and to papers devoted to the horse, live stock and sports, also contributing to trade journals. This he conducted for a number of years, subsequently turning over a portion of this business to his sons. He is still engaged in writing for many papers, and is a regular contributor of special articles to the Reading Eagle.

In 1867 Mr. Fox became actively identified with the Berks County Agricultural Society, becoming corresponding secretary in 1873, and being elected secretary in 1874, in which office he served continuously until 1902, inclusive, with the exception of two years, 1877 and 1878. From 1877 to 1905 he filled the position of State Pomologist; and for two years, 1897 and 1898, he served as secretary of the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, having been chairman of its General Fruit committee previously thereto for a period of fifteen years. He is also secretary of the Pennsylvania Association of Agricultural Societies. Mr. Fox was one of the first lecturers at farmers' institutes in Pennsylvania, and engaged in this work for many years; also serving as secretary of the local board of Farmers' Institute Managers. In 1904 he was appointed superintendent of horticulture for Pennsylvania at the St. Louis Exposition, and was elected secretary of the World's Fair Association of Superintendents of Horticulture May 2, 1904.

Mr. Fox has been a very active Republican for a long period. From 1873 to 1883 he was chairman of the Republican committee of Berks county, as well as chairman of the Republican city executive committee for the same period, and for many years was a member of the Republican State committee and was one of the "Committee of Five" which in 1877 framed the new party rules. In 1871 he was a delegate to the Republican State Convention and chosen secretary, and was chief secretary of the Republican State Convention of 1882. He was city clerk and secretary of the board of park commissioners and of the board of water commissioners of Reading from 1889 to 1900. From 1891 to 1897, he was secretary of the Reading Board of Trade, and during this period its membership increased from seventy-two to six hundred. In the latter year he was also secretary of the Board of Railway Excursion Managers, created for the purpose of bringing excursions to Reading and benefiting the business men. Mr. Fox was one of the organizers of the Reading & Southwestern Street Railway Company in 1890, was secretary of all the preliminary meetings held to organize the company and from the beginning served as a member of its board of directors, and for seven years was chairman of the executive committee. At various times Mr. Fox has been honored with election to offices of great responsibility. From 1891 to 1903 he served on the board of trustees of the Pennsylvania State College, and in the latter year he was the efficient manager of the great Roanoke Fair, at Roanoke, Virginia.

This fair he managed for three years, and at the same time assisted at other fairs in Virginia, including the first Interstate Fair held in Lynchburg in 1905. In 1906 and 1907 he was manager of the Great District Fair of Radford, Va., and in the same years assisted in holding the fairs at Tazewell and Emporia, Va., also serving as secretary of the Virginia—Carolina Fair and Racing Circuit. In the fall of 1907 he was manager of the Southwest Virginia Fall Festival, at Roanoke, Va., held under the auspices of the Woman's Civic Betterment Club of that city. In 1908 he was a general assistant in the arrangements for the Virginia State Fair, held in Richmond, and had entire charge of the Department of Publicity. He had previously helped in holding the first Virginia State Fair in 1906.

For many years Mr. Fox officiated as Expert Fruit Judge at a number of Fairs, notably those of Allentown, Pa., twelve years; York, Pa.; Mt. Holly, N. J.; Raleigh, N. C.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Lynchburg, Va.; and at the last three State Fairs held by the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society. He, also, has started the horses at various race meetings, and for some years has held a Starter's License, issued to him by the National Trotting Association, on account of his recognized ability and his knowledge of the racing rules. He was a delegate to several of the biennial meetings, or congresses, of the National Trotting Association, and assisted in forming many of the rules and regulations for the government of events on the turf now in force.

On March 1, 1909, Mr. Fox became connected with the Division of Zoology of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, as an orchard inspector, lecturer, demonstrator, and general assistant of Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, and in that capacity has had editorial charge of the Zoological Press Bulletin, issued weekly for the purpose of furnishing information to the general public on timely topics of insect pests and diseases of plant life through the medium of the press.

On Jan. 7, 1875, Mr. Fox married Miss Tillie Shartle, of Reading, Pa., and this union was blessed with four sons, all of whom grew to manhood. Two of them became newspaper men. Harry B., the second son, after having been engaged in newspaper work for ten years (the last two years with the Philadelphia Press) died suddenly after an illness of three days of acute gastro enteritis, on Sept. 3, 1905.

YODER. The Yoder family name is worthily borne by three young business men, Samuel D., Frank D. and Frederick D. Yoder, brothers, all engaged in the tinsmithing business.

Isaac Yoder, grandfather of these young men, was born July 3, 1805, and was the founder of Yodertown (now Pleasantville) in Oley township, and built many houses at that place, being a man of considerable prominence and influence. He was actively identified with the Evangelical Church of his section, and was a man of progress and enterprise, owning much land and being a large tax payer. He was twice married. His first wife is supposed to have been a sister to the second. His wife, Lydia Schall, was born Sept. 14, 1809, and died Feb. 28, 1893. He died April 27, 1878.

Mayberry S. Yoder, son of Isaac, now a resident of Pleasantville, was born in 1844 in that town. He has been a life-long tinsmith, and from his youth up has been prosperous. He owns his residence and shop, located on an acre of ground, and also has nineteen acres of good farm land which he cultivates. In politics he is a Republican and for many years was school director of Pleasantville Independent district. He and his family are consistent members of Pleasantville United Evangelical Church, of which he is an official. Mr. Yoder married Matilda Dierolf, daughter of John Dierolf, and to them have been born these children: Frederick D., a tinsmith, plumber and stove dealer at Friedensburg, m. Mary Fegley; Samuel D.; Amanda m. Albert Hertzog, a miller and merchant at Pleasantville; Frank D.; Lydia m. William Hafer, a public school teacher at Reading; and Rebecca died at the age of ten years.

Samuel D. Yoder, son of Mayberry S., has for some years been engaged in tinsmithing at Reading. He was born in Pleasantville, Oley township, Nov. 8, 1869, and was educated in the public schools of his native township, attending until he was seventeen years of age. For one year after leaving school he clerked in a store at Pottstown, and then, returning to the farm, assisted his father until he was twenty. That year he came to Reading, and for one year worked for the tinsmithing firm of Yoder & Ruckstool, and in 1901 returned to Pleasantville, where he was employed by F. F. Cleaver, proprietor of the Oley Creamery for six years. In 1896 he again began working at his trade which he followed for two years with his brother F. D. Yoder, of Friedensburg, and in 1899 he again engaged in the creamery business, being employed as manager by Hertzog & Yoder, at Pleasantville. Their building was located at the site of the old Oley paper mill, and here Mr. Yoder was engaged for a period of five years, in 1904 again engaging at his trade which he has followed ever since with his brother, Frank D., of Mount Penn. Mr. Yoder resides in his comfortable, well-furnished brick residence at No. 1846 Perkiomen avenue.

In political matters Mr. Yoder is a Republican, and he has been active in the ranks of his party, serving in numerous minor township offices and frequently being a delegate to county conventions. He was a director of Pleasantville Independent school district for a period of nine years, and served very efficiently as secretary of the board during his entire incumbency. He is a charter member of Manatawny Castle, K. G. E., No. 461, and passed all the chairs in his order, serving as master of records for fully four years, being noble chief of the degree team for seven years. He is a member of Washington Camp, No. 480, P. O. S. of A., of Pleasantville, in which he has passed all the chairs and has acted as financial secretary for five years.

On Dec. 1, 1892, Mr. Yoder was married to Alice C. Snyder, born June 18, 1868, only daughter of Albert and Amelia (Clouser) Snyder, and granddaughter of Lando Udree and Mary (Knabb) Snyder. Mr. and Mrs. Yoder have no children.

Frank D. Yoder, son of Mayberry S., and now an enterprising and energetic young business man of Mt. Penn, was born at Pleasantville April 21, 1875. He attended the public schools, and when a mere lad learned the tinsmith's trade from his father, becoming an excellent mechanic. This he has followed ever since at Pleasantville, Friedensburg, Reading and Mt. Penn, locating at the latter place in 1902 and there purchasing a comfortable residence. He has built up a large trade, extending through the surrounding country, his work and that of his brother, Samuel D., who is associated with him, being most satisfactory. In his store on Perkiomen avenue he carries a good stock of tinware and stoves. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and frequently has served as delegate to county conventions, and he has also been on the school board of his borough. He is fraternally connected with Manatawny Castle No. 461, K. G. E., and Pleasantville Camp No. 480, P. O. S. of A. He and his family worship in the United Evangelical Church of Pleasantville.

Mr. Yoder was married March 10, 1894, to Jennie Marsteller, daughter of Edward and Rebecca (Miller) Marsteller, and to them have been born these children: Mayberry, Rebecca, Edwin and Frank D., Jr.

FERDINANDI COLLETTI, M. D., a well-known young physician and surgeon of Reading, Pa., is a native of South Italy, born in Montemiletto, near Naples, Feb. 8, 1871. Dr. Colletti received his education in the schools of his native country, taking special instruction in the classics, and later entered the medical department of the University of Naples, graduating in both medicine and surgery. His ability was at once recognized, and he was persuaded to remain for nearly two years in some of the leading hospitals of his native ccuntry, after leaving which he accepted the position of examining physician for a large steamship company, the vessels of which ply between Italy and the United States. Dr. Colletti was thus employed for a period of two and one-half years, and it was while he was serving in this capacity, in 1899, that he decided to locate in America.

After remaining in New York for a short time, Dr. Colletti removed to Allentown, Pa., remaining there until June, 1900, then going to Bethlehem, Pa., and finally settling in Reading in June, 1901. Prior to coming to this city, Dr. Colletti had taken a special course of instruction in English at Philadelphia, that he might be able to take the State Medical Examination and to understand better the requirements thereof. In this he was very successful, passing the examination very satisfactorily. He is a valuable man in the city of Reading, where so many of his countrymen have settled. He has gained the confidence and good will of the citizens of Reading and has enjoyed a lucrative practice. He has no specialties, being at home in every line, a close student, a careful practitioner and a steady-handed surgeon.

Dr. Colletti is connected professionally with the Reading Medical Association, of which he was elected president in 1909; the Reading Tuberculosis Association of which he is vice-president; the Berks County Medical Society; the Lehigh County Medical Society; the Pennsylvania State Medical Association and the American Medical Association. Fraternally he is connected with the K. O. T. M. and several prominent Italian societies.

MOYER. No history of Berks county, Pa., would be in any way complete without an extended notice of the Moyer family, which has been identified with its progress and development for many years. Among the leading representatives of this family are Nathaniel Moyer, a retired farmer, and his nephew William J. Moyer, both highly esteemed residents of Lower Heidelberg township.

NATHANIEL MOYER was born Aug. 16, 1832, in Lancaster county, Pa., son of Philip and Mary (Fry) Moyer. Philip Moyer was born in Maiden-creek township, and lived at Cross Keys, where he carried on distilling, his brother Leonard being a farmer and cattle dealer of near Kutztown. He died at Cross Keys, and was buried at Host Church. In politics Mr. Moyer was a Democrat. He was twice married, and by his first wife had nine children, among whom were: John, Philip, Isaac and Esther, the latter of whom was married to a Mr. Hinkel. Philip Moyer was married (second) to Mary Fry, daughter of Jacob Fry, and they had these children: Nathaniel; Adam F.; Benneville; Harrison; Caroline, who married Longena Sware; Annie, who married Philip Gihl, of Dover, Ohio; and Rosa, who died unmarried.

In his youth Nathaniel Moyer engaged in farming on his father's property, and when twenty years old he learned the stone-mason's trade, which he has followed off and on all of his life. For four years he conducted a general store at Brownsville, in partnership with Michael Keith, and in 1877 he came to his present place of abode, where he devotes his seven acres of land to the cultivation of fine fruits. On Oct. 26, 1862, Mr. Moyer enlisted from Berks county in Company A, 167th P. V. I., as a private, earned the rank of corporal by meritorious conduct and later that of quartermaster sergeant. He participated in the engagements of the Army of the Potomac, and was honorably discharged at Reading, Aug. 12, 1863, with a war record of which any man might well be proud. On the expiration of his term of service to his country Mr. Moyer engaged in the store business aforementioned and after disposing of his interests therein purchased his present farm of ninety-eight acres of fertile land in Lower Heidelberg township, which he now has rented. Mr. Moyer, although long past man's allotted span of life, is in full possession of his faculties. He is a well-read man, is a pleasing conversationalist, and his reminiscences of army life are both entertaining and instructing. He has been very successful in his financial operations, and is now in comfortable circumstances. His political principles are those of the Democratic party, and he has served his township as assessor for three years and supervisor for one year. With his family he belongs to the Reformed denomination of the Swamp Church in Lancaster county.

On Nov. 19, 1861, Mr. Moyer was united in marriage with Angelina Keith, born Aug. 24, 1840, daughter of Jacob Keith, and to this union there have been born these children: Sarah, who married Lewis Hassler, of Lower Heidelberg township; Eliza, who married George Eberling, of Lancaster county; Jacob, who is a painter of Lower Heidelberg township; Rachel, who married Rufus J. Kintzer; Levi, a truck farmer of near Wernersville; Harrison, who is engaged in operating his father's farm; and Nathaniel, who is carrying on operations in Lancaster county.

Adam F. Moyer, brother of Nathaniel and father of William J., was born Feb. 28, 1845, on his father's farm in Lower Heidelberg township, and until twenty-five years of age worked for his mother. After his marriage he rented the farm on which he now lives, and which he purchased in 1872, it consisting of forty-eight acres of good truck land. Mr. Moyer raises all kinds of small vegetables and disposes of them at West Reading market house, having Stands Nos. 69-70 at the Fourth and Penn street market. In 1889 Mr. Moyer remodeled the house on his property, and in 1893 erected a new barn, and the place now presents a very pleasing appearance. Mr. Moyer is a Republican in politics, but he has never aspired to public office.

On Nov. 13, 1870, Mr. Moyer was married to Janet Johnson, daughter of James and Janet (Smith) Johnson, and to this union there were born nine children: George P., who died aged eight years; William J.; Harry M., of Lower Heidelberg township; Adam J., who resides near Fritztown; John M., who lives at Fritztown; Joseph A., who makes his home with his father; Annie M., who married Milton Sell, a hatter of Lower Heidelberg township, has one child—Florence J.; Misses Jennie and Lillie Ann, at home.

WILLIAM J. MOYER was born on the Moyer homestead in Lower Heidelberg township July 25, 1872, and worked upon the home farm until twenty-two years of age, at which time he entered the employ of James H. Preston, owner and proprietor of "The Preston," a well-known and popular resort at South Mountain, near Wernersville. He has continued in Mr. Preston's employ to the present time, giving the utmost satisfaction. Mr. Moyer is a very capable man for such a position, as he is a "jack of all trades." In 1903 he erected a large frame residence on his truck farm of several acres on the south side of South Mountain, near the Preston, and here he has made his home to the present. Mr. Moyer has always been enterprising and progressive, and he is popular with all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

In November, 1895, William J. Moyer was united in marriage with Miss Mamie Ulrich, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Stetler) Ulrich, the former of whom has been engaged in trucking with Solomon Shearer for more than a quarter of a century in Lower Heidelberg township. To Mr. and Mrs. Moyer there have been born five bright children, four daughters and one son, namely: Bertha, Lillie, Lizzie, Charles and Margaret. Mr. Moyer is a stanch Republican in politics, and has been active in the support of that great party in his township. With his family he belongs to the Swamp Church of Lancaster county, being a member of the Reformed denomination.

THOMAS C. BUCHANAN, M. D., who has been located at No. 117 South Fifth street, Reading, Pa., since 1902, in which time he has established a good practice, was born Oct. 2, 1875, at Honey Brook, Chester county, son of J. Clem and Emma (Bunn) Buchanan, and grandson of David Buchanan.

John Buchanan, great-grandfather of the Doctor, was a tanner by occupation and operated a large tannery near Wagontown, Chester county. He married there, and the children born to himself and wife were: John, David, Jane, Sarah and Ann. In religion the family were Presbyterians, and very active in the work of that denomination, both John Buchanan and his son David serving as elders.

David Buchanan followed the business that had been established by his father, and continued therein all of his active period, being very successful. He and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Katharine Clemens, were the parents of: Rebecca, deceased; Catherine, deceased, wife of Jacob Dampman; J. Clem; Loretta, m. to Peter Dampman; Martha, m. to Peter Supplee; Mary and E. Jane, twins; and A. Thomas.

J. Clem Buchanan, father of Dr. Thomas C., was born at Honey Brook, Chester county, and received his education in the common schools of his native locality, after leaving which he took up farming as a vocation, and followed that occupation all of his life, owning one of the best farming properties in Chester county. He was a good, public-spirited citizen, and a practical, enterprising farmer. Mr. Buchanan died in 1905, aged sixty-six years, his wife, Emma Bunn, having died in 1890, in her forty-fifth year. They were the parents of three children: Thomas C., Cora C. and Paul R. In religious belief the family were Presbyterians. He was a charter member of Howell Lodge, F. & A. M., and was a Republican in politics, but, although very much interested in public affairs, would never accept office.

Thomas C. Buchanan received his literary education in the schools of Chester county, and at the York Collegiate Institute. In the fall of 1896, he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated therefrom in June, 1900, with the degree of M. D. His first professional work was as interne at the Reading Hospital, and after one year there he accepted a position at the State Hospital for the Insane at Wernersville, Pa. In 1902 Dr. Buchanan located in Reading, taking offices at No. 117 South Fifth street, where he has been engaged in practice to the present time. Dr. Buchanan is well known and has gained the confidence of a large and growing clientele. He is at present assistant surgeon at the Reading Hospital.

LECHNER. (I) The first member of the Lechner family in this country was a native of Germany, and on coming to Pennsylvania settled in Macungie township, Lehigh county. As far as known he had but two sons, George and one who settled in Ohio.

(II) George Lechner came to Berks county, locating in the vicinity of Monocacy, but later removed to Douglass township, near Boyertown. He was a skilled veterinarian, whose services were in demand among farmers within a radius of many miles, in this connection becoming particularly well known. His death occurred before the Civil war, when he was eighty-two years of age. He is buried at Amityville. He married Elizabeth Shirley, who died when over seventy, and they had children as follows: Harriet m. Samuel Buck; Sarah m. David Baer; William was of Shanesville; Abraham died in Schuylkill county, June 26, 1898; Charles, the only one now surviving, lives with his son-in-law, Daniel A. Darrah, at No. 422 South Tenth street, Reading; and Amelia died young.

(III) William Lechner, father of Wallace L. Lechner, of Oley township, and son of George, was born in Lower Berks county in 1817, and died in 1890. He was a farmer and later a cattle dealer, residing at Shanesville, where he owned property and was a prominent man. There he died, and he is buried at Hillchurch. For a quarter of a century he served as constable. His wife was Matilda Long, daughter of Peter and Hannah (Clauser) Long, of Earl township, and their children were: Amelia m. Samuel Bowman; Elizabeth m. William Brumbach; Harrison died after his marriage to Sophia Brumbach, who is now deceased; and Wallace L.

(IV) Wallace L. Lechner was born in Douglass township, this county, March 31, 1850. Reared on a farm, he engaged in farming, but also learned cigar-making, at which he worked for a year. His next work was tending bar at Gilbertsville, where he was employed for three years, and at Shanesville for two years in the same capacity. Then he engaged in business as a huckster, for six years buying produce from the farmers and selling it to Philadelphia dealers. While engaged in this line he was associated with his brother Harrison, and they made the trip to Philadelphia once a week. In 1881 Mr. Lechner removed to his present home, and has since operated his excellent farm of 114 acres, which is in good condition. His farm buildings have the distinction of being decorated with pictures of animals. He has quite a dairy business, having twenty-two cows, and shipping his milk to a nearby creamery. His farm stock is very valuable and he is making a great success of his agricultural work.

Mr. Lechner is a Republican in politics, and has been school director of Oley township for six years. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A. and of the K. G. E., belonging to the Camp and Castle at Manatawny. He and his family are members of the Oley Lutheran Church.

The first wife of Mr. Lechner was Kate Schaeffer, a daughter of George Schaeffer, and she died at the age of twenty-eight, leaving these children: Warren, of Shanesville; Frank, of Friedensburg; and Wilson of Boyertown.

In 1882 Mr. Lechner was married to Fannie Haas, daughter of Nathan and Esther (Merkel) Haas, of Mertztown. Their children are: Samuel, living at home, m. Katie Drumheller, and has one daughter, Bertha; Hannah m. Charles Griesemer, and resides at Reading; and Charles, unmarried, at home.

(III) Charles Lechner, son of George, and father of Hamlin Y. Lechner, was born June 26, 1830, in Earl township, Berks county, and there owned a small farm, which he cultivated during his active years. He now lives retired at Reading with his son-in-law, Daniel A. Darrah, as previously mentioned. Mr. Lechner married Susan Yahn, who was born Feb. 15, 1831, and died Aug. 1, 1887; she is buried at Fairview cemetery, Boyertown. Mr. and Mrs. Lechner had the following children: Abraham never married and his whereabouts are unknown; Alice, born in 1857, died in 1881; Hamlin Y.; Dr. Ralph (deceased) lived at Boyertown; Dr. Leroy lives at Bechtelsville; Laura died young; and a daughter died in infancy.

(IV) Hamlin Y. Lechner, who has been engaged in the butcher business at Boyertown from early manhood, was born in Earl township Nov. 22, 1860. As he began to learn his trade when fourteen years old he may truthfully be called a self-made man, for much of his education has been acquired through his own efforts. He served his apprenticeship under George K. Spatz, who was his employer for seven years before they became partners, under the name of Spatz & Lechner. This connection lasted for sixteen years, since which time Mr. Lechner has been the sole owner of this well established business. Mr. Lechner commands an extensive trade, killing from twenty to thirty head of cattle weekly, and besides this, during the winter season, from thirty to forty hogs a week. Three teams are kept constantly busy, the patronage extending over a large territory outside of Boyertown as well as in the borough. Mr. Lechner has six regular employes. His shop and slaughter-house are completely equipped with modern butchering appliances of all kinds necessary for a business of this size, for Mr. Lechner is progressive and attentive to the needs of his establishment, which is well kept up in every respect. He had little to commence life with, but he has been persevering and industrious, and deserves the place he has won among the substantial business men of Boyertown. When he began to prosper he was anxious to have his family share with him the benefits of his thrift, and he provided funds for the education of his two younger brothers, both of whom became professional men. He has also been the main support of his aged father, and he is a man universally respected for his honor and sincerity in all the relations of life.

In 1880 Mr. Lechner married Miss Ella Rahn, daughter of Daniel and Mary Ann (Patt) Rahn, of Perkiomen, Montgomery Co., Pa., and four children have been born to this union, as follows: (1) Wayne R. is a graduate of Boyertown high school and has attended State College, having prepared to follow the profession of chemist. However, he assists his father with the clerical work of the business. (2) Mabel R. became the wife of John Graver, who on the night of Jan. 13, 1908, when the terrible Opera House catastrophe at Boyertown took place, was killed on his way to the fire, the fire engine running over him. He left two young sons, William and John, and since his death Mrs. Graver has made her home with her parents. (3) Clyde was five years old at the time of his death. (4) Charles died when nine months old.

Mr. Lechner and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, to which he gives a generous support, being in fact liberal to all church enterprises, regardless of denomination. His benevolent disposition was very practically shown at the time of the disastrous Opera House fire, when he gave freely to the needy and assisted in every possible manner in the relief work.

JAMES RIESER GERHARD, M. D., a rising young medical practitioner of Reading, Pa., whose residence and offices are situated at No. 540 Centre avenue, was born in Douglassville, Berks county, Feb. 9, 1874, son of Dr. Frank R. and Lillie Paris (Grove) Gerhard.

Frederick Gerhard, great-great-grandfather of Dr. James R., was a native of Germany, and came to the United States before the Revolutionary war, becoming one of the pioneer farmers of Heidelberg township, Berks county.

Frederick Gerhard, Jr., son of Frederick, was a miller by trade, which he followed in connection with farming, and lived at Host, Jefferson township. He and his wife, a Miss Troutman, were members of the Reformed Church, and became the parents of these children: John, a soldier of the Mexican war, remained in the West after the close of that struggle; Rev. William, deceased, was a well-known minister of the Reformed Church of Lancaster county; Jacob; Isaac was a farmer at Host; Augustus was a cabinet maker at Nebraska City, Nebr.; Rebecca, Catherine, Sarah and Amelia, the latter of whom died in infancy.

Jacob Gerhard, son of Frederick, Jr., and grandfather of Dr. James R., was born Jan. 1, 1814, on the old homestead farm at Host, and here followed milling and farming all of his life. A man of high principles, he was honored and respected by all who knew him, and he was an active and faithful member and official of the Reformed Church. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. Mr. Gerhard married Sarah Rieser, daughter of Abraham Rieser, and to this union there were born three sons and three daughters: Mary m. Jacob Miller, of Reading; Sarah R. m. Isaac L. Moyer, of Stouchsburg, Berks county; Dr. Frank R.; John F. is a dry goods merchant of Reading; Amelia J. m. Elias Obold, of Obold, Berks county; and Rev. James is a Presbyterian minister at Galena, Kansas.

Dr. Frank R. Gerhard was born May 12, 1843, at Host, Jefferson township, Berks county, and was brought up on the farm and educated in the common schools, and in Franklin and Marshall College of Lancaster, Pa., from which he was graduated in July, 1866. Immediately after his graduation from college he took up the study of medicine with his uncle, Dr. Frank Rieser, of Reading, and after three years of study he graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, in March, 1869, and on Oct. 16th, following, began his present practice in the village of Douglassville. Dr. Gerhard is a close student, a careful physician and competent surgeon, and he has built up one of the largest village and country practices in Union township, showing himself well qualified to handle any case that is entrusted to him. Fraternally he is connected with the Royal Arcanum, while politically he upholds the principles of the Democratic party, with the exception of the silver plank in the Chicago platform.

On May 6, 1873, Dr. Gerhard was united in marriage with Lillie Paris Grove, daughter of the late Daniel B. Grove, a piano manufacturer of Philadelphia, and one son, James R., was born to this union.

James Rieser Gerhard was educated in the common schools of Berks county, and graduated from Selwyn Hall, a preparatory school in Reading, in 1893, and then went to Yale University, graduating therefrom with the degree of A. B. in 1897. In that year he entered the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and was graduated therefrom in 1901, standing fourth in his class. He then served one year as Resident Physician and Surgeon in the Germantown Hospital and Dispensary, after which time he moved to Reading, Pa. Dr. Gerhard has won the confidence of the people of his locality, and has shown his skill as a physician in numerous cases. He keeps himself well posted in the new discoveries in his profession by his subscription to the leading medical journals of the country, and he is a member of the city and county medical societies. In politics he is independent, while he and his wife are Episcopalians in religious belief, being communicants in St. Barnabas Church.

Dr. Gerhard married Ada Florence Grant, born at Island Pond, Vt., daughter of John B. Grant, and to this union there have been born two children: Isabelle G. and Constance Langworthy.

CHARLES P. SCHAEFFER, a prominent citizen of Womelsdorf, Berks county, cashier of the Womelsdorf Union Bank, was born Aug. 3, 1874, in Snyder County, Pa., son of George K. and Elizabeth (DeLong) Schaeffer.

Jacob Schaeffer, his grandfather, was a native of Berks county, and was a young man when he removed with his parents to Snyder county, where he engaged in farming near Freeburg. Later the family removed to Shamokin Dam, Pa., and there Jacob Schaeffer died at the age of sixty-two years, his wife living to the remarkable age of ninety-four. They had six children: Benjamin, a resident of Freeburg; John, of Shamokin Dam; Sarah, who married Elias Strause; Lydia, who married Peter Berie; George K., father of Charles P.; and Susan, who married George Kline.

George K. Schaeffer was born Oct. 26, 1852, and has spent all his life in agricultural pursuits, now residing on his farm at Shamokin Dam. He married Elizabeth DeLong, born Sept. 24, 1852, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Row) DeLong, the latter descendants of old French Huguenot families of Lancaster county. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Schaeffer, namely: Charles P.; Bert H., a farmer of Union county; Jacob P., M. D., of East Greenville, Montgomery county; Allen J., assistant principal of the schools at Nazareth; and George and Helen, at home.

Charles P. Schaeffer was educated in the public schools and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, from which institution he graduated. He had had five years' experience as a teacher before his graduation. In 1898 he came to Womelsdorf as principal, and continued in that capacity for five years. On the incorporation of the Womelsdorf Union Bank Mr. Schaeffer was elected cashier thereof, a position he has ably filled to the present time. He is a member of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 159, I. O. O. F., and Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M. He and his family attend the Reformed Church.

On July 22, 1898, Mr. Schaeffer was married to Miss Annie Stein, daughter of William B. and Emma (Kistler) Stein, and three children have been born to this union: Orpha, Helen and Max.

REBER. The early home of the Reber family of Berks county was Langenselbold, in Kreis Hanau, Regrersungbezirk Cassel, Germany. In the old book at the Evangelical Church there appear the names of four brothers, Johan Bernhard, Hans, Johan Conrad and Michael. These were found there by Mr. James J. Reber, of Reading, in 1882.

The first named of these brothers, Johan Bernhard, is recorded as having a son, Johannes Reber, who was married Feb. 8, 1736, to Johanna Magdalena Hahn, daughter of Conrad Hahn. To this union were born in Germany two sons: Johannes, Dec. 16, 1736; and Ludwig Friederich August, Sept. 11, 1740. The Pennsylvania archives contain a list of 30,000 emigrants, and among them is Johan Bernhard Reber, from Rotterdam, Holland, on the "Snow Two Sisters," landing at Philadelphia, and qualifying Sept. 9, 1738, and of him no further records are to be found. However, according to his passports Johannes Reber left his native land for America April 23, 1742, bringing his family with him. His second son Ludwig died on the voyage. Being a member of William Penn's Colony his first object was to find a suitable location, and he selected a tract of land about six miles west of Reading, in Lower Heidelberg township, at the bend of the Tulpehocken—a beautiful but desolate valley now known as the Blue Marsh. He moved thither with his wife and son, built himself a home which served the double purpose of shelter and protection from the Indians and wild beasts. This old building with its large square fire place in the center, is still standing, the farm now being the property of Henry Shofer, of Reading. He was naturalized May 13, 1768. Three sons were born to him after his arrival in America, namely: Thomas, Valentine and Peter.

Johannes Reber, son of Johannes, born Dec. 16, 1736, was twice married. His first wife was a Miss Orbengast, who bore him two children, John and Magdalena. The maiden name of his second wife was Haas, and of this marriage four children were born: Nicholas, Abraham, Michael and Susanna.

John Reber, son of Johannes Reber (whose wife was an Orbengast), became a farmer in Bern township. He married Magdalena Rathmacher, and they had fourteen children, namely: Magdalena, who married (first) John Bickel, and (second) Jacob Riegel; Barbara, who married John Hain; Christiana, who became the wife of John Ahrens; Elizabeth, who married John Fisher; Rebecca, who became the wife of Yost Hiester; Susanna, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-two years; Sarah, who married John Potteiger; Joseph, mentioned below; John, who died young; Benjamin, who married (first) Margaretha Tobias, and (second) Susanna S. Miller; and John (2), Samuel, Jonas and Daniel, who all four died young.

Joseph Reber, son of John and Magdalena, was a prominent miller and farmer in Bern township. He married Elizabeth Minnich, and had eleven children: (1) James died young. (2) Elias M., living at Tina, Mo., married Sarah Hain, and had five children: Wilson, Louisa, John J., George and Alva S. (3) Maria married Joshua Eyrich, and had twelve children: Charles, Frank, William, Joshua, George, Aaron, Elizabeth, Emma, James, Calvin, John and Sarah. (4) Eliza married Charles Gring, and has three children, Calvin, Charles and Wallace. (5) Fietta married Henry Rhoads, and their only child, George, died in infancy. (6) Harrison M., born Sept. 7, 1833, married Amelia Fisher, and died Nov. 16, 1892, the father of six children: Ellen, Joseph F., Mary E., Amelia, Kate and Alice B. (7) Sarah married James Adams, and had one son, Tyson. (8) Simplecius married Sarah M. Herbine, and had four children: Ellen H., Emma N., James H. and Sarah. (9) Priscilla married William Reeser, and had six children: Sarah, Ida, Obert, Ocky, Owen and Laura. (10) Henry M. (11) Rebecca married Jacob Rickenbach, and had eight children: Sarah, Clara, Ella, Annie, John, Solomon, Calvin and Charles.

Henry M. Reber, son of Joseph and Elizabeth, was born on the homestead farm at Reber's Mill in Bern township, June 15, 1841. He grew to manhood there and was trained to agricultural pursuits, giving his service to his parents until he was twenty-two years old. He then entered the employ of Joseph Reber, and for some years drove his mill team, and later continued in the same capacity for his brother Elias, who succeeded Joseph in the business. In 1865 Mr. Henry M. Reber engaged in farming, commencing in Heidelberg township, along the Tulpehocken, where he tenanted five years. He then moved to Spring township in the Cacoosing district, where he lived ten years, continuing to farm rented land in Spring and Heidelberg townships until 1892, when he purchased his present farm of eighty acres in Lower Heidelberg, in the Faust school district. In 1892 he built the present frame house, and has it equipped with all the modern devices for comfortable living. He has twelve head of cattle and five horses, and a complete outfit of up-to-date farm implements. In politics Mr. Reber is a Democrat, and in religion he and his family are Reformed members of Epler's Union Church.

On Nov. 21, 1863, Henry M. Reber was married to Mary Rickenbach, born in March, 1843, daughter of Solomon and Rosina (Moyer) Rickenbach, of Rickenbach Station. The latter was born in Germany, and at her death was buried at Epler's Church. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Reber: Solomon R.; Morris R., a school teacher at Wernersville; Harry, who died aged twenty years; Ella Nora, who married Aaron Witmoyer, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township; George R., unmarried and teaching school; and Calvin R., born April 14, 1880, at home.

Solomon R. Reber, son of Henry M., and now a farmer near Shillington, in Spring township, was born Aug. 24, 1864. He was brought up familiar with the duties about a farm, remaining at home until he was twenty-seven. In 1892 he began farming one of the Shoup farms in Spring township, where he has since lived. This farm consists of fifty-five acres of excellent land, and Mr. Reber has a good equipment of modern machinery. He has a herd of Holstein and Durham cattle, and some good horses. His milk is sold wholesale, and shipped to Reading. While taking an interest in public affairs, Mr. Reber is no politician. He stands well in the community, being upright in his relations with his fellowmen. He was confirmed at Epler's Church, in Bern township, by Rev. R. S. Appel, and is a Reformed member of Hain's Church in Lower Heidelberg, in which latter Church Mrs. Reber was confirmed by Rev. W. P. Davis.

On Oct. 17, 1891, Mr. Reber was married to Sallie G. Bender, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Gerhart) Bender, farming people of Lower Heidelberg township.

JOHN M. FRAME. Among the successful practitioners at the Berks county Bar is John M. Frame, who, though young in the practice, has brought to the study of his profession such educational equipment as to place him at once in line for rapid advancement. He is the son of William J. and Elizabeth A. (Musser) Frame, and was born in Reading Aug. 6, 1875.

In both paternal and maternal lines Mr. Frame comes of honored family, the maternal line having been especially prominent in the history of neighboring counties. Adamstown was founded by Richard Adams, grandfather of John Musser, who, in turn, was the grandfather of our honored subject. John Musser was in his day one of the leading men of Lancaster county, being one of the originators of the Musser Lumber Company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the Mississippi Valley. On the maternal side also was Sebastian Miller, who was a captain in Col. Joseph Hiester's regiment during the Revolutionary war.

William J. Frame was born Dec. 25, 1844, and was educated in the common schools of Berks county, and at Lititz Academy. Before he had finished his course at the latter institution, came the Civil war, calling young men from school and from every occupation in life to the defense of the union. Mr. Frame enlisted June 18, 1863, in Company C, 42d Pa. V. I. He was mustered out at Camp Haak, in Reading, and after receiving his discharge returned to Lititz and completed his course in the Academy. Returning then to Reading, he clerked in his father's coal office until 1867, when he purchased the business, which he operated successfully for two years, or until the freshet of 1869. He then engaged in the flour and feed business, continuing until 1875, when he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. His next venture was in the leaf tobacco business at Adamstown, which he continued until 1886. He was considered an expert leaf tobacco man. He became a member of the firm of Glaser, Frame & Co., and remained such until its dissolution in 1897. In 1869 he married Elizabeth A. Musser, daughter of John and Cassiah (Miller) Musser, and they have one child, John Musser. Mr. Frame is a stanch Republican, and represented the First Ward in the council in 1868 and 1869. During his term in the council he helped vote the Market House away from Penn Square. He is broad minded and progressive, and has ever been at the front in any movement to benefit the city. He is a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, R. A. M.; De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Harrisburg Consistory; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

John Musser Frame passed the period of early boyhood and youth in Adamstown, being there well grounded in the rudiments. Thence he came back to the city, where he continued his studies in the high school, in preparation for college. Entering Princeton he took the degree of A. B., cum laude, and then matriculated at Harvard, where in 1900 he took his law degree. Mr. Frame at once entered the office of Isaac Hiester, of Reading, and after a few months of preliminary study and training in the details of office work, was admitted to practice in the courts of the county, and later in the Superior and Supreme courts.

In addition to his legal work, Mr. Frame is identified with a number of the city's most successful institutions. He is a director in the Metropolitan Electric Company, the United Traction Company, and the Colonial Trust Company. He is secretary and treasurer of the Adamstown & Mohnsville Electric Railway Company, and holds the same relation to the Kutztown & Fleetwood Railway Company. All of the foregoing are large employers of capital and are among the most successful of the city's enterprises.

In a social way Mr. Frame keeps in touch with the best people of the city by membership in the Berkshire Club, the Wyomissing Club and the Washington Library; and he continues his interest in school life by connection with the Princeton Club of Philadelphia. He is also a member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and though a very busy man finds time to take a more or less active part in politics. Naturally his interest in education marked him for public preferment in that line, and he has for some time been a member of the board of school control from the Fourteenth ward, in which body he wields a powerful and salutary influence, being ever ready to promote the interests of Reading's excellent school system. Mr. Frame is also active in religious circles, being one of the leading men in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he is a member of the board of stewards. He takes delight in all the work of the church, but is especially devoted to the men's organization, known as the Brotherhood of St. Paul, of which he formerly was treasurer of the national body.

The making of a career is a matter of no small moment. There are two elements which enter into the making which, if possessed in good degree, lift a heavy handicap—good birth and breeding, and a good education. With these and with a mind singularly alert and attuned to the possibilities of the age, Mr. Frame has a substantial foundation for his life work.

GEORGE S. KLEINGINNA, of Shillington, Berks county, for some time a teacher in the grammar school at that place, was born Feb. 21, 1877, in Oley township, this county. During his boyhood he attended public school in Oley, Spring, Exeter and Bern townships, later pursuing his studies in the Oley Academy, Brunner's Business College, Shillington Academy and the Keystone State Normal School, from which latter institution he graduated with the class of 1900. Meantime, however, he had commenced teaching, having been licensed in 1894 by Prof. William M. Zechman, and his first experience was at the Hiester school in Bern township, where he began to teach in 1896. He taught school three terms in that township and then entered the Normal, where he remained for one year, after which he was elected to teach primary school at Oakbrook, in Cumru township, being promoted thence to the grammar school at Shillington, where he was elected for his seventh term in 1908; he was elected to teach the second term of public night school at Tenth and Douglass streets, Edwin Ziegler building, Reading. Mr. Kleinginna has continued his studies faithfully, along the lines of his own inclination as well as his special work, and he took a course in the American Correspondence School of Chicago, Ill., in architectural engineering.

Although he was reared upon the farm, Mr. Kleinginna has not followed agricultural pursuits since he began his independent career. The time he has not given to teaching has been spent in business, in which he has been notably successful. For five successive years on Saturdays as extra and during two summer seasons, he was engaged as a clerk in the establishment of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, of Reading, and he has been engaged by different firms in the capacity of traveling salesman, in which line he has become very well known. His business experience he has found of great practical value to him in his professional work, as much so as his educational training.

Mr. Kleinginna was married April 11, 1901, to Miss Sallie P. Kauffman, daughter of Samuel and Priscilla (Kauffman) Kauffman, of Tilden township, Berks county, and two children have been born to this union, namely: Grace Mary and John Adam. Mr. Kleinginna owns the comfortable brick home on Philadelphia avenue, Shillington, in which he and his family reside. They are members of the Shillington Reformed Church, in which he has been quite active in several branches of the work, being a teacher in the Bible class, assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, which office he has filled since 1902, and a member of the choir, in which he has sung since 1902. He is also interested in fraternal orders, being a prominent member of the Order of Independent Americans at Shillington (in which he has passed all the chairs), the Knights of the Maccabees and the Modern Maccabees. In political opinion he is a Democrat, and he is a worker in local party ranks. He has served three years, 1905-08, as assessor of Cumru township, where he is regarded as a most reliable citizen.

SCHEARER. The branch of the Schearer family in Berks county represented by John M. Schearer, proprietor of the "Yellow House Hotel" in Amity township, and Weaver H. Schearer, druggist, in Reading, is of German extraction.

John Schearer, grandfather of John M. and Weaver H., was born in Bern township, Jan. 26, 1798, son of Peter Schearer, and died Oct. 29, 1889, and is buried at Schwartzwald Church, of which he was a Reformed member. He was a blacksmith, and followed that occupation at Stonersville. He married Susan Body, daughter of Henry Body, and their children were: Henry B.; Mary m. Levi Miller; Benjamin; Solomon; Hannah m. Abraham Herbein; and Peter.

Henry B. Schearer, son of John, was born in Bern township, April 23, 1826, and is now living retired at Amityville. He attended the old pay schools in his district, and was reared upon the home farm. When sixteen years old he learned the blacksmith's trade from his father, John Shearer, and this he followed nine years. After his marriage he took to farming in Exeter township, continuing there five years, and then coming to Spring township and farming ten years. The next two years he passed in Bern township, and at the end of that time came to the Peter Weaver farm in Amity township. He farmed there for twenty-two years, and then retired to Amityville, his present home. He was poor director of Berks county from 1888 to 1891, and was for some years supervisor of Amity township, being elected on the Democratic ticket. On June 1, 1851, he married Esther Herbein, daughter of Isaac and Susan (Knabb) Herbein, of Oley, and they had eleven children, namely: Miranda m. Jairus Ritter, of Earl township; Sarah m. the late John Fretz (1842-1898); Mary Jane m. David V. Ludwig, of Reading; Henry died aged three years; John M.; Isaac and George, born June 1, 1865, live in Amityville; David; Lizzie m. Samuel Gilham; Weaver H. is of Reading; and Edwin is of Reading. Mr. Schearer and his family attend the Reformed Church, at Amityville, and formerly belonged to Schwartzwald Church, having their burial plot at the latter place.

JOHN M. SCHEARER, son of Henry B., was born in Spring township, Oct. 14, 1862, and when six years of age accompanied his parents to Amity township, there attending the public schools and working for his father on the farm until twenty-two years old. He then became a clerk for Mr. A. G. Body, proprietor of the "Yellow House Hotel," with whom he remained for eighteen years, or until he bought out the place in the spring of 1906. He has a fine hotel of twenty rooms and his stand is well known in Berks and adjoining counties, being a favorite resting place of the traveling public. It is located on the Swamp road leading from Reading to Boyertown, being ten miles from Reading, seven from Boyertown and nine from Pottstown.

On June 18, 1887, Mr. Schearer married Elizabeth Dundore, daughter of William and Rosana (Lash) Dundore, of Reading, and they have six children, namely: William H., Levin, John, Sarah and Rebecca (twins) and Annie R. Mr. Schearer is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church, of Amityville, where for three years he served as deacon. He belongs to Griesemersville Lodge No. 1109, I. O. O. F., and is a charter member of Wohlink Tribe, No. 179, Red Men, of Yellowhouse.

Weaver H. Schearer, son of Henry B., was born in Amity township, June 28, 1872, and he is now one of the energetic and enterprising young business men of Reading, where he is engaged in the drug business at the corner of Ninth and Penn streets. He attended the schools of Amity township and Palatinate College at Myerstown (now known as Albright College) in Lebanon county, graduating therefrom in 1890, in September of which year he engaged in the drug business. He clerked in different stores in Reading, and later in Philadelphia, graduating from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in 1894. He then returned to Reading to J. C. Griesemer. In 1898 he bought his present place of business and through his attention to details and his strict integrity, the excellence of his stock and the genial courtesy of Mr. Schearer himself, he has built up what it is safe to say is one of the best trades—wholesale and retail—in Reading. His store is also the waiting room for the out-of-town cars, viz.: the Birdsboro, Boyertown, Wormleysburg, Adamstown and Lancaster.

Mr. Weaver H. Schearer married Miss Emma Marie Kantner, of Reading, and they have one child, Mary, now in school. Mr. Schearer is a member of the Elks and Odd Fellows, and also member of the Berks county Pharmaceutical Association.

HINNERSHITZ. The Hinnershitz family of Berks county, Pa., owes its origin to Johann George Hinterschied, who was born in April, 1724, in Germany, and who sailed from Rotterdam, landing at Philadelphia, Sept. 15, 1749. In 1768 his name first appears on the tax list in Alsace township, Berks county, but the exact date of his coming to this county, as well as the date of his marriage to Maria Catharine ———, is not known. Tradition says that he was married when he came into the province of Pennsylvania, and that he had several sons. He carried on agricultural pursuits in the neighborhood of Spies's Church, and in the cemetery there the remains of both himself and wife are buried. In 1783 he was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and to this fact the proper authority issued a certified record. His wife was born in April, 1715, and the inscription on her sandstone tombstone says she died A. D. 1787, but this inscription, as well as that over the grave of her husband, was read with difficulty, and the accuracy is somewhat in doubt. The number of their children, with dates of birth and death, are uncertain, but old baptismal certificates and tombstones and church records show that among others they had two sons: Conrad, born March 23, 1756, who, it is believed, settled in Bedford county, where there is a large settlement of the family; and Jacob.

(II) Jacob Hinterschied, son of the emigrant, was married June 12, 1774, to Catharine Schepler, born Aug. 7, 1751, and died Sept. 30, 1834. They were the parents of five children: Heinrich, 1776-1862; Jacob; Johannes; Conrad; and Maria, 1785-1793.

(III) Jacob Hinterschitt, second son of Jacob, was married in 1814, to Susanna Paff, and among their children were: William P., born in 1817, and the father of Priscilla, John S., Harrison (of Mt. Penn); Elizabeth P., born 1819, died 1882; William S., who owns and lives upon the homestead; Charles S.; Richard S.; and Elizabeth.

(III) Johannes Hinnerschitt, third son of Jacob, married Elizabeth Wolf, and they became the parents of: (1) Jeremias, born March 14, 1807, m. Maria Clemons (1811-1882). (2) Henrietta, born Oct. 14, 1809, m. J. Koch. (3) Isaac, born May 12, 1813, died Oct. 28, 1901. (4) Malinda m. an Engelhart. (5) William died Dec. 9, 1816. (6) Samuel, born Oct. 27, 1818, m. Hanann Hoch (1820-1892), and died May 20, 1893. (7) Catharine m. a Brenner. (8) Rebecca m. John Price. (9) John was a life-long farmer in Lower Alsace township, and is buried in the old Hunsinger graveyard. He m. a Miss Paff, and had children: Isaac, Beckie, Samuel, Joseph, Jeremiah, Daniel, Matilda, William and several who died young. (10) Daniel, born in Lower Alsace township March 28, 1829, was a farmer and resided in various townships, and died April 12, 1893, aged sixty-four years, in Reading. He m. Margaret Fair, daughter of John and Margaret (Bickhard) Fair, of Lancaster county, and they had these four children: Miranda m. Mossie Kissinger; Martha m. Nathan Potteiger; Daniel W., born March 9, 1865; and John H.

(III) Conrad Hinnerschitz, son of Jacob, died in 1838, and in his will which was entered the same year in the Berks county Courthouse he states that he was old in years and weak in body. On June 29, 1806, he was married to Elizabeth Leiss, and they had the following children: Lovina; Augustus; William, born June 5, 1811; Maria, born June 14, 1814; Rebecca, born Feb. 26, 1816, m. John Clouser; Caroline, born Dec. 1, 1819, died Nov. 1, 1820; and Catherine, who m. David Engel.

(III) Heinrich Hinterschitt, son of Jacob, was a native of Alsace township, born in 1776. He was an extensive agriculturist, owning several valuable farms, and he also owned a distillery, frequently burning much apple-jack. He had from 100 to 150 barrels of apple-jack, wine, cider and vinegar in his kettle house. He was an extraordinary strong man, and with comparative ease could lift a barrel filled with liquor from the ground into a Conestoga wagon. In 1846 he erected a barn on the farm in Lower Heidelberg township, later owned by his son Anthony. He was a Reformed member of Spies's Church, and died in that faith in 1862, and was buried in the cemetery connected with that church. He married Maria Magdalena Faust, born in 1781, and died April 4, 1858, and they had the following children: (1) John Jacob and (2) John Heinrich were twins, born Feb. 11, 1807. John Jacob married Barbara Rapp (born March 4, 1818—died March 6, 1878), daughter of Henry and Barbara (Breidigam) Rapp, and died Jan. 10, 1882. Both he and his wife are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. They had five children: Amelia, born Jan. 27, 1838, m. Franklin Althouse, born March 28, 1836, son of John and Maria (Althouse) Althouse, and both are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery; Henry A., born March 3, 1843, married three times, the maiden names of his wives being, respectively, Rapp, Sides and Bissercomer, and he died March 1, 1882; William R., born Sept. 2, 1840, m. April 29, 1860, Esther Levan, daughter of David and Esther Levan, and died July 5, 1906; John R. died Nov. 24, 1894; Mary Ann, born March 1, 1845, died March 27, 1858. (2) John Heinrich m. Fredericka Kreiser, and died April 4, 1834, the year of his marriage. (3) Conrad, born Dec. 11, 1808, m. Mary Gibson (1818-1888), and lived in Alsace township. Their children were: Rufus, John, Heinrich, Rebecca, Amanda, Augustus, Emma E., Daniel and Alice. (4) Magdalena, born Aug. 10, 1810, m. Joseph Roland. (5) George, of Lower Heidelberg township, m. Susan Schadt, and had children: George, Harry, Jacob, Susan, Sarah, Emma and Hannah. (6) John, born June 19, 1813, m. Anna M. Goodhart, and had children: Isabella, Matilda, Frederick, Daniel, Thomas, Benjamin, John, Josiah and Catherine. (7) Susanna was born June 27, 1814. (8) Elizabeth m. John Christian. (9) Daniel lived in Cumru township. (10) Catherine, born Nov. 8, 1818, m. David Mell. (11) Frederick, born Sept. 14, 1820, lived in Alsace township on the original homestead, and died there Jan. 11, 1903, the father of: Abraham, Ann, Seville Eve, Henry, Adam, Frederick, Elizabeth, John, Rosana, Charles and Albert. (12) Anthony is mentioned below.

(IV) Anthony Hinnershitz, son of Heinrich, and father of William E. S., was born on the Hinnershitz homestead in Cumru township Sept. 15, 1822, and died Nov. 7, 1881. He was a life-long farmer, and owned eighty-four acres of land on the Van Reed road in Spring township, where he resided from 1845 until his death. He was a Democratic voter, never missing an election, and was a member of Kissinger's Church in Spring township, of which he served as deacon and elder. Mr. Hinnershitz was married to Catherine Landerstein, of Albany township, born Dec. 24, 1825, died Dec. 5, 1884, and they had seven children: William E. S.; Catherine, who resides in Philadelphia; John, of West Reading; S. Violette, deceased, m. to Jeremiah Bohn, of Lower Heidelberg township; Levi, of No. 252 West Buttonwood street, Reading; Malinda, m. to Frank Underkoffler, of Reading; and Annie, who died aged seventeen years.

(V) William E. S. Hinnershitz was born in Spring township, Berks county, Oct. 17, 1846, and was reared upon his father's farm, remaining at home until he was twenty-five years of age, at which time he became an employe of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, on the East Penn and Lebanon Valley Division. He began as a brakeman, and was promoted to the position of conductor, remaining in the service for about four years, when he gave up railroad work to become a carpenter in the car shops until 1879. In that year Mr. Hinnershitz commenced farming in Spring township, an occupation which he followed for five years, when he removed to West Reading, becoming that place's first merchant. He opened the first store in the first house above the railroad bridge, which he conducted two years, and then removed to his present location, the growth of his business warranting a removal.

Mr. Hinnershitz is a Democrat in politics, and has been active in the ranks of his party since attaining his majority. He helped to hold many elections, and was instrumental in having the first precinct voting place of Spring township established. This precinct is now incorporated in West Reading. He was first elected school director in 1877, and since that time has served nineteen years. When West Reading was incorporated Mr. Hinnershitz was again elected school director, an office which he now holds. He became a candidate for sheriff of Berks county in 1899, and each election gave him a higher vote. He is a member of West Reading Camp, No. 676, P. O. S. of A., which he was instrumental in organizing in November, 1900, and which now has a membership of fifty-one. He is a member of Kissinger's Church, belonging to the Reformed congregation, was deacon for eighteen years, and is now serving as elder. He is very active in church work, and his charities are many.

On July 4, 1872, Mr. Hinnershitz was married to Miss Lydia Ann Holl, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Steffy) Holl, and to this union were born the following children: Peter A.; Katie died young; Edward S. lives in Reading; Henry V. R. died aged six years; and Mamie L. and William both died in infancy.

Mrs. Hinnershitz is descended from Melchoir Holl, a native of Germany who came to America and became a school teacher in Cumru township. He is buried in an unmarked grave at Sinking Spring, as is his wife. He had four children: George; John, who never married; Kate, who was married to a Hoover; and Elizabeth.

George Holl, son of Melchoir, was twice married. His first wife, Mary Settley, bore him five children: Kate, Sarah, Sophia, John and Elizabeth. He m. (second) Elizabeth Steffy, and to this union there were born children as follows: Aaron, Henry, Rosanna, Isaac, Mary, Louisa, Lydia Ann, Anna Elizabeth, Peter and an infant son. Of these Lydia Ann and Anna Elizabeth were twins.

(VI) Peter A. Hinnershitz, son of William E. S., and the proprietor of the "Fifth Ward Inn," Reading, was born in Spring township Jan. 8, 1868. He was reared upon the farm, and the public schools afforded him his education. At an early age he began to learn the molder's trade in the Reading Hardware Company, where he was employed for seventeen consecutive years. He spent two years in the stove shop. In the spring of 1902 he engaged in the hotel business, and since that time has been the proprietor of his present popular hotel. In politics Mr. Hinnershitz is a Democrat. He belongs to Castle No. 49, K. G. E., Reading; Council No. 19, O. of I. A.; Conclave No. 133, Improved Order of Heptasophs. With his family he attends the Reformed Church.

On Dec. 24, 1889, Mr. Hinnershitz married Miss Sue E. Graeff, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Graeff) Graeff, and to this union have been born two children: William; and Clara Elizabeth, who died aged three months.

HOMAN. The Homan family is one of the oldest in Reading, and its members in each generation have proved themselves loyal, patriotic and useful citizens. Their devotion to the land of their adoption has been shown by service in the War of the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil war and the Spanish-American war; and in time of peace they have been progressive and upright citizens.

(I) Johannes Homan, the founder of this branch of the family, came from the Palatinate, Germany, and sailed from Rotterdam, last from Deal, England, on the ship "Queen Elizabeth," which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 16, 1738. He settled at Reading, where he reared a large family, and where his descendants yet make their home. In 1907 the Reading city directory gave the names of seventy-four adult persons by the name of Homan. Johannes Homan was the father of the following children: Samuel, born Feb. 17, 1755; Abraham, born Nov. 27, 1758, married (first) Christiana Wertz (1763-1826), (second) Jane Taylor (1782-1864), and he died March 13, 1847; Heinrich, born Nov. 25, 1764, died Oct. 12, 1834, m. Maria Reitmyer (1786-1821); and John, born about 1762, m. Kate Ziegler.

(II) Samuel Homan, son of Johannes, born at Reading Feb. 17, 1755, died Feb. 15, 1824. In 1775 he was a soldier in the early stages of the Revolution. He was twice married. His first wife, Juliana Rapp, died about 1780, the mother of one son, Johannes, born Oct. 1, 1778. His second wife, Christiana Reitmyer, born 1763, died 1849, bore him the following children: Kate, born Oct. 26, 1782, died unmarried Aug. 7, 1824; Samuel, born March 21, 1784, m. Elizabeth Maltzberger, and died Sept. 28, 1813; John Peter, born Feb. 12, 1786, was a soldier in the war of 1812, m. Sarah Schwartz (1791-1872), and died Oct. 23, 1857; Daniel, born in 1787, made his home in Washington, and died Aug. 25, 1867; Jacob, born Feb. 25, 1789, served in the war of 1812, m. Catharine Drinkhaus (1792-1854), and lived in Pottstown, Pa., until his death Dec. 9, 1826; William, born Oct. 27, 1791, m. Polly Graul (1792-1864) and died Feb. 27, 1821; Henry, born Sept. 13, 1793, served in the war of 1812, m. Elizabeth Kutz (1797-1878) and died Aug. 18, 1859; Adam, born about 1794, m. Catharine Levan (1807-1867), and died in 1854; Molly, born Oct. 29, 1796, died unmarried Sept. 28, 1867; Abraham, born 1799, died unmarried in 1821; Anna, born in 1803, m. William Arnold (1798-1863) and died in 1837; Sarah, born in 1806, m. John Kutz (1812-1863) and died in 1846; and Joseph, born Oct. 27, 1811, m. Anna Bright (1805-1856) and died Oct. 12, 1832.

(III) Johannes Homan, son of Samuel, born Oct. 1, 1778, died April 19, 1845, aged sixty-six years. By occupation he was a hatter. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, his son Samuel accompanying him as a drummer, in Col. John Lotz's regiment, in the Second Brigade, Capt. John Christian's Company, from Sept. 1, 1814, to March 5, 1815. Two other sons were drummers also. Johannes Homan (also known as John) married Catharine Lehmann, of Kutztown, born Nov. 19, 1783, died Feb. 13, 1819. They were the parents of fourteen children, of whom three of the sons, Jacob, John and Daniel, followed the hatter's trade. Two of the children died young. The others were: Jacob (1799-1839) m. Rebecca Hildebrand (1800-1860); Samuel (1800-1843) m. Elizabeth Boyer (1804, died when past ninety years of age); John (1803-1865) m. Catharine Heckman (1803-1844); Elizabeth (1804-1887) m. John Rightmyer (1801-1874); Catharine (1806-1858) m. Isaac Levan (1798-1856); Daniel (1807-1862) m. Lavina Reeser (1823-1873); Mary (1809-1883) m. Joseph Henry (1807-1870); Lebbeus (1810-1862) m. Matilda Schoener; Juliana (1812-1862) m. Gershom Wolf; Rosanna (1813-1891) m. Jacob Kunsman (1813-1893); Hester (1816-1860) m. Henry Hotem (1815-1852); and Henry Augustus (Aug. 25, 1818).

(IV) Henry Augustus Homan, son of Johannes, was born in Reading Aug. 25, 1818, and after a well spent life passed away Sept. 7, 1905, aged eighty-seven years, thirteen days. By occupation Mr. Homan was a carpenter, and he helped to build many of the houses of this city. In his later years he was a carpenter in the employ of the Reading Railway Company, and became well and favorably known, having the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He resided at No. 126 South Eighth street, where three of his daughters yet make their home. He was a faithful charter member of St. James Lutheran Church, and was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He married June 28, 1840, Elizabeth Belz, who was born April 11, 1822, daughter of John Adam and Christiana Belz; she died July 11, 1877. They became the parents of twelve children, four sons and eight daughters, namely: Jacob, died aged nine years; Charles A.; Thomas Belz, born July 14, 1845, died Nov. 17, 1874, m. Oct. 19, 1871, Mary Ella Cutler, and had two children—Harry Cutler and Edwin Forrest; Christiana is deceased; Frances Rebecca is deceased; Emma is at home; Lucy is deceased; Alice is a school teacher in Reading; Jeanette Rebecca, born Feb. 8, 1859, died Oct. 27, 1886, m. April 12, 1881, Oliver Mock, and one daughter, Alice, survives; Lewis, deceased; Frances E., born Jan. 14, 1863, was a successful school teacher in Reading until her marriage July 31, 1888, with Henry Schick, a furniture dealer in Reading, and they have had five children—Christian Henry (deceased), Esther Louise, Walter Herbert, Francis Homan and Charles Otto; and Clara is at home.

(V) Charles A. Homan, son of Henry Augustus, and one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Reading, was born there May 20, 1843. His education was acquired in the public schools which he attended until he was eleven years of age. At that time he became an errand boy in a grocery store, later assuming a like position in a dry goods store. On Dec. 4, 1858, he entered the telegraph office as a messenger—at the corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets—for the Reading Railway Company. On Nov. 4, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company B, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and he served with his regiment until mustered out Aug. 12, 1863. On Sept. 23d following he entered the United States Military Telegraph service as an operator, and remained in that branch of the government service until April 13, 1866. On Aug. 3, 1866, he returned to the employ of the railroad company, being stationed at Columbia as a telegrapher until April 13, 1870. Since then he has been located in Reading, though continuing in the service of the same company. He is now one of the oldest men in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company. Since November, 1880, he has been storekeeper of the telegraph department.

On July 11, 1889, Mr. Homan was married to Susan Barlet, a former grammar school teacher at Reading. She is a daughter of Charles and Emma (Briner) Barlet. No children have been born to this marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Homan are members of St. James Lutheran Church. They reside in their comfortable home at No. 1444 Spruce street. Mr. Homan has long been interested in the history of his family, and he has a remarkable memory for the facts, as well as for the dates, in same. He is well posted on public affairs, and is a most interesting talker.

(IV) Daniel Homan, son of Johannes and Catharine (Lehmann), was born in January, 1807, and, after a life passed in Reading, died in 1862. In his earlier years he owned a boat and followed boating in the summer months on the Schuylkill canal, while in winter he engaged in hat making, a trade he had learned from his father. His latter days were devoted almost exclusively to this trade. For a short time he was employed by the Reading Railroad Company. He made his home for the greater part of his life on Eighth street, between Franklin and Chestnut streets. He married Lavina Reeser (1823-1873), who bore him the following children, namely: Eve Rosanna m. John Becker; John L.; Sallie died in childhood; Susan m. James Printz; Annie m. George Eisenbise; Hannah m. Jesse Castor; Daniel; Joseph, a railroad man, was accidentally killed in 1903; Amanda m. Julius Manning; Mary is deceased; Lottie m. Maurice Harbster; and two died young.

(V) John Lehmann Homan, son of Daniel and one of the popular employes of the Reading Railroad Company, was born in Reading April 1, 1844. He was educated in the Peach and Franklin streets school, and learned the blacksmith's trade with the Reading Railroad Company, in whose shops he commenced work when he was but thirteen years of age. He has been connected with this company since that time, with the exception of three years, 1898-1901, and during this long period has worked in every department in his line, being a skilled and efficient mechanic and trusted employe of the company.

In 1864 Mr. Homan was married (first) to Rebecca Dietrich, daughter of Conrad and Martha (Moyer) Dietrich, and to this union were born five sons: one that died in infancy; William, who died in 1904, aged thirty-eight years; Hiester, who died in infancy; John, born in 1869, who is an iron worker in Reading; and Daniel, who died in childhood. Mrs. Homan died at the age of twenty-four years. Mr. Homan m. (second) Elizabeth Eidel, widow of James Eidel; her maiden name was Eddinger. No children have been born to this union. Since 1889 Mr. Homan has occupied his own home at No. 1819 Perkiomen avenue. In his religious belief he is a Lutheran, and attends St. James Church, while Mrs. Homan is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church of Reading.

(III) Henry Homan, son of Samuel and Christiana (Reitmyer), was born Sept. 13, 1793, and was a hat maker by trade, before the days of machinery. He served as a soldier in the war of 1812, and he died Aug. 18, 1859. He married Elizabeth Kutz, who bore him seven children, as follows: Adam, Samuel, James, Susan, Celinda, Ann Eliza and Christian. In religious belief the family were Lutherans, and in politics Mr. Homan was a Democrat.

(IV) Samuel Homan, son of Henry, and one of Reading's venerable retired citizens, was born March 20, 1825, on the corner of Eighth and Cherry streets, in a building situated on the present site of Kissinger's Storage Warehouse. He received a meager education in the schools of his day, and when fourteen years of age apprenticed himself to the hatter's trade, his apprenticeship lasting for five and one-half years. At the end of that time he worked at his trade for several years, and then with David Lotz went into business, the partnership continuing successfully until Mr. Lotz's death, after which time Mr. Homan continued the business. On Jan. 20, 1809, Mr. Homan married Susan Leas, daughter of Peter Leas. Six of the eight children born to this union survive, namely: Henry A. m. Mary Walters; Laura m. David Weidham; Elizabeth is deceased; Samuel P. m. Elizabeth Hays; one died in infancy; Eva G. and Saran S. are unmarried; and Charlotte G. m. David Hunnon.

Mr. and Mrs. Homan and their family all belong to the Lutheran Church. Since the administration of James Buchanan he has been a stanch Democrat, and has taken an active interest in the success of his party. He joined the Friendship Fire Company when that organization had but seventeen members. Mr. Homan has many friends in the city, attracted by the sterling qualities displayed by him during his long and useful life.

WALTER G. STEININGER, of Reading, engaged in the practice of law, was born there April 11, 1877, son of Isaac W. and Emma S. (Althouse) Steininger. His grandfather, George Steininger, was a farmer and drover of Lehigh county, Pa. His father is in the real estate business in Reading, and his mother is a daughter of Adam Althouse, a prominent farmer and large landowner of Bern township, Berks county. Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Steininger had three children: Harry A., a traveling salesman, of Reading; Lillian M., a graduate of the high school, class of 1900, now the wife of Eugene O. Siegrist, Esq., of Lebanon, Pa.; and Walter G.

Walter G. Steininger has passed his entire life in the city of Reading. He received his education in the public schools, graduating from the high school in 1894, after which he entered upon an active business life at once, securing employment as time clerk and inspector for the National Bolt, Nut & Rivet Works of Reading. He was with this firm until 1899, when he entered the office of the late J. Howard Jacobs, as clerk, and began preparation for the Bar. He studied there until the death of his preceptor in October, 1902, when he registered in the office of Harvey F. Heinly, where he remained until admitted to practice at the Berks county Bar, Feb. 11, 1905, later passing the examination before the State board, which admitted him to the Supreme court. Mr. Steininger occupies offices at No. 541 Court street. He has been a notary since 1899, now holding his second commission; and he represents the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland.

Mr. Steininger belongs to the Young Men's Christian Association, and is active in all work of that institution. He is an active member of Olivet Presbyterian Church, serving on the board of trustees, teaches a class in the Sunday-school and is president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

DANIEL P. GRIM, living in retirement at Kutztown, after an active and successful business career of forty years, was born at Grimville, in Greenwich township, Berks county, Aug. 31, 1833. He was educated in the local schools; also at Bethlehem and Strasburg; and after quitting school, served as a teacher from 1852 to 1855. Then he went to Davenport, Iowa, to engage as a clerk in the general store of Jacob Weaver Jr. & Co., and he remained for two years, when he removed to Kansas City. Shortly afterward, he purchased a large tract of farming land near Topeka, which he continues to hold; also over seven hundred acres in Iowa, which he owned for ten years. In 1857, he returned home at the request of his father to assist as a partner in carrying on the tannery at Grimville. In three years he became the sole owner of the business, and he directed this successfully until 1897. Upon the decease of his father in 1883, he purchased the premises from the estate. He had removed to Kutztown in 1878, and traveled to and fro almost daily until 1897. Since then he has practically lived in retirement. By his father's influence he came to thoroughly appreciate the importance of education, and therefore encouraged the education of children in the upper section of the county in spite of much opposition. He was the first taxpayer there to send his children to a college for the purpose of giving them the advantages of a superior education.

When a national bank was established at Kutztown in 1872, Mr. Grim became one of its directors, and he continued to serve as such until the bank was removed to Reading, in 1883; and when interest in a local bank was revived, in 1896, he cooperated earnestly in its organization, and has since then served as a director. Mr. Grim also encouraged an electric plant at Kutztown for light, heat and power, and has filled the office of president of the corporation since 1901.

In December, 1861, Mr. Grim married Catharine A. Grim, daughter of Seth K. Grim and Anna (Kemp), his wife, of Maxatawny township, and by her had five children: Annie C., who was educated at the Keystone State Normal School; A. Elizabeth, who attended the same school, and married Ira P. Rothermel, Esq., an attorney at Reading (whose sketch appears in this publication); Daniel P., Jr., who attended the Keystone State Normal School, Millersville State Normal School and Stoner's Inter-State Business College, and was appointed bookkeeper of the Kutztown National Bank in 1902 (which position he is still filling); Emma, who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, teacher in the local schools for six years, and an artist of superior accomplishments; and Mary, who died in infancy. Mr. Grim and his family have been devoted members of the Lutheran Church. In politics he has been a strong adherent of the Republican party.

Mr. Grim's father was Col. Daniel Bertolet Grim, for sixty years identified with the welfare of Grimville and vicinity, after whom the village had been named and by whom the post-office of the same name had been established in 1830. He was born in the township of Maxatawny July 17, 1800, and was brought up to farming and tanning under his father. He remained at home until twenty-four years of age, and then started in business on his own account, purchasing a farm of over two hundred acres in Greenwich township. There he established a hotel, store, tannery and distillery, and operated them all successfully for many years. He also dealt in cattle, which he purchased in the Western States, brought to his place and disposed of at public sale. In this manner he developed a business stand and market for live stock which came to be well known in Berks county and in the adjoining counties. He showed much interest in the military affairs of the county and officiated as colonel for a number of years. He was a fine-looking man, of commanding presence and influence. He gave great encouragement to education, at the inception of the common school system, notwithstanding local prejudice and opposition. In politics he was a Whig, taking a stand which in his time required great determination and courage in a community almost wholly Democratic. In 1819 he married Elizabeth Crouse, daughter of Charles Abraham Crouse, of Skippackville, Montgomery county, and granddaughter of Capt. Charles Crouse, of Longswamp township in Berks county, who took an active part in the Revolution; and by her he had nine children: Jonathan, Daniel, Charles, Catharine (m. William Stettler), Sarah, Susan (m. Charles Dietrich), Amelia (m. William T. Breinig) and two who died in infancy. He died in 1883, and his wife in 1882.

Jonathan Grim, the grandfather of Daniel P. Grim, was a farmer and tanner of Maxatawny township. He married Catharine Bertolet, daughter of Daniel Bertolet, of Oley, and great-granddaughter of Jean Bertolet, the immigrant from Switzerland in 1726. By her he had an only son, Daniel Bertolet. Upon the decease of this wife he married Elizabeth Snyder, of Oley, by whom he had three children: Jonathan, Joshua, and Mary (m. Charles Faber).

Bertolet

Daniel P. Shinn

Heinrich Grimm, the great-grandfather, had five sons (including Jonathan) and two daughters; and the great-great-grandfather was Egidius Grim, who emigrated from Germany in 1728, and left two sons, Jacob and Heinrich, and three daughters, Margaret, Catharine and Elizabeth.

Egidius Grim was accompanied from Wurtemberg, Germany, by his wife, and, on their way to Pennsylvania, they tarried at Deal, England, for several years. By a "Family Tree," prepared many years ago, it appears that he was descended from a Norman knight of the time of William the Conqueror. Upon locating in Pennsylvania, he purchased a large tract of land (upward of seven hundred acres) in the district of Weisenburg, near the Maxatawny settlement, and at the time of his decease, in December, 1761, he was a resident of Macungie township, an adjoining district. By his last will, it appears that he gave his large farm to his two sons, Jacob and Henry, in two equal parts, having previously disposed of the premises to them with the reservation of a life estate to live on either of them (his last will being of record in the register's office of Northampton county).

Mr. Daniel P. Grim's wife's father, Seth K. Grim, born in Maxatawny township in 1817, was engaged at farming for a number of years, but he retired at an early age and died in 1887. His wife, Anna Kemp, born in 1814, died in 1883. She was the daughter of Jacob Kemp, farmer of Oley township. They had two children: Catharine A. (m. Daniel P. Grim) and Mary (m. William Kline, of Maxatawny township).

Seth K. Grim's father was David Grim, born 1787, died 1838. He married Catharine Knabb, a daughter of Peter Knabb, of Oley, born 1794, died 1838.

His grandfather was Jacob Grim, born 1754, died 1833; he married Catharine Hottenstein, of Maxatawny township, born 1761, died 1848. His great-grandfather was Henry Grim, the younger son of Egidius Grim, the immigrant in 1728.

Jacob Grim, the grandfather of Seth, was enlisted in the Revolution, having been first lieutenant in the company of Capt. Casper Smeck, Maxatawny township, Second Battalion, of the Berks County Militia, which was called into active service in the summer of 1777, and participated in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown.

M. S. FEATHER, a well-to-do young business man of Reading, Pa., who is conducting a flourishing drug business on Chestnut street, was born in the city in 1877, son of Milton G. and Louisa (Schmidt) Feather.

Mr. Feather's education was secured in the schools of Reading, after leaving which he clerked for two years in Sanderson's drug store, and then went to Philadelphia and four and one-half years later to Schuylkill Haven. At the latter place he clerked for three years, at the end of which time he returned to Reading, working for Mr. Troop for two years. In 1901 he entered his present place of business, formerly owned and conducted by R. D. Lengel, and now carries a full line of drugs, medicines, perfumes, candies and toilet articles, and manufactures the famous "E. E. E. E. (Four E's) Corn Cure," "Dewey's Headache Cure" and several proprietary medicines. He lived at No. 1010 Chestnut street until 1908, when he purchased the property at No. 1016 Chestnut street, where he is now located. He has won the confidence of the people in his community, and his trade, already large, is rapidly increasing.

Mr. Feather married Miss Nellie Binkley, of Schuylkill Haven, and to them has been born one child, Lauretta. Mr. and Mrs. Feather are members of the Lutheran Church. He is connected fraternally with the F. O. E., the M. W. A., and the B. P. O. E., in all of which organizations he is very popular.

J. HAIN MENGEL, a member of the well known real estate firm of Mengel & Mengel, located at No. 9 North Sixth street, Reading, Pa., is a native of this city, where he was born March 28, 1873, son of Jonathan T. and Alice (Hain) Mengel, the latter of whom is a daughter of Jacob H. and Mary Ann (Goodhart) Hain. The grandparents on the paternal side were Matthias and Mary Ann (Phipps) Mengel.

J. Hain Mengel secured his education in the public schools of his native city, and graduated from the High School in the class of 1890. In 1896 Mr. Mengel, with his brother Ralph H., established the real estate firm of Mengel & Mengel, and this has continued to the present time with much success. Both members of the firm are active and able business men, and their standing in the community is that of substantial, reliable citizens. Mr. Mengel has been very prominent fraternally, belonging to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; Philadelphia Consistory, 32d degree; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also connected with Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F., Washington Camp No. 89, P. O. S. of A., and Juniata Tribe, No. 174, I. O. R. M.

W. W. LIVINGOOD, M. D., one of Reading's well-known young professional men, who has been engaged in the practice of medicine since 1899, was born Aug. 13, 1876, in Reading, son of William H. and Anna (Jamieson) Livingood.

Dr. Livingood received his preliminary educational training in the public schools of Reading, after which he attended a preparatory school at Woodbridge, N. J. He read medicine with Dr. Joseph A. Brackbill, and subsequently, in 1895, entered the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated in 1899 with the degree of M. D. He at once engaged in the practice of his profession, but later served for one year as resident physician at St. Joseph's Hospital. Dr. Livingood is a member of the city, county, State and national medical associations, and while at college was connected with the Stelli Medical Society, and the Nu Sigma Nu, Greek fraternity. In political matters he is independent, and he and Mrs. Livingood are members of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1901 Dr. W. W. Livingood married Miss Stella M. Ziegler. They spend the summer seasons at their beautiful summer residence in Robesonia.

HARVEY C. JOHNSON, D. D. S., one of the rising young dentists of Reading, was born in Kutztown, Pa., Feb. 7, 1870, son of Henry and Anna (Custer) Johnson.

Harvey C. Johnson was educated in Kutztown and Reading, and later attended the Schuylkill Seminary and West Chester State Normal School. His professional preparation was secured at the Philadelphia Dental College, and he was given the degree of D. D. S., in 1889. His father was one of the best known dentists in Reading, and the young man at once went into the elder Dr. Johnson's office, and has been practicing in connection with him ever since. He is a thoroughly wide-awake, energetic and practical man, and has not only built up a good practice but has also had time to serve his city's interests. The Doctor is treasurer of the Hamburg Manufacturing Company, one of the large industries in Berks county. A Republican and active in party work, he is at present serving his second term on the city council, where he has done good service and has a record above reproach. He is an active member of the Board of Trade.

Dr. Johnson is an enthusiastic lodge man and a member of many organizations. They are: Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, Knights Templar, No. 42; Bloomsbury Consistory (thirty-second degree Mason); Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Reading Lodge, B. P. O. Elks; Fraternal Order of Eagles; Sons of Veterans; and the Knights of Pythias. He also belongs to the Reading Hose Fire Company, and the North Eastern Republican League.

HARTLINE. The Hartline family long prominent in Berks county Pa., is represented by George C. Hartline, justice of the peace of Mt. Penn borough and a foremost citizen of that vicinity; Warren D. Hartline, a trusted employe of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, with his residence in Mt. Penn borough; and Dr. Charles H. Hartline, a prominent physician and surgeon in Oley township. The family is of German origin, but has been a part of the substantial German element of Pennsylvania citizenship since the first half of the eighteenth century.

(I) John Jacob Hartlein was born Sept. 8, 1699, in Saxony, Germany, son of Nicholas and Dorotha Hartlein, as indicated by the Hill Church records. On Sept. 28, 1726, he married Julia, daughter of John Christian and Appolonia Dressler, born July 4, 1694. They came to America in 1732, and settled in Earl township, Berks county, Pa. They became the parents of six children, as follows: John Jacob and Jacob both died young; Margaret, born in 1729, married John ————; George, born 1732; Anna Dorotha, born 1734, died 1736; and Nicholas, born 1736, died 1741.

(II) George Hartlein, son of John Jacob, was born in Saxony, Germany, in 1732, shortly before the emigration of his parents to the New World. In 1750 he was a taxable in District township, this county, as was also George, Jr. In 1755 he married Maria Catharine Bochm (Boehm), who was born in 1730, daughter of Conrad Bochm a native of Fehrfield, Wurtemberg, Germany (born about 1705), who came to America in 1732. To George Hartlein and wife were born the following children: Jost (or Yost), born Jan. 8, 1767, died Dec. 21, 1852, aged eighty-five years, eleven months, thirteen days, and is buried at Oley Church; by his side is buried Sarah Hartlein, born Oct. 18, 1780, died Sept. 24, 1873, aged ninety-two years, eleven months, six days (It is not known whether she was his wife or his sister). George, Jr., was born Jan. 11, 1781. There were perhaps other children but the names of these two alone are of certain record.

(III) George Hartlein, Jr., son of George, was born in Earl township Jan. 11, 1781, and he died Feb. 19, 1865, aged eighty-four years, one month and eight days. He married Maria Dilleplane (properly spelled De la Plaine), daughter of Frederick Dilleplane, of French extraction and of an early settled family of Oley township. She was born April 29, 1784, and died Aug. 10, 1853, aged sixty-nine years, three months, and eleven days. Both she and her husband are buried at the Oley Churches. Their children were: Daniel; Solomon; Mary m. Elijah Clouser, of Oley township; Harriet m. Enoch Boyer; Josiah m. Anna Hoffman (1828-1899); Joel m. Mary Auche; Susanna m. Isaac Smith; Elizabeth m. Michael Brandt; Joshua D. m. Elizabeth Clouser; and Ezra, a weaver by trade and a veteran of the Civil war, m. Catherine Focht, and resides in Earl township.

The name George was a very common family name, and at the present time (1908) there are four George Hartlines living within a radius of seven miles in Berks county.

(IV) Josiah Hartline, son of George, Jr., was born in Earl township, Oct. 11, 1814, and his death, the result of an attack of pneumonia, occurred in Oley township March 21, 1877, when he was aged sixty-two years, five months and ten days. In his youth he learned the trade of shoemaker and cobbler from John Ahrenpriester, of Earl township, and this he followed all of his active life. He owned a small home in Oley township, where he died. He was a member of the Oley Lutheran church, and is buried in the Hartline plot in the cemetery adjoining. He married Anna Hoffman, born Feb. 15, 1828, daughter of John Hoffman. She died Sept. 10, 1899, aged seventy-one years, six months and twenty-five days. Their children were: Deborah, widow of Cornelius Kuser; Morris H., living at the old home in Oley; Hannah, who died young; Franklin, lineman for the American Telegraph and Telephone Co.; Harriet, who died young; Dr. Charles H.; Ellen, who married Charles Ohlinger, of Reading; and Enoch, a school teacher of Oley township.

(VI) Dr. Charles H. Hartline, son of Josiah and Anna, was born in Oley township March 22, 1859. His early education was obtained in the public schools of his district, and in the Oley Academy, which was established in 1857. He later attended the Amityville Seminary under Profs. D. M. B. Wann and Irwin Holloway, afterward taking a course in Pierce's Business College at Philadelphia, graduating in 1885. His medical studies were pursued at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, from which he was graduated in 1891. He immediately located for practice at Friedensburg, in Oley township, where he has since remained, having built up a large and lucrative practice, and having won a high place in the esteem and affection of the people by his ability, conscientious care and high principles. His practice covers a radius of ten miles, and throughout all this territory he is well known. His country practice is so large that he is obliged to keep three horses. Since 1896 he has been a member of the Berks county Medical Society, and he also belongs to the American Medical Association. His fraternal relations are with Mt. Penn Lodge No. 518, I. O. O. F.; Mt. Penn Encampment, No. 152; Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E.; Minnehaha Lodge No. 154, K. P.; Reading Aerie No. 66, F. O. E. The Doctor and his family all belong to the Friedensburg Lutheran Church.

On May 11, 1906, Dr. Hartline was graduated from Allemannia Gesang Verein von Philadelphia. He is a fine musician and is much interested in vocal culture in his district. Dr. Hartline has been twice married. On Jan. 19, 1895, he married Sallie E. Price, daughter of Adam and Mary (Eisenhour) Price, of Fleetwood. She died April 15, 1898, aged twenty-three years, seven months and five days. To this union were born two daughters: Esther P. and Sallie P. He married (second) Nora H. Seyler, daughter of John and Susan (Hess) Seyler, on June 29, 1901. No children have been born of this union.

(IV) Joel Hartline, son of George, Jr., was born Nov. 18, 1818. He made his home in Earl township and died Feb. 12, 1909, aged ninety years, two months, twenty-seven days, and is buried in Oley Churches Cemetery. He earned a good reputation for industry, engaging all his active life at day's labor. During his last years he made his home with his son George A., in Exeter township. He married Mary Auche, who died July 9, 1892, aged seventy-three years. They became the parents of five children, namely; One died in infancy; James, a carpenter in Earl township, m. (first) Hettie Shollenberger, deceased, and (second) Kate Hartman, widow of Amos Hartman; George A.; Ammon, a laborer at Shanesville, m. Sally Hartman; and Sarah m. Peter Yoder, of Fleetwood.

(V) George A. Hartline, son of Joel, was born May 16, 1842, in Oley township, and when a young man learned the shoemaker's trade, which was his occupation until 1900. He then tenanted for six years, and in 1907 he purchased a tract of twenty-two acres in Exeter township, which he is now cultivating very successfully. He is a hard-working, industrious man, and is esteemed by all who know him. In political matters he is Democrat, and in religious belief he and his family are Lutherans, belonging to Christ Lutheran Church, Spangsville. He married Deborah Drumheller, daughter of Charles and Abigail Drumheller, and to them were born eight children: Clara m. Harry Weidner, a shoemaker of Reading; Robert D., a truck farmer at Black Bear, Exeter township, m. Alice Shollenberger; Harry D., a shoe maker and toll-house keeper at Oley Line (Limekiln P. O.), m. Bertha Correll; Warren D.; George, a professional egg packer at Philadelphia, m. Sallie Deysher; and Mary, Oscar and Odella are unmarried and at home.

(VI) Warren D. Hartline, son of George A., and now a reliable citizen of Mt. Penn borough, was born in Oley township Jan. 24, 1872. He attended the public schools of his native township until he was about nineteen years of age, after which he learned the machinist's trade with Orr & Sembower, at Millmont, in whose employ he remained for a period of twelve years. He then accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, where he has continued to the present time, discharging the duties of his position with ability and care. In the spring of 1904 Mr. Hartline erected a comfortable residence on Twenty-third street, Mt. Penn, where he has since made his home. He is a Democrat in politi cal principle, but is independent of party lines. He is a member of Camp No. 560, P. O. S. of A., and of Tent No. 426, K. O. T. M. He and his family attend Zion's U. B. Church at Reading.

On Sept. 26, 1898, Mr. Hartline was married to Cora Strunk, born April 18, 1877, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Anthony) Strunk, truck farmers of Exeter township. To Mr. and Mrs. Hartline have been born four children: Elsie, March 27, 1900; Mary, Jan. 24, 1903; Paul, March 27, 1905; and Sarah, Feb. 19, 1907.

(IV) Joshua D. Hartline, son of George, Jr., was born in Earl township May 6, 1826. He learned the trade of shoemaker in his youth, and followed that occupation all his life in Oley and Exeter townships, the latter of which was his home the major portion of his life. He died there Feb. 2, 1890, in his sixty-fourth year, and was buried in Oley Church cemetery. On Oct. 12, 1852, Mr. Hartline married Elizabeth L. Clouser, born May 15, 1826, died Jan. 12, 1907, daughter of Abraham and Catharine (Livingood) Clouser. To this union were born: Miranda m. Daniel Knabb, a farmer of Oley; Mary Catharine, born July 6, 1855, died when less than one year old; William H., born March 21, 1857, died in his fourteenth year; John, a farmer at Stonetown, in Exeter township, m. Maggie Noll; Sarah m. Howard B. Deysher, who resides at Mt. Penn; Harriet, born Jan. 28, 1866, died in her fifth year; and George C.

(V) George C. Hartline, son of Joshua D., and exburgess, justice of the peace, and school director of Mt. Penn borough, was born in Exeter township, Dec. 8, 1868. He was educated in the public schools and Oley Academy, of which Profs. George H. Heffner and Hiester A. Bowers were the instructors, and this well-known institution he attended for about four years. He then taught school successfully for ten terms in Alsace, Exeter, Ruscombmanor, Lower Alsace and Earl townships, but in June, 1889, he gave up teaching and accepted a position on the construction force of the Philadelphia, Reading & Pottsville Telegraph Company, receiving in 1897 a well-deserved promotion to the position of store keeper of telegraph materials, a capacity in which he has ever since continued, his office and storehouse being located at the corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets, Reading.

Mr. Hartline is one of Mt. Penn's most influential Democrats, this borough having formerly been a part of Lower Alsace township, in which Mr. Hartline was elected a justice of the peace in 1897, serving in that office until Mt. Penn was incorporated. Here he continued in the office, having been elected for the third time, and during all of this service to the county he has never drawn one cent for discharged cases, believing this practice to be legalized robbery of the tax-payers' money. He is greatly interested in educational matters and faithfully served Lower Alsace and Mt. Penn as school director. After the incorporation of the latter place, the people unanimously elected "Squire" Hartline to the office of chief burgess, a position which he filled with honor, and during his incumbency many important incidents are recorded, including the Topographical survey, the laying of considerable curbing and sidewalks, and the installation of the water mains. Mr. Hartline proved himself a capable incumbent of the chief executive's office, and an honest and incorruptible official. Socially he is connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., Reading; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; and Philadelphia Consistory, 32nd degree; Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 518, I. O. O. F., Mt. Penn Encampment No. 152; and Reading Canton No. 72, of that order; Washington Camp No. 221, P. O. S. of A., of Lime Kiln. He and his family attend Grace Lutheran Church, of which they are consistent members. Since 1895 Mr. Hartline has been superintendent of Faith Lutheran Sunday-school in Mt. Penn. He was instrumental in having the full course of the graded literature of the General Council of the Lutheran Church adopted in the Sunday-school, and in various ways through his influence the school has been brought to its present flourishing condition.

In 1892 Mr. George C. Hartline was married to Amanda C. Clouser, daughter of Enoch L. and Maria (Diliplaine) Clouser, of Tiffin, Ohio, and granddaughter of Abraham and Catharine (Livingood) Clouser. To them have been born these children: Joshua Enoch, born Feb. 22, 1893; B. Franklin; Martin L. and John W., twins; and a son, the four last named dying in infancy.

SAMUEL BANKS TAYLOR, M. D., a prominent physician and leading citizen of Reading, Pa., who has been identified with the interests of the city since 1895, was born in 1868 in Tuscarora township, near Millerstown, Perry county, Pa., son of George D. and Frances (Kurtz) Taylor.

George D. Taylor, who was for many years engaged as a farmer and lumberman in Perry county, is now devoting his time to fruit culture. His first wife, Frances Kurtz, died March 4, 1880, aged thirty-seven years, the mother of six children, three of whom are now living: Elizabeth G., m. to John F. Adams, principal of the Millersburg, Dauphin county, schools; Louisa, m. to J. Frank Fickes; and S. Banks. W. Sherman, a son of the first marriage, died May 16, 1907. Mr. Taylor m. (second) Mary E. Kurtz, sister of his first wife, who died March 29, 1890, without issue.

S. Banks Taylor received his preliminary education in the common schools of Perry county, also attending the Lock Haven State Normal school. He read medicine with his uncle, Dr. Samuel L. Kurtz, and entered Jefferson Medical College in 1892, graduating therefrom in 1895. He immediately settled in the practice of his profession in Reading, where he has won public confidence and esteem and built up a large practice. The Doctor is a member of the city, county, State and American Medical associations, and keeps himself well posted in the new discoveries and inventions in the profession by subscription to numerous medical periodicals.

In 1902 Dr. Taylor married Edith E. Niedhauk, a native of Lancaster county, and three children have been born to this union: Ethel N., George D., Jr., and Samuel B., Jr. In political matters Dr. Taylor is a Republican.

O. W. DECK, who was for many years a teacher throughout Pennsylvania and other States, and acquired a very favorable reputation in that profession, was, in 1904, acting in the capacity of cashier for the Canada Life Assurance Company, having charge of the Central Pennsylvania branch, consisting of five counties.

The Deck family traces its origin to the Palatinate immigration of early Colonial times. Mathias Dek, aged thirty-seven years, landed by the ship "Harle," Sept. 1, 1736. Four years later his son Johann Frederick was born, after he had located on a small tract of land in Tulpehocken township, in the "Fogelsbirge," near Host, which remained in the possession of the Deck family for over a century. Johann Frederick died in 1820, when the farm became the property of his son Henry (born in 1782). There were other sons, but their names and number is not now definitely known. One was John, another Frederick, and a third, George. The first named moved to Virginia, and settled near Winchester, in Frederick county, where he died in 1847. Frederick never became possessed with the "wanderlust," it seems, and remained in the State, but where he lived is not now known. George followed his brother into Virginia (now West Virginia), and settled near Martinsburg, where several of his descendants yet reside.

Henry Deck died at the old homestead in 1854, and the property came into the possession of his son Matthias, who, however, some years before this time had moved to Lebanon county, near Jonestown, where our subject's father, Isaac Z., was born in 1837. Matthias tilled the farm faithfully, being assisted by his seven sons: Henry, a victim of the Civil war; Jonathan, who died at Hamburg, this county, in 1893; Israel, who died in early manhood, unmarried; Isaac Z., who died in Easton, Pa., in 1897; Samuel, now living at West Leesport; Willoughby, who lives at present at Oakbrook, a suburb of Reading; and John, a veteran of the Civil war, now living at Rehrersburg. When Matthias Deck retired from active life, in his old age, he sold the farm, soon after the end of the Civil war, to a Mr. Webber—by which act it ceased to be associated with the Deck family in ownership, after undivided possession for a century and a quarter.

Isaac Z. Deck was a school teacher for twenty-eight years, and was also church organist in the old Lutheran Church at Rehrersburg for twenty years. He was elected to the Legislature from Rehrersburg for two terms, and died in 1897, at Easton, Pa., aged sixty years. He married a Miss Wagner, daughter of Daniel L. Wagner, a farmer of near Bernville, Berks county. Five children were born to this union: Eva m. S. P. Wilhelm, of Bernville, and died in August, 1905; Delos, of Easton, a granite cutter, is in the employ of the Easton Traction Company; Blanche m. George W. Snyder, railway mail clerk at Reading; Daphne, a graduate of the Reading High school, is now stenographer and typewriter for the Sun Wall Paper Company, of Reading; and O. W. is our subject.

O. W. Deck was born in Womelsdorf, Berks county, and was educated in the schools of that county and of Schuylkill county. He also attended Normal schools in Pennsylvania and Ohio. His first occupation was that of marble cutting, which he followed from the time he was fourteen years old until he was twenty, and part of this time he spent in attending school. He started teaching school at the age of twenty years, and followed that occupation for a like period of time in Berks, Perry and Luzerne counties, Pa., and in Monmouth county, N. J. Tiring of teaching, Mr. Deck returned to Reading, where he held the position of Cashier in the Central Penna. Branch of the Canada Life until the Branch was merged with the Philadelphia Branch of that Company. He is now bookkeeper for the Reading Quarry Company, located at Temple, five miles out from Reading.

GEORGE. The George family, planted in America some one hundred and fifty years ago, is found active in many different walks of life, and has been distinguished by industry, thrift and good citizenship. At the present time Rev. Dr. Jonathan V. George is successfully carrying on the Reading Collegiate Institute; Samuel George is a successful contractor and builder in Reading; and Daniel S. George is a prosperous farmer in Maxatawny township.

(I) Jost Heinrich George was born in 1707, at Breitenbach, near Herborn, Nassau, Germany. His children were: (1) Johann Heinrich. (2) Heinrich came to America Aug. 11, 1750, and tradition says he settled at Harrisburg, where he owned blocks of houses. He had a palatial residence, and it is said he received a princely inheritance from Germany after his father's death, but before he died he burned all the papers he had belonging to his father, as well as all his correspondence pertaining to his inheritance from Germany. He had a son, and a daughter, Anna Catharine, whose name was not given, but was referred to in a letter written by her father on May 2, 1783.

(II) Johann Heinrich George, son of Jost Heinrich, came to America when his oldest son was nine years of age, according to family tradition. His wife was Anna Maria Nicks, and they settled in Greenwich township, Berks county. Their children were: Jost Heinrich; Heinrich Jacob; and one referred to in letter.

(III) Jost Heinrich George, son of Johann Heinrich, married Elizabeth Mayer (1769-1840), and she is buried in the cemetery at Dunkel's Church. They lived in Greenwich township. Their children were: Elizabeth, m. to Christian Dietrich (1783-1873); Barbara (Bevy), m. to Hans Georg Kohler, and the mother of Rev. Daniel Kohler; J. Jacob (1790-1859), m. to Catharine Zimmerman, and had children—Maria (m. Charles Bleiler), Joseph, Jacob, Henry (inherited the home), Phoebe (m. Charles Shomo), Charles and Daniel; Eva, m. to Jacob Noecker; Maria, m. to Peter Spohn; and Hannah, m. to George Haring.

(III) Heinrich Jacob George, second son of Johann Heinrich, was born Feb. 27, 1774, and he died July 5, 1832, aged fifty-eight years, four months, six days. His wife was Maria Catharine Leiby, born 1778, died 1865. Their children were: Jacob m. Polly Willtrout; Heinrich m. Polly Hilbert; Elizabeth m. Daniel Peiffer; Rebecca m. Jacob Seitler; Maria m. William Bast; Felde (Valentine) m. Kate Neff; Charles m. Sarah Adams; and Lydia m. John Haring.

(IV) Jacob George, son of Heinrich Jacob, was born in Berks county, and when a young man learned the trade of gunsmith which he followed for several years, then taking up a tract of eighty-four acres in Greenwich township, which he farmed for the remainder of his life. He died in 1881, at the age of eighty-three years. He married Polly Willtrout, and to them were born children as follows: ———m. Jacob Kershner; Daniel W. is mentioned below; ——— m. Reuben Harris; Jonathan lived in Greenwich township; Sallie m. Jonathan Mechley, of Greenwich township; Jacob; Fianna m. Daniel Mechley; Jackson is deceased; Mary m. ——— Adams; and Benjamin.

(V) Daniel W. George, son of Jacob, was born in Greenwich township, Nov. 8, 1826, and he died on his farm in Maxatawny township April 25, 1904, aged seventy-seven years, five months, seventeen days, and was buried at Dunkel's Church. He was a life-long farmer, and owned a tract of thirty-three acres in Greenwich township, upon which he made his home until 1899, when he bought the Jacob Merkel farm in Maxatawny township, to which he moved. He m. (first) Hannah Hummel, daughter of Benjamin Hummel, who died aged about sixty years. No children were born of this union. He m. (second) Judith A. Hummel, daughter of Solomon Hummel, of Greenwich township, born Aug. 9, 1853. Three children were born of this union, namely: Daniel S.; Miss Lillie L., an invalid; and Judith A. M., m. to Ambrose Stettler, a farmer on the old George homestead in Greenwich township, by whom she has children—Alvin C., Samuel O., Franklin D. and Verna M.

(VI) Daniel S. George, son of Daniel W., was born in Greenwich township, Oct. 29, 1879, and was early trained to agricultural pursuits to which he has devoted his life. He worked for his father until the latter's death in 1904, and in December of that year came into possession of the Jacob D. Merkel farm in the eastern part of Maxatawny township. His farm is well stocked, and he has fifteen head of cattle, and six horses. His milk is all sold at the Rothrocksville creamery. His fraternal connection is with the Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Smithville, in which he has held various offices. He is a member of the Reformed Church, while his wife is a Lutheran. On April 4, 1905, Mr. George was married to Jennie Klotz, daughter of Samuel and Lucy Ann (Fritch) Klotz, of Topton, and they have had two children: Daniel Edgar; and Helen Agnes, who died aged six months and seven days.

(V) Benjamin George, son of Jacob, was born in 1835 in Greenwich township, and as a young man learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for about fifteen years. He then engaged in farming in Greenwich township, and there died Feb. 20, 1903. He was a Democrat in politics, and in religion a member of the New Jerusalem Church of Greenwich township. He married Catharine Rothermel who survives and still resides in Greenwich township. Their children were: Lovina died young; Samuel; William died young; Elias is of Reading; Emanuel is deceased; Benjamin lives in Reading; Elizabeth died young; Emma m. Alvin Adams; Mary A. m. Alvin J. Kline; and Katie L. m. John Adams.

(VI) SAMUEL GEORGE, son of Benjamin, and now now one of the well known contractors and brick layers in Reading, was born in Greenwich township, Sept. 2, 1864. He attended the schools of his native township, until he was seventeen, and from that time until he attained his majority he engaged in farm work. He then went to learn the trade of brick layer, which he followed two years in Greenwich, finishing his apprenticeship in Allentown. He came to Reading in 1894, here working as a journeyman for one year, and in 1895 he engaged in business with Charles Schlenker, a partnership which was most successfully and pleasantly continued until Mr. Schlenker's death in 1901. In 1904 Mr. George formed a partnership with James H. Ramer, under the firm name of Ramer & George, and they have erected a large number of buildings in the northeastern part of the city. Mr. George is a good business man and excellent workman, and has an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity. Mr. George married Lovina M. Leiby, daughter of Jacob U. and Annie (Miller) Leiby, who died March 14, 1900, and was buried at Dunkel's church, Greenwich township. One daughter was born of this union, Miss Annie E. In politics Mr. George is a Democrat, although now not an active worker in political affairs. He belongs to the Maccabees, in which he is justly popular. He is an active member of St. Thomas's church (Reformed), Reading, in which he has held the offices of deacon, elder, treasurer and trustee, acting in the last named capacity at the present time.

(IV) Charles George, son of Heinrich Jacob, engaged in farming all his life in Maxatawny township. In 1887 he retired from active work and located in Kutztown, where his death occurred. His wife, Sarah Adams, survived him until 1895, when she passed away at the age of seventy-six years. Their four children were: Henry, of Bath, Pa.; Charles; Mary Ann, m. to W. A. Walbert, of Maxatawny township; and Rev. Jonathan V., D. D.

(V) REV. JONATHAN V. GEORGE, D. D., son of Charles and Sarah, was born in Maxatawny township, May 23, 1860, and is now conducting the Reading Collegiate Institute, an excellent preparatory school. He secured his preliminary education in the common schools of his native locality, and after graduating from the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, he took a special course in Franklin and Marshall College. He graduated from the Theological Seminary in 1890, and pursued a special post-graduate course, receiving the degree of B. D. From Harriman University (Tennessee) he received the degrees of S. T. D. and D. D. He also took a special course at the Northern Illinois College, graduating with the degree of Ph. D., and was ordained in June, 1890. He served at Reamstown, Pa., for nine months, and was then elected to the Allegheny charge in Berks county, which he is still serving, the charge consisting of five congregations. Since 1903 he has been conducting the Reading Collegiate Institute, formerly the Scientific College conducted by the Hon. D. B. Brunner, an institution preparing both young men and young women for college and for teaching. Under his management the school has been very successful, and has come to be considered one of the best of its kind in the State. Dr. George was married to Sarah L. Sitler, of Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, and one child has been born to them, Jennie Belle, a teacher in the public schools of Reading. Dr. George is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Royal Arcanum. In political affiliation he is independent.

MISS ANNIE E. KEMP, of Reading, has, by her devotion to music, her thorough comprehension and high appreciation of the art, done much for the elevation of those about her to a higher artistic plane. As an instructress she has few peers, inspiring as she does in her pupils a true love and clear conception of the ennobling influences of perfect musical development. Those who have entered her studio seeking an education in music merely as an accomplishment tending toward social success have gone out from it better men and women who in the harmony of outward sounds have found the higher, deeper music of the soul.

Miss Kemp was born in Hamburg, Pa., daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Geyer) Kemp. Joseph Kemp was a highly educated man and taught school for a number of years, winning a high reputation as an instructor. He died in 1875, at the age of forty-seven. Seven children were born to him and his wife, but two of whom, however, lived to maturity. These are: Elwood L., clergyman and educator, who attended the schools of Berks county, and then after an advanced course of instruction under private teachers, became a student in Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, from which he was graduated in 1881, and after a theological course was ordained a minister of the Reformed Church in the United States. He was professor of Ancient Languages from 1881 to 1886; of Psychology and Pedagogy from 1886 to 1888 at the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He was president of Wichita (Kans.) University, 1888 to 1891; president of Palatinate College, Myerstown, Pa., 1891 to 1893; vice principal, 1893 to 1902, and principal, 1902 to the present time, of East Stroudsburg State Normal School. He is principal of the faculty of Pocono Pines Chautauqua Assembly, Pa. He is the author of "Idyl of the War," and other poems published in 1882; "History of Education," published in 1902. In 1903 he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Science by Franklin and Marshall College. The other child attaining mature years is Miss Annie E.

Miss Kemp was educated in the schools of Hamburg. From her earliest childhood she evinced a love for music that gave no doubt as to her ultimate calling. She was a student of the Sternburg School of Music, and also studied under Prof. Baltzell, Mrs. Moulton and Miss Virgil, of New York. She opened her first school in Reading in 1891, and it was then known as the Kindergarten School of Music, her natural love for the little folks having early given her remarkable success in their instruction. Her own ability was so pronounced that it was not long before she was induced to accept older pupils, and the wedge once entered, she has numbered many who have elsewhere had the advantages of a higher musical education. While she uses the Virgil method of instruction in hand shaping and time beating, she has evolved from her own experience a simple method of teaching, particularly beneficial to beginners. This method is so simplified that children of no more than four years have been easily taught. Miss Kemp's pupils have, many of them, come from the best homes in Reading, and she has developed some wonderful talent. As is but natural in one so gifted with the divine art, she is a woman of much refinement. She has considerable literary ability, frequently contributing to musical publications, and was during its existence a contributor to the Woman's Club Bulletin, acting as editor of the Department of Music. Miss Kemp is working on and will soon have ready for the publisher a series of graded studies which will be of interest and great educational value to young students. Miss Kemp is also very fond of painting and if it were not for the demands made by her music would be justified in devoting some time to the development of her talent in this art. She was a special pupil for two years at the School of Design, in Philadelphia, under a pupil of Carolus Duran, studying both oil and water colors.

Hartman Leitheiser, Miss Kemp's maternal great-grandfather, enlisted at Reading, in the year 1775, under Capt. Nagle, and marched to Boston, where his company was attached to Col. Hand's regiment. He continued in service one year, enlisting again, in the year 1776, in the Flying Camp for six months, under Capt. Fricker, in Col. Klotz's regiment, after which he was appointed an ensign in Capt. J. Bowers Company, 6th Pennsylvania Regiment, under Col. McGaw. This company was commanded by Lieut. Baker, and was continued in service during the Revolutionary war. In 1792 Mr. Leitheiser again entered the service of his country, and was appointed an ensign in the sub-legion; in 1794 he was appointed a lieutenant, and in 1800 a captain, during which time he served under General Anthony Wayne against the Indians.

WILLIAM C. MATTHIAS, a mechanical and electrical engineer of Reading, and superintendent of the Fire Alarm and Police Telegraph System of that city, was born there June 18, 1871, son of David and Elizabeth (Whitman) Matthias, and he has passed practically all of his life in his home town. He obtained his education in the public schools and the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, after leaving the latter learning the machinist's trade with Davies, Printz & Co. After completing his apprenticeship he was employed at the Diamond Drill Works at Birdsboro, and later was with the Reading Hardware Company. In 1900 he entered the City Engineer's office, where he remained three years, and then he became second assistant city clerk, holding that position three years. This he resigned to accept the post of mechanical and electrical engineer at the city's Sewage Disposal Plant. While there he designed and patented numerous devices for the treatment and disposal of sewage, which are used extensively in Reading and elsewhere. This position he resigned to accept that of superintendent of the City Fire Alarm and Police Telegraph System, to which he had been appointed April 1, 1908. Since accepting this office he has practically rebuilt the system, introducing a number of improved methods. The city is now equipped with two sets of wires and double sets of alarm boxes, thereby affording the people cheaper, better and quicker service from both the fire and police departments.

LUDWIG. The Ludwig family of Berks county was founded in America by Daniel and Michael Ludwig, brothers, who landed at Philadelphia Sept. 18, 1733, having come from Rotterdam on the ship "Pennsylvania Merchant," Capt. John Stedman. Their father's name was Michael, and besides him they left in Germany one sister and four brothers, Emmanuel, Philip, Jacob and Abraham. Both the brothers settled in Berks county, Daniel about a mile southwest of Sinking Spring and Michael in Amity township.

Jacob Ludwig, son of Daniel, one of the brothers who emigrated to America, was born Feb. 22, 1761, and died Jan. 26, 1813. He was the first of the family to own the old Ludwig homestead in what is now Spring township, having moved thither from Oley township, and the property was continuously in the possession of members of the family from the time he acquired it, in 1794, until its sale in 1902. In 1814 Jacob Ludwig built the barn which is still standing on the place, and the present dwelling was erected in 1902 by the estate of Charles S. Ludwig, under the supervision of the latter's son, Philip D. Ludwig. In 1902 the homestead place was sold by the estate of Charles S. Ludwig to the Montello Brick Company at $115 an acre. Some years before Charles S. Ludwig had himself disposed of twenty acres to the same concern at the unusual price of $350 an acre. When approached by representatives of the company and requested to name his figure for twenty acres of the property he set a good price, as he did not care to sell, and looking out of the window he remarked that he would take $350 an acre. The offer was accepted at once, the company having been prepared to pay $500 an acre if necessary. During Jacob Ludwig's time this land was included in Cumru township. Jacob Ludwig married Ellenora Sadler, who was born Feb. 26, 1761. Both were buried at Sinking Spring.

Philip Ludwig, sixth child of Jacob and Ellenora, was born July 9, 1793, on the homestead, where he spent his entire life engaged in farming. He married Katie Suter, who was born July 15, 1793, and to them were born the following children: Richard, born March 18, 1821, married Esther Keim; John, born Feb. 12, 1823, died young; Frank, born Jan. 24, 1826, married Rebecca Moyer; Catherine, born June 6, 1828, died in March, 1898; Mary Ann, born in 1828, died in 1898; and Charles S., born in 1830, died in 1898.

Charles S. Ludwig was born Sept. 24, 1830, on the Ludwig homestead in Spring township, where he was reared, and which in time came into his possession. There he spent his entire life, engaged successfully in farming, his death occurring Dec. 11, 1898. He was a lifelong Democrat in political matters, and he and his family attended Sinking Spring Reformed Church, of which he was a member at the time of his death. In 1853 Mr. Ludwig was married to Ellen Ruth, born April 14, 1833, daughter of John and Elenora (Schaeffer) Ruth. Mrs. Ludwig died Nov. 18, 1886, the mother of eleven children, namely: Catherine R., born June 9, 1855, died in infancy; Frank, born Aug. 13, 1856, died in childhood; James M., born Nov. 25, 1858, is mentioned below; Mary R., born Feb. 16, 1860, married C. E. Diefenderfer, of No. 1321 Spruce street, Reading; Ellen R. was born April 25, 1861; Annie Laura was born July 23, 1863; John, born Feb. 17, 1866, married Kate Texter and lives on the homestead farm; Sallie, born Aug. 30, 1869, married Harry Lambert; Emma, born June 22, 1871, married Howard Hain; Philip D., born Feb. 28, 1873, is mentioned below; Charles R., born Nov. 13, 1879, is mentioned below.

JAMES M. LUDWIG, a successful hatter of Reading, was born Nov. 25, 1858, in Spring township, and until twenty-five years old lived on the farm. He received his education in the township schools, which he left at the age of nineteen years. In 1883 he engaged in the lime business in Spring township, burning 12,000 bushels during that year, and he spent the following three years in the brick manufacturing business, in which he was also quite successful. He then learned the hatter's trade at Montello with John Hendel, with whom he remained until 1900. Mr. Ludwig is a substantial business man and a public-spirited citizen. In politics he is a stanch Democrat, never having missed voting at an election since he attained his majority.

On Sept. 15, 1882, Mr. Ludwig was married to Annie Matz, daughter of David and Mary (Ulrich) Matz, farming people of Spring township. To this union have come four children: Walter J., born Sept. 23, 1883, who is a clerk in the Farmers Bank, Reading; Paul, born May 19, 1886, who died Dec. 10, 1887; Mary Mabel, born July 31, 1889; and Earl F., born March 14, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig are members of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring. He purchased his present residence, at No. 237 South Twelfth street, Reading, in 1902.

PHILIP D. LUDWIG, farmer of Spring township, was born there Feb. 28, 1873, on the old Jacob Ludwig homestead near Montello. He received his education in the local district schools, which he attended during thirteen winter terms. He learned the trade of house painting from D. A. Zechman, of Sinking Spring, and followed that business for four years, but he was principally engaged in working for his father until the latter's death, in 1898. From the spring of 1898 until the spring of 1908 he farmed the old family homestead, doing his work in the most approved modern fashion, with up-to-date implements and intelligent methods, the effect of which was clearly shown in the fine condition of things about his place. He kept especially fine live stock, including five horses and four mules, but in the spring of 1908 sold his farm stock at public sale. He is now engaged in painting, at Sinking Spring. Mr. Ludwig is an energetic and enterprising young man, has traveled to some extent, keeps well read on current affairs, and is wide awake to all the responsibilities of practical good citizenship. Like most of his family he is a Democrat in political opinion and active in the ranks of the party. He served four successive years as committeeman of his district, being succeeded in that position by his brother Charles. Socially he belongs to Washington Camp No. 282, P. O. S. of A., of Sinking Spring, and to Sinking Spring Lodge, No. 660, I. O. O. F., and he is a zealous member of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring, which he has served as deacon.

CHARLES R. LUDWIG, who has been a popular school teacher in Spring township for a number of years, was born on the old Ludwig homestead in that township, near Montello, Nov. 13, 1879. He was brought up to farming and continued to follow that work, for his parents, until he was eighteen years old, since which time he has devoted himself to his profession. His early education was gained in the public schools of his native township and was supplemented by a course in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He was first licensed to teach in the spring of 1897, by County Superintendent E. M. Rapp, and in the fall of that year commenced to teach. He has only missed two terms since. His first charge was the Marshall school in his native district, and since 1904 he has been teaching the intermediate school at Sinking Spring. Mr. Ludwig has the respect of his pupils and the confidence of the community, which he has won by conscientious and successful work, and he is held in high esteem wherever known. He has been active in local affairs, particularly as a devoted worker in the ranks of the Democratic party, which he has supported ever since he became of age. He is at present township committeeman, having served as such since 1903, and was a delegate to the State convention held at Harrisburg in June, 1905, which nominated Hon. William H. Berry for State treasurer; he was the first Democrat to hold that office in about forty years. Mr. Ludwig is a member of various fraternal orders, belonging to Lexington Lodge, No. 155, K. of P., of Sinking Spring; Sinking Spring Lodge, No. 660, I. O. O. F.; and to Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf, Pennsylvania.

On April 13, 1904, Mr. Ludwig was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Ruth, daughter of Michael and Sarah (Hertz) Ruth, of Fritztown, this county, and to them have been born two children, Stanley and Charles M. Mr. Ludwig and his family belong to St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring, where the Ludwigs have worshipped and been buried since its organization, in 1794.

SILAS R. ROTHERMEL has been practising law in Reading since 1894. He was born Feb. 26, 1867, in Richmond township, Berks county, and comes from a line of agriculturists who have been identified with the development of Berks county since the advent of the original ancestor, in 1737. His grandfather, David Rothermel, passed his life as a farmer in Richmond township, where his son Lewis, the father of Silas, has also followed the same occupation, and where he now resides.

Lewis Rothermel married Lydia Rothermel, a cousin. It is a fact somewhat noteworthy that among Mr. Rothermel's ancestors, both paternal and maternal, cousins have intermarried for nine generations. To Lewis and Lydia Rothermel were born seven children, one of whom, Annie, died when six years old. Those who survive are: Amos C., principal of the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa.; Samuel P., a farmer of Bern township; Lydia, a school teacher; Emily, at home; Lewis, a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, class of 1907; Irene, wife of Frank Rothermel, a Berks county rural mail agent; and Silas R.

Silas R. Rothermel was born at the old homestead in Richmond township, and received his primary education in the excellent district school of his home community, after which he attended the Keystone State Normal, at Kutztown, graduating in 1886. He taught school one term, and then began reading law in the office of Rothermel Brothers at Reading, was admitted in 1894 to the Berks county Bar, and later to practice before the higher courts. Mr. Rothermel has a lucrative clientele and honorable standing in his profession. He is a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Rothermel married in 1892 Miss Amelia Kistler, daughter of Jacob Kistler, of Albany township, Berks county. To this marriage was born one daughter, Florence, now attending the public school.

FUNK. The Funk family have a complete history and genealogy of the family, published in 1899 by the Rev. A. J. Fretz of Milton, N. J. Their history is one of progress and is an honor to the state in which they settled.

(I) Bishop Henry Funk emigrated from Holland in 1719, and settled at Indian Creek, Montgomery county, Pa., where he died in 1760. His wife was Anna.

(II) Christian Funk was the son of Bishop Henry Funk, and father of John.

(III) John Funk, son of Christian, was the father of John.

(IV) John, son of John, and father of David W., was a Montgomery county man.

(V) David W. Funk, son of John, and father of Dr. John H. Funk, was a native of Montgomery county, where he was engaged in farming, and where he was successful. The Funk family has been identified with Montgomery county for so many years that members of it are connected with almost every other family there. The family name has been given to various points of interest and its representatives have held important offices not only locally but in the state government. David W. married Elizabeth Highley and they had two children: Martha who married Peter Houck and now resides on the Funk homestead near Norristown; Dr. John H.

(VI) DR. JOHN H. FUNK, State Pomologist, located at Boyertown, was born in Montgomery county, Lower Providence township, March 7, 1844. He was educated in the common schools, later in the Freeland seminary, now Ursinus college, and in the Spring of 1865 was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania with the degree of M. D. He then practiced for a short time in Boyertown, when he embarked in the drug business, starting the first drug store in Boyertown, and this he conducted in conjunction with his practice.

Later he extended his operations and became a merchant, although all this time he possessed a love for horticulture, and every spare moment was spent in studying the science of fruit growing. In time he has become an authority on this subject. In 1878 he started in the orchard business, and in 1896-7 set out extensive orchards northwest of the city limits. In the spring of 1902 he planted a peach orchard of six acres, containing 1053 trees, and within two and one-half years the yield was one basket to each tree. One year more and the orchard yielded 3200 baskets which were worth about $4,000 on the market. His orchards are recognized as the finest in the entire state. Dr. Funk has made many very valuable discoveries. His trees bear without reference to good or off years. Experiments have taught him that in order to get best results for the state it is best to get varieties from southern latitudes. An Arkansas variety, for instance, grown in Pennsylvania will give a good winter apple that will keep. On account of his intimate knowledge of horticulture, the state of Pennsylvania secured him to write Bulletin No. 152, entitled "Fruits of Pennsylvania," in October, 1907. The first edition of 15,000 was exhausted before the expiration of one year. The work is standard, and his is a national reputation, so all interested in the subject were anxious to secure a copy. Some idea of the immense amount of work its preparation entailed can be gathered from the fact that it contains 342 pages. Dr. Funk is one of the principal lecturers at Farmers' Institutes conducted under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. Dr. Funk's experience extends over a period of thirty-five years. The state recognizes him as the authority on fruit, and his entire life is wrapped up in the matter. He travels all over the state on his lecturing tours, and he also lectures in Maryland and Delaware. He was appointed state pomologist by Gov. Samuel W. Pennepacker, and through this office he is made a member of the state board of agriculture. Dr. Funk has also traveled in thirty-one of the states and is a cultured, polished man, and a delightful talker, whose lectures are a treat.

The present home of Dr. Funk has been his residence since the year 1861. He first studied medicine under Dr. John Todd in the house he now owns. Dr. Funk served his town as chief burgess, councilman, school director for many years. He also was active in church work, and was a member of all the church councils, serving on the building committee, as chairman, of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd, built in 1874 in Boyertown. In addition to his home, Dr. Funk owns a tract of land, eighty acres principally within the borough limits of Boyertown, and the rest is in Colebrookdale township.

In the fall of 1864 Dr. Funk was married to Valeria Stauffer, daughter of Jacob K. Stauffer of Boyertown, and their children are: Walter and Irene. Of these, Walter S. is a trucker and owns a greenhouse in Boyertown. His wife is Helena Weiser Funk, and their children are: Sheldon, Hildegard and Cathlene. Irene married Dr. Charles E. Moyer, formerly a druggist of Boyertown. They had children: Gwendeline, Leon T., Ena B. and Roydon F. Dr. Moyer and his seventeen year old daughter Gwendeline perished in the Boyertown fire, Jan. 13, 1908. His widow now carries on the drug business.

As a member of the most honored of all the professions, as a private citizen and as a learned savant, Dr. Funk has fulfilled every demand made upon him, and has made the lives about him better and broader for his acquaintance. In his present study he is working unselfishly. Many of the important discoveries he is constantly making, he will not live to enjoy. He is working for those who will come after him, and leaving for his children the best heritage that could be theirs,—an honored name, linked forever with some of the most wonderful discoveries of the age.

PETER H. KNABB, poor director of Berks county and a very well-known teacher, is engaged in farming in Oley township, where he was born Nov. 15, 1867, a member of an old and numerous family of Berks county.

The Knabb family was planted in Berks county by three brothers, Michael, John and Peter Knabb, who were born in Pfeldersheim, in Pfalz, Bavaria (which formerly belonged to France, but was restored to Bavaria in 1813). They emigrated to this country about 1737, and so far as is known, are the only members of the family to have emigrated from the eastern to the western hemisphere. Michael (born April 17, 1717) settled in Oley township, on the farm now occupied by Samuel B. Knabb, near the Exeter line. The old house was destroyed by fire in the winter of 1816-1817, and the present house was erected the following summer. A family graveyard near the dwelling contains the remains of the three brothers and a number of their descendants. John died unmarried in the forty-eighth year of his age; Peter died in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and most of his descendants live in Berks county; Michael, who married Eva Magdalena Seltzer, died June 17, 1778.

Peter Knabb, son of Peter, the emigrant, and great-grandfather of Peter H., was a farmer in Oley township, and built his home in 1806. He was a member of Spies's Church. The records show he must have been prominent in public affairs, and he was a county commissioner from 1819 to 1822. He married Sarah Herbein, and their children were: William; Nathan, of Oley township, whose children were—Susan, Rebecca, Jacob, Emma (Beidler) and Amanda; and Sarah, who married Daniel Zacharias, of Muhlenberg township.

William Knabb, son of Peter, was a farmer in Oley township, and on his fine home farm there he erected a substantial barn in 1866. He was a large landowner, owning four fine farms and the mill property now owned by John Bieber, consisting of five hundred acres at the time of his death. He was one of the substantial men of his township, and was very prominent in the affairs of the county. From 1849 to 1852 he served as poor director, and from 1855 to 1858 as county commissioner. He died in 1867, aged sixty-six years and was buried in the Knabb family plot at Spies's Church. He was the founder of the Spies's Church Cemetery Company, and was its first president, being succeeded by his son, Mahlon, who in turn was succeeded by his son, Peter H. He married Margaret Knauss, and they became the parents of eight children: Mary Ann, who married Samuel Rhodes, of Amity township; Hannah, who married Jacob D. Hertzog, of Exeter township; Charles, who is prominent in business and politics in Hiawatha, Kansas; Albert, of Reading; Mahlon; Emeline, who married Jacob Schaeffer, of Exeter township; Harriet, who married John Ritter, of Exeter township; and Augustus, of Reading.

Mahlon Knabb, son of William, and a life-long farmer of Oley, was born May 27, 1841, and he died Dec. 20, 1902, aged sixty-one years, six months, twenty-three days, and is buried at Spies's Church. He was the owner of a large farm of 184 acres of the best land in Oley Valley, one of the original Knabb homesteads. The house was built in 1806 by Peter Knabb. The old part of the house is of log, and was built long before the American Revolution. The present barn was built in 1855. In politics, Mr. Knabb was a Democrat, and he served his fellow citizens very efficiently as auditor and as school director in Oley. He married Sarah Hartman, daughter of Peter and Esther (Schmeck) Hartman, of Alsace township. Mrs. Knabb still lives on the homestead. She has the old family Bible, and is also the owner of Peter Knabb's clock. To Mahlon and Sarah Knabb were born children as follows: Margaret, wife of John D. Bieber, Oley; William, a farmer of Exeter township; Peter H.; Mahlon H., of Oley township; Sallie, who married Edward Steckel, of South Bethlehem, Pa.; Lucetta, who married A. H. Snyder, of Oley township; Edward H., of Exeter township; Warren, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Ellen, who married Robert Angstadt, of Blandon, Pa.; and Miss Clara, who resides with her mother.

Peter H. Knabb, son of Mahlon, was reared to farming, and he obtained his intellectual training at home and in the public schools of Oley, Oley Academy and the Keystone State Normal School. When but fifteen years of age he began teaching in Pike township, and in 1884 was at Lobachsville, same township. Since then he has taught each term in his home township, eight terms at Wiest's school, seventeen at Kiefer's. He was licensed to teach by Prof. D. S. Keck, and was awarded a professional certificate in 1889 by him, and in 1890 he passed the examination of the State Board, obtaining a permanent certificate. He is one of the most successful instructors in the county and is keenly alive to the needs of the public schools.

He is active in the work of the annual teachers' institutes, and is tireless in his efforts to benefit the schools.

Fraternally, Mr. Knabb is a member of Washington Camp No. 221, P. O. S. of A., at Oley Line; Griesemersville Lodge, No. 1109, I. O. O. F.; and the K. G. E., No. 119, at Oley. He and his family are members of Spies's Reformed Church, and he is, as stated before, president of the Cemetery Company. Mr. Knabb is a Democrat, and has long been active in his work for the welfare of his chosen party. Since 1892 he has been tax assessor of Oley township. For several years he served the township as committeeman; and in the fall of 1906 was elected poor director of the county, and is now filling that responsible office. He has been delegate to many county conventions, and in many ways attested his interest in public affairs. He resides on a farm of ten acres in Oley, on the road leading from Friedensburg to Yellow House.

On Aug. 15, 1891, Mr. Knabb was married to Amanda Hartman, daughter of Jeremiah and Rebecca (Reiff) Hartman, of Oley township, and their children are: Minnie, Sarah, Verna, Gertie, Edna, Alfred Peter, Olivia, Carrie and Beulah.

JAMES M. MILLER, general superintendent of the Reading Paper Mills, including the Tulpehocken, Reading and Packerack Paper Mills, one of the important manufacturing plants in Reading, is one of the progressive men of the city. He was born near Robesonia, Berks county, Sept. 20, 1859, son of Daniel S. and Henrietta (Heck) Miller, and grandson of Mathias Miller.

Mathias Miller was the owner of a fine farm in North Heidelberg township, and there made his home. He ranked among the best of the advanced agriculturists to whose energy and ability so much of the better development of Berks county is due. He married Sarah Stump, and they became the parents of a large family of children.

Daniel S. Miller, son of Mathias, was born on the old homestead in North Heidelberg township, and for some time after reaching mature age devoted himself to farming, but later moved to Reading. His wife was Henrietta Heck, and to their marriage was born one son, James M.

James M. Miller was but a child when he accompanied his parents to Reading, and there in the public schools he obtained his education. When he was fifteen years of age he was apprenticed to learn the machinist's trade at the Tulpehocken Mill at Reading, and from that time to the present he has been continuously identified with the paper mills of the city, with the exception of six years, during which time he conducted a machine shop of his own, at first in partnership with a Mr. Schmehl and later with a Mr. Zacharias. He had thoroughly learned his trade, and he rose rapidly from the lowest to the highest position, giving faithful service wherever placed. He was made superintendent of the Packerack Mill July 1, 1893. Here he but repeated his former success, so fully demonstrating his ability in an executive as well as in a mechanical capacity that on Jan. 1, 1895, he was promoted to the position of general superintendent of the Reading Paper Mills, including the Tulpehocken, Reading and Packerack Paper Mills. His administration has proved to be of very great material benefit to the company and the city. These mills transact an immense amount of business, and Mr. Miller has a force of 160 men to direct, all skilled laborers. He has been able not alone to get the best results possible from their work, but at the same time he has won their unbounded esteem and good will, his kindness and consideration toward every one carrying with it the natural reward of general respect. He is a man of high principles, whose word in the business world carries great weight, and he is well read and informed on the questions of the day.

On Nov. 3, 1881, Mr. Miller was married to Miss Eva Hiester, daughter of John and Sarah (Gerhart) Hiester, and eight children were born to this marriage, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: Arthur, Julia, Stella, Robert, Harvey, Mabel and Beatrice. Mrs. Miller died in 1900 at the age of forty-one years, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Miller married (second) Aline E. Mathey, daughter of Frederick Mathey, a native of Switzerland, who came to America and settled in Reading. The family attend the German Reformed Church. Mr. Miller has attained the thirty-second degree in Masonry. He belongs to Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237; Reading Commandery, No. 42; Philadelphia Consistory; Lodge of Perfection, 14°, Reading (charter member); and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

JACOB S. PEIPHER, the proprietor of the Reading Scale and Machine Works, is a man of wide reputation in his line in Reading and that vicinity. In a section where large manufacturing concerns are so numerous a machine and repairing establishment of proved reliability is of the highest importance, the field being a profitable one and the business a valuable accommodation to the local factories. Mr. Peipher has been engaged as a machinist practically all his life. He was born in Reading Dec. 4, 1852, son of Jacob and Susan (Kissinger) Peipher, who had a family of six children, four of whom lived to maturity, namely: Mary A., wife of George Market; Jacob S.; Rosie, who was killed at Reading, on the Gravity Railroad; and Adam, a barber, who is also deceased. The father was identified with the lumber trade, having been manager of Fasig's lumber yard, in Reading. He died in February, 1861, and the mother is still living. Mr. Peipher was a member of the Reformed Church.

Jacob S. Peipher received a grammar school education in Reading, and after leaving school, began work in the humble capacity of tow-boy on the canal. Later he sold Philadelphia and New York papers, and he also drove a horse and cart for some time, during the Civil war. Then, at the age of sixteen, he commenced to learn the machinist's trade, which he completed when twenty years old, after which he worked as a journeyman at the Reading Foundry and for Mellert & Company. Since leaving their employ he has been in business for himself. His first location was on Spruce street, whence he moved to Court street, and later for a time was at Cherry and Carpenter streets. In 1889 the business in which he is now interested was founded, Mr. Peipher and three other men associating under the name of the Reading Scale and Machine Company, Limited. At present Mr. Peipher is the sole owner. He does an extensive business in the iron foundry and machine shops, manufacturing scales, engines, shafts, pulleys, hangers, plumbers' supplies, boilers, tanks, stacks, and similar products, and turning out castings of every description. In addition to manufacturing, he maintains a completely equipped repair department, and he also carries a line of belting, pumps and governors. Seventy hands are employed at the plant, which is located at the northwest corner of Front and Chestnut streets, in Reading. An excellent trade has been built up in the various lines named, the firm having high standing throughout this section of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Peipher married Sarah Fritz, daughter of Michael Fritz, and they have had three children, Mamie, Edwin and William. Mr. Peipher is a Mason in fraternal connection, belonging to Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, and he is a member of the Junior Fire Company of Reading.

DAVID GROSS died in Reading May 14, 1891. For many years he was extensively engaged in the lumber business.

Mr. Gross, who was a native of Berks county, was educated in the schools of his native locality, and in early life learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed for many years, some of the structures erected by him still standing in Reading and the vicinity. Later he accepted a position at the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and it was while in this company's employ that he received an injury which caused his retirement from active work, although later he engaged in the lumber business. He was an upright citizen, and had many friends. He was a Republican in politics, but later became independent, choosing the right to vote for the man he thought best suited to the office.

Mr. Gross married Christiana Rolland, daughter of George and Catherine (Arnold) Rolland. She died July 15, 1909, aged eighty-three years, six months and twenty days. She is buried in Aulenbach cemetery. To them were born these children: Rosie E., Albert, Emma, William, James, Clara, Kate, David L., and Harry.

WARREN F. LINDERMAN, a leading business man of Reading, Pa., engaged as a commission merchant and dealer in fish, oysters, fruit, truck, etc., at No. 105 North Fifth street, was born June 11, 1871, at Baumstown, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Richard M. and Deborah (Francis) Linderman. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Linderman, namely: Morgan; Annie and Warren F.

Herman Y. Linderman, grandfather of Warren F., was born at Mt. Airy, Berks county, and for forty years was a justice of the peace of Exeter township. He owned a small farm at Baumstown. He and his wife are buried at Douglassville. Mr. Linderman married Margaret Jones, and they had two sons and five daughters: Richard Morgan, who lived and died at Baumstown; Franklin J., of Baumstown; Ellen m. Charles Ludwig; Sallie m. Mahlon Schantz; Amelia m. Joseph Esterly; Clara m. John Walters; and Ida m. John Y. Jones.

Warren F. Linderman received his educational training in the public schools of Amity township, and when a young man engaged in work in the mills at Pottstown, where he remained four years, coming to Reading in 1892, being employed by the Reading Iron Company for three years. At the end of this time Mr. Linderman engaged in his present business with the well known firm of Shade & Esterly, being with this firm for eight years, and the next four years with H. A. Esterly. On Dec. 4, 1905, Mr. Linderman engaged in business on his own account at No. 105 North Fifth street. Mr. Linderman is doing a large business, his honest, straightforward methods, as well as his pleasing personality, having won him much custom, and three wagons are required to deliver his goods.

Mr. Linderman married Annie R. Schraer, daughter of late John and Elizabeth Schraer, of Hamburg, Berks county, and two children have been born to this union, namely: Dorothy N., and Richard H. Mr. Linderman is fraternally associated with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., with Emblematic Lodge, Order of Odd Fellows, the P. O. S. of A., the Order of Red Men, No. 122, the Board of Trade and United Commercial Travelers of America. He and his family are members of the St. Luke Lutheran Church of Reading.

OLIVER P. GRIMLEY, the popular cashier of the Kutztown National Bank and one of the organizers of that well-known institution, was born April 2, 1846, in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of Jeremiah and Mary Ann (Moyer) Grimley, and grandson of Frederick Grimley.

Frederick Grimley, who was an agriculturist of Salford, Montgomery county, was the father of these children: William, Jeremiah, Amos, Mary, Mrs. Trout, Mrs. Hallman, Jesse and Albert.

Jeremiah Grimley was born and reared in Upper Salford, Montgomery county, and after the completion of his education engaged in teaching, which he followed for many years, first in New Hanover and later in Upper Hanover. Later in life he settled upon a farm in Frederick township, where he died in 1858, ripe in years, being respected by all who knew him for his many sterling qualities. He was a member of the Reformed Church and an active worker therein and deacon for many years. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary Ann Moyer, a daughter of Jacob Moyer of Upper Hanover township. To this union there were born: Oliver P.; and J. M., an extensive dealer in carpets, wood and willow ware of Allentown, Pa. Jeremiah Grimley's second marriage was to Mrs. Ziegler, who bore the maiden name of Louisa Jacobs. One daughter was born to the second union, Clara A., a telegrapher of Philadelphia.

Oliver P. Grimley was reared on his father's farm and his early education was obtained in the local schools of his native township. Later he attended Freeland Seminary, Ursinus College and the Pierce Business College at Philadelphia, graduating from the latter institution in 1869. He began teaching in the public schools of Montgomery county in his early manhood and continued to serve for eleven terms. He then entered the service of the Perkiomen Railway Company as freight agent at Schwenkville and afterward became the station agent at Palm station. He remained in the employ of the company until 1883 when he removed to Boyertown to fill the position of teller of the National Bank of Boyertown and he continued there for fourteen years. In 1897 Mr. Grimley, with certain capitalists at Kutztown and vicinity, organized the Kutztown National Bank, with a capital of $50,000, and he was selected as the cashier. From the beginning the operations of the bank showed evidence of superior management and by the year 1904 it appeared on the roll of honor of the national banks of the United States. Its surplus was earned, not paid in, as is done in many cases; and the bank's success is attributable in a large degree to Mr. Grimley's ability as a financier.

In 1872 Mr. Grimley was married to Sevilla Shaner, daughter of Isaac Shaner, a farmer of Frederick township, Montgomery county. They have two sons: Isaac C., teller of the Kutztown National Bank till 1902, and now assistant cashier of that institution, is greatly interested in collecting historical autographs, and is an antiquarian of some distinction; and Oliver Raymond is head book-keeper of the Keystone Shoe Manufacturing Company at Kutztown. Mr. Grimley is identified with the Free Masons, the Odd Fellows, and the Knights of Pythias; in politics he is a Democrat.

GEORGE A. HULL, who has won a wide reputation in civil engineering circles, is now carrying on his business under the name of the Reading Engineering Construction Co., with offices in the Baer Building, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hull's grandfather, Aaron, was a farmer. I. W. Hull our subject's father is superintendent of factories of the Reading Hardware Co., and he and his wife, who was Julia Britton, of Reading, had a family of eight children: Frank, Ellen and Walter, who died in infancy; Richard, who died when a young man; John, a foreman in a machine shop of Reading; Florence, at home; Ida, the wife of H. H. Kleine, a druggist of Reading; and George A., our subject.

George A. Hull was born March 8, 1880, in Reading. He was educated in the public schools and also received private tuition, and after completing his education went to Philadelphia and engaged in railroad construction with a civil engineering corps for one year. He then spent some time in municipal work for the city of Reading, after which he engaged in business on his own account. Since 1909 he has been located in the Baer Building, doing business under the style of the Reading Engineering Construction Co., and has engaged largely in work all over the Eastern and Northeastern States.

Religiously Mr. Hull belongs to Calvary Reformed Church. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a member of the Germania Maennerchor.

DR. JOHN R. WAGNER, practising physician at Hamburg since 1884, was born in that borough Aug. 7, 1861, and received his education in the local schools, and at the Keystone State Normal School, after which he took a regular course at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in New York City, from which he was graduated in 1884. He then located at Hamburg and has practised his profession in a successful manner until the present time, his patronage extending into the surrounding country for ten miles. He served as a school director for two terms, acting as president of the board for two years; and for one term he officiated as chief burgess. He assisted in organizing the gas works in 1904, and has since served as treasurer of the company. He is also an active member of the board of trade.

In 1882 Dr. Wagner was married to Helen Mengel, daughter of William and Sarah (Seaman) Mengel, and they have one daughter, Mame.

Jesse Wagner, father of the Doctor, was born in Newmanstown, Lebanon county, in 1821, and learned the trade of butcher. He located at Bern in Berks county, where he carried on trade for several years, and then removing to Hamburg, followed the business successfully for nearly forty years. He died in 1905. He married Rebecca Renno, daughter of Jacob and Hannah S. (Balthaser) Renno, and by her had seven children: Willia, Elias, Jacob, Franklin, John R., Caroline (who married Joel Bear) and Mary (who married Charles Tobias).

John Wagner, father of Jesse and the grandfather of the Doctor, was born and brought up in Upper Bern township, Berks county. After reaching his majority he moved to Newmanstown, Lebanon county, where he carried on the butchering business. He married Polly Shillig, and by her he had six sons, Jesse, Valentine, John S., and three who died young.

John Wagner, the great-grandfather, was born and brought up in the western section of Berks county. He settled in Upper Bern township (now Tilden) in the vicinity of Bern station, on the P. & R., where he carried on the butchering business in a very successful manner, during the construction of the Schuylkill Valley Canal. He was married and had three children: John, Valentine and Maria, who married Joseph Machemer.

George Wagner, the great-great-grandfather, emigrated from Germany about 1750 and settled in the western section of Berks county, where he engaged in farming.

WALTER S. YOUNG is a member of a family which has been closely identified with the professional and manufacturing interests of this section for several generations. He himself is a member of the Bar of Berks county, as was his father, Samuel L. Young. Grandfather Daniel Young was an ironmaster of Rockland and Oley townships during his life-time, and was a prominent man, having been associate judge for years. He also served a term as prothonotary of the county.

Samuel L. Young was an active member of the Bar for a period covering fifty-four years. He was appointed United States commissioner by President Pierce, an office which he administered until his death, in June, 1901, at the age of seventy-nine years. He married Annie E. Teed, a daughter of Major John Teed, of Reading, who was prominent in the war of the Rebellion, and was for years connected with the postal service of the city. He died in 1877. Of the six children born to Samuel L. Young and his wife, all are living, as follows: Catherine L., at home, a graduate of the high school; Mary E.; William J., a lawyer; Thomas, of McKeesport, Pa.; Annie T., wife of Prof. Carl Moter, a teacher of instrumental music, of Reading; and Walter S.

Walter S. Young was born July 13, 1870, at Reading, where he was educated in the public schools, graduating from the high school in the class of 1887. He entered first on a business career, acting for several years as bookkeeper, during which time he studied law with his father. His admission certificate is dated November, 1894, since which time he has been in active practice. Meantime he has been admitted to the Superior, Supreme and United States District Courts. Mr. Young has for the most part contented himself with private practice, but he was solicitor to the Reading school board for a period, and he was also city solicitor for one term. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church.

HENRY CLAY SEIDEL, president of the Philadelphia Black Lead Crucible Works, and one of the prominent iron men of southeastern Pennsylvania, with which industry he has been identified since leaving school, was born Aug. 14, 1850, in Gibraltar, then Seideltown, son of Reuben B. and Maria Louisa (Yundt) Seidel.

The forerunners of this large and distinguished Berks county family were three brothers, emigrants from Sweden prior to the War of the Revolution, one of whom, the great-great-grandfather of Henry C. Seidel, became a large owner of land in Longswamp township, Berks county. This he sold later to purchase a tract near Stony Creek, just above the Stony Creek Mills, in Exeter township, where he erected an iron forge, subsequently becoming one of the pioneer ironmasters of Berks county. He had three sons: Benjamin, Philip and Nicholas, the first named of whom became associated with his father in the forge at Stony Creek, and the latter two removed to where the village of Gibraltar is located. Nicholas afterward built what are now known as the Yocum forges in Cumru township, which he operated for some years, and then sold, removing to Reading, where the remainder of his life was spent in retirement. Philip Seidel, the great-grandfather of Henry C., remained in Seideltown, where he owned a large property, on which he carried on agricultural operations.

Jonathan Seidel, the grandfather of Henry C., was one of the pioneer ironmasters of Robeson township. During his early days he engaged in a tanning business at Pine Grove, Schuylkill county, and later removed to Seideltown, building the Seidel forges, which he operated until his death. He married Susan Barr, by whom he had these children: John B., deceased, who was a member of the State Legislature, and who was interested in the iron forges at Marysville, Perry county; Henry B., who was an ironmaster of Lebanon county, and for a number of years a part proprietor of the Seidel-Hastings Company Rolling Mills, of Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. John Bechtel, deceased; Reuben B.; and Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, a resident of Reading.

Reuben B. Seidel was born in Pine Grove, Schuylkill Co., Pa., Oct. 21, 1821, and after attaining his majority removed to Seideltown with his father, with whom he became associated in the iron business. At the time of his father's death, he fell heir to the business, which he conducted until 1865, when he sold his forges. In 1866, with Henry Wile, of Reading, he started a black lead crucible and fire brick works, at 1324-1334 Callowhill street, Philadelphia, and they carried on the business for a short time. Soon Mr. Seidel became sole owner and, discontinuing the making of fire brick, devoted his entire attention to the making of black lead crucibles. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, of Robeson township. He died in 1892, on his seventy-first birthday.

Reuben B. Seidel was married to Maria Louisa Yundt, daughter of Henry Yundt, a cattle dealer of Blue Ball, Lancaster county, and to this union there were born children as follows: Henry Clay; Robert D., a manufacturer of coal buckets for mine use; Edgar B., also a manufacturer of crucibles at Tacony, Pa.; Maria Louise; Mary B., deceased; Susan B., who married Charles T. Evans, of Tacony; Sallie D., twin of Susan B.; Heber L., an employe of the Philadelphia Black Lead Crucible Works; Dora G.; Horace Y., also connected with the Philadelphia Black Lead Crucible Works; and Roberta C., who resides at home.

Henry Clay Seidel received his preliminary education in the public schools, and later attended Lititz Academy, and William F. Wyer's Military Academy at West Chester, Pa., from which latter institution he was graduated in 1869. Aug. 1, 1870, when but twenty years of age, Mr. Seidel began operating the Exeter Steam Forge, which he was compelled to operate under his father's name, as he was not of age. This business, which was organized by Hennon and Son, had not, up to that time, proved a success, but Mr. Seidel took up the business to save his own money, he having been a heavy investor in the enterprise. He immediately caused improved machinery to be installed in the plant, including a much heavier hammer, and since that time the business has grown steadily and prospered accordingly. The plant operates continuously, employing twenty hands, and furnishing iron products to the Baldwin Locomotive Works and the Reading Railroad Company. At the time of his father's death, the Philadelphia Black Lead Crucible Works was taken in charge by R. B. Seidel's estate, which appointed Henry Clay Seidel manager of the business, and in 1895 it was organized and incorporated, with Mr. Seidel as president. This business, which manufactures a superior article of crucibles, employs forty-five men, and has been a success since its incorporation.

In April, 1878, Mr. Seidel was married to Josephine C. Seltzer, the estimable daughter of the late Dr. John H. Seltzer, of Philadelphia, and two children were born to this union: Blanche Irene, who married Harry W. Spear, of Philadelphia; and Walter F., who died in infancy.

Mr. Seidel is a member of Reading Council, Royal Arcanum. In politics he is an active Republican, for many years was township chairman for the Republican party, and has also held the office of township auditor.

ALBERT F. MOGEL, who filled the office of sheriff of Berks county in 1902-03-04, is one of the foremost business men of Leesport, Pa., his success being commensurate with his popularity. He has long been a recognized leader of the Democratic party in northwestern Berks, having entered the political field when he reached his majority and been identified with the interests of that party since. Mr. Mogel was born Nov. 5, 1864, on the old Mogel homestead in Centre township, Berks county, son of David W. and Elizabeth (Fryberger) Mogel.

Valentine Mogel, who came to America in 1751, from the Rhine river provinces in the western part of the German Empire, settled on the Mogel homestead in that year, and this property has descended through four generations of the family. In 1790 it became the property of the ancestor's son, also named Valentine, and after the latter's death in 1831 it went to his son, Henry. He died in 1867, whereupon one of Henry's sons, David, became the owner.

Albert F. Mogel attended the common schools of Centre township, and in 1881 went west, working on a farm near Bloomington, Ill. He soon returned home, however, and at the age of seventeen years began teaching Kauffman's school in Centre township, and later the Bagenstose school for three years. In 1884 he attended the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Ind., and on his return in 1887 was appointed deputy county treasurer by his father, a position in which he served three years. In 1891 he engaged in the general merchandise business at Dauberville, Berks county, for four years, and in 1895 moved to Leesport, where he purchased from Samuel Sunday the store and residence now owned by him, forming a partnership with his brother-in-law, James W. Rahn, under the firm name of Mogel and Rahn. Mr. Rahn died July 17, 1903, whereupon Mr. Mogel bought his interest in the business, and since has carried on the industry alone. In 1894 Mr. Mogel was appointed chief clerk for the Berks county commissioners, Henry Stoyer, John Wunch and Jeremiah Hartman being the board of commissioners.

From his youth, Mr. Mogel has been an untiring worker for his party. He was elected a delegate from Centre township to the Democratic county convention at the age of twenty-one years, and afterward served five years as a member of the Democratic county standing committee, serving as its secretary for the last year. He was three times a Democratic State delegate, and alternate to the Democratic State convention at Chicago, which nominated William Jennings Bryan for President. He stumped the county for Governor Pattison and William J. Bryan, and became well and favorably known. In 1891 he was elected a delegate to the proposed Constitutional convention, proposed by the State Legislature, which was defeated by the popular vote. In 1898 he received second highest vote in the Democratic county convention for the office of sheriff, and in 1901 was nominated and elected to that office for three years, serving with credit. On Sept. 23, 1902, he had to perform the unpleasant duty of executing George Ganz. At the close of his term he devoted all his time to his store interests, and now is also engaged in farming to some extent, owning a small tract near Leesport.

On April 19, 1887, Mr. Mogel married Alice Henrietta Rahn, daughter of William Rahn, deceased, and to this union came two children: Emma Valeria and Adam Cleveland, the latter of whom died Dec. 11, 1890, aged two years, two months, seven days. Emma Valeria Mogel married Prof. Howard C. Snyder, teacher of the Ontelaunee township high school, Sept. 29, 1906.

Mr. Mogel united with the Reformed Church in 1880, and is a prominent worker thereof. He belongs to a large number of secret societies, being a member of Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of Hamburg; Reading Lodge of Perfection and the Philadelphia Consistory; and of W. C. No. 165, P. O. S. of A., of Leesport. This camp he represented at ten State camp sessions, and was four times elected by the State camp a national delegate, also serving as district president of the 2nd district of Berks. He organized Leesport Castle, No. 503, K. G. E., with 162 charter members, and has been its representative the past ten years, being elected grand second guardsman in 1901. He is also a member of Meade Camp, Sons of Veterans, of Ontelaunee; Council No. 985, O. of I. A., of Oley; Lodge No. 218, I. O. O. F., of Leesport; Camp No. 9284, M. W. of A.; and the D. of L., No. 182. He is energetic and industrious, has large business interests, and his standing in the community is deservedly high.

ISAAC McHOSE, a well-known citizen and retired business man of Reading, Pa., residing at Fifth and Walnut streets, who was for many years a generous supporter of public institutions and the prime mover in various business enterprises, has been a resident of this city since 1852. Mr. McHose was born Dec. 6, 1822, in Hanover, Lehigh county, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Lohrbach) McHose and grandson of Isaac McHose, the latter a native of Scotland who came to America at an early date and settled in Northampton county, Pa.

Isaac McHose, father of Isaac of Reading, was a contractor and builder in Northampton county for many years, and was a lieutenant in the war of 1812. In later years he removed to Rittersville, Lehigh county, and there died in the faith of the Reformed Church. Politically he was a Democrat. Mr. McHose was married to Elizabeth Lohrbach, a native of Northampton county, and to them were born ten children, of whom Isaac is the only one now living.

Isaac McHose attended the subscription schools of his native locality, and with his father learned the trade of brick-layer, and when seventeen years old helped to build the first anthracite furnace at Catasauqua in 1839. Working with his father at different places he soon learned how to build furnaces and made this his business. For thirty years he was engaged in building blast furnaces in Reading, Robesonia, Topton, Millerstown, Temple and other places in Eastern Pennsylvania, putting the furnaces into successful blast before turning them over to their owners, and finally became interested himself in the manufacture of iron. In company with Mr. Clymer he carried on an extensive iron business at Temple Furnace, which Mr. McHose built, known as the McHose, Clymer & Co., for eight years.

Mr. McHose developed the Reading Fire Brick works from a struggling plant to a flourishing business, and for a number of years was president of the Keystone National Bank. He was a member of the select council, the Reading school board and the water board. He was one of the three citizens who secured the site now occupied by the Reading Hospital and was one of the organizers of this institution, as well as of the Homeopathic Hospital, of which he was the first president. He helped to secure the location of the Reading silk mill here, was one of the organizers of the Reading Steam Heat Co. and was its first president and subsequently became its superintendent, was the first president of the Reading Library Co., and with two other citizens bought the Odd Fellows' Hall, Fifth and Franklin streets, in which to locate the library. He helped to organize the Y. M. C. A. and was its first president. As president of the Board of Trade and through his friendship with President Roberts of the Pennsylvania Railroad, he was instrumental in securing the erection of the substantial iron bridge spanning the railroad and the river at the foot of Penn street. It was his suggestion that the city, the county and the railroad company each pay one-third of the cost of the structure. He continued in the iron business until 1890 when he retired.

On Aug. 16, 1862, Mr. McHose was made a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and he is now connected with Reading Commandery, Excelsior Chapter, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. Formerly he was a member of the I. O. O. F. He was one of the presidential electors when James G. Blaine was a candidate for the presidency in 1885, was at one time the Republican candidate for the nomination for State Treasurer and about twenty years ago was the party's nominee for Congress. He has long been a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church, served in its consistory and presented to the congregation the fine pipe organ which cost $5,500. He was for many years a trustee of Bethany Orphans' Home of Womelsdorf. Mr. McHose is looking well for a man of his age, is in excellent health and spirits and is thoroughly enjoying life. He has always taken good care of himself and observed regular hours, to which he attributes his general good health.

Mr. McHose was married to Letitia Wieder, a native of Emaus, and to them have been born four children: Susan, m. to Jerome L. Boyer; Ambrose, of Philadelphia; Wilson, engaged in the manufacture of fire brick in Reading; and Isaac, a clerk in the offices of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company.

JESSE HILTEBEITEL (deceased), who was for many years a prominent business man of Reading, Pa., engaged in dealing in cattle and stock, was born in 1822, in Montgomery county, Pa., and received his education in the schools of his native place.

As a young man Mr. Hiltebeitel engaged in farming, and for a time was the proprietor of a hotel at Salfordville, Montgomery county, and came to Reading about 1860. Here he engaged as a cattle drover, an occupation he followed the rest of his life. He was known to be a very clever business man, but was honest and upright in all of his dealings, and in many ways was kind and generous. He was a member of the Reformed Church, was very active in the work of that denomination, and was liberal in its support. His word was said to have been as good as his bond. He was a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Hiltebeitel was married (first) to Sophia Shade, who died leaving no children. He married (second), in 1874, Elizabeth Brossman, daughter of John and Hannah (Renninger) Brossman, and one child, Mahlon, was born to this union, who by his marriage with Ada Russell has had three children—Jesse, Paul and Robert. Mrs. Hiltebeitel is a member of the Lutheran Church.

John Brossman was born in Lancaster county, and followed farming all of his life, dying in 1886, aged eighty-two years, while his wife was two years older at the time of her death. They had three children: William, who married Sallie Frankhouser, and had five children—John, William, Daniel, Hannah and Susan; Elizabeth; and Rudolph, who married Elizabeth Beck.

GEORGE K. MOORE, of Boyertown, president of the borough council and otherwise prominently identified with the life of that place, has resided there since 1893. He is a native of Montgomery county, Pa., born Feb. 9, 1866, in Frederick township, where his father and grandfather before him lived and died.

George Moore, the grandfather, was a farmer in Frederick township, and died upon his farm there in the early sixties. He was a well-to-do man, owning a tract of over two hundred acres, and he was a well-known and influential citizen in his time. He is buried at Keeler's Church, though there is an interesting old cemetery on the homestead. It is 100 feet square, and covers the four adjoining corners of the Koons, Moore, Leidy and Stetler farms; there are 150 tombstones on this plot, which contains the remains of many ancestors of the families mentioned. Mr. Moore married Barbara Shetler, a member of a well-known family of Reading, Pa., and the East Penn district, and to them was born a family of six children, namely: George F. is mentioned farther on; John S. lived at Limerick, Pa., where he conducted the "Limerick Centre Hotel" for many years; Anna married Daniel Hiltebeidel, of Montgomery county, Pa. (Hendricks post-office); Maria married George Grubb, of near Braunback's Church, in Chester county, Pa.; Sallie married Jesse Willeauer, of Schwenkville, Pa.; and Eliza married Levi Grater, of Frederick, Pennsylvania.

George F. Moore, eldest son of George Moore, born in Frederick township Nov. 25, 1821, on the homestead of his father, passed all his life there, and died Jan. 10, 1908, at the age of eighty-six years, one month, fifteen days. He died in the house in which he was born. He was a Reformed member of Keeler's Church, in Montgomery county, and served it officially in his earlier life; he is buried there. He followed farming, owning about eighty acres of land. Mr. Moore married Leah Kohl, who was born in 1829, daughter of Daniel, whose wife was a Miss Bergey, and she survives her husband, still residing on the old homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Moore had four children: Daniel K., now deceased, was a resident of Frederick township; Barbara died in infancy; Henry K. lives at Green Lane, Pa.; George K. lives in Boyertown.

George K. Moore grew to manhood on the parental farm, and he continued to work for his parents until he attained his majority, though after he was sixteen he also clerked in the store at Gilbertsville, Montgomery county, being employed thus until he was twenty-two years old. In 1888 he engaged in the huckstering business, buying produce and poultry, which he sold at the Philadelphia markets, both wholesale and retail, going to market once or twice a week. He followed this line of business for some years, finally selling out because of failing health. During this time he had his home in Gilbertsville, whence he removed to Boyertown in the spring of 1893. From 1893 to 1898 he was employed at the "Mansion House" bar, and in the spring of 1898 embarked in the wholesale liquor business on his own account, on Reading avenue. He has since carried on this business, which he has built up from small beginnings to its present proportions, and in the interests of which he travels all over the county.

Mr. Moore has been very active in the public life of the borough of Boyertown for a number of years. He was first elected to the town council in 1902, and has served continuously since, having been re-elected the third time in the spring of 1908; since 1904 he has been president of that body, and under his progressive regime some of the most desirable improvements in the borough have been promoted and carried to successful issue. During this period the borough has granted franchises for right-of-way to the Oley Valley and Boyertown & Pottstown Traction Companies; the borough has bought its own water-works; the gas plant has been erected, and other notable changes have taken place. When the great theatre calamity of Jan. 13, 1908, occurred, Mr. Moore proved himself equal to the exigencies of the occasion, and did noble work in bringing about order and directing relief work. He is alert to every need of his city and active in promoting its best interests. He is a Democrat in political connection.

In March 1888, Mr. Moore was married to Ellen Stauffer, daughter of Andrew and Amelia (Fegley) Stauffer, of Gilbertsville, and they have had three children, Agnes, Anna and Henrietta. Mr. and Mrs. Moore and their family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown, and he is a member of Popodickon Tribe, No. 388, Improved Order of Red Men.

H. T. JOHNSON, president and general manager of the Reading Quarry Company, is widely known in business circles of Berks county. He was born in 1871, near Norristown, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of William and Sarah (Leisinger) Johnson.

Mr. Johnson's early educational training was secured in the public schools of Norristown, and this was supplemented by a course at Tremont Seminary, after leaving which institution he learned the trade of painter. Later he engaged in quarrying in Chester county, where he remained for six years. He then returned to Montgomery county, where he continued in the same business, and in 1902 came to Reading, and operated a stone quarry and lime kilns. In 1906 Mr. Johnson established the Reading Quarry Company, which now operates seven kilns, two of which are patent kilns; quarries furnace, flux, crushed material, and building stone, and employs about forty men, being located between Temple and Tuckerton.

Mr. Johnson is a business man of much ability, and much of the success of the firm of which he is president and general manager may be attributed to his enterprise and skilled business methods. He is a popular member of Lodge No. 190, F. & A. M., Charity Chapter No. 190 and Knights Templar, and of the B. P. O. E. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and on the erection of that denomination's new structure, was a member of the building committee.

In 1897 Mr. Johnson was united in marriage with Miss Anna Schultz, also a native of Montgomery county, and to them there have been born three children: Ralph S., Arthur S., and one who died in infancy.

WILLIAM A. WALTER, who is well-known to the citizens of Wyomissing, Berks county, as a prominent architect and builder, was born in Reading, Pa., April 15, 1866, son of Col. William F. and Julia (Benner) Walter.

Adam Walter, grandfather of William A., was born in 1800, at Gettysburg, Adams Co., Pa., and there resided all his life, dying in 1840, and being buried in the Evergreen cemetery. He was a tailor by trade, and owned several properties in addition to his home. Adam Walter was a tall, well proportioned man. He was a leader in Democratic politics and a pillar in the Lutheran Church. He married Polly Rahn, of Leesport, and their children were: William F.; Matilda, m. to a Mr. Slathauer, of Gratiot, Wis.; Charles, of Biglerville, Pa.; Sophia, m. to Gabriel O. Hiester, of Reading; Jesse, a soldier who died on the way home from the Mexican war in 1848; James, of Gettysburg; Mary, m. to John B. Lease, of Gettysburg; and John, of Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

Col. William F. Walter, father of William A., was born March 18, 1821, at Gettysburg, Pa., where some years later he graduated from Gettysburg College. For three terms he taught school at Hiester's Mill, in Bern township, and in 1857 he located in Berks county, where he made his home until 1879. At this time he went to Gettysburg, but subsequently, in 1891, he located in Reading, and there died at his home, No. 231 North Third street, early in 1904, interment being made in Evergreen cemetery, Gettysburg. Col. Walter was a man of more than ordinary intelligence. He clerked for many years in law offices in Reading, where he was exceedingly popular, and in addition he held the position of store keeper for the Government. Col. William F. Walter married Julia Benner, daughter of Christian and Susan (Snyder) Benner, on whose land the battle of Gettysburg was begun. Nine children, all sons, were born to them, namely: Henry, who died aged six years; Oliver, unmarried and at home; Christian, who died when three years old; William A.; Simon, of East Berlin, Pa.; Edward, who died aged two years; Robert, unmarried and at home; John, of Reading; and Paul, of Wyomissing.

Col. William F. Walter won his title through a long military career in the service of the State and of the nation. When a young man he entered the militia in Adams county, and was appointed Aug. 3, 1842, by Gov. David R. Porter, captain of the 3d Company, 80th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, 2d Brigade, 5th Division, composed of the counties of York and Adams, until Aug. 3, 1849. He was commissioned June 28, 1854, by Gov. William Bigler, brigadier general of the 2d Brigade, 4th Division, Uniformed Militia of the County of Adams, State of Pennsylvania, his commission expiring the first Monday in June, 1859. He was elected captain of Independent Riflemen of the Uniformed Militia of Pa., 2d Brigade, 4th Division, counties of York and Adams, from June 19, 1858, to the third Monday in August, 1859. Gov. William F. Packer commissioned him brigadier general of the 2d Brigade, 4th Division, Uniformed Militia, counties of York and Adams, from June 6, 1859, to the first Monday of June, 1864. Gov. Andrew Curtin commissioned him captain of Company H, 104th Pa. V. I., to rank as such from Sept. 22, 1861, and this he was obliged to resign Nov. 3, 1862, on account of wounds received in knee and ankle at the battle of Fair Oaks, Va. Gov. Curtin again commissioned him captain, this time of Company A, 42d Pennsylvania Militia, June 3, 1863, and he was mustered out Aug. 11, 1863. Gov. Curtin commissioned him a third time, making him lieutenant colonel of the 205th Pa. V. I., Sept. 2, 1864. He was made brigadier general by brevet April 2, 1865, and was mustered out with his regiment June 2, 1865, receiving his honorable discharge at Alexandria, Va. Gov. John W. Geary appointed him captain of the First Reading Rifles, Uniformed Militia of Pennsylvania, 5th Division, composed of the counties of Berks, Lebanon and Dauphin, Feb. 23, 1869. He was made deputy marshal for the eastern district of the United States for Berks county, Pa., July 12, 1867. Col. Walter was a member of Corporal Skelly Post, No. 9, G. A. R., of Gettysburg.

William A. Walter was reared in Reading, where he attended the public schools, after leaving which he worked on a farm at Gettysburg, Adams county, for two years. When twenty years old, Mr. Walter learned the carpenter's trade at Gettysburg, and three years later went to Illinois, where he spent five years at that occupation. Mr. Walter came to Reading in 1894, and in 1904 became engaged exclusively in contracting, which he has followed with much success. He has erected twenty buildings in Wyomissing and Pottstown, most of these being dwellings, including some of the finest structures in those boroughs. He built two fine residences, one of brick and the other pebble dashed, at Pottstown; made the plans and superintended the building of the Tri-County Bank at Pottstown; erected two double houses for William M. Bunting, treasurer of the Security Company of Pottstown; made the plans and superintended the construction of two residences for Paul Russel, of Stowe, Pa.; one for Miss Jennie DeVinney, of Pottstown; the residence of Rudolph Keller, of the Pottstown Brewing Company; the Jacob S. Bahr residence; the Warwick Iron & Steel Company building; and the Searles Knitting Mills building, the latter a two-story brick structure, 40 x 150 feet. Mr. Walter erected the first house at Wyomissing in 1896, and was instrumental in the organization of the borough in 1907.

Mr. Walter married, Dec. 23, 1895, Annie E. Bowser, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Miller) Bowser, of East Berlin, Pa., and three children have been born to this union; Grace M., Esther M. and George J. In politics Mr. Walter is a Republican, and fraternally is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America. With his family he attends St. Matthew's Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM L. GEHRKE, a highly esteemed, retired citizen of the Twelfth ward, Reading, who lives in his own residence at No. 746 North Tenth street, was born Dec. 18, 1847, in Prussia, Germany, and is a member of a prominent and influential German family.

Christopher Gehrke, the father of William L., was born in Prussia, Aug. 11, 1812, and came to America in the spring of 1862, settling at Reading, where he was a successful contractor. He was also a railroad builder in Virginia and New York, and constructed furnaces in the former State and in Illinois. He died July 4, 1897, and is buried at the German Lutheran cemetery at Reading. His residence was at No. 240 Reed street. Mr. Gehrke married Anna Nimmer, who was born May 4, 1814, and died at the home of her son, William L., May, 1898, and to this union there were born three children: Loretta, who married Godfried Stoudt; Reinhold, a moulder of Reading; and William L. The Nimmers were prominent in the war history of Germany. In 1851, when the grandparents celebrated their Golden Wedding, the King and Queen of their province in Germany presented them with a Bible in which appeared a steel portrait of the sovereigns and their monograms. This Bible is now the treasured property of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Gehrke.

William L. Gehrke was educated under the German Lutheran Sectarian school laws, and in the spring of 1862 came to America with his parents, locating at Reading, which he learned the trade of molder at Mellert's foundry, working thus at different periods six years. He left Reading in 1868, and traveled all over the West and Southwest, being employed at different occupations, principally contracting, in which he has been very successful. He returned to Reading in 1871, and has made his home here ever since. In addition to his home on North Tenth street, Mr. Gehrke owns several other valuable properties in the city. He is an independent voter. In religious belief the family are members of St. John's German Lutheran Church.

In 1873, Mr. Gehrke was married to Philippine Francke, and to this union were born the following children: Reinhold; William, who died aged five years; Harry; Herbert W. S.; and May.

Herbert W. S. Gehrke was born at Reading, Nov. 3, 1880, and after graduating from the Reading high school with the class of 1899, he attended a course at the Reading Classical School. He has been connected with the Reading Trust Company since 1899, entering their employ as a clerk and now being head bookkeeper; and since December, 1904, he has been a registered law student in the offices of Isaac Hiester, Esq. Socially he is connected with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, and Reading Commandery, No. 42.

DR. JOHN A. BROBST, late of Bernville, one of the oldest practising physicians of Berks county, was born in that town, Oct. 26, 1835, and died Oct. 18, 1908. He was a representative of one of the oldest families in Berks county—a family that has borne an honorable record for upright living and sturdy independent citizenship.

The early home of the family was in Wurtemberg (some accounts say Lower Saxony), Germany, whence, in 1720, came (I) Philip Brobst to America. He settled in what is now Albany township, Berks county, Pa., and there followed his trade of potter in connection with farming, the latter of necessity engrossing most of his time. He was the father of three sons—Martin, Michael and Valentine—and three daughters, who married, respectively, N. Kutz, C. Hechler and J. Fetteroff. Michael and Martin each built for himself a mill in the same neighborhood. They were all devout believers in the Lutheran faith.

"In 1740 Parson Muhlenberg gave them a small tract of land on which the three brothers, with the assistance of some new settlers, built a church and school-house which is occupied from that day to this for the worship of God, by the name of 'Allimingle Church.'" Michael Brobst's wife was Elizabeth Albright.

(II) Valentine Brobst, son of Philip, remained at the old home, and like his brothers, engaged in farming and milling. Among his children were Valentine (2) and Martin, of whom the latter moved to Catawissa, Pa.

(III) Valentine Brobst (2), son of Valentine, was born in Albany township. For several years he was engaged in farming, and then went to Reading, where he became proprietor of a hotel. He was one of the largest land owners in the county, and possessed valuable coal land in Schuylkill and Northumberland counties, where many of the family still reside. He died in Reading, and was buried in the cemetery of Trinity Lutheran Church, of which church he was a member. The maiden name of his wife was Leavy. Their children were: Christian; Elizabeth (Ruppert); Mary (Stump); Catharine (Inghman); Margaret (Reitmeyer); Diana (Johnston); Sophia (Christian); and Magdalena (Grant).

(IV) Christian Brobst, only son of Valentine (2), was born Nov. 29, 1787, in Albany township, where he engaged in farming until 1814, when he went to Rehrersburg to enter the hotel business, becoming the proprietor of the "Brobst House." He died Dec. 14, 1828, and is buried in the Lutheran church-yard at Rehrersburg. His wife, whose maiden name was Kreider, bore him children as follows: Valentine, Michael, Henry, William, John and Eliza (who married Jacob Kurr, of Millersburg), all now deceased.

(V) Valentine Brobst, son of Christian, was born Jan. 31, 1809, and was given superior educational advantages, completing his studies in the Reading Academy, a leading school in eastern Pennsylvania, located at Seventh and Chestnut streets. It was while attending this school that he saw the first stage coach ever run between Philadelphia and Reading in one day. He was also in Reading when the first canal was built. In 1826 he went to Hamburg, and there served an apprenticeship at the hat maker's trade under Henry Fister, the leading hat manufacturer in Pennsylvania. Returning at the end of his term of service to Rehrersburg, he engaged in the manufacture of hats on his own account, employing a number of hands. He turned out the finest grade of fur, silk and finished fur hats, the material being conveyed by team from Philadelphia. Mr. Brobst managed the factory, and acted as his own salesman, selling extensively in Northumberland, Columbia, Schuylkill and Carbon counties, and he continued in this business for thirty-five years. In 1831 he took charge of the "Brobst House," and carried it on for twenty-five years. He was also postmaster twelve years, and justice of the peace twenty-five years—at one and the same time being hatter, traveling salesman, landlord, postmaster and justice of the peace. In politics he was a Democrat, and he cast his first vote for General Jackson. In 1832 he married Mary Miller, daughter of Peter Miller, of Hamburg, and she died June 9, 1895, after sixty-three years of happy wedded life. Their children were: Dr. Edward, of West Leesport, who died in 1908; Dr. John A. (deceased); Dr. James C., of Lititz; Sarah, who married Capt. John Bassler, of Myerstown, and died in California; and Mary, wife of J. Frank Buch, publisher of Lititz.

(VI) Dr. John A. Brobst (deceased), son of Valentine, attended the old pay schools and then spent four years in Gettysburg College, afterward entering Pennsylvania College at Philadelphia. He graduated from the latter institution in 1857, and at once located in Bernville for the practice of his profession. This marked the beginning of a successful career, and the Doctor's long life of usefulness to his fellow-men endeared him to the people. No night was too dark, too cold or too stormy for him to respond to a call, and rich or poor, the patient found him the same helpful physician and kindly cheery friend.

Dr. Brobst took a great interest in medical societies, belonging to the Berks County Medical Society and the Pennsylvania State Medical Society.

Dr. Brobst married Sabilla Beyerle, daughter of Dr. George and Anna Maria (Gerhart) Beyerle. To this union were born children as follows: Laura, who married John N. Harrison, a merchant at Sunbury, and has children—Edward, Raymond, Russell, Robert and Laura; Mary and Jennie, at home; and Dr. William B., of the State of Washington, who married Victoria Grenwill, and has three children—Russell, Robert and Edward.

JOSEPH LODER, who died May 12, 1908, was one of the best known hotel men of Berks county, and from Sept. 1, 1906, had been proprietor of the "Windsor Hotel," Sixth and Court streets, Reading. He was born March 10, 1846, in Bavaria, Germany.

On coming to America in 1867 Mr. Loder first located in Newark, N. J., where he lived for sixteen years, following his trade of stone cutting which he had learned in Germany. He later went to Atlantic City, where he was agent for the Berger & Engle Brewing Company, also conducting a bottling establishment, in which he was very successful. Removing in 1884 to Columbia, Pa., he founded the Loder and Katzenmeyer Brewing Company, which was a very successful business venture. Mr. Loder was compelled to sell out at a sacrifice, however, when the business was merged into the trust. In 1898 he came to Reading, to take charge of the "City Hotel," of which he made a great success, and in 1903 he sold out to its present proprietor, and retired to look after his other interests, having the Carrousel at Carsonia Park. This he sold in 1906, and purchased the building known as the Windsor Hotel and Café, which he conducted until his death, having one of the finest stands in the city, directly across from the County court house. He handled a first class line of domestic and imported liquors, making a specialty of Rhine and Moselle wines, which made a great reputation for Mr. Loder, or "Uncle Joe" as the patrons of the house familiarly called him, for he was a genial and courteous host, and very popular with all who knew him. Fraternally he was connected with Reading Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.; the B. P. O. E.; Harmonie Maennerchor; the Liederkranz and Turner societies; Artisans Association; and Father Newfield's Council. He was a stanch Republican in politics, and was a hard worker in the ranks of the party. He was a very popular candidate for sheriff in 1905, and in a strong Democratic county was defeated by only 251 votes. For two years he was interested in building, erecting seventeen houses in Reading.

In 1868 Mr. Loder was married to Rosalia Grossman, of Bavaria, Germany, and to this union were born eight children: Anthony, of Atlantic City; Eva, who married Henry A. Becker; Caroline, who married Frank Habberstroh; Joseph P., engaged as a machinist in the Philadelphia & Reading shops, who married Louisa Schemlagwick; Matilda, who married William Smith, of Reading; Rudolph, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Columbia, Pa.; William, a hotel clerk of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Charles, of the electrical department of the Philadelphia & Reading Company, Reading. Mr. Loder died May 12, 1908, and is buried at Columbia, Pa. His widow resides at No. 103 Windsor street, Reading.

W. W. WUNDER, a manufacturer of fire apparatus, of Reading, Pa., and proprietor of the only manufactory of its kind in the State of Pennsylvania, was born in Reading, Pa., Jan. 17, 1850, son of Louis and Susan (Setley) Wunder.

George Wunder, grandfather of W. W., was a supply agent in the war of 1812. He was the father of children as follows: Louis; William, a soldier in the Mexican war, who lost his life at Vera Cruz; Levi; Charles; Lovina, and Margaret. In religious belief the family were Lutherans.

Louis Wunder, father of W. W., was a tailor by trade, and followed that occupation until he was appointed assistant postmaster of Reading under President Franklin Pierce, receiving appointment as postmaster in President Buchanan's administration. In 1858 he was employed on the East Pennsylvania railroad as baggagemaster, was later conductor and finally ticket agent, at which latter he continued until his retirement. He served in the Mexican war as orderly sergeant of Company A, Reading Artillery, and in the Civil war as first lieutenant. His fraternal connections were with Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F. In religious belief he was a Lutheran. He married Susan Setley, and to them were born these children: Emily E., W. W., George C., Sally and Margaret.

W. W. Wunder secured his education in the schools of Reading, and as a boy worked in the sheet mills, and later for the Reading Iron Company, for a number of years. He learned the cigar maker's business at the old Maltzberger stand, which he later purchased, remaining there until 1882, when he engaged in his present business. His fire apparatus, which is considered the best made in the country, includes chemical engines and fire trucks. He organized the Pennsylvania State Firemen's Association, being elected secretary, a position which he has held for thirty years; is president of the Firemen's Relief, and has been a representative of Keystone Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, to the Firemen's Union for thirty-four years. He is a prominent member of the Keystone Hook and Ladder Company, and has always taken a great interest in the work of the organization. In February, 1898, Mr. Wunder was elected a councilman, of the select branch, and has been continuously re-elected since, his present term expiring in 1910. Mrs. Wunder is an Episcopalian, while her husband attends Trinity Lutheran Church, the brick for which his maternal grandfather furnished gratis. He is a Republican in politics.

In 1883 W. W. Wunder married Susan Adams, and to this union there has been born one daughter, Emily E.

WILLIAM BLAND, deceased, for many years a prominent citizen of Reading, was born Dec. 16, 1824, at Blandon, Pa. (a town named in honor of the family), a son of Robert and Polly Bland.

Robert Bland was at one time a large landowner in the vicinity of Blandon. By trade he was a blacksmith and was well and favorably known in all the surrounding country. His children were: Jane, widow of Samuel Fields, of Pittston, Pa.; Robert, of Reading; Rachel, died in Iowa; Mary, deceased, wife of John Noll; and William. Others died in infancy. In their earlier life, Mr. Bland's parents were Quakers, but later they united with the M. E. Church.

The late William Bland learned the blacksmith trade under the direction of his father and worked at the same for many years and then came to Reading and established himself in the mercantile line. He was first at Third and Franklin streets and later at Ninth and Penn, and carried on business there until within a few years of his death. He stood at the head of the city's reliable, honorable business men and when he died, in 1894, there were many outside the circle of his family and personal friends to regret that so useful and upright a life had closed.

William Bland was married (first) to Mary Dickinson, who died July 7, 1877, aged fifty-nine years. They had one child who died in infancy. His second union was to Esther (Goodhart) Bechtel, widow of James B. Bechtel, the latter of whom was once a very prominent attorney of Reading. Mrs. Bechtel had three children, namely: Walter G., deceased; William B., an attorney at Reading; and Howard L., who died in 1869, aged six years. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bland.

Quakers

O. W. Wunder

Politically he was a Republican. He was a leading member of St. Peter's M. E. Church and held a number of church offices.

HENRY C. G. REBER was born in Penn township, Berks county, Dec. 18, 1846, and departed this life in 1902.

The Reber family originated in Germany, and there in 1746 was born Thomas Reber. He was an industrious and painstaking man, and was highly respected. His death occurred in 1823. His children were: John, John Peter, Catharine, Magdalena, Valentine, Anna Maria, Anna Margaretha, Elizabeth, Susanna and Conrad.

Conrad Reber was born in Germany May 18, 1788, and was the first of the family to emigrate to America. He became a farmer in Berks county, Pa., where he died Sept. 27, 1854. He was a director of the Farmers' National Bank of Reading. He married Susanna Bright, who was born Feb. 14, 1789, and who died Oct. 5, 1847. Their children were: Thomas B., Mary Ann, Charles B., Bennwell B., John B., Daniel B., Anna, Levi B., Matilda and Henry.

John B. Reber, son of Conrad, was born Jan. 9, 1818, and died Feb. 2, 1894. He, also, was a director of the Farmers' National Bank of Reading. He was thrice married. By his first wife, Sarah Fisher, he had two children, Mary A. and Levi F. His second wife, Mary Gernant, also bore him two children, Henry C. G. and Sarah M., of whom the latter married Simon P. O'Reilly, and lives in Reading. Mr. Reber married for his third wife Montana Dunbar; no children were born to this union.

Henry C. G. Reber was primarily educated in the public schools of his native township. He was but twenty years of age when he graduated from Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, Pa., which institution subsequently conferred upon him the degree of A. M. He entered the office of Jeremiah Hagenman, who afterward became President Judge, and on April 12, 1869, he was admitted to the Berks county Bar. His rise in the profession was phenomenal, and in a few years he was admitted to practice in the Supreme court of Pennsylvania and the United States District court. Mr. Reber had a large practice in the Orphans' court, and was frequently called upon to settle estates. He was often appointed master in equity, and as such acquitted himself with great ability. In 1874 he was elected district attorney by a large majority, and as such served three years. It was during his term of office that the great riot of 1877 occurred—a riot arising from a strike of railroad employes, and had Mr. Reber done nothing else, his conduct at that trying time, his indictment of guilty parties without fear or favor, would have given him a record of which any man might be proud.

Outside of his legal practice Mr. Reber had a number of important interests. He was at one time a director in the Farmers' National Bank, and the solicitor of that institution. He was the owner of considerable real estate, and was interested in coal operations in Shenandoah. In his religious belief he was a Roman Catholic, being a member of St. Peter's Church.

Mr. Reber was married to Miss Mary C. Levan, who, with an adopted son, LeRoy L., survives. Mrs. Reber makes her home at the family residence on Eleventh street.

For several years before his death Mr. Reber had been in poor health, but it had been thought that he was on the fair road to recovery when the town was startled by the news of his death, and the general feeling was one of sorrow at the loss of a good man and a loyal friend. A special meeting of the Berks Bar Association was held in the main courtroom, and many who had known him spoke feelingly of his demise. Judges Ermentrout and Bland and several others eloquently testified to the loss to the profession and to themselves in the death of their personal friend—a lawyer of high ability, a man of unimpeachable integrity, a companion and friend genial and cheerful, who ever tried to scatter sunshine in the lives of those about him.

WILLIAM BINGAMAN, whose death occurred in Reading, Jan. 2, 1901, was known to the people of the city for many years as a proprietor of tonsorial parlors. He was born in 1822, at the corner of Eighth and Walnut streets, Reading, son of Peter and Mary (Oswalt) Bingaman. Peter Bingaman was a weaver by trade, and followed that occupation throughout his life. He had these children: Jacob, Peter, Charles, David, William, Catherine, Mary, Elizabeth and Margaret.

William Bingaman received his education in the public schools of Reading, and when a young man learned the barber trade which he followed throughout life. In 1842 he first engaged in business on Penn street, below Seventh and later on the South side. For a period of twenty years he conducted a place of business at No. 718 Penn street, where he became very well known. Failing health came on and Mr. Bingaman was forced to make a change of location, he therefore selecting Exeter township as his field. He purchased a small tract of land there, and after two and one-half years, his health having returned, he came again to Reading and opened a shop at No. 122 South Eighth street. Later he removed to 343 North Eighth street, where he continued until his retirement about twenty years prior to his death, at the age of seventy-nine years. Mr. Bingaman was buried at the Charles Evans cemetery.

On May 27, 1845, Mr. Bingaman was married to Rebecca Graul, born Dec. 7, 1823, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Ege) Graul. George Graul was a bricklayer by trade, and assisted in building the old freight depot of the P. & R. Co., which is still standing. Mr. and Mrs. Bingaman became the parents of these children: Emma, the wife of Harry Morris; Charles C., superintendent of the Steam Heat Co., of Allentown; Mary A., deceased; Elizabeth, a graduate of the Reading High School, class of 1871, and now a teacher at the Tenth and Washington streets public school; Thomas, who is engaged in the barber business on Court street, near Sixth, m. Martha Scull; Annie A., the wife of M. Luther Stroh, who is employed at the Scott works; and Katie R., who died at the age of seventeen years. Mrs. Bingaman still survives her husband and resides at the Eighth street home.

WILSON FERGUSON, treasurer of the Montello Brick Company, one of the leading industrial concerns of Reading, Pa., belongs to one of the prominent families of the state. His grandparents, John and Elizabeth Ferguson emigrated to the United States about the year 1800, from near Dublin, and located in Lancaster county, where they lived, and where they reared a family of twelve children.

Nathaniel Ferguson, the youngest son in the above family, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., Nov. 20, 1817. He left home when eighteen years of age with fifty cents in his pocket given him by his mother along with her blessings and well wishes for success. Having graduated from the Moscow Academy in Lancaster, where he had shown himself a diligent pupil, in 1839 he became clerk at the Elizabeth Furnace, in Lancaster county, then owned by the heirs of James Coleman, one of the proprietors of the Cornwall mines. Two and a half years later he rose to the management of the business, and he held that position for seven years. He then removed to Swatara Furnace, Schuylkill county, and became a member of the firm of Eckert, Gilbert & Company, of which he was the active manager. The partnership lasted until 1855 when the company ceased operations as the use of anthracite coal had superseded charcoal. In 1857 he removed to Robesonia Furnace and assumed the management. In 1860, at the death of Henry P. Robeson, he purchased an interest and became a partner in the firm of White, Ferguson & Company. In 1863 the firm became White & Ferguson, and remained so until 1875, although the interest of Mr. White, who died in 1868, was continued for the benefit of his heirs. Mr. Ferguson then purchased the interest of one of the heirs and the firm became Ferguson, White & Co. One of their furnaces being abandoned in 1874, after the enlargement of "No. 2" stack, the firm deemed it advisable to manufacture but one brand of pig-iron, "Robesonia," made exclusively of Cornwall ore. They worked under an ore-right used at the Robesonia (formerly the Reading) Furnace since 1793, which had been purchased from Peter Grubb, the original owner of the Cornwall ore banks. In 1885 Mr. Ferguson sold his interests in Robesonia, and, retiring from active business, removed to Reading, where he passed away in 1891. He was a prominent man in the city and served as a director of the First National Bank. As a man of self-reliance, sound education, untiring energy and great executive ability Mr. Ferguson became a successful manufacturer and clear-sighted business man with the respect and regard of all who knew him for his unswerving integrity, benevolence and liberality toward all. Patriotic and public spirited, generous and kind, he passed away after a life of great activity.

Nathaniel Ferguson married in 1856 Miss Amanda Davenport, daughter of Dr. John Davenport, of Connecticut, and granddaughter of Judge William Adams, a member of Congress in the early part of the nineteenth century. They became the parents of ten children, five of whom still survive: Elizabeth, the wife of Charles L. Hoff, of Reading; Laura, the wife of Rev. S. H. Larper, a Presbyterian minister of Media, Pa.; Nathaniel, vice-president of the First National Bank, of Reading; Wilson; and Grace, wife of O. S. Doolittle, of New York City.

Wilson Ferguson was born at Robesonia June 30, 1870, and received his early education in private schools, supplementing this with a course at Princeton University, from which he was graduated with the class of 1893. He then read law in the office of Stevens & Stevens, and was called to the Bar in 1896. Later he was admitted to practice in the Supreme Courts of the State. In 1904 he became connected with the Montello Brick Company, and in 1905 was elected treasurer, a position which he now holds.

Mr. Ferguson was married, in November, 1900, to Miss E. Shirley Brockmier, of Wheeling, W. Va., and two children have been born to this union, Charles B. and Elizabeth Brady. Mr. Ferguson belongs to the Wyomissing and the Berkshire Clubs, and is very popular in both. A Presbyterian in religious belief, he is a trustee of the First Presbyterian Church of Reading. In politics he is a Republican.

JOHN R. KAUCHER, of Reading, represents a family resident in that city for several generations, his father and grandfather before him having been, like himself, natives of the place. The grandfather John Kaucher was a hatter by trade and became later a manufacturer of silk hats. He left a family of six or eight children.

John Kaucher (2), born in 1796, youngest child of John, received his education in Reading and then took up his father's line of work, which he followed practically all his life. He married Miss Catherine Rose and a family of nine children were born to them as follows: Henry, deceased; Martin; John R.; Mary, who died unmarried; Catherine, Mrs. Frederick Cleveland; Angeline, who died unmarried; Hannah, Mrs. John Till; Sarah and Ellen, who both died unmarried. Mr. Kaucher was in politics at first a Whig, like his father, and then a Republican. In religious belief the family were of the Reformed faith. Mr. Kaucher lived to the age of sixty-six, dying in 1862, while his wife was born 1799 and passed away in 1869, aged seventy.

After completing his course in the public schools of Reading, John R. Kaucher entered upon his long and prosperous business career, beginning as a clerk. In 1853 he obtained a position in the discount and deposit department of the Bank of Pennsylvania and remained there until 1878, when he was appointed cashier of the First National Bank. His association with the latter institution continued till 1899, when he practically retired from active business life. Since then, refusing all positions of heavy responsibility he has confined his work to life and fire insurance and represents several of the best companies in the country.

Mr. Kaucher married Miss Susan Leedom, daughter of John and Louisa (Wright) Leedom, and six children have been born to them, John, Richard, Thaddeus G., Sarah, Harriet and Maud. Mr. Kaucher and his wife are connected with the Presbyterian Church. A man of broad and varied interests, Mr. Kaucher has been identified with many public enterprises in his city, has been director of the Reading Library since 1857 and for a long time was secretary of the board of directors of the Presbyterian Church. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F.

SAMUEL E. RIGG, deceased, who for many years was a faithful employee of the United Traction Company of Reading, at the time of his death holding the position of superintendent of that concern, was born March 24, 1850, in Churchtown, Lancaster county, Pa., son of Samuel and Catherine (Styer) Rigg.

Mr. Rigg received his education in the common schools of Lancaster county, and when a young man engaged in farm work, also carrying on agricultural pursuits on his own account. After his marriage, Mr. Rigg removed to the city of Reading, soon thereafter accepting the position of conductor with the United Traction Co., gradually working his way upward, from position to position, until finally appointed superintendent of the company's lines in Reading. He was in the employ of the company for twenty-eight years, and was an honest, faithful workman. He was a favorite with employers and employees, being kind and thoughtful with his men, never forgetting that at one time he had held a subordinate position. His death, which occurred Oct. 23, 1904, took from the company one of its valued servants, and was a blow not only to his immediate family and friends, but to the entire community.

In 1872 Mr. Rigg was married to Ellen Ammon, daughter of George Ammon, and she survives him and makes her home in Reading. He had always been a Democrat in his political views, but never aspired to public office. He was a valued member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Rigg was popular in fraternal circles, and a well-known member of the I. O. O. F.

RICHARD L. LAWRENCE, of Reading, is one of the most prominent citizens of that municipality, for as president of the common council of the city he impressed his individuality strongly upon that body.

John L. Lawrence, father of Richard L., was a native of Montreal, Canada, born in 1831, but passed practically all of his active business career in Reading. He was by trade a boiler maker but was much better known as a contractor, a business he followed for many years. During his latter years he went into the hotel business and was proprietor of the White House. At one period he was also employed in the department of justice of the city as policeman and detective. He was always active politically in the Democratic ranks, and was elected a member of both branches of council, serving as president of Select Council. The elder Mr. Lawrence died Feb. 3, 1905, aged seventy-three years, five months and eleven days. His wife, Mrs. Catherine (Kutz) Lawrence, born in 1838, still survives him. They were the parents of four children, viz.: Edward; Richard L.; John, deceased; and Minnie, who married Thomas F. Flemming, and has two children, Catherine and Edward. In religious faith the family is Catholic.

Richard L. Lawrence was born in Reading, Aug. 21, 1865, and was educated in the city schools. He took up his father's early trade of boilermaking, perfecting himself in it at the Union Boiler Works, and followed it eight years. After giving that occupation up he was for a time in the hotel business and then in 1888 signed a two-years contract to play baseball in Reading, a sport in which he had always been an adept. In 1890 he played on the York team but at the end of the season definitely abandoned the diamond and accepted a place on the Reading police force, under Thomas P. Merritt as mayor. This he resigned to engage once more in the hotel line and established himself first at the corner of Twelfth and Cotton streets, whence he later removed to Tenth and Muhlenberg streets. There he was successfully located for thirteen years, but in 1905, he sold out his property and invested instead in his father's interest in the White House Mountain Spring Company, which he manages.

The White House Mountain spring is a natural formation and its water is among the purest in the United States. It is especially adapted for liver and kidney troubles and is widely recommended by physicians. The water is carbonated and sold in all the leading hotels and cafes in Reading and the adjoining cities. There is also an extensive manufacture from it of carbonated drinks, such as sarsaparilla, ginger ale, etc., and the enterprise has proved very profitable under Mr. Lawrence's able management.

From the age of seventeen Mr. Lawrence has been a steady supporter of Democratic measures and a hard worker in the party ranks, one whose adherence to the principles has been of the highest type. His services have been recognized by election to Common Council, in which he has served continuously since 1898, and of which he was president from 1903 to 1908. Mr. Lawrence is of a social temperament, is very popular, and holds membership in a number of organizations, either protective or social. Of the former order are the F. O. E., the Foresters of America, and the A. O. H., while of the latter nature are the 19th Century Quakers, the Oley Valley Rod and Gun Club, the Harmonie Maennerchor, the Commercial Club and several others. For two years he has been president of the Washington Fire Company.

The marriage of Richard L. Lawrence to Miss Catherine Hasler occurred in 1888, and they have become the parents of two sons, John L. and Thomas R. The family belong to the Roman Catholic Church.

JOHN SHADLE (deceased). Among the prominent business men of Reading, Pa., was the late John Shadle, an extensive woolen manufacturer, whose death occurred March 19, 1900. Mr. Shadle was born March 9, 1827, near Bellefonte, Center Co., Pennsylvania.

In 1846, after having received his education in the public schools of his native county, Mr. Shadle enlisted for service in the Mexican war, and served throughout that struggle. Upon receiving his discharge he came to Reading and entered the Brumbach woolen mill, where he remained about fifteen years, then removing to White Deer, Union county. He remained there for about seven years and then returned to Berks county, engaging in the woolen business on his own account at Leesport, in company with Adleman & Levan, but later sold out his interests and located in Reading, engaging with William Bradford on South Sixth street, at the present site of Hendel's hat factory. After continuing there for some years, he spent some time at Morgantown and Cressona, and then returned to Reading and became superintendent and one-fourth owner with J. G. Leinbach in the woolen business. This was the nucleus of the present Leinbach woolen mill. The business was successful from the very start, Mr. Shadle being an expert in the line, knowing every detail of the business from the duties of a loom fixer to those of the finishing department, and not only could he manage the different departments with efficiency, but could weave the finest wool fabric. Mr. Shadle was the first to make a non-fading brown in Reading. The partnership, which was a very congenial one, continued until Mr. Shadle's death, March 19, 1900.

Mr. Shadle was married (first) to Mary Ann Houp, by whom he had four children, as follows: Edwina, who married John T. Drayer; Jennie, who married John Rapp; and Fannie and Irvin L., deceased. Mr. Shadle's second marriage was to Mary (Wahl) Bogle, widow of John Bogle, who met an accidental death in Reading in 1872. Mrs. Shadle had one son by her first marriage: William Bogle, who is married to Marie Eva Koch, daughter of J. Peter Koch and Catharine (Kuhlman).

Mr. Shadle died in the faith of the Lutheran Church, which his widow attends. In political matters he was a stanch Republican.

EFFENGER R. FICHTHORN, a box manufacturer and merchant of Reading, was born in 1840, son of William B., grandson of Daniel H. Fichthorn and member of a family long resident in Berks county. He died May 10, 1907.

Daniel H. Fichthorn was born in Berks county April 26, 1787. A hatter by trade, he did not confine his attention to that one line, but for a large part of the time he resided in Reading, was in the hotel business, while he also engaged there in mercantile operations. He died Feb. 13, 1869, aged eighty-one years, nine months, and was laid to rest in the Charles Evans cemetery. He married Miss Margaret Boyer, daughter of George Boyer, who was a well known hotel man in Reading. A large family was born to them, of whom only the last two are now living. They were: Frank B.; Reuben B.; Henry B.; Charles B.; William B.; Daniel B.; George B.; James and Joseph, who died young; one that died in infancy; Amos B., a carpenter residing in Reading; and Caroline B., of that same city.

William B. Fichthorn made tailoring his calling, and followed that occupation all his life. He was born in January, 1820, and died in Reading in 1847, leaving a widow, Mrs. Mary A. (Aulenbach) Fichthorn, and three children, Ellen (Mrs. Huber, of Philadelphia), Philip and Effenger R.

Effenger R. Fichthorn began his education in the public schools of Reading, but was nine years old when the family removed to Philadelphia, and the boy finished his studies there. While still in that city he learned the carpenter's trade and worked at it there for a time but in 1875 he returned to Reading and a year later established himself in the manufacture of cigar boxes. His factory located at 143-45-47-49 Pearl street, a three-story building, 60 x 75 feet, was formerly a row of dwelling houses. He built up a large business, not only local but also extending over the surrounding counties and States, and he employed twenty-five or thirty hands. Mr. Fichthorn was also the proprietor of a grocery store, located in a building which he erected in 1882 at Fourth and Buttonwood streets, where his residence also stood. In this venture also he met with marked success.

In 1897 Mr. Fichthorn was left a widower. His wife was a Miss Sallie A. Ubele of Norristown, and she became the mother of three children: One died in infancy, Blanche H. and William B. Mr. Fichthorn was a member of several social or fraternal organizations, including the Eagles (in which he was captain of the Mt. Penn Commandery, K. G. E.), the Red Men, and Reading Consultory, No. 3, Knights of Friendship, in which he was a past officer. During the Civil war Mr. Fichthorn offered his services to his country, enlisting in Philadelphia in 1863 in Company B., 20th Pennsylvania Militia, but in his three months' term he saw no active service, as he was kept on the Reserves.

William B. Fichthorn, only son of the above, was born in Philadelphia in 1872, but received his education in the schools of Reading. On reaching an age to go to work he began as a clerk for the Reading Iron Company but in 1893 entered his father's establishment and three years later was made superintendent of the factory. He is an able man and well qualified for his responsible position. He is married to Miss Alice Bush, daughter of Levi and Mary (Dehart) Bush of Reading, and they reside at No. 528 North Ninth street.

AMOS EMERY KEEPORT, one of the representative business men of Reading, Pa., in the line of jewelry and clock and watch manufacturing, sale and repairing is Amos Emery Keeport, a valued and esteemed citizen. Mr. Keeport was born at Littlestown, Adams Co., Pa., Sept. 6, 1853, a son of Amos Lefever and Lavenia Emily (McIlvain) Keeport.

Daniel Keeport, the grandfather of Amos E., was an iron master and at the time of his death was the principal owner of the York Furnace. His son Amos, father of Amos E., was a civil engineer, a chemist and a mineralogist. He now lives retired at Littlestown, where he is much honored. For many years he was a teacher and became distinguished in the scientific world on account of his valuable discoveries. He was the first to maintain that platinum existed in its salts as well as its native form, and he was awarded a bronze medal and diploma for this and was elected a member of the Paris Academy of Science.

The mother of Amos Emery, Lavenia Emily (McIlvain) Keeport, was a daughter of Capt. William McIlvain, who served in the 14th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, during the war of 1812-14. Mr. Keeport's maternal grandmother was a daughter of Dr. Massing, who was physician to the royal family of Germany.

There were five children born to Amos L. Keeport and wife, as follows: Gustavus, who died aged seven years; John, who died aged four years; Clara Wilhelmina, wife of Dr. John W. Hickey, a dental surgeon at Littlestown, Adams county; Mark Aaron, a jeweler at Reading, married Elizabeth Betz, daughter of Jacob Betz, of Lancaster; and Amos Emery, of Reading.

Until he was twelve years old Mr. Keeport attended the schools of his native city and then began to learn the business of jeweler and watchmaker. When seventeen, he went to Logansport, Indiana, where he took charge of a jewelry store and operated it for nine months and then returned to Littlestown in order to assist his father. He later visited various portions of the West, working at his trade, and then located for six years at Lancaster, where he engaged in a watch and jewelry business.

In 1883 Mr. Keeport came to Reading, becoming an employee of a local firm with which he worked for six years and then opened up a store of his own at No. 833 Penn street. At the end of two years he moved to No. 635 Penn street and afterwards to No. 230 Penn street. He spent several years in the Elgin Watch Factory and also had training in the Hamilton Watch Factory, the former in Illinois, and the latter at Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

On May 10, 1876, Mr. Keeport was married to Addie Clemmens Landis, daughter of Levi K. Landis, owner of a machine shop in Lancaster for many years, where he was looked upon as a mechanical genius. The Landis family is an old, numerous and very influential and wealthy family of Lancaster county. Mr. and Mrs. Keeport have had three children, viz.: Mabel, who died aged twenty-one years; Clara Clemmens, wife of William G. Schaeffer, superintendent of the bicycle and machine department of the W. F. Remppis Company's iron works; and Helen Landis, a student.

Mr. Keeport is a Royal Arch Mason; a member of the P. O. S. of A.; the Jr. O. U. A. M.; the Knights of the Golden Eagle; the Foresters; and is collector and district superintendent of the Grand Fraternity and a representative of the 4th District and chairman of the Governing Council of the Grand Fraternity as well as one of the directors.

In politics he is a Republican and he was nominated for common council from the fifteenth ward, Reading, and for select council from the fifteenth ward. Four years later he was nominated and was triumphantly elected, owing to personal popularity, to select council. Usually the fifteenth ward went 150 votes Democratic. Mr. Keeport's term expired in 1908. He is a member of Grace Lutheran Church.

In his business Mr. Keeport is looked upon as an expert. He does all the work for the Schuylkill Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad and keeps all their clocks in perfect order.

ROBERT BLAND, a highly esteemed, retired citizen of Reading, was born at Blandon, Berks county, son of Robert and Mary (Minker) Bland, after the former of whom the town of Blandon was named. It was first called Blandtown, but after the advent of the East Pennsylvania Railroad, the name was changed to Blandon Station, and eventually to Blandon.

Mr. Bland's father was a blacksmith by trade, an occupation which he followed all of his life. In his younger days he removed to Blandon, and there died in April, 1836, aged fifty-three years. His wife, a daughter of Henry Minker, was born at Glasgow Forge, and bore her husband ten children, as follows: Henry; William; Robert, our subject; Hannah, married Peter Gift and has two children, Mary and Catherine; Mary married (first) William Hughes, by whom she had four children, Sarah, Jane, Hannah and Samuel L., and married (second) John Noll; Rachel married (first) Amos Lightfoot, and had one son, Amos, and married (second) Daniel S. Fox, having four children, Harry, Sarah, Mary and Emma; Hannah, deceased, married D. R. Smucker and had one child, Wilber B., of Chicago, Ill.; Elizabeth died single; Jane married Samuel Field and had two children, Mary and Belle; and Sarah died single.

Robert Bland, our subject, was educated in the common schools of Blandon, and remained at home until about twenty years old. He clerked for several years in a general store conducted by L. D. Hoffman, and was then engaged in the iron industry of George Merkel, and Hunter & Kauffman. He later engaged in that business with Jacob K. Spang, George Merkel and William M. Kauffman for five years, and for six years with the Grubbs in Dauphin county. Mr. Bland then went into business with J. K. Spang, conducting the Union Forge, Lebanon county, for one year. He then served one year as treasurer of the Lerch Hardware Company, and was also connected with the Allendale Forge, Bland, Kauffman & Co. The firm then became Spang & Bland, having a furnace in Franklin county for five years. In 1888 Mr. Bland purchased George R. Frill's interest in the Angelica Ice Company, and was treasurer and superintendent for twelve years, and he is still a stockholder in this concern, which has been merged into the combine.

Mr. Bland married Nov. 12, 1861, Miss Elizabeth A. Jones, daughter of Alderman Ezekiel and Sarah B. (Pyle) Jones, and one child was born to this union, Laura, who married Charles A. Brown, a confectioner of No. 607 Penn street, and has one child, Elizabeth, at school. Mr. Bland is a member of the Masonic fraternity. In politics he is a Republican.

JEREMIAH K. GRANT enjoys the distinction of being one of Reading's foremost professional men. He was born in Pike township, Berks county, Oct. 24, 1847, son of Charles and Catharine (Knauss) Grant.

Charles Grant, the father, was a native of Berks county, and was a relative of that distinguished American, Ulysses S. Grant. He was highly respected in his section, and died in 1875, aged sixty-seven years. His wife Catharine Knauss, was a daughter of William Knauss, a farmer and miller in Amity township. To Charles and Catharine K. Grant were born nine children: Ephraim; William K., who was killed at Petersburg, while serving in the Union army; James K., who died in 1875; Mahlon K., who died in 1895; Hannah (died in 1902), wife of William G. Dietrich; Sarah, wife of Horace K. Boyer, a descendant of the founders of Boyertown; Hiram K., who died in 1907; Mary K., who married William G. Weidner, and died in 1909; and Jeremiah K.

Jeremiah K. Grant was educated under the private tutorship of eminent instructors, in the Keystone State Normal School and in the Department of Law of the University of Pennsylvania. He registered as a student-at-law in the office of William H. Livingood, of Philadelphia, and was admitted to the Bar of that city in 1877, on his certificate from the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and at once began the practise of his profession there. In 1878 he removed to Reading, and he was admitted to practise in the several courts of the counties of Philadelphia and Berks, in the Superior and Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania, and in the United States District Court, and he has enjoyed a lucrative practice. He officiated as district attorney for Berks county from 1886 to 1889, having been elected on the Democratic ticket; and in 1903 he was elected county solicitor.

Mr. Grant has been interested in a number of important business enterprises. He erected the "J. K. Grant Building" at Sixth and Washington streets and many other buildings, thus adding greatly to the material development of the city. He is a director in the Berks County Trust Company. He has taken an active part in the political affairs of the county as a Democrat from the time he located in Reading, and has been a prominent member of the Americus Club for many years.

On March 20, 1878, Mr. Grant married Caroline Brunner, daughter of Samuel and Mary Brunner.

GEORGE BARLOW, one of the leading citizens of Reading, who has been engaged in the manufacture of hats in this city for some years, was born March 5, 1840, in County Roscommon, Ireland, son of George and Bedelia (Lilly) Barlow, and grandson of Robert Barlow.

George Barlow, father of George of Reading, was a native of Ireland, where he spent his life in agricultural pursuits, and died about 1862, aged seventy-five years. He married Bedelia Lilly, and to them were born these children: Mary, who remained in the old country; James, who came to America about 1845; William, who came several years later; Jane, who came still later; Ann, who remained in the old country; George; and Ella, who came to America with Jane.

George Barlow was reared in a country town in his native country, where he attended the local schools, and in 1852 came to America, settling thirty miles up the Hudson river, in New York. In 1853 he learned the hatting trade in Greene county, N. Y., which he followed there until 1856 when he came to Reading, in which city he has since made his home. He came here to superintend the William H. Rheinold & Company hat factory, and in this capacity he was employed for eighteen years, when the company suspended business, and Mr. Barlow became superintendent of John R. Hendel's hat factory at Montello. The following year the factory was brought to Reading, where it has since been located. Mr. Barlow is well known to the people of his community as a kind and obliging neighbor and a good citizen, while in business circles he is recognized as a man of much ability. In political matters he is a Democrat. He and his family attend St. Peter's Catholic Church of Reading, and Mr. Barlow was one of the liberal contributors towards the erection of the beautiful new edifice in 1905.

On Dec. 31, 1862, Mr. Barlow was married to Ellen McDonnell, daughter of James and Mary (Murphy) McDonnell, the former a native of Ireland, who followed carpentering in New York and there died. Mr. and Mrs. Barlow have these children: James F., a skilled mechanic who has charge of one of the departments of Mohn Bros.' establishment, Reading; Mary J., single, at home; George F., clerk for the Reading Iron Co.; Lillian F., single, at home; and William L., an employee of the Reading Iron Company.

HENRY GRANT MILLER, a victim of the ill-fated Shriners excursion, wrecked May 11, 1907, at Honda, Cal., and formerly a well known business man of Reading, member of the firm of J. B. Miller & Sons, then the largest wholesale grocery house in Berks county, was born Dec. 12, 1867, at Bernville, this county, son of J. B. Miller.

His funeral, which was held at his late residence, No. 1396 Parkiomen avenue, Reading, May 22, 1907, was largely attended by those who knew him as a good citizen, kind neighbor and loyal friend. The beautiful floral tributes that half filled one of the rooms were a mute testimonial of the high regard in which he was held. Forty members of Hermit Commandery, K. T., of Lebanon, with large delegations from De Molay and Reading Commanderies, were present. Rev. Dr. E. T. Horn, of Trinity Lutheran Church conducted the services at the house, and interment was made in the Charles Evans cemetery.

Mr. Miller had been given a thorough business education, after which he began working in his father's large general store at Bernville, where he remained until 1889. He then became a partner in the firm of J. B. Miller & Sons, at Lebanon, Pa., conducting an extensive business in dry goods and groceries at Ninth and Railroad streets of that city. Here they continued until 1900, when the late firm of J. B. Miller & Sons was established with warehouse and offices at Nos. 41-43 South Seventh street, Reading, and of this firm Mr. Miller was a partner. The members were all men of business ability and standing in the community, and the house commanded the trade of not only Berks, but the surrounding counties, as well. Since the death of Mr. Henry G. Miller, the surviving partners have sold out their interests.

Mr. Miller was prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 226; Weidele Chapter, Lebanon, No. 197; Lebanon Council, No. 27; Hermit Commandery, No. 24; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading; of the Reading Lodge of Perfection (charter member), and Harrisburg Consistory, S. P. R. S., thirty-second degree. He was a past officer of merit of the first four mentioned divisions. He also belonged to the B. P. O. E., No. 115, Reading, and the Sons of Veterans of Lebanon, Pa. Mr. Miller was an archaeologist, and was the owner of a fine collection of old dishes and china ware, as well as of rare coins and paper money. He possessed a full genealogical record of the Miller, Dewees, Dundore and Rauch families, and took an active interest in the Pennsylvania German Society.

On Feb. 28, 1895, Mr. Miller was united in marriage with Katherine May Rauch, the accomplished daughter of John B. and Sarah (Hunsicker) Rauch, of Lebanon, Pa., and to this union there have been born four children: Helen, born July 12, 1896, died July 8, 1899; Albert Rauch, born Dec. 31, 1899; Frederick Dundore, April 28, 1902; and Virginia Dorothy, Oct. 12, 1904.

CHARLES G. HUNSBERGER, proprietor of one of the old and well patronized hostelries of Reading, the "Schwartz House," which is located at No. 309 North Eighth street, was born Nov. 18, 1865, at Bloomsburg, Columbia Co., Pa., a son of Henry H. and Lydia (Arms) Hunsberger.

The Hunsberger family is easily traced as far back as the great-grandfather, John Hunsberger, who lived in Franconia Township, Montgomery Co., Pa. By trade he was a weaver. In his later years he moved to Chester county and settled on the farm that is now the property of J. F. Bickel, a son-in-law of Henry Hunsberger. John Hunsberger had the following children: Michael. Samuel m. Mary Echer, had children: Jesse, Samuel, William, John and Mary; and he and his wife Mary, with some of their children are buried in the Mennonite burial ground in East Coventry Township. John, who never married, is buried in the above cemetery. Henry married Sarah Brown, and they and children are buried at Oak Grove, at Parkersford. Henry had six children: Elizabeth, born in 1840, died in 1878, in 1868 m. J. F. Bickel; Annie; John; Adaline, in 1887, m. J. F. Bickel; Amos and Harriet. Dorothy, daughter of John Hunsberger, never married and is buried in the East Coventry graveyard, at the Mennonite meeting house. Catherine, the youngest daughter, m. Moses Grubb. They had no issue and their ashes rest in Oak Grove cemetery, near Parkersford.

Michael Hunsberger, grandfather of Charles G. and Henry A. Hunsberger, was a resident of Montgomery county, and he and wife were interred in the old cemetery adjoining the Mennonite Church, in East Coventry Township. He married Nancy Hunsberger and they had the following children: John, Henry, Catharine, Sophia, Sarah, Mary, Lovina and Lizzie.

Henry H. Hunsberger, father of Charles G., was born in Chester county, Pa., in 1835, and died at Reading in August, 1899, aged sixty-four years. In young manhood he left Chester county and located at Pottstown, Pa., where he kept the "Railroad House" for about ten years. In 1879 he came to Reading and lived on North Eleventh street, and in this city he followed the butchering business, opening the first Chicago meat market in that section of the city and he built up a large trade in Chicago meat products, and was a man of considerable substance. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. In religious connection, he belonged to the Episcopal Church. He was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He married Lydia Arms, a daughter of Henry Arms, a farmer of Douglass Township, Berks county. The children were three in number, namely: Henry Arms, Charles G. and Mary, m. Elton C. Bickel.

Henry Arms Hunsberger, older brother of Charles G., was born Nov. 18, 1863, at Pottstown, Montgomery Co., Pa., where he attended the public school and later learned the nail-making trade. He continued to work at this trade for ten years. In 1881, he came to Reading and became a salesman for A. L. Stichter & Son and continued in their employ until 1886. In the following year he became collector for the Reading Brewing Company and this responsible position he filled for twelve years. Since 1898, Mr. Hunsberger has been salesman and collector for the Continental Brewing Company, of Philadelphia. He is a Mason of the higher degrees, belonging to Lodge No. 435, Reading, De Molay Commandery No. 9, Reading, Reading Chapter, No. 152, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. With his family he belongs to St. Barnabas Episcopal Church at Reading. He is a man of really commanding appearance, and his business relations are those of a man of repute. On Feb. 11, 1892, he was married to Rosa L. Spohn, a daughter of Daniel Spohn, of Reading, and they have one daughter, Emily, who is the wife of George J. Ermentrout, an electrician at Reading. Mr. Hunsberger resides in his fine stone residence at No. 1501 Perkiomen avenue.

Charles G. Hunsberger was reared to farm pursuits. He was sixteen years of age when his parents moved to Pottstown, where he worked for three years for the Pottstown Iron Company. In 1884, he came to Reading, where he first became a clerk at the "Keystone House," where he remained until 1892, when he went into business for himself, engaging in hotel keeping for seven years at Tenth and Oley streets. In April, 1899, he succeeded the well-known host, George Schwartz, who conducted the "Schwartz House," which was known as the "Rural Retreat," the headquarters of the railroaders, during their strike in 1877. Mr. Hunsberger is enjoying a prosperous business and is a popular resident of his section of the city. In politics, he is an Independent Democrat. He is a member and supporter of the Lutheran Church.

On April 25, 1886, Mr. Hunsberger was married to Emma D. Schwartz, a daughter of the late George and Rosina (Beutzel) Schwartz, both natives of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Hunsberger have two children: Laura M. and Mary S.

WILLIAM W. WREN, postmaster at Boyertown, senior member of the firm of Wren & Koons, manufacturers of cigar boxes, is of the third generation of his family in America. He was born at Pottsville, Pa., June 29, 1851, son of Major James Wren, and grandson of William Wren.

William Wren, the grandfather, was a native of Scotland, who, lured by the tales of wealth in the New World, came over to America with his family in 1825, and located at Pottsville, Pa. He found work as a miner, and continued to be so occupied as long as he lived. He and his wife Jane are both buried in the vicinity of Pottsville. Their children were: William; John, whose son Christopher was formerly prothonotary of Luzerne county, and now lives in Plymouth, Pa.; Thomas; Major James; and Susan, who married John P. Powers, of Pottsville, and had a son, Thomas.

Major James Wren was born in Glasgow, Scotland, March 6, 1825, and was six months old when brought by his parents to America. He grew to manhood in Pottsville, receiving such education as was afforded by the common schools. As his father was working in the mines, it was natural that the son should acquire a knowledge of the same line of work, but he was soon advanced, his mechanical ability developing as the years passed, and he became a mechanical and mining engineer of considerable note and experience. He learned his trade of machinist at the Haywood & Snyder shops. With his brothers, John and Thomas, he became interested in the Eagle Foundry in 1850, and shortly afterward established the Washington Iron Works, which were located on the site of the old Philadelphia & Reading freight station, at the end of Centre street. The first railroad bar iron made in Schuylkill county was manufactured at these works, and was used by Beemish & Co., at Fishback. In 1855 the machinery for the Palo Alto rolling mill of Lee, Bright & Co., was made, besides the more important mining machinery used in the coal regions. In the early seventies Major Wren moved to Boyertown and engaged in prospecting for iron ore in the hills along Colebrookdale creek, a quest in which he was unsuccessful, and he turned his attention to the operation of a woolen mill at Colebrookdale, near which he erected a comfortable residence. Fire destroyed the mill and Major Wren did not rebuild it. About fifteen years before his death, he moved to Boyertown, and his last business venture was garnet mining in Chelsea, Delaware Co., Pa. His death, the result of an operation, occurred at the Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, Jan. 16, 1901. The funeral was a military one, in charge of the G. A. R., and the faithful soldier was laid to rest in Fairview cemetery as the last note of "Taps" was sounded.

When on April 15, 1861, President Lincoln called for 75,000 men, Major Wren, then captain of the Washington Artillery, Pottsville, prepared for service. Two days before he had offered his command to the governor, and this offer had been accepted. They left Pottsville April 17th, without uniforms and arms, arriving in Harrisburg that evening. There they joined the Ringgold Artillery of Reading; the National Light Artillery of Pottsville; the Logan Guards of Lewistown; and the Allen Guards of Allentown, and all left for Washington, D. C. The entire party, except for thirty-four old Springfield rifles and the pistols of the officers, was unarmed. Their trip from Harrisburg through Baltimore to Washington, and the attending riots, is a matter of history and is well known to every student. On their arrival in Washington, joined by troops from Massachusetts, they became known as the "First Defenders." At the end of his three months' term of enlistment. Capt. Wren returned home, and organized Company B, of the 48th Pa. V. I., of which he became captain, serving as such until he became major. He had an honorable record, and was the recipient of a gold medal from Congress. His interest in military affairs was unabated with advancing years, and he was ever an ardent worker in the Grand Army of the Republic.

Major Wren was twice married. He married (first) Sarah Mortimer, sister of S. M. Mortimer. Of the children of this union, William W. and Andrew, both of Boyertown, survive. He married (second) Clara Johns, sister of George W. Johns, of the well-known St. Clair, Schuylkill family, and they had children: Charles, of Boyertown; and George, Emma, James, Carrie and Norman. Major Wren was a Mason, belonging to Pulaski Lodge, No. 216, F. & A. M., of Pottsville. Mrs. Wren survived until December 10, 1903, when she died suddenly of apoplexy. She had been active in the Boyertown Methodist Church, and had many warm friends. She has been greatly missed, not alone in her home, but by the entire community. Her remains were interred in Fairview cemetery.

William W. Wren was educated in the public schools, and he also took a private course under the late Col. John A. M. Passmore, then of Pottsville, and at the Westchester Myers Classical Scientific Institute (Preparatory school). For some years he was an assistant of his father in the iron business, and worked in the draughting room. In 1870 he came to Boyertown, and prospected in the surrounding country for iron ore for about five years, at the end of that time engaging in the manufacture of cigar boxes. This latter line he followed alone for about ten years and then formed a partnership with Otto Engel, under the firm name of Wren & Engel, and this continued for five years. He then associated himself with his brother, Andrew, and continued the same business for some years, when his brother withdrew, and William W. carried it on alone. His present associate is Frederick S. Koons, and the name of the firm, Wren & Koons. They have been very successful, and the output of their factory is now about 5,000 boxes daily, giving employment to forty people. Their plant is a four-story building, 32 x 100 feet, besides several additions, and the whole is equipped with all modern machinery. Their product is sold in Reading, Philadelphia and other eastern cities.

Mr. Wren is a prominent Republican, and he has attended all the conventions of his party for a quarter of a century. It is said he has nominated more men than any other one man of the party. He was a delegate to the State convention when the Hon. William A. Stone was nominated (later elected) Governor of the State, and in that convention served on the committee on Resolutions. He was first appointed postmaster under the administration of President Harrison, second under President McKinley and later re-appointed under President Roosevelt. This is a third class office, with two rural routes and three stage routes daily, of the latter, one being from Boyertown to Reading, a second Boyertown to Limerick, and a third Boyertown to New Hanover. He has always been active in his party's welfare, and in the public work of his town. He was school director for several terms, and at the present time is president of the school board, the borough having a high school that is a credit to all this section of the county. Mr. Wren is actively identified with Washington Camp, No. 104, P. O. S. of A., in which he has held all the offices. He is a gifted orator, and has frequently appeared on the platform. His voice is powerful and magnetic, and his clear logical reasoning has convinced many a doubter. He has made many inspiring addresses under the auspices of the G. A. R. and kindred organizations.

On Nov. 25, 1875, Mr. Wren was married to Clara St. Clair, daughter of Reuben and Sarah (Christian) St. Clair, of Pottsville. They have two children: Edwin S., who graduated from the Boyertown high school in 1899, and then assisted his father in the post-office for a time, is now a student in the Dental Department of the University of Pennsylvania; and Gertrude S., who graduated from the Boyertown high school, married in 1908, Harry L. Gabel, son of Henry G. Gabel, who formerly conducted a gristmill in Colebrookdale, but who is now engaged in the milling business with his son in Larned, Kansas. Mr. Wren and his family belong to Ebenezer Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been trustee and steward. For the past thirty-two consecutive years he has been superintendent of the Sunday-school, and since 1884 he has been a local preacher.

JAMES F. TALLEY, president of the First National Bank of Bernville, Pa., and one of the ablest young business men of Penn township, whose rise to the front rank in commercial and financial circles has been little short of phenomenal, was born Aug. 8, 1870, in Pike township, Berks county, Pa., son of Jacob H. and Caroline (Frey) Talley.

The great-grandfather of James F. Talley came from England to the United States and first settled in Maryland, whence he went to Oley township, Berks county, and spent the remainder of his life in farming. His son, Wister, the grandfather of James F., was but a lad when brought to Oley township, and he was reared to the life of a farmer, an occupation which he followed all of his life, owning an eighty-acre tract near the Oley Furnace. He died at the home of his only daughter, Mrs. Simon Link, in Ruscombmanor township. Wister Talley married a Miss Haas, a member of an old and honored family of Oley township, and they had two children: Mary, who married Simon Link; and Jacob H.

Jacob H. Talley was born in Oley township, and for many years was a well-known educator, teaching seventeen terms in Oley, Pike and Rockland townships, and being for fifteen years a justice of the peace in Pike township. He is now engaged in agricultural pursuits in Ruscombmanor township. Jacob H. Talley married Caroline Frey, daughter of David Frey, and to them there were born three children: Amon, at home; Levi, of Honeybrook, Chester county; and James F.

James F. Talley attended the public schools of his native township, the old historical Oley Academy, the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown, and Muhlenberg College. Then he taught school for three terms in Pike township, after which he took a course in the American Business College at Allentown, Pa., and then located in Bernville, entering the employ of A. F. Shock, for whom he clerked for four years. He next became a clerk for J. B. Miller, at Bernville, with whom he remained one year, and from there went to New Berlinville, Colebrookdale township, where he successfully conducted a store and hotel for five years. In 1903 he bought the store of J. B. Miller at Bernville, an old established business in this part of the county, the building being situated on Main street, nearly opposite the bank, a structure 100 x 36 feet. Mr. Talley was active in the organization of the bank, and his ability was recognized by his election to the office of president, which he ably fills, being the youngest bank president in the county if not in the state. The bank, which is on a sound financial basis, was organized July 10, 1907, chartered two days later and opened for business Oct. 15, 1907. Mr. Talley is a Democrat in politics, and for three years served as school director of Bernville.

In 1897, Mr. Talley was married to Miss Ella Loose, the estimable daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Shock) Loose.

ELIAS B. SCHMEHL, who is well known as a millwright in Reading, has been engaged at his trade there since the close of the Civil war. He is a native of Berks county, born Feb. 28, 1840, in Ruscombmanor township, son of Jacob Schmehl and grandson of Conrad Schmehl. The latter settled near Barnhardts Tavern, in Berks county, and followed farming. His wife's name is not known. They had the following named children: Jonas, John, Jacob, and Louisa (who married Conrad Keller). Conrad Schmehl was a Lutheran in religious faith.

Jacob Schmehl followed both the mason's and weaver's trades, working as a stonemason during the summer season and weaving carpets in the winter time. He passed all his life in Ruscombmanor township. He married Barbara Bridegam, and to them were born fourteen children, namely: Rudolph, who is deceased; Rachel, who married Benjamin Snyder; Samuel, deceased; Charles, deceased; Angeline, deceased wife of Jacob Knaur; John, deceased; Lavina, deceased, wife of Charles Lorah; Louisa, deceased, wife of Enoch Hoffman; Jacob, of Reading; Elias B.; Katie, who died young; Amelia married Geo. Freyberger; Sarah, who married Daniel Angstadt; and Jacob. The father of this family was a Democrat in politics and a Lutheran in religious belief.

Elias B. Schmehl was reared in his native township and during his boyhood attended the common schools. When sixteen he found work as a farm hand, and continued thus for three years, after which he was employed for a year in a stone quarry. Then he served two years at the millwright's trade, with Abraham Lasher, before his enlistment, in 1862, for service in support of the Union. He joined Company C, 167th Pennsylvania Regiment, under Capt. P. Y. Engleman, was enrolled Oct. 2d, and proceeded with his company from Reading to Harrisburg, thence to Washington, where they boarded a transport for Fortress Monroe, later going to Norfolk and Suffolk, where the regiment was stationed for six months. They were next ordered North, to do guard duty along the northern boundary, from Frederick, Md., to Gettysburg, Pa. Mr. Schmehl was honorably discharged Aug. 11, 1863, and returning to Berks county settled in Reading, where he began to work as a millwright with Levi J. Smith. He remained with this employer for seven years, during two of which he was foreman for Mr. Smith, and in 1875 he engaged in business on his own account. Mr. Schmehl has continued in this line ever since, and in addition to numerous mills of ordinary construction he has erected a number of iron furnaces, forges and mills, as well as several graphite mills, usually superintending the latter for some time after their completion, to make sure they have been properly constructed for successful work. His operations have been principally in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland, and include work on mills of almost every description. He has at times given employment to as many as fifteen millwrights, his reputation for thoroughness and reliability having won him an extensive patronage. He has established himself in a substantial position among his business associates by honorably filling his contracts, his work being his best recommendation. From 1887 to 1893 Mr. Schmehl, in company with James M. Miller, now general superintendent of the Reading Paper Mills, carried on a general machine shop at Nos. 152-154 Court street, this being at the rear of Mr. Schmehl's residence, which is at No. 145 Penn street.

On Oct. 6, 1866, Mr. Schmehl married Annie Heckler, daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Adams) Heckler, and ten children have come to this union, born as follows: Howard, Feb. 20, 1868; Heber, July 15, 1870; Wilson, Feb. 26, 1872; Elias B., Jan. 9, 1874 (died Dec. 25, 1874); Allen, Sept. 25, 1875; Pearl, June 28, 1879 (died Aug. 13, 1879); Webster, April 7, 1882; Adam B., Oct. 23, 1883; Mary Eve, Aug. 12, 1886; Robert P., June 13, 1891. This family all belong to the Lutheran Church. Mr. Schmehl is a Democrat in political sentiment, but he takes no part in public affairs, giving all his time and energies to his business. He is a member of Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R.

WELLINGTON H. RAUCH, farmer in Green Valley, Hereford township, Berks county, was born Dec. 3, 1852, at Gilbertsville, Montgomery county, Pa., son of Thomas L. Rauch.

(I) Henry Rauch, the first known ancestor of this Rauch family, lived in the eastern end of Berks county, being a farmer in Hereford township. His will, which is on file in the Berks county courthouse, recorded in Will Book B, page 107, was made Sept. 15, 1783, and was probated April 6th following, so it is presumed he died in the spring of 1784. George Rauch and George Lahr were the executors of the will of Henry Rauch, who mentions his "plantation" in that document. He and his wife, Magdalena, had six sons and five daughters: George, Philip, Henry, Jacob, David, John, Elizabeth, Mary, Barbara, Margaret and Magdalena.

(II) Jacob Rauch, son of Henry, settled in Manheim township, in Schuylkill county, Pa., and from him descend the Rauchs who live in the coal regions. He died in May, 1811, being survived by his wife "Gertraut," and the following children are mentioned in his will, which is recorded in Book A, page 591, in the Berks county court-house: Jonathan, Jacob, Solomon, Daniel and Christina. He provided that his children, as they became of age, should learn trades.

(II) Henry Rauch, son of Henry, in 1790 lived in Hereford township, Berks county, where he was the head of a family.

(II) David Rauch, son of Henry, born Nov. 27, 1769, died Dec. 11, 1843, aged seventy-four years, fourteen days. His last will and testament, made Nov. 6, 1840, is on record in Will Book B, page 107, at the Berks county court-house, and his sons, Henry and John, were the executors. He married Barbara Lieser (1770-1838), and both are buried at Huff's Church. Their children were: Elizabeth, David, Samuel (1796-1853), Barbara, Magdalena, Maria, Catharine, Rachel, Henry (1813-1850), and John (1815-1875).

(II) John Rauch, son of Henry, lived near Perryville (now Harlem), in Hereford township, where he owned and worked a small farm. He was a weaver by trade, and made all kinds of homespun in addition to following farming. He is buried above Nazareth, at Bushkill, in eastern Pennsylvania. By his wife, Hannah (Hoffman), daughter of Michael, he had three sons, Henry (who lived at Nazareth, Pa.), Michael (who lived above Nazareth) and John, and several daughters, one of whom was married to Peter Greiss.

(III) John Rauch, son of John, was known as "Bush John," to distinguish him from another John Rauch in the same district. He lived near Dale, in Hereford township, where he owned a small tract of land, was a shingle-maker and weaver, and in the winter time went out butchering among the farmers, becoming well-known in the pursuit of these various occupations. He was a great hunter and fisher. He is buried at Huff's Church. He married Rebecca Leeser, and nine children were born to them: (1) Thomas L. is mentioned farther on. (2) Benjamin L., a farmer of Washington township, had children, John F., William F., Manoah F., Benjamin F., James F., Rebecca F., Catharine F., Amanda F. and Adam (both of whom died young) and Emma (married Benjamin Schaeffer). (3) Samuel lived at various places and died at Philadelphia, where he conducted a wholesale grocery store. He became wealthy. He married Amanda Seaman, daughter of Daniel Seaman, of Hamburg, Pa. (4)

Hannah married Henry Richard and lived at Bechtelsville; they had one son and four daughters. (5) William was twice married, first to Maria Frey, by whom he had two children, Katie and John, and afterward to Mrs. Caroline Baus. There were no children born to the second marriage. (6) Reuben L., who is unmarried, lives at Hereford and is engaged in huckstering. (7) James L., who lives in Hereford township, is a shoemaker and basket-maker by occupation. (8) John died young. (9) Henry died young.

(IV) Thomas L. Rauch, son of John, born in Hereford township, Aug. 10, 1825, died June 25, 1905, aged seventy-nine years, ten months, fifteen days. He received a good education, learning to read both German and English, and when eighteen years old went to learn the blacksmith's trade from John Walker. He followed that calling for fifty years, retiring some five years before his death. Mr. Rauch is buried at Huff's Church, having belonged to the Reformed congregation of that church, which he served as elder. His wife, Catharine Herber, daugther of Henry and Susan (Landich) Herber, of Greenwich township, born Feb. 24, 1824, died Jan. 29, 1896, aged seventy-one years, eleven months, five days. Five children were born to them: Lewis died in infancy; Henry H., a blacksmith, died in Clayton; Wellington H. is mentioned farther on; Rosa Ellen died when eleven years and two days old; Anna Rebecca, deceased, was the wife of William E. Stangier, of Reading.

(V) Wellington H. Rauch received his early education in Hereford and Washington townships, Berks county, he being fourteen years old when his parents moved to Hereford township. Later he attended the Boyertown Academy. He was reared to farming in Hereford, and also learned the blacksmith's trade from his father, following that work in connection with farming until 1900, since which time he has devoted himself exclusively to farming. He has twenty-eight acres of very productive land, and raises excellent crops. For many years Rauch's smith shop was a very busy place, many coming from a distance to have blacksmith work done there. The blacksmith shop was built in 1867, by Thomas L. Rauch, who built the large stone house in 1893.

On Sept. 14, 1883, Mr. Rauch married Susanna A. Carl, daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca (Rohrbach) Carl, of District township. They have no children. Mr. and Mrs. Rauch are members of the Reformed congregation of Huff's Church, of which he was deacon for eight years. Mr. Rauch is a Republican in politics.

WILLIAM A. GERY, manufacturer of vitrified brick, was born at Reading, Oct. 23, 1868, and educated in the public schools. He learned the trade of hatter and followed it for four years until 1890, when he embarked with his brother, Albert A. Gery, in the business of manufacturing vitrified brick at Montello, a mile south of Sinking Spring, in Berks county. In the organization of the company, he became the manager; and he filled this position until 1907, when he and his brother organized the Glen-Gery Brick Company, which established a plant, with all the latest appliances, at Shoemakersville, in Berks county, and became its manager.

Mr. Gery was married to Minerva Evans, daughter of Lewis M. Evans of Spring township; by whom he has two sons: Edward Evans and Ralph William. His father is Addison Gery, born in 1837, and brought up on a farm in Hereford township until he was twelve years old, when he accompanied his parents to Reading. He learned the trade of carpenter but entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and continued with the company for twenty-six years (mostly as a locomotive engineer), until 1893, when he became the stationary engineer of the Montello Brick Company, and he has continued in the employ of this company until the present time. He was married to Catharine Smith (daughter of Balthaser Smith of Reading), by whom he had eight children: Albert A. (married to Nellie Harbster); Mary Rebecca (married to Herbert E. Collins, of New Haven, Conn.); William A.; Leah (married to William C. K. Fisher); Frank S. (married to Amelia Beck); and three who died young.

Mr. Gery's grandfather was Jonathan Nuss Gery, tailor, of Hereford township, who located at Reading in 1849. He entered the employ of the P. & R. R. Co. in 1851 and continued with the company until 1892. He died in 1893, aged eighty-two years. He was married to Mary Gehris, daughter of George, of Oley (now Pike) township, by whom he had five children: Addison; Emma E. (married to John Haupt of Savannah, Ga.); Benjamin F. (who died in infancy); Sarah Ann (married to Harry Hartz); and Jonathan G. (married to Emma Babb). His wife died in 1885, aged sixty-nine years.

His great-grandfather was Michael Gery; and great-great-grandfather, Jacob Gery, who emigrated from Switzerland in 1739.

Mr. Gery's wife is a lineal descendant of Philip Evans, who emigrated with two brothers from Wales about 1720, and afterwards settled in Cumru township, Lancaster county, which in 1752 became a part of Berks county. Her father was Lewis M. Evans (1833-99), who married Sarah Ruth, and had four children, George, William, Annie and Minerva. Lewis was a son of John V. R. Evans (1804-64), who married Annie Ruth (1814-79). John V. R. was a son of Philip Thomas Evans, (1770-1835,) who married Annie Elizabeth Van Reed (1778-1853), a daughter of John Van Reed. Philip was a son of Joshua, and Joshua was a son of Philip, the immigrant above mentioned.

ISAAC G. BLATT, former proprietor of the "Hotel Blatt," on North Sixth street, Reading, Pa., comes of a family that has lived in Berks county almost two hundred years.

Frederick Blatt, the first of the name in direct line to Isaac G., of whom we have authentic record, was a pioneer farmer of Bern township, where he owned the large farm now the property of Levi Rentschler, and he lived in a stone house which was situated near the present Philadelphia & Reading depot near Mohrsville. It is supposed he was the Frederick Blatt who was a taxable in Maiden-creek township in 1757-58-59. He was a soldier in the Revolution, being a member of Captain Shartle's company, and he was a man of adventurous spirit. In 1800, with his son Matthias, he rode on horseback to Reading to vote for Thomas Jefferson for President. On one occasion, while he and his brother were hunting in the Blue Mountains, he entered a cave to secure a number of bear cubs, but the return of the mother bear interrupted him, and the warning cry of his brother who was on the outside enabled him to squeeze past the old bear in the opening of the cave, and to escape with his life. As many of the old pioneers of that locality were Friends, it is supposed that Frederick Blatt also belonged to that faith, though his service in the Revolution seems on the other hand to discredit it. He is buried at either Belleman's or St. Michael's Church. Mr. Blatt had children: Adam, who went to Ohio in either 1838 or 1839, his descendants still living in the vicinity of Sandusky; David and John, who were residents of Centre; Matthias; and Jeremiah, of Centre, who had four children—Aaron, Reuben, Caroline (m. Adam Bohn) and Malinda (m. George Snyder).

Matthias Blatt, son of Frederick, was born in Bern township in 1777, and died during the winter of 1859. He was a lifelong farmer of Bern (now Centre) township, where he owned a farm of one hundred acres now the property of his grandson, John B. Blatt. He was a member of the German Reformed Church, and is buried at Belleman's Church. He married Rosanna Gerhard, a native of Germany, who came to this country with her parents when nine years of age. They became the parents of children as follows: Adam; John; Polly died unmarried; Rebecca m. (first) Nathan Hafer, and (second) Daniel Stepp; George (his only daughter, Hettie, is the widow of Adam Koch); Abraham G. died in March, 1892; and Elizabeth m. Samuel Billman, a prosperous citizen of Stark county, Ohio.

John Blatt, son of Matthias, was born in Bern township, and there married. His children were: Jacob; Levi, of Dauphin county; John; William, who was killed during the Civil war; Sarah; Maria; and Catharine.

Jacob Blatt, son of John, was born on the homestead in Bern (now Centre) township. He died near Host in July, 1883, aged sixty-seven years, and is buried at Tulpehocken Lutheran Church. He married Anna Greth, who died in 1877. They were the parents of nine children: Levi, of Logansport, Ind.; Isaac G.; Lovina, deceased; Moural of Strausstown; Rebecca and Darius, both deceased; Emma, deceased; Celeca who married Samuel Schell, of North Heidelberg; and Katie, who married Charles Biehl, of Reading.

Isaac G. Blatt, son of Jacob, was born in Centre township, Jan. 5, 1857, and worked upon the home farm until he was sixteen years of age, when he came to Reading, which city has since been his abiding place with the exception of two years when he conducted the "Mt. Pleasant Hotel" at Obold, in Penn township. In 1872 when he came to Reading he entered the employ of William Call, contractor for the Berks & Lehigh Railroad Co. One year later he became hostler and bar clerk at the "North Reading Hotel," now called "Riverside." A year later he became bar clerk at the "Farmers & Drovers Hotel" of which George Dreibelbis was proprietor. He then worked at huckstering and at various other vocations for some time. In 1876 he became bar clerk at the "Mishler House," and in 1878 proprietor of the Bernville stage, which he ran for one year. In this he was succeeded by J. M. Bordner, the present driver. When he gave up the stage, he entered the confectionery business on North Fifth street, and in 1881 he moved to No. 423 Penn street, and in addition also drove a confectionery wagon for several years. His genial personality brought him to the attention of business men, and the Orwigsburg Shoe Manufacturing Company offered him a position as their traveling salesman. He accepted and remained with them until he became associated with Walp & Co., shoe manufacturers. For eight years he was employed by Isaac Keim, and then he returned to the hotel business, becoming proprietor of the "Mt. Pleasant Hotel." Returning to Reading at the end of two years he sold insurance for the Metropolitan, and in 1897 he became proprietor of the "Hotel Blatt" at the corner of Locust and Oley streets, which he conducted until 1900. In the latter year he became proprietor of the "Berkshire Hotel," which he conducted three years and four months. He then retired to private life for a year, but at the end of that time returned to the hotel business, taking charge of the "Hotel Blatt," at No. 338 North Sixth street. This he conducted until he again retired to private life.

Mr. Blatt is a member of Bernville Lodge, No. 122, I. O. O. F.; Wyanet Tribe, No. 30, I. O. R. M.; Camp No. 550, P. O. S. of A.; and Esther Lodge, No 4, Rebekah degree, I. O. O. F. With his family he belongs to the First Reformed Church.

On July 8, 1882, Mr. Blatt married Clara Stricker, daughter of John Stricker, of Heidelberg township. Their children are: George, who died in infancy; Jennie, m. to Morris Stoudt, and died July 25, 1906; Irwin, a tailor in Reading, m. to Lottie Moyer; Minnie, m. to George Hincy, of Lancaster county; and Miss Eva, at home.

JOHN A. KINTZER, a farmer of Spring township and proprietor of the "West Reading Hotel," at West Reading, Berks county, was born March 9, 1855, at Womelsdorf, this county, son of Adam and Mary (Ruth) Kintzer. He is a descendant of Nicholas Kintzer.

(I) Nicholas Kintzer, the progenitor of a family numerous in western Berks county, was born in Germany, Nov. 15, 1715. When less than fifteen years old, he crossed the ocean on the ship "Thistle," which arrived at Philadelphia Aug. 29, 1730, and he came to live in Tulpehocken township, Berks Co., Pa., where he became a substantial citizen. In 1759 he was assessed sixteen pounds, which, reckoning $2.66 to the Pennsylvania pound, amounted to $42.56 of current coin. This pioneer settler died Jan. 20, 1794, in the seventy-ninth year of his age, and he is buried at the Host Church, of which he was a member. His grave is marked by a brown sandstone, the inscription on which is still legible. His will, which was made Dec. 15, 1791, and probated March 5, 1794, is recorded in Will Book B, page 355. The executors were his son Jacob and Thomas Kurr, and the following children are mentioned in the document; Jacob; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Kurr; Margaret, wife of Godfry Real; Catharine, who died before her father, her children receiving her share; and Julian, deceased.

(II) Jacob Kintzer, son of Nicholas, obtained the plantation in Tulpehocken upon which his father lived and died, and there made his home, engaging in farming. He married Elizabeth Unruh, and they had a large family, among their children being: Johan (Johannes), born in 1785, died in 1851; Adam, born July 28, 1788, died Feb. 24, 1860; George, born Oct. 18, 1795, died Aug. 28, 1825. Of these, Adam married Anna Maria Leiss, born in 1789, died in 1872, daughter of Christopher and Maria Elizabeth Leiss, and they are both buried at Host. They had children: Jacob, Michael, Isaac, William, Henry, John, Betzy, who married Gabriel Filbert; Mary, who married Charles Shower and later John Less; and Amanda, who married Adam Moyer, of West Reading. George, the youngest son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Unruh) Kintzer, was married Dec. 17, 1820, to Maria Seiler.

(III) Johannes Kintzer, son of Jacob, was born Jan. 1, 1785, and died Sept. 16, 1851. He was buried at the Host Church in Tulpehocken township. He was a lifelong resident of Marion township near the Charming Forge, where he owned several large farms, and was a well-known citizen, of much influence, in his day. By his first wife he had one child, Adam. By his second marriage, to Sarah Zeller, born Sept. 15, 1793, died Nov. 25, 1876, Johannes Kintzer had among other children: Mrs. Harry Beidler and John, the latter the father of Isaac Kintzer, who for many years was warden of Berks county.

(IV) Adam Kintzer, born in 1820 in Marion township, died in 1875, after a life spent in agricultural pursuits. He was a well-known citizen of his day, and for three years served with great credit as under steward to Steward Silas W. Fisher, at the county almshouse. Fraternally he was connected with the Odd Fellows. He was a member of the Zion's Reformed Church at Womelsdorf, and is buried at that place. Adam Kintzer married Mary Ruth, born in 1822, daughter of Adam Ruth; she died very suddenly in 1886, while seated at the dinner table. Six children were born to Adam and Mary (Ruth) Kintzer, namely: Rebecca, who married George Bright, of Womelsdorf; Mary Ann, who married Henry Arnold, of Reading; Anna, who married Elijah Smith, of West Reading; Caroline, deceased, who married Wellington Fisher, deceased, former clerk of the county almshouse; Sarah, who married John Miller, of Wernersville; and John A.

(V) John A. Kintzer lived in the borough of Womelsdorf until nine years of age, when his father removed to a farm near the town, and there he worked until 1896. He began farming on his own account in 1890, operating his own farm of 238 acres for four years, and then sold out to become the proprietor of the "Lebanon Valley House," Wernersville, which he conducted very successfully for four years. This hotel Mr. Kintzer made one of the leading houses in the county, having many summer boarders from Philadelphia, Germantown, West Chester and Jersey City. In the fall of 1900 he purchased the good-will and fixtures of the "West Reading Hotel," which he has since successfully conducted. He is also managing the well-known Samuel Beidler farm in Spring township, consisting of ninety-five acres, now the property of Mrs. William P. High. This property is finely improved, having large, substantial buildings, and is furnished with the latest and best machinery. A large herd of cattle is raised there annually. In addition to this place, Mr. Kintzer owns a tract of twenty-eight acres in Lower Heidelberg township, one of the best truck farms in that township. Mr. Kintzer is an able agriculturist, is enterprising and progressive, and his manner of doing business has gained him many friends in West Reading. In politics he is a Democrat, and while a resident of Lower Heidelberg township he served as a member of the school board for nine consecutive years. He was also a delegate to many county conventions, and assisted in nominating Hon. James N. Ermentrout, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, for his second term. Socially, he is connected with the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 66, of Reading. He and his family are members of Hain's Reformed Church, of Wernersville.

On Oct. 18, 1879, Mr. Kintzer was united in marriage with Adaline Ruth, born in 1858, daughter of Reuben H. and Catharine (Ruth) Ruth, of Lower Heidelberg township. One child has been born to this union, Reuben W., local manager of the Bell Telephone Company at Carbondale, Pa., who married Mamie Senior, of Reading; they have two children, May A. and John S.

JAMES McGOWAN, president of the Berks County Agricultural Society, of which organization he has been a member since 1874, and a leading retired citizen of Robeson township, Berks county, was born May 2, 1838, in Union township, this county, son of John and Elizabeth (Geiger) McGowan.

Mr. McGowan was educated in the schools of Union township, and early in life took up agricultural pursuits, which he has made his life work. He is considered an authority on modern farming methods, and his beautifully located farm is well adapted for pasturing purposes for his herd of fifteen cows, a stream of fine, clear water running through the property. Mr. McGowan's dairy business is an extensive one, the product thereof being sold in the Philadelphia market. In religious belief Mr. McGowan and his family are Methodists. He is a Democrat in politics, and was for a number of years township assessor and tax collector. During his long membership in the Berks County Agricultural Society, Mr. McGowan has never missed a meeting, and since being elected to the presidency in 1883, he has done much towards strengthening it in many ways. Since 1895 he has also been president of the Berks County Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

In 1862 Mr. McGowan married Annie Ammons, daughter of Henry Ammons, who died in April, 1883. To this union were born eight children: William m. Rosie Miller; John m. Bella Rancel; Harry m. May Patterson; Evan m. Jennie Sponagle; Elizabeth m. Samuel Wicklein; Maggie m. George E. Wells; Amanda m. H. A. Rehr; and Kate m. Ambrose Slichter.

JOEL S. LENGEL, who has been chief engineer for the Metropolitan Electric Company, Reading, for a number of years, has been with that concern since 1889. He was born in 1856 in Penn township, Berks county, where his grandfather, Martin Lengel, was a prominent farmer in Penn Valley, owning a fine farm there. Martin Lengel was born Jan. 4, 1786, and died Jan. 2, 1861, aged seventy-four years, eleven months, twenty-nine days; he is buried at Bernville. He married Elizabeth Bickel, born Sept. 12, 1785, died Nov. 6, 1868. She is buried at Bern Church. They had one son and two daughters: Israel, Mrs. Samuel Phillips and Mrs. Jerome Degler.

Israel Lengel, son of Martin, was born Nov. 20, 1822, at the old homestead in Penn Valley, and died Sept. 9, 1888, aged sixty-five years, nine months, nineteen days. He was a prominent farmer in that district for many years, a few years before his death, however, removing to the borough of Bernville, where he bought a home and lived retired. He married Mary Althouse, born Aug. 28, 1825, died Dec. 24, 18—, and they had children as follows: Frank, one that died in infancy, Isabella, Elmira, Priscilla, Mary, Matilda, Joel S., Lizzie, Aaron, Levi, and another that died in infancy.

Joel S. Lengel attended public school in Penn, Bern and North Heidelberg townships. In 1888 he came to Reading, where he has since made his home, and during the first year of his residence here, was in the employ of Watt & Co., shoe manufacturers, as engineer, also serving in the same capacity with J. G. Speidel. In 1889 he entered his present employ, where he has since remained. By application, hard work and ability to perform his duties well, he has risen to the post of chief engineer, which he has filled for some years with eminent satisfaction to the firm, being a good mechanic and devoted to his work. He has had as many as fifty-five men in his charge in this position.

Mr. Lengel married Ellen Werner, daughter of Augustus L. Werner, of Centre township, Berks county, and granddaughter of William Werner, a native of Heidelberg township. Mr. and Mrs. Lengel have two children: Alvin, married to Mamie Trusty and living in Reading; and Catharine, wife of C. M. Althouse and also living in Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Lengel occupy their own home at No. 930 Oley street, Reading, which he bought and remodeled. They have an adopted daughter, Miss Edna Werner, who makes her home with them at present.

Mr. Lengel is a member of Camp No. 89, P. O. S. of A., of Reading, and of the Motormen's Relief Association. He is a Democrat in political sentiment and a Lutheran in church connection.

KAUFFMAN C. KURTZ, who for almost forty years has been engaged in the milling business in Robeson township, where he also conducts a farm, is a very well known man in that section of Berks county. He was born in 1833 in Caernarvon township, this county, son of Jacob and Ann (Shingle) Kurtz, who reared a large family.

Jacob Kurtz was also a miller by occupation, following that calling all his life. He purchased the old Hartley Potts mill and operated it until his death, doing an active and prosperous business. He was a capable man, and held various township offices, to which he was elected on the Democratic ticket, which always received his support. He married Ann Shingle, and to them were born thirteen children, namely: John; Henry; David; George; Samuel; Kauffman C.; Thomas; Matilda, who married James Scarlet; Elizabeth, who married Jacob Sheeler; Ann, who married Peter Plank; Catherina, who married Edward Evens; Barbara, who died young; and Jacob. The father of this family died in 1881, at the age of seventy-seven years, the mother at the advanced age of ninety. In religious belief he was a Baptist, while she was a Methodist.

Kauffman C. Kurtz was six months old when his parents moved to Robeson township, and there he was reared and educated, attending the common schools. He learned his father's trade, working on the home farm and in his father's mill until 1869, since when he has been engaged in milling on his own account. In that year he and his brother-in-law, Peter Plank, purchased what was known as the Brunner mill, located on Hay creek, and they continued to operate it in partnership, under the firm name of Plank & Kurtz, until Mr. Plank's death, in 1903. Mr. Kurtz has since carried on the business alone, though the old firm name remains unchanged. In the fall of 1885 they replaced the old mill with the present three-story stone structure. The plant is what is known as a twenty-five-barrel mill, and much of the grinding done is custom work. There is also a sawmill in connection with the gristmill, and considerable custom work is also done in that line. Mr. Kurtz, in addition to milling, looks after the cultivation of his ninety-five-acre farm. He has likewise been active in the public affairs of his locality, having served as jury commissioner and school director, holding the latter office twelve years. Like his father he is a stanch Democrat. Mr. Kurtz was twice drafted during the Civil war, in 1862 and again in 1864, on the first occasion paying $900 for a substitute, and the second time $300.

In 1862 Mr. Kurtz married Elizabeth Bitler, daughter of Daniel and Eve (Priest) Bitler, and to them were born three children, namely: Matilda, who died when six years old; Hiester, an engraver, who married Cora Evens, and has two children, Mary and James K., and Levi, a machinist, who is married to Margaret Fisher and has two children, Alma and Estella.

SHARADIN. This family is of French origin, and the name was originally of quite different form.

Jacob Schirardin, as the name appears on the gravestone, was the emigrant ancestor of this family in America. He was born in Europe in 1735, at Rauweisen, and died in what is now Maxatawny township, Berks county, Pa., July 11, 1820. June 15, 1758, he married Margareta Haag, born Feb. 15, 1733, died Jan. 30, 1806. Both are buried in Bowers cemetery. They had a family of eight sons and four daughters, among whom were the following: Maria C., born Aug. 16, 1759, died Dec. 26, 1827, m. Daniel Hoch; Jacob, born Jan. 8, 1761, died Jan. 9, 1822 (great-grandfather of Francis E.); Peter, born July 25, 1764, died March 3, 1841; Abraham, born July 25, 1766, died Dec. 29, 1818; Daniel; Susanna, born Feb. 10, 1769, m. Nicholas Kutz, and died May 20, 1847; Justina, born Jan. 12, 1783, died May 22, 1852, m. Casper Schmick.

It is not known at just what time Jacob Schirardin came to America, but his daughter, Susanna, was born in Maxatawny township, Berns county, Feb. 10, 1769. This is the earliest record we have concerning him.

Jacob Sharadin, son of the emigrant, was born Jan. 8, 1761, and died Jan. 9, 1822. He was a very prosperous farmer and esteemed citizen. His children were: Abraham, lived on the old farm; Elizabeth, m. George Kemp; Sarah, m. Absalom Beidler; David, is mentioned below; Katherine, m. Jonathan Crim; Reuben, m. Katherine Biehl; Nathan, m. Rebecca Esser; Jacob, died unmarried; Polly, m. David Fister, and became the mother of the well-known Col. Thomas D. Fister.

David Sharadin, son of Jacob, was a prosperous farmer of Maxatawny township. He was born in 1807, on the old Sharadin farm, near Bowers, Pa., and died in September, 1880. In his early life he lived in Oley township, but later purchased his farm in Maxatawny township, where he resided for over forty years. He married Mary Magdalene Wanner, daughter of Col. John Wanner, and they had these children: Ephraim, m. Florence Hoch, and lives in Kutztown; Catharine, m. James Schaeffer, and lives in Richmond township; Henry, m. Abbie Deisher; J. Daniel, m. Caroline E. Butz; Sarah Maria, m. Frank Keck, and lives on Normal avenue, Kutztown; William, m. Mary Sharadin; David, m. Mary Bieber, and lives in Kutztown.

J. Daniel Sharadin, father of Francis E. Sharadin, is a tanner by trade, and for some years has been engaged in the leather and lumber business. He is an active Democrat, and during his time has been councilman and chief burgess of Kutztown, serving in these offices for a number of years. He is public-spirited, and has been a trustee of the Keystone State Normal School for the past fifteen years. Mr. Sharadin married in 1868 Caroline E. Butz, daughter of Egedius and Elizabeth (Bieber) Butz, and they have had the following children: Catherine, died in infancy; Harry W., m. Louisa Neff, and is a well-known artist of Reading; Ella M. m. Frank C. Miller; Howard S., m. Minnie Keiter; Francis E., is mentioned below; Ralph C., unmarried, is a druggist of Philadelphia; Caroline L., resides at home.

FRANCIS EDGAR SHARADIN was born at Kutztown, Aug. 20, 1880, and was educated in the local schools and at the Keystone State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1898. After graduating he became a clerk in the general store of H. H. Almers, in whose employ he remained for about a year, and in 1899 he assisted his brother in conducting a shirt factory. After being thus engaged for a year, he took an extensive trip to Europe, visiting Scotland, England, Ireland, Belgium, Germany, France and Switzerland, and during this time he gained much useful information. After returning from abroad, he traveled to some extent in his own country, especially through the Eastern and Central States, and the same year purchased the plant known as the Kutztown shirt factory, from J. B. Sharadin, his father, which he conducted very successfully until he sold the machinery in 1907 to the present operators. The factory is a two-story brick building, 45 x 45, which Mr. Sharadin still owns. He gave regular employment to about sixty hands, having a capacity of about 500 dozen shirts weekly, and sold all his goods to the New York trade.

In politics, Mr. Sharadin is a Democrat. He is an active member of the Reformed Church; fraternally he is a prominent Free Mason, being past master of Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., and a member of Reading Lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree.

ADAM KINDT LEIBELSPERGER, who is engaged in business in Reading, Pa., as a member of the transfer and local express company of Leibelsperger & Walborn, was born in 1880, in Richmond township, Berks county, son of Joel M. and Mary (Kindt) Leibelsperger, the former a hotel keeper and general merchant at Moselem Springs for a number of years.

Adam K. Leibelsperger received his education in the common schools of Richmond township and after attending Keystone State Normal school, at Kutztown, Pa., entered his father's mercantile establishment, where he remained for two years. He came to Reading in 1903, and engaged as shipping clerk with the wholesale grocery firm of J. B. Miller & Sons, and in 1904, in company with Jacob Walborn engaged in his present business. The firm has been successful from the start, they now employing nine men and having twenty boarding horses and five express teams. The office and storage and warehouse is located between Tenth and Eleventh, on Windsor street. Both of the partners are young men of much business ability, and their enterprise and energy have built up a patronage that compares favorably with any in the same line in the city.

Mr. Leibelsperger married Miss Katherine Hill, who died on Nov. 18, 1907, age twenty-seven years, six months, six days. She was the daughter of Charles F. Hill and Mary (Rahn) of Fleetwood, Pennsylvania.

JESSE I. BOYER, superintendent of the Scott Foundry of the Reading Iron Company, of Reading, Pa., one of the leading industries of Berks county, was born in 1850, in Norristown, Montgomery Co., Pa., son of Michael C. and Mary A. (Ziegler) Boyer.

Michael C. Boyer, who was proprietor of the Norristown Iron works, and one of the best known iron manufacturers of the State in his day, died in April, 1885, aged seventy-six years, having been retired for several years. He married Mary A. Ziegler, who bore her husband ten children, as follows: Jesse I.; Catherine m. Daniel Jacoby; Wallace, a pattern maker, deceased; Horace, a clerk; Wilson, a stone mason; Allen, deceased; Harry, a plumber; Mary, deceased; Frank, of Norristown; and Charles died in infancy. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Boyer was a Republican in politics.

Jesse I. Boyer was educated in the common schools of his native locality, and entered his father's employ when a young man, remaining with him until the business was discontinued in 1870. He had learned the trade of machinist, and in 1876 came to Reading and accepted a position with Miller & Steen, which firm was later absorbed by the old Reading Iron Co. He was first made foreman of the machine shops in 1876, continuing as such until 1879. He then went to S. R. Seyfert & Co., at Seyfert Station, built their rolling mills, and remained with the firm for eight years, when he returned to the Scott works as draftsman. In 1890 he was made assistant superintendent of the plant, and in 1902 was made superintendent, a position which he has ably filled to the present time, having under his employ from 275 to 300 people. Under Mr. Boyer's supervision this foundry turned out a casting of 78,100 pounds, the largest turned out of any foundry in this section if not in the State. The foundry and machine shop also turned out, under the supervision of Mr. Boyer, the Brown Segmental Wire Wound Gun, which was tested by the United States Government at Sandy Hook.

Mr. Boyer married Mary Ann Furey, a native of Norristown, Pa., and to this union there have been born four children: Alice, m. William Beard; Jesse, a molder; Samuel, deceased; and Nellie. In religious belief the family are Presbyterians. Mr. Boyer is a Republican in his political belief.

LEWIS J. GEIGER, who is well known among the hotel men of Berks county, Pa., is proprietor of the popular "Schuylkill Avenue Hotel" in Reading. Mr. Geiger was born Sept. 21, 1867, at Hamburg, son of David Q. and Mary (Byar) Geiger.

Jacob Geiger, the great-great-grandfather of Lewis J., lived at a place now known as Fruitville. Concerning this Jacob Geiger, the following is taken from the Reading Eagle of Dec. 8, 1907: "Heirs of Conrad Geiger, who left Pottstown in 1841 and went to Cuba, held a meeting this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sallie Steinrook, 24 King street, and organized for the purpose of inquiring into a claim for a sugar plantation said to have been left by their ancestor in Cuba. These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Sallie Steinrook, of Pottstown; Albert Leister, 249 Maple street, Reading, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Hannah Wendling, 446 Chestnut street, Pottstown, Treasurer. J. T. Hayter, 1837 South Chadwick street, Philadelphia, was selected to visit Cuba and investigate the claim.

"Conrad Geiger, the ancestor, was a son of Jacob Geiger, of the place now known as Fruitville, in Limerick township. Upon the settlement of his father's estate he is said to have had from $20,000 to $40,000, and with this he went to Cuba. He had a sugar plantation at Santa Zable, on the north coast of Cuba, east of Cardenas. Conrad died in 1868 or 1869. The London Times or News printed an advertisement for English papers to copy, calling for the heirs of Conrad Geiger to appear and claim the Cuban property. The advertisement would have appeared, according to legal periods in 1873 or 1874, 1878 or 1879, 1883 or 1884. A record of this advertisement in a local paper is being sought. In 1894 a movement was started to look into this same claim, but it was not pushed to a finish. A man named Chester M. Whiting of Franklin, Mass., has now been located, who worked for Mr. Conrad on his Cuban plantation in 1864 and 1865."

Jacob Geiger, brother of the Conrad mentioned, and great-grandfather of Lewis J., lived below Pottstown several miles, where he owned a twelve-acre tract of land, and also followed the trade of shoemaker for many years. He is buried at Pottstown. Mr. Geiger had twelve children: Charles, of Pottstown; John, of Ringing Rocks; Joseph, of Allentown; Henry, of Norristown; David, of Schuylkill Haven; Jacob, of Hamburg; Samuel, of Montgomery county; Katie, who married a Mr. Pierce of Pottstown; Tina, who married a Mr. Stichter of Tamaqua; Becky, who married a Mr. Yerkey, of Pottstown; Sallie, who married Henry Baer; and Polly, who married a Mr. Hatfield of Pottstown.

Jacob Geiger, grandfather of Lewis J., was born in August, 1810, and died April 14, 1885, aged seventy-four years, at Hamburg, Pa., where he was buried. He was the owner of six dwellings and a flour mill at Hamburg, was a director of the Hamburg Savings Bank, and had various other business interests. He was married (first) to Rachel Quinn, and they had these children: David Q.; John Q., of Reading; Mary Ellen, who married Harry Shutter; and James Q., of Reading. His second marriage was to Mary Wagner, and they had two children: Emma C., who married Nathan Confer, of Hamburg; and Freelove I., who is unmarried and lives at Hamburg.

David Q. Geiger was born at Hamburg, May 10, 1839, and died at Pottstown, Aug. 20, 1877. He was buried at Pottstown, where he was a printer and proprietor of the Pottstown Advertiser, one of the first papers of the borough. He was a leading member of the Baptist Church, in which he was an official. Mr. Geiger was married to Mary Byar, who died June 14, 1878, and they had these children: Lewis J.; Edward F., of Reading; William H., who died in infancy; and George H., of Coraopolis, Pennsylvania.

Lewis J. Geiger was but one year old when he accompanied his parents to Pottstown, and there he lived until his thirteenth year, attending the public schools. His parents having died he went to live with his grandfather Jacob Geiger at Hamburg, at which place he attended the public schools until nineteen years old. On reaching his twentieth year he came to Reading and found employment at Sternbergh's nut and bolt works, where he continued for a period of eighteen years, thirteen years of which he was a foreman in the nut department. In the spring of 1904 he engaged in the saloon business. Mr. Geiger is an active Republican in politics, and for several years was register assessor of the Fifteenth Ward. He and his family are members of St. Mark's Reformed Church at Reading, where Mr. Geiger owns a nice dwelling. He is a member of the Knights of Malta, No. 47, of Reading, the Junior Mechanics, No. 27, Grand Fraternity of Philadelphia, and Schuylkill Fire Company. With the last named organization Mr. Geiger has been identified since its organization in 1892. He was financial secretary for two years and for eight years he has been recording secretary. He is also a member of the following organizations: the Philharmonic Band; the Cadet Band; the Harmony Volunteer Beneficial Relief Association; the Nursery Literary Association, and the Uniform Rank of the Schuylkill Fire Company.

On May 11, 1889, Mr. Geiger was married to Agnes M. Lengel, daughter of Paul and Emma (Riegel) Lengel. Four sons have been born to this union, as follows: Paul, David, Leon and Lewis J. Jr.

Among the interesting features of Mr. Geiger's life was an election bet he made with Robert B. Harris that if Taft was elected, Mr. Geiger would have to collect the pennies and Mr. Harris would have to play the grind organ, and if Bryan should be elected Mr. Harris would have to do the collecting and Mr. Geiger play the grind organ. The route that was originally agreed upon was out Schuylkill avenue from Washington to Gus Resch's Hotel across the Schuylkill avenue bridge, both wearing masks and fixed up for the occasion. The proceeds were given to the Home for Friendless Children. The above program was carried out to the letter Nov. 14, 1908.

EPHRAIM MENGEL, one of Maiden-creek township's most highly-esteemed citizens, who has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in this locality for many years, was born Feb. 2, 1838, on the old homestead in Maiden-creek township, son of Isaac and Susanna (Baver) Mengel.

Abraham Mengel, the grandfather of Ephraim, was a member of one of the oldest families of Berks county, as was his wife, whose maiden name was Magdalena DeWaldt. He died in middle life, while Mrs. Mengel survived him for a long period, and died at the age of eighty-two years. They had a family of eight children: Isaac, the father of Ephraim; William; Solomon; Abraham and Lazarus, who died young; Sarah, m. to Merkel Gideon; Lena, m. to David Unger; and Esther, m. to Daniel Becker.

Isaac Mengel was born Feb. 6, 1806, in Maiden-creek township, on the farm now owned by Ephraim, his son. He was a carpenter and builder by occupation, also following farming, and was one of the township's highly-esteemed citizens. Mr. Mengel was married to Susanna Baver, a descendant of the Greths, and five children were born to this union: Ephraim; Mary, unmarried; William, deceased, m. Anna Keim; Israel, is single; and Sarah, m. Abraham Keim.

Ephraim Mengel was reared and educated on the homestead, and as a youth learned the trade of carpenter and builder, which he followed for some years, working for the Government in Virginia during 1864. On his return to Pennsylvania he continued this occupation in Berks and Schuylkill counties, but subsequently came into possession of the old homestead, and has been operating it to the present time.

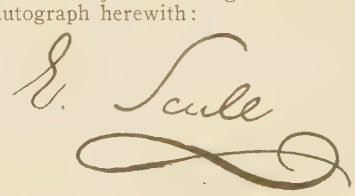
On Nov. 1, 1861, Mr. Mengel was married to Katie Moll, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Greenawaldt) Moll, and one child, Alvin, was born to this union. Mrs. Mengel died Aug. 27, 1868, and Mr. Mengel was married (second) to Matilda Moll, a sister of his first wife. Three children were born to this union: Oscar Isaac, who married Lizzie Noll; John, and Howard. Howard Mengel was a midshipman of the U. S. Navy for four years, during which time he went to nearly every point of interest in the world. Oct. 12, 1906, after receiving his honorable discharge from the navy, he started for home.

Mr. Mengel and family are members of Becker's St. Peter's Church. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has held a number of township offices, including school director, assessor, etc., but has never cared to become a politician.

WILLIAM O. SCULL of Reading, proprietor of the Edward Scull & Company plumbing and steam heating establishment, was born May 29, 1862, in Reading, son of Edward and Catherine (Call) Scull, and a descendant of Nicholas Scull, supervisor general of Pennsylvania.

Mark Biddle Scull, the grandfather of William O., was father of the following children: Mark; James; Lewis; Charles; Edward; Elizabeth m. James Bright; Amelia also married; Martha m. Thomas Bingaman; Kate m. Augustus Snyder; one died unmarried. Mark Biddle Scull was superintendent of the Reading water department for many years, and a man of prominence and influence in his day.

Edward Scull, who was the founder of Edward Scull & Company, learned the plumbing, gas fitting and steam heating trades, which he followed throughout life, his death occurring Feb. 5, 1902. He married Catherine Call, and to this union there were born four children: William O.; Edward M., deceased; Mary M., deceased; and Susan C., who married George W. Shaffer, has four children: Mary, Catherine, Henry and Edward. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Scull was a Democrat, and for several years served as councilman from the Seventh Ward of Reading. Fraternally he was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and had reached the thirty-second degree of Masonry. We append his autograph herewith:



William O. Scull was educated in the public schools of Reading, and later took a business course, after which he entered his father's establishment, and in 1892 formed a partnership with his father. After the latter's death he took up the management of the business, which he has conducted with much success under the firm style of Edward Scull & Co.

In 1884 Mr. Scull married Sallie H. Mengel, daughter of George and Mary Mengel, and four children have been born to this union: William E., Mary K., Elsie F. and Robert S. Mr. Scull, with his family, attends St. Matthew's Lutheran Church. Fraternally he is connected with Lodge No. 62, Reading Chapter, DeMolay Commandery, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. In political matters Mr. Scull is a Democrat.

HARRISON H. HEMMIG, a veteran of the Civil war, now engaged in the flour and feed business at Grill, Pa., is one of a numerous family in the state, who claim descent from one Johannes Hemmig, a native of Switzerland.

Johannes Hemmig left his fatherland in the middle of the eighteenth century, and in 1759 he is on record as a resident of Pennsylvania, where he was a taxable in Brecknock township, Berks county, paying a five-pound tax. By occupation he was a farmer, owning his land. He made his will May 20, 1776, and it was registered Jan. 21, 1777, the year of his death. His wife, Eva Maria, survived him, and they were the parents of Johannes (Hans), who was willed the homestead; Elizabeth, Anna and Eve.

Johannes Hemmig (2) was born Nov. 2, 1742, and died Nov. 14, 1820, aged a little over seventy-eight years. A farmer like his father, he located in Cumru township, and became the possessor of six hundred acres there, including what is now the Samuel Kurtz farm, the William R. High farm and a part of the present property of the Berks County Almshouse. As might be inferred, he was a man of both riches and prominence in the county. Twice married, his three sons were the children of his first wife, Elizabeth, who was born June 26, 1749, and died Aug. 26, 1804, aged fifty-five years, two months. Their oldest son (1) John, who lived in Cumru township, married Miss Yeich and had three sons, John, Joseph and Benjamin. (2) David, owner of the Angelica Mill on Angelica Creek, married Miss Catherine Werner. (3) Joseph, who lived on the old Morgantown road, married a sister of Mrs. David Hemmig and became the father of three sons, Benjamin, Daniel and Samuel.

David Hemmig, second son of Johannes (2), was born in Cumru township, March 6, 1775, and died Nov. 19, 1864, in his ninetieth year. A lifelong miller by trade, he bore a considerable reputation in his line and became quite a landowner. In 1812 he built the Angelica Mill, which is now owned and occupied by Harvey Marks. His wife, Catherine Werner, was born July 17, 1783, and died Nov. 13, 1868, in her eighty-fifth year. They were the parents of eight children: (1) Margaret, m. Philip Brown, who at one time owned the land where the Berks County Almshouse stands. (2) Joseph was the father of Harrison H. (3) Catherine m. a farmer named David Focht and they were the parents of Levi H. Focht, the well-known contractor. (4) Elizabeth m. Conrad Hornberger, proprietor of the Leopard Hotel and also of the Angelica Hotel in Cumru township. (5) Levi m. Miss Eva Raudenbuch. He was well-known as a miller and farmer and died in Adamstown. (6) Sarah m. Samuel Nosser, a farmer and a teamster between Reading and Philadelphia. (7) Polly was born Oct. 21, 1821, at Hemmig's Mill, Hemmig's Corner. In 1861 she m. Isaac Hiester, a farmer, and when left a widow undertook to carry on their farm herself. She proved fully equal to the task and continued it till after her eighty-sixth year. (8) David m. Mrs. Louisa (Stafford) Moore. He ran the Angelica Mill for twenty years, and died in Adamstown.

Joseph Hemmig was born in the old fire place of the Angelica Mill, June 16, 1805. At the age of fourteen he began regularly to learn milling and when old enough his father bought for him the mill at Shillington, which was thereafter called the Hemmig mill. He gave the greater part of his life to this occupation, together with farming, and was successful in both. He was noted for his powerful physique, and was able easily to carry a three-bushel bag of wheat up-stairs. He married Elizabeth Hornberger, daughter of Conrad. Joseph Hemmig passed away Nov. 19, 1871. Their children, ten in number, were many of them of marked musical ability. They were as follows: Catherine, who died in infancy; Henry, who lived only nine years; John, a retired miller, m. to Miss Sarah Noll; William, a Reading merchant, m. to (first) Miss Eliza Tobias, (second) Miss Rebecca Moore, and later a third wife; Harrison H.; Eliza, who died in childhood; Franklin, a miller and farmer of Cumru township, who was killed on a railroad, m. to Miss Sarah Weidknecht; Cyrus, a musician at Shillington, m. to Miss Emma Hartz; Sarah, m. to the late Henry S. Hill, a farmer of Exeter township; and Benneville, born July 18, 1852.

Benneville Hemmig married in 1878 Miss Amanda Schaeffer, and after her death married Miss Sabina M. Schultz, now deceased, who was a daughter of Dr. Charles Schultz, late of Reading. By the latter he had seven children, Bernard, Charles J., Florence M., Bessie J., Blanche H., Ralph H., and Paul R. (who died aged four months). The mother of these died in June, 1900. By occupation, Mr. Hemmig is a flour and feed merchant at Shillington, but music has always claimed much of his attention. For thirty-two years he was organist of Yocom's Church, and for a long time leader of Hemmig's Band, now the Winona Band of Mohnton, which was organized by his brother, William, while in it his brothers Franklin and Cyrus played the trombone and cornet, respectively.

Harrison H. Hemmig was born at Shillington, April 4, 1840, and was given a fair education in the township schools, being especially proficient in spelling and penmanship. From the time he was twelve years old till the war broke out, he was with his father in the mill, becoming entirely familiar with the details of the work. He enlisted, July 18, 1861, in Co. D, 3d Pa. Reserves, as a private, and in time was promoted to be a corporal. He was in active service most of the time till his discharge at Philadelphia, June 18, 1864, one month less than three years. He was with the Army of the Potomac and, June 30, 1862, while participating in the Seven Days' battle on the peninsula, he was wounded at Charles City Cross Roads, receiving a gun-shot wound in the left thigh. The next morning he was taken prisoner, and eight days later removed to Libby prison, where he was confined eleven days. Only the fact that he was so badly wounded saved him from being sent to a worse fate at Andersonville. After his exchange and recovery he rejoined his regiment, Nov. 16, 1862, in time to take part in the battle of Fredericksburg, the following month, under Gen. Burnside. Later, under Gen. Crook, at Cloyd Mountain, W. Va., he received a wound in the knee from a shell and was again disabled, necessitating removal to Gallipolis Hospital in Ohio, whence he was shortly sent to Philadelphia and there discharged.

On resuming civil life, Mr. Hemmig devoted himself to working on the home farm for some years, but in 1867 went into the milling business and was so engaged for twelve years. In 1879 he started his present enterprise, established a store and warehouse at Grill, and opened the flour and feed trade which he has been so successfully conducting ever since. His specialty is Hemmig's Superior Kiln Dried Cornmeal, a high-grade product for which there is a large local demand. In addition to his business cares, Mr. Hemmig has undertaken political responsibilities, and has served Cumru township very efficiently as auditor, having been appointed one year and elected on the Republican ticket for three more terms of three years each.

In 1879, Mr. Hemmig was joined in matrimony to Miss Amanda Bingaman, but their union was brought to a premature end by the untimely death of Mrs. Hemmig, May 30, 1885, when thirty-five years of age. Mr. Hemmig, like all the members of his father's family, is a member of Yocom's Church (Reformed) and he has served in it as a deacon. It is in the graveyard of this church that the remains of his parents are buried. Mr. Hemmig is one of the veterans of the war comprising Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., of Reading.

WILLIAM WEAVER, of Reading, was born Sept. 17, 1835, son of William and Diana (Foust) Weaver, and grandson of Peter Weaver, who was the emigrant ancestor of this branch of the family in America.

Peter Weaver, on coming to this country, was one of the pioneer settlers of Montgomery Co., Pa., and engaged at his trade of sugar refiner. He married and had a family of several children, among them William. William Weaver was but seven years of age at the time of his father's death, and he was at once bound out to General Sheetz, who owned a paper mill in White Marsh township, Montgomery county. He remained with this gentleman until he was twenty-two years of age, and, having acquired a good knowledge of paper-making in all of its branches, came to Berks county and hired out to Charles Van Reed, who owned a paper mill at the junction of Tulpehocken and Cacoosing creeks. Here Mr. Weaver worked for a period of thirty-three years; in the spring of 1844 he moved to Pennypack, and was employed in Joseph McDowell's paper mill. He later removed to Trenton, N. J., returning to Reading in the fall of 1845 and re-entering the employ of Charles Van Reed, accepting the position of "boss" paper maker. Here he bleached the first engine of rag pulp in Berks county, and this caused much jealousy among rival paper makers, who did not fancy "Bill Weaver's advanced ideas in paper-making." He was possessed of more than an ordinary education, and taught school for one or two seasons. He was also an expert salesman.

Mr. Weaver remained at the Van Reed mill until 1853, and in that year rented a mill at Stony Creek, where he engaged in the manufacture of paper on percentage until 1857. In this year he located at the Cacoosing, renting a mill and manufacturing on his own account until 1862, when he removed to Yoder's mill, near Pleasantville, continuing in a like manner there until 1865. In this year Mr. Weaver went to Venango county, prospecting for oil, but not being successful returned to his old business, which however he did not carry on long. His son, William, had engaged in the paper stock and junk business with Mr. Becker, of Manheim, and the latter gentleman engaged Mr. William Weaver, Sr., to look after his interests. When the concern of Weaver & Becker wound up its affairs, William Weaver, Sr., started a like business on North Fourth street, operating on his own account, until his death in 1890, at the age of eighty years. His wife passed away in 1854, aged forty-two years, the mother of five children: Sarah m. William Bower; William; Mary Ann, m. Peter Y. Aldeman; Rebecca, and Emma J., died in infancy. Mr. Weaver attended the Universalist Church. In politics he was a lifelong Democrat.

William Weaver, Jr., was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, where his early education was received, also in the common schools of Bern and Spring townships. He learned the trade of paper making from his father, and this he followed for a period of twenty-one years, when he engaged in the paper stock and junk business. Closing this out in 1877, he engaged in the hotel business, continuing therein until 1879, when he sold out and accepted a position with Nolan Bros., contractors, and later with Hawman, Yarnell & Rowe, who were engaged in the same line of business.

Here he continued for four years, when, in company with William Fisher, he commenced to do contracting and building, and in this line became very successful, building many of Reading's substantial business blocks and residences. He continued thus occupied until 1888, when he again engaged in the paper stock and junk business with his son, William H., and in this continued until the latter's death Dec. 29, 1896. After settling his son's estate he purchased the remaining interest and has since conducted it alone.

In 1863 Mr. Weaver was united in marriage with Sarah A. Derr, and to this union was born one son: William H., who died Dec. 29, 1896, leaving a widow, Ruth Bowman, and son, William H. Jr., a machinist who married Gertie Baum and has one child. Mr. William Weaver is a member of the Presbyterian Church. In his politicial views he is an unswerving Democrat. Mrs. Weaver, who passed away April 3, 1904, aged sixty-four years, ten months, was one of the consistent members of the Lutheran Church.

HENRY W. RHOADS, for many years a prominent shoe merchant of Reading, senior member of the well-known firm of Henry W. Rhoads & Son, was a resident of the city through the greater part of his long life, which closed Feb. 5, 1906. Few men were better known in business life in this section of the county, and none had a higher reputation for honorable dealing.

Born Sept. 19, 1823, in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, near the Hill Church, he was a son of George Rhoads, also a native of Colebrookdale township, where he made his home through the greater part of his life. He was a man of great strength, and engaged in teaming between Philadelphia and Pittsburg. He served in local public offices, being constable and tax collector of his township, and was a useful and respected citizen. Moving to Reading in his later years, he died there, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He married Catharine Wise, and to them were born the following children; Maria m. Charles Rufe; Rebecca m. Isaac Undercuffler; William died at Pottstown, Pa.; and Henry W.

Henry W. Rhoads attended the pay schools of his home township, where he lived until he was a young man of eighteen, at which time he came to Reading. Here he learned the shoe business, and for a number of years carried on the manufacture of shoes, in time, however, turning to the business of selling footwear. He carried on business at the corner of Fifth and Penn streets, where "The Fashion" is now located, and continued as a shoe merchant for the long period of twenty-two years, part of the time in partnership with his son. He retired from active life after an unusually successful career, with the respect and esteem of all who knew him, in either business or social relations. Until his death he was held in high regard by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He was a member originally of Trinity Lutheran Church, and when the St. James Lutheran Church was built transferred his membership to it, being one of the pioneers of that congregation, which he served for many years as deacon. During the Civil war Mr. Rhoads served his country as a member of Company G, 2d Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry.

On Sept. 23, 1843, Mr. Rhoads m. Susan L. Long, born Sept. 9, 1821 (daughter of George Long), died April 5, 1891, some years before Mr. Rhoads. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rhoads are buried in the family plot in the Charles Evans cemetery. They were the parents of two children: Elmira R. m. William J. Irwin, of Cumru township, Berks county; Edward H., born May 2, 1857, a resident of Reading, m. Sarah K. Sausen, by whom he has three children, Charles H. (m. Estella Espenshade and has one child, Helen Lanette), Sarah and Paul.

WILLIAM J. IRWIN, a leading agriculturist of Berks county carrying on extensive operations in Cumru township, was born Jan. 24, 1845, at Hibernia, Chester Co., Pa., son of Isaac B. Irwin and grandson of Abner Irwin. He is a great-grandson of the founder of the family in America, who located near Charlestown, Md., where it is supposed he engaged in farming, and where his son Abner was born.

Abner Irwin followed farming for many years near Charlestown, but later in life went to Pottstown, Pa., where he died in 1841, at the age of sixty years. He married Elizabeth Benjamin, also of Maryland, daughter of Joseph Benjamin, a converted Jew, who came to this country during the Revolutionary war. Mr. Benjamin was married in Charlestown, Md., to Betsy Winchester, and after his marriage became one of the leading Methodists of his day. Mr. and Mrs. Abner Irwin are buried in the Pottstown cemetery. Their children were as follows: William, born Sept. 6, 1805, was killed while working in a rolling-mill at Kensington, Pa.; Sarah, born Feb. 18, 1807, died in Philadelphia, unmarried; Absalom, born Aug. 1, 1816, first learned the shoemaker's trade, was later an iron worker, and then went to Oil City, Pa., where he bought oil wells, and there he died; Isaac B. was born Aug. 2, 1818; Anna Jane, born Sept. 20, 1820, m. Robert Collom, of Oxford, Chester county, where she died; Jesse, born Jan. 17, 1823, m. Rebecca Smith; Francis G., born Feb. 14, 1825, was a large railroad contractor at Oil City, Pa.; Mary E. was born Dec. 23, 1827.

Isaac B. Irwin, born Aug. 2, 1818, at Charlestown, Md., died at Oxford, Pa., Dec. 22, 1900, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. When a boy he located at Norristown, where he remained for a number of years, later locating at Pottstown, at which place it is claimed he turned out the first sheet of iron made there. He was skilled in his occupation, and was considered a good, honest, upright citizen. Mr. Irwin married Catharine Smith, daughter of James and Ann (Smith) Smith, both of whom came from Ireland and were Protestants in faith. They bought property near Oxford, Chester Co., Pa., later removing to Cecil county, Md., where they raised their family. Mr. Irwin survived his wife several years. To them were born children as follows: Annie E. m. Charles Wright; Mary W. m. George Trucksess; William J.; Catherine m. Thomas Jefferson Baker, of Norristown, a well-known saddler; Mahlon D. m. Henrietta Lerch; Sarah m. Arthur T. Garren, of Philadelphia; Cyrenius W. m. Mary Whittick; Fannie m. Augustus Freely, of Philadelphia.

William J. Irwin received the greater part of his education in the schools of Norristown, to which place he went with his parents when but six years of age; he had previously received some schooling in Pottstown. After completing his education he was first employed with his father as heater in a rolling-mill, becoming, as was his parent, very skilled in this line of work. About the time he reached his majority he went to Allentown, Pa., and to Oxford, N. J., where he remained for a short time, in 1866 locating in Reading and beginning work at the McIlvaine plant, where he continued for one year. He then spent two years in the polishing department of the Reading Hardware Company, his next employment being with Rick Brothers, at polishing, after which he drove a wagon through the country, selling notions for Samuel T. Jaeger. He then went into the plating business, doing this kind of work first for Orr, Painter & Co., later for many other firms, and continuing for about twenty years in the business, in which he was very successful. Mr. Irwin then purchased the old Jacob Bitting farm, comprising 100 acres of well improved land in Cumru township, on which he has resided since the spring of 1901. This valuable farm, located near the Kurtz House and but one mile from the city of Reading, has undergone many improvements since it came into the hands of Mr. Irwin, who is now carrying on a profitable fruit and dairy business, also keeping a large stock of wine and cider on hand. He is considered one of the most substantial farmers of Cumru township, and his work is done with the aid of the latest improved machinery.

On Jan. 24, 1871, William J. Irwin married Miss Elmira Rebecca Rhoads, daughter of Henry W. and Susan L. (Long) Rhoads, and to this union have been born children as follows: Ida M. m. W. Bridegam, an electrical contractor of Reading, and has three children, LeRoy, Dorothy and Grace; Katie L. m. Wesley Fisher, a butcher of Fritztown, Pa., and has two children, Catherine and Allen; Harry B. m. Katie Sassaman and has three children, William J., Harry and Earl Thomas; William, Jr., m. Clara Buck; Joseph P. m. Celia Althouse; Walter G. m. Bessie Prizer, and has four children, Walter J., Pearl, Arthur and Mildred; Florence m. Thomas Robertson, and has one child, Harold Irwin; Jesse H. is a student in the schools of Reading; Leona F., who is an elocutionist, attends Schuylkill Seminary, Reading; George W. is attending grammar school. The family occupy a beautiful Colonial residence standing on the corner of the farm, near the Kurtz House, on New Holland avenue, one of the most modern homes in the county. It was just completed in 1908.

Mr. Irwin is a Republican in his political belief, and he has served his fellow-citizens as a member of the school board of Cumru township, holding the office of president of that body with great efficiency. He is a member of the Evangelical Church, to which his family also belong, and is an honest and upright citizen, much esteemed and respected in his community. He is a Mason, holding membership in Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M., and DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, Knights Templar.

J. CALVIN LEINBACH, who for nearly fifteen years has been engaged at the hatting trade in West Reading borough, is a native of Bern township, born April 17, 1855, son of Christian Leinbach, and a representative of an old German family early settled in Berks county. The Leinbach family had its early home in the district of Wetterau, Germany, where the first known ancestor of the Berks county family was Henry Leinbach, who married Barbara Lerch.

Johannes Leinbach, Sr., son of Henry and Barbara, was born in Langenselbold, Wetterau, March 9, 1674, and was baptized by the Reformed pastor. In his native land he was an organist. On Oct. 2, 1700, he married Anna Elizabeth Kleiss. He came to Pennsylvania Sept. 11, 1723, with his three sons and two daughters: Frederic, Henry, John, Joanna Maria and Maria Barbara. Mrs. Anna Elizabeth (Kleiss) Leinbach was born in Eidengup, Wetterau, Feb. 2, 1680, daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Schillinger) Kleiss, and was baptized in the Lutheran faith, to which her parents adhered. Johannes Leinbach, Sr., was "vorsteher" of the Oley congregation, into which office he was inducted April 9, 1742.

Frederic Leinbach, son of Johannes, Sr., was born in Hochstadt, near Frankfort-on-the-Main, July 15, 1703, and was baptized by the Reformed pastor, Rev. Bender. He was a tailor by trade. On June 2, 1737, he married Elizabeth Frey, of Skippack, who was born there July 1, 1719, and was baptized by Count Zinzendorf May 6, 1742.

Johannes Leinbach, Jr., son of Johannes, Sr., was born in Hochstadt Feb. 13, 1712. He accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania in 1723, and settled as a farmer. On Aug. 12, 1735 he married Catharine Riehm, of Muddy Creek, and they had eleven children, one of whom died in infancy, the others being: Frederic, John, Louis, Abraham, Benjamin, Joseph, Elizabeth, Maria Barbara, Johanna and Catharine.

John Daniel Leinbach, son of Johannes, Jr., and Catharine (Riehm) Leinbach, died in Oley April 8, 1817, aged seventy-one years, two months, nineteen days. On Nov. 9, 1768, he married Catharine Graul, who died April 6, 1783, the mother of six children: Salome, born March 9, 1771, sign of the Goat; Maria Sybilla, born Nov. 17, 1773, sign of the Goat; Susanna, born Nov. 1, 1775, sign of Waterman; John (Johannes), born April 3, 1778, sign of Cancer (sponsor, John Leinbach); John Henry, born Aug. 29, 1780, sign of the Virgin (sponsors, John Schieffer and wife); and John Daniel, born June 21, 1783, sign of the Ram (sponsors, Philip Miller and wife). John Daniel Leinbach married a second time, and this wife bore him two children. Abraham, born March 8, 1787, sign of the Scorpion (sponsors Mr. Ohnmacht and wife); and Catharine, born June 9, 1788, sign of the Virgin (sponsor, Catharine Lerch). In 1789 John Daniel Leinbach married (third) Mary Magdalena Hartman, and the children of this marriage were: Jacob, born Sept. 24, 1790; Christian, born Nov. 24, 1791 (sponsors, Christian Gosh and wife); Benjamin, born Sept. 26, 1793 (sponsors, Benjamin and Margaret Leinbach); Joseph, born Aug. 12, 1795, died Nov. 6, 1795; William, born Aug. 27, 1796 (sponsor, Pastor Boas); Samuel, born April 14, 1798 (sponsors, Daniel Hartman and Maria Lerch); Maria Magdalena, born April 21, 1800 (sponsor, Maria Magdalena Hartman); Thomas H., born Jan. 18, 1802 (sponsors, Peter Mohn and wife, Magdalena); Salome, born Feb. 25, 1804, died in early youth (sponsors, John Knabb and wife, Salome); Frederick, born Aug. 9, 1807 (sponsors, Frederick Ohnmacht and wife); Solomon, born June 9, 1809 (sponsor, Rev. Boas); Rachel, born April 14, 1813, died May 10, 1815; and Charles, born Nov. 7, 1815 (sponsor, Rev. Frederick Herman, Jr., who baptized him).

William Leinbach, son of John Daniel, born Aug. 27, 1796, became an extensive land owner along the western side of the Schuylkill river, and he owned the land now embraced in West Reading borough. He was a farmer by occupation, and was a leading man of his day. He is buried in the family plot in the Charles Evans cemetery. His children were: Christian R.; Priscilla, who married Joseph Hartz; Maria, who married John Miller; Levi and Enoch, twins; Simon, who died young; and Ellen, who married George Smith, of Pottstown.

Christian R. Leinbach, son of William, was born in Spring township, near the Penn street bridge. He followed farming as a vocation, and also for about twenty years was a paper manufacturer. His industry and close attention to business won him a fair fortune. He was a man of wide acquaintance, and he was highly respected for his many good qualities. In his political tendencies he was a Republican, and his fraternal connection was with the Odd Fellows. With his family he belonged to Kissingers Union Church. His remains rest in the Charles Evans cemetery. His wife was Catharine Esterly, daughter of Amos Esterly. Their children were: William, of West Reading; Annie, who married Peter A. Althouse, of Reading; Clara, who married Levi Shearer, of Reading; Frank, a farmer of Bern township; J. Calvin; Catharine, deceased wife of Charles Graeff, of Reading; and Timothy, a bookkeeper of Reading.

J. Calvin Leinbach, son of Christian R., worked on his father's farm, and in his paper mill until he was of age. In 1877 he took a trip to Indiana and Illinois, where he worked at farm work, but a year later he returned home and entered the Van Reed Paper Mill, situated along the Tulpehocken. Here he worked for Mr. Charles L. Van Reed for seventeen years, his long term of service being the best evidence of his ability. In the spring of 1893 he came to West Reading, and has since made it his home. Previous to his removal here he had erected a commodious two and one-half story brick residence at No. 526 Penn avenue. After coming to West Reading he learned the hatting trade at the E. W. Alexander Hat Company, and there he has continued to the present time.

Mr. Leinbach has always been an active Republican. For three years he served Spring township with great credit as school director. When West Reading was incorporated as a borough he was chosen by the people to serve as one of the first school directors. He has taken a keen interest in the schools, and his sound practical judgment has had much to do with the efficiency of the system in his district. His social connections are with the Wyomissing Council, Royal Arcanum, No. 1584, in which he is a charter member;

Reading Castle, No. 49, K. G. E.; and No. 509, P. O. S. of A., Reading. He belongs to Sinking Spring Reformed Church.

On March 4, 1882, Mr. Leinbach married Annie C. Potteiger, daughter of Levi and Barbara (Beidler) Potteiger, of Spring township. They have had two children: Warren C., a machinist, who has now taken up electrical engineering; and J. Lester, who died aged five years.

SAMUEL W. KERST, a retired boatman and honored veteran of the Civil war, who now makes his home at Gibraltar, Robeson township, was born in 1838, in Union township, Berks county, son of Samuel B. and Elizabeth (Wicklein) Kerst.

Jacob Kerst, the grandfather of Samuel W., was a son of George Kerst, an extensive land owner of Union township and one of the heaviest tax payers of that section. Jacob Kerst, like his father, was an extensive farmer and land owner, inheriting much of his father's property, and at his death, when aged fifty-two, was a very prosperous man. His wife, Esther Bertolet, died in 1847, at the age of seventy-seven years, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband also belonged. He was an Old Line Whig in politics. Jacob Kerst and wife had these children: Mary m. Elias Moore; Catherine m. Daniel Kinsey; Esther m. George Kinsey; Samuel B.; Daniel m. Catherine Weidensohl; and Isaac went to New York State, where he married, the name of his wife not being known.

Samuel B. Kerst was born in Union township, Berks county, and there spent all of his life in agricultural pursuits, dying in 1879, at the age of eighty-three years. His wife passed away in 1856, when fifty-four years old, and their children were: Jacob m. Hannah Wicklein; Isaac died unmarried at the age of twenty-three years; Abram m. (first) Harriet Rhoads, and (second) Caroline Cring; Samuel W.; Esther died at the age of eighteen years; and Lydia, Mary and Daniel died in infancy. In religious belief the family are connected with the Lutheran Church. Politically Mr. Kerst was first a Whig and later a Republican.

Samuel W. Kerst was educated in the common schools of Union township, after which he engaged in boating on the canal. Some time afterwards he became the master of a boat, and with the exception of about four years spent in teaching, continued at that occupation until 1893, when he built his fine home in Gibraltar, and since that time has lived practically retired. October 1, 1861, Mr. Kerst enlisted in Co. B, 53rd Reg. P. V. I., Col. John R. Brooke, to serve three years, and received his honorable discharge at the expiration of that time, having received a wound at the battle of Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864, and having been in the hospital six months on account of sickness. He had the record of a brave and faithful soldier, who always performed his duties cheerfully and well.

Mr. Kerst was united in marriage with Miss Leah Wicklein, daughter of William Wicklein. He is a member of Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R. For three years he has been a deacon in St. John's Lutheran Church, and for several years superintendent of the Sunday school. He is a Republican in politics, and for two terms served as school director in Robeson township.

WILLIAM H. ADAMS, of Reading, Pa., engaged in the drug business, who resides at No. 159 West Oley street, was born in this city in 1859, son of Elwood and Catherine (Mock) Adams, and a grandson of William H. and Maria (Kendall) Adams.

William H. Adams, grandfather of William H., was born about 1812, near Absecon, N. J., and died in 1872; his wife, aged ninety years, is still surviving, residing at Reading. They had six children: Rachel, deceased, m. Thomas Branhouse; Elwood, deceased; two children died in infancy; Winfield S., of Reading, m. Kate Genant, deceased; and Josephine, m. Morris Barber, a retired grocer. Mr. Adams was engaged in the hotel business in New Jersey. He came to Reading and engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Co., at core-making, a trade he learned after coming to this city. He continued with this company until his death, being regarded as a skilled and faithful workman by his employers, and his fellow citizens rated him as an honest and honorable man.

Elwood Adams was born in Reading, and after receiving a common school education learned the trade of core-making and molding, entering the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, with which he was connected until his death. He and his wife had these children: William H., Charles, Winfield S., James, Marian M. m. Millard Brown; Estella m. George Yeager; Rachel m. Walter Miller; and Harry. Mr. Adams was a Baptist in his religious belief. Fraternally, he was connected with the P. O. S. of A.

William H. Adams was educated in the schools of Reading, Pa., and then learned the trade of spectacle maker at Willson's spectacle factory, where he remained for three years. He then resigned this position to learn the molder's trade at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, with which company he was connected ten years, when he engaged with the Mellert Iron Foundry Co., working there until it closed out business. He then accepted a position with the Prizer Painter Stove works at Millmont, where he continued about nine years, resigning this to engage in the drug business at No. 1326 North Tenth street, where he has continued to the present time with much success.

Mr. Adams was married to Sally Homan, daughter of Frank Homan, and to this union there have been born three children: John, a druggist, is a graduate of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, Pa.; Ollie, a student at that institution; and Walter, is employed as a clerk in the store. Mr. Adams is a member of the P. O. S. of A., and an independent in politics. He and Mrs. Adams attend the Universalist Church of Our Father.

PROF. SAMUEL I. HENRY, Principal of Schools at Boyertown, was born there April 21, 1872, a member of an early-settled family.

Jonathan Henry, great-grandfather of Prof. Samuel I., lived in Marlboro township, Bucks county, where he was engaged as a rakemaker and farmer, owning a large farm. He and his wife are buried at the Six Corner Church. They had children: Daniel, who lived at Marlboroville, Pa.; Jonathan; and Mrs. Frederick Pflueger.

Jonathan Henry, son of Jonathan, was born on his father's farm about 1823, and he died in 1859, and was buried at Six Corner Church, in Montgomery county. He was a hotel-keeper and drover, at Marlboroville, and he drove many herds of cattle from York State across the Blue Mountains to Berks county. He was the owner of about 180 acres of land, and figured prominently in his community. He married Leah Ann Samsen, daughter of Charles Samsen, and she died about twenty years ago and is buried at Six Corner Church. The children born of this marriage were: Edwin, of Gilbertsville; Jacob; Elizabeth, who married Jonas Royer; Hannah, who married Daniel G. Dry, of Hudsonville, Ill.; and William S., born at Marlboroville Sept. 10, 1854, who married Sallie Emery (deceased) daughter of Peter Emery, and who is now a salesman at Boyertown. After the death of Mr. Henry, his widow, Leah Ann (Samsen) Henry, married Jonas Schweisford, and had two daughters, Sallie and Addie.

Jacob S. Henry, son of Jonathan, was born March 15, 1846, and he died May 14, 1904, and is buried in Fairview cemetery, Boyertown. He had lived in Boyertown the greater part of his life, being proprietor of the "Union House," for four years, from 1884, after which he retired for a few years, and then re-entered business life as a butcher, a business he followed until about two years before his death. He married Ann Catharine Houck, daughter of William and Hannah (Haas) Houck, of Lower Berks county. To this union were born the following children: Miss Clara, living at Boyertown; Prof. Samuel I.; Hannah, who married Dr. C. C. Stauffer, of Harrisburg, Pa. Mrs. Ann Catharine (Houck) Henry was born Oct. 24, 1845, and her death occurred Feb. 14, 1892. She, too, was laid to rest in Fairview Cemetery.

Prof. Samuel I. Henry received his early education in the public schools at Boyertown. Later he attended Herbst's Academy at Pottstown, Pa., and there prepared for college. In the fall of 1892 he entered Muhlenberg College, Allentown, and graduated with the class of 1896, being commencement orator, his subject, "Civic Negligence." He then taught school in Colebrookdale township, this county, one term, after which he was made principal of the school at Pioneer, Ohio. For one term he taught in the Boyertown Grammar School, and then, in 1900, was made principal of the high school, where he has since continued. Prof. Henry has made a number of improvements in the course of study, and is a member of the Advisory Committee of the County Institute. He is a member of the Berks County Reading Union, and has taken an active interest in its work. He is one of the popular and successful teachers in the county, and is devoted to his profession. He is a man of naturally literary tastes, and he has a well-selected library in which he finds his rest and recreation.

Socially, Prof. Henry is connected with Stichter Lodge, No. 254, F. & A. M.; Joy Lodge, No. 406, I. O. O. F., of Pioneer, Ohio. He is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, at Boyertown. Since the death of his father, his sister, Miss Clara, has presided over his home.

CHARLES O. MINNICH, who was for many years engaged in school teaching in North Heidelberg township, a profession in which he was very favorably known, is now engaged in the manufacture of cement blocks at Robesonia, Pa., and is a farmer and school director of North Heidelberg township. He was born Sept. 26, 1860, in this township, son of Adam and Henrietta (Klopp) Minnich.

Christopher Minich (Minnich) was the progenitor of the family in America, and his will, written in German, is on record in Berks Court House, in Will Book A, page 515. It was probated in 1806, and mentions his son Benjamin as the executor. Benjamin Minich died in 1832, in which year his will was entered for probate. It is on record in Will Book 7, page 60, and the executors were his son Jacob, and Joseph Reber.

Jacob Minnich, grandfather of Charles O., was a lifelong farmer, and was elected to various township offices. He married Elizabeth Potteiger, and they had two children: Adam; and Ellen, who married Jonathan Klopp. Jacob Minnich is buried in North Heidelberg township.

Adam Minnich was born on the old homestead in North Heidelberg township and during the major portion of his life was an agriculturist, although he lived retired for some years before his death. He is buried at the Moravian Church in North Heidelberg township. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence, was for thirty-seven years a school teacher, thirty-six years being in North Heidelberg township and the other in Perry township, and he was a great friend of the cause of education, doing much towards building up the present public school system, which met with so much opposition at first. In politics he was a Democrat, served as prison inspector, was a school director of his township for nine years, and for a long period served as justice of the peace in his district. He was married to Henrietta Klopp, and they had two children: Deborah, who married Rev. A. Johnson Long, of Marion township; and Charles O.

Charles O. Minnich was reared to agricultural pursuits and lived with his parents until he became of age. He obtained his early education in the schools of his township, and later he attended the Keystone State Normal school, at Kutztown, which he left when a member of the senior class. He was licensed to teach in the public schools of Berks county in 1879, by Prof. D. S. Keck, and taught his first term in Lower Heidelberg township at the Ahrens school, which was followed by a term at Lengel's school, and the succeeding nineteen years were spent at Klopp's school in his native district. During his long service as an educator, Mr. Minnich became well-known, and the fact of his incumbency at one school for nineteen successive terms testifies to his efficiency and popularity. In the spring of 1882 he commenced farming the original Minnich homestead of ninety-two acres of fertile land, which he had secured by purchase after his father's death, and from that time on he spent the winters in teaching and the summer months in cultivating his land. He has twelve head of cattle and thirteen horses, and during the last few years he has given a great deal of attention to stock-raising.

In politics Mr. Minnich is a stanch Democrat, and he has been active in the ranks of his party since attaining his majority. His first office was that of judge of election, and in 1904 he was elected a school director of North Heidelberg township, and as such is serving now, having been secretary of the board for one year and president thereof for a like period. He and his family are members of the Moravian Church of North Heidelberg township. Mr. Minnich was active in the interest of Patrons of Husbandry of Robesonia, and assisted in organizing the Benneville Grange.

In 1880 Mr. Minnich was married to Emma Kalbach, daughter of James and Sarah (Derr) Kalbach, and granddaughter of Adam Kalbach, who married Miss Althouse. To this union there have been born nine children. Lloyd K., a graduate of the class of 1902, Keystone State Normal school and a teacher in North Heidelberg township, m. Cora Fisher, and has one daughter, Ellen; Constance S. m. Calvin Master, a mechanic of Robesonia, and has one daughter, Marguerite; E. Willis, a graduate of the class of 1905 at the Keystone State Normal school, and a teacher in the schools of North Heidelberg township, m. Annie Kreider; J. Earl is a farmer and assists his father; C. Raymond is also a farmer, and during the winter months a student; and Adam J., Stella, Mabel and Russell all died in youth and are buried at North Heidelberg.

ALFRED B. YORGEY, postmaster and merchant at Wyomissing, was born in the upper section of Douglass township, Oct. 10, 1850. He received his education in the local public schools, and after assisting his father on the farm until he was eighteen years old, he entered the general store of Peter Brendlinger, at New Berlinville, where he filled the position of clerk for a year. While there he prepared himself to become a teacher, and, after receiving a certificate, taught public school for three terms, two in Douglass township and one in Pottsgrove township near Pottstown. He then learned the trade of a watchmaker under Jonathan East, at Boyertown, serving an apprenticeship of three years.

Mr. Yorgey's brother George was then carrying on a grocery store in Philadelphia, and needing his assistance, he went there to fill the position of clerk, but he remained there only a year, for in the fall of 1874 his father was elected sheriff of Berks county, and being offered the position of deputy sheriff he accepted it, and filled it for the term of three years from January, 1875 to January, 1878. He next engaged in the sale of fruit trees for three years; after which he again served as deputy sheriff of the county under Levi M. Gerhart sheriff, from 1881 to 1884. After this Mr. Yorgey embarked in the jewelry business on Penn street in the vicinity of Seventh, in Reading, and he carried this business on successfully for twenty years, closing out in July, 1904, to remove to Wyomissing to carry on the grocery business in a fine store building, which he had purchased there in the Mory addition.

While in the jewelry business Mr. Yorgey purchased a grocery store at No. 738 North Sixth street, Reading, and he conducted this from 1899 to 1905, when he sold it to enable him to devote all his time to his rapidly increasing trade at Wyomissing. In July, 1904, Mr. Yorgey removed with his family to Wyomissing, and he has been engaged in the grocery business there until the present time. The post office has been established in his building, and immediately after locating in the place, he became assistant postmaster of the local office under George W. Heffelfinger, postmaster. After serving the position for two years he received the appointment of postmaster, which he has been filling satisfactorily until now in connection with the grocery business.

Mr. Yorgey was married to Laura R. Esterly, daughter of Amos S. Esterly, a prominent proprietor of well established hotels at Reading for many years, and by her he had sixteen children: Elizabeth, unmarried; Lillie May, Mrs. John C. Holmes; Annie, Mrs. James M. Long; Florence, Mrs. Morris Zimmerly; George; Leah; Rachel; John; Samuel; David; Sarah; Alfred; and four boys who died in infancy, two of whom were twins.

George R. Yorgey, father of Alfred B., was brought up on the Yorgey farm in Douglass township, which has been in the family name for upward of 125 years. He was a farmer and millwright for more than fifty years. He became very prominent as a Democratic politician of the county, serving as sheriff from 1875 to 1878; officiated as a school director and also as a supervisor of the township roads for several terms; and acted as a bank director. He died in 1896 at the advanced age of eighty-four years. He married Elizabeth Bowers of Amity township, and by her he had ten children: Malinda, who married Levi Davidheiser; Emma, who was a public school teacher for upward of ten years, and died at the age of twenty-seven; George, who married Catharine Gottschall; Alfred; Clara, who married Henry Dengler; Henry, who married Ellen Sassaman and after her decease Maggie Gresh; Oliva, who married Zephaniah Roshon; Anna, who died at the age of eighteen years; and two who died in infancy.

Jacob Yorgey, the grandfather, was a farmer of Douglass township. He married Sarah Reifsnyder, and by her had seven children: Charlotte, who married Frederick Neiman; George; Ephraim, who married Hannah Bechtel; Rachel, who married John Geiger; Christian, who married Matilda Fritz; Leah, who married Henry Baker; and Sarah, who married Henry E. Rhoads.

Mrs. Yorgey's father, Amos S. Esterly, was married to Elizabeth Ritter, daughter of David Ritter, of Exeter township, and by her he had six children. Laura R.; Mary, who married Frank F. Bressler; Francis, who married Matilda Davis; Joseph, who married Catharine Hohl; Amos, who married Susan Shearer; and Jacob. Joseph Esterly, father of Amos, was a farmer and blacksmith of Exeter township, a short distance south of the Black Bear Inn. He married Lydia Snyder and by her he had ten children: Daniel, Amos S., Joseph, Augustus, Elizabeth, Rebecca, and four, who died young. He died in 1856, aged sixty-two years; and his wife died in 1882, aged eighty-four years. Daniel Esterly, Mrs. Yorgey's great-grandfather, was also a farmer and blacksmith, living on the same place as his son. He married Susanna Hechler, and by her he had eight children: Daniel, Jacob, John, George, Joseph, Jonas, Amos and Elizabeth (married to George Boyer).

FREDERICK W. E. GROHMAN, who is engaged in pattern-making at No. 1053 Mulberry street, Reading, is conducting an independent business in his line, and has met with much success. Mr. Grohman was born in 1872, in Brandenburg, Prussia, German Empire, son of William and Bertha (Wonneberger) Grohman, the latter a sister of the noted Professor Wonneberger.

In his native country Mr. Grohman served in a military school from the age of eight until fourteen years old, and learned the pattern and cabinet making business, which he followed at the Scott works, Reading, after coming to America in 1890. Later he became connected with the Penn Hardware Co., and spent three years at brass pattern making with the Berks foundry. He then took a complete mechanical course in the correspondence school of Scranton, Pa., and went to Lancaster county, where he was employed as pattern maker and foreman of a machine shop. From Lancaster county Mr. Grohman went to Philadelphia, working for the Pen Coyd Iron Company for two years, and in 1900 returned to Reading, entering the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. In 1907 Mr. Grohman resigned his position and opened an independent shop, which he has equipped with all modern machinery, and here he is carrying on a large and lucrative business. He is a first-class mechanic, and makes a specialty of designing artistic furniture, both mission and modern. While living in Lancaster county, in 1897, Mr. Grohman received his naturalization papers, and since that time he has been allied with the Republican party. He and his wife attend the Lutheran Church. Fraternally Mr. Grohman is connected with the K. G. E., the Foresters, Manchester Unity, I. O. O. F., the Twentieth Century Quakers and the I. O. R. M.

In 1895 Mr. Grohman was united in marriage with Miss Emma Huntzinger, a cousin of Rev. F. K. Huntzinger, and to this union there were born four children: William, George, and two who died in infancy.

JAMES F. SCHNADER, of Cumru township, Berks county, was born July 18, 1869, in Cumru township, son of Franklin K. and Fietta (Saylor) Schnader.

The great-great-grandfather of James F. Schnader was John Jacob Schnader, who was one of the organizers of the Center Lutheran and Reformed Church of Lancaster county, the site of which is the burial ground of many of his descendants. When he settled four miles back of the Conestoga river, in the virgin forest, all of the surrounding country was a wilderness and here he at once commenced to clear land. At the time of his death, in 1829, when ninety-five years old, he was the owner of 1,000 acres of excellent land. He married a second time when seventy-five years of age. Mr. Schnader was known as a remarkable man in many ways, but was always highly esteemed for his many sterling traits of character. His son, Balzer Schnader, born in 1765, at the old homestead, married Barbara Kitzmiller. After marriage he located in Franklin county, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits for a few years and then returned to his native township and became the owner of a fine farm of 270 acres. He erected the first stone house built in the neighborhood, the roof of which was of imported tiles and the glass in the windows was but four inches square. Balzer Schnader was the father of fourteen children, among whom were: Jacob, born Dec. 25, 180-, died Nov. 13, 1861; Amos; William; John; Sally; Betsy; James; Lydia; and Mary.

James Schnader, grandfather of James F., was born Nov. 23, 1802, in Lancaster county, and died Oct. 5, 1872. For some years he lived in Cumberland county, and in 1842 came to Brecknock township, Berks county, where the remainder of his life was spent. He owned a farm of 100 acres of land, which was highly cultivated, and he was considered a substantial and representative citizen of his day and community. He is buried at Allegheny Church, as is his wife, both being members of that organization. James Schnader married Susanna Kessler, daughter of Johannes Kessler, born Feb. 10, 1805, who died Nov. 22, 1881, and they had these children: Maria, who married John Sweitzer; Richard, who married Angelina Deeds; Franklin, who married Fietta Saylor; John, who married Amanda Jones; James, who married Anna M. C. Grater; and Susanna, who married Samuel Hartz.

Franklin K. Schnader, father of James F., was a gun-barrel manufacturer and farmer along the Wyomissing in Cumru township, where he became a substantial and highly esteemed citizen. Born in Brecknock township Jan. 1, 1831, early in life he came to Cumru township, and this section of the country was his home until his death, May 14, 1906. He and his family were members of Gouglersville Church, of which he was deacon and elder. Mr. Schnader married Fietta Saylor, born in October, 1832, daughter of John Saylor of Alsace township. Five children were born to this union, as follows: Nathaniel S., born March 30, 1854, a gun-barrel manufacturer of Cumru township, also conducting a cider mill which manufacturers as much as 90,000 gallons annually, married in 1875, Victoria Zeamer, daughter of Henry Zeamer, and to them were born eight children, as follows: Mary, Charles, Frank, Katie, Carrie, William, Gertie and Stephen; Henry, who married Mary Wertz, died in 1888, aged thirty-two years, seven months, eighteen days; Mary E., who married John A. Von Neida, of Bowmansville, Pa.; Adallia, who married Samuel K. Ramp of Brecknock township; and James F., of Cumru township.

James F. Schnader received his education in the public schools of his native township, leaving them at the age of sixteen years to learn the milling trade with John A. Von Neida, of Bowmansville, Pa., with whom he continued for upwards of a year. He then learned the painting trade with Frank Folfinger, of Mohnton, with whom he continued for three years, working also for Mosser & Pauling, painting contractors, for four years. Mr. Schnader then worked for himself for two years and for four years at the trade in Reading, then engaging in the milling business, at the mill erected by his father, known as the Wyomissing Grist, which was the first mill obtaining its power from the Wyomissing creek. After the death of his father in 1906, Mr. Schnader came into possession of the Schnader homestead in Cumru township, a tract of forty-seven acres, on which property is the famous old gun-barrel factory, where gun-barrels were manufactured during the Revolutionary war, one of the oldest business places in the county, and here also is situated the cider-press, where thousands of barrels of apples are ground into cider annually. The present home was built by his father in 1860. Mr. Schnader also owns thirty-seven acres of heavily timbered land and his own home on the road leading from Mohnton to Gouglersville.

In politics Mr. Schnader is a staunch Democrat, and in the spring of 1906 was elected by a handsome majority to the office of school director of Cumru township, which has thirty schools. He takes a great interest in educational matters and is an efficient man for the office. He and his family are members of Gouglersville Union Church, belonging to the Reformed denomination.

In the year, 1894, Mr. Schnader was married to Annie M. Unger, born Dec. 3, 1874, daughter of George and Annie (Bower) Unger, natives of Wittenberg, Germany, and to them were born children as follows: Sadie W., born March 21, 1895; Clara M., born July 26, 1897; James H., born Aug. 25, 1899; Annie F., born Oct. 6, 1901; Wayne A., born Dec. 19, 1904; and Harland A., born Jan. 17, 1907.

BENTON REIFF GEHRET, a well known resident of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the paper hanging business at No. 1264 North Tenth street, was born Jan. 28, 1862, in Alsace township, Berks county, son of Israel and Malinda Reiff Gehret.

Israel Gehret, who was a wheelwright by trade, followed that occupation practically all of his life in Alsace township, where he died October 6th, 1900, at the age of seventy-six years. He married Malinda Reiff who bore him twelve children, nine of whom still survive: John, James, Daniel, Henry, Samuel, Benton R., Eli, Augustus, Ellen, who married William Hoffman. In religious belief the family are connected with the Reformed Church. Mr. Gehret was a stanch Democrat.

Benton R. Gehret was educated in the common schools of Alsace township, and until seventeen years of age worked on a farm near his home. He then came to Reading, securing employment in the old Reading Rail mill, and worked for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company for five years. He then learned the painter's trade with Henry Wertz, of Reading, an occupation which he followed from 1889 until 1904, in the latter year adding paper hanging to his business. Mr. Gehret has one of the best appointed places of business for this kind of work in the city, and he commands Reading's best trade. He also does graining, decorating, etc., and employs from nine to fifteen skilled workmen.

December 17, 1881, Mr. Gehret was married to Miss Ida Noll, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Gift) Noll, representative Berks county people, and to this union there was born one child: Debbie, who died at the age of five years. They adopted two children, one of whom is dead. Mr. and Mrs. Gehret attend the Reformed Church. He is a member of the Knights of Malta, the P. O. S. of A., Wyomissing Council, Royal Arcanum, and the Wyomissing Association, a beneficial Order. In politics he is a Democrat. Mr. Gehret is widely known throughout his section of the city, and his fairness in business matters has gained for him an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity. He is public-spirited in a high degree, and any movement which has for its object the welfare of the city finds in him a staunch supporter.

MARTIN R. HOCH, a well known slater of Reading, Pa., whose place of business is located at No. 718 North Eighth street, was born Jan. 12, 1868, in Richmond township, Berks county, son of Benneville and Susan (Rothermel) Hoch.

Samuel Hoch, grandfather of Martin R., who was a prominent agriculturist of Richmond township, and whose death was caused by a fall from a load of hay, married a Miss Herbine, who also died in that township. Their children were: Benneville; Philip; Maria, who married for her third husband Mr. Schmoyer and resides in Fleetwood; John; Joel; and Samuel.

Benneville Hoch was born in Richmond township, and at the time of his father's death took charge of the old homestead on which he resided all of his life, farming there for a period of thirty-four years. His death occurred in his sixtieth year, his wife passing away when seventy-seven years old. Their farm is now occupied by Jacob Scheaffer. Mr. Hoch and his wife were faithful members of the Reformed Church. In political matters he was a Democrat, and for some years served as a member of the school board, taking an active interest in educational and public matters. To Mr. and Mrs. Hoch there were born sixteen children, ten of whom now survive: Susan, who married Isaiah Hoyer of Reading; Benneville, who married Mary Mertz of Richmond township; Cyrus, who married Diana Richard of Friedensburg, Oley township; Harriet, who married August Schlegel of Fleetwood; Joel, who married Catherine Reider; William, who married Fianna Conrad of Boyertown; Amanda, who married William T. Delp, of Bowers, Pa.; Martin R.; Henry, who married Clara Schlegel, of Reading; and Katie, single; and Ezra (died Aug. 5, 1909, m. Sally Hefner), Annie, Peter, Samuel, Lydia and Sarah, deceased.

Martin R. Hoch (or High) attended the public schools of his native township until nineteen years of age, working on the farm during the summer months. He then learned the trade of marble cutting, a business which he followed for six years, but since 1894 has been engaged in his present line, having a large and profitable trade in slate and sink tops. He employs three skilled mechanics, and does work not only in the city, but in the surrounding country and adjoining counties.

Mr. Hoch married Miss Emma Keller, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Sicher) Keller, and their two sons, Charles K. and Claude H., are attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Hoch reside in their pleasant home at No. 930 Greenwich street, Reading, and have many friends in their community. They are members of St. Stephen's Reformed Church. Politically Mr. Hoch is a Democrat and fraternally he is connected with Camp 103, P. O. S. of A., Fleetwood; and Friendship Council, A. & I. O. K. of M., No. 247, of Reading.

GEORGE JOHN BREEDY, of No. 235 South Twelfth street, who is known to the people of Reading, Pa., as a professional musician and teacher of music, was born in this city, May 4, 1878, son of Theodore and Mary E. (Moyer) Breedy.

John Breedy, the grandfather of George J., was born in 1803, was a native of Antwerp, Belgium, and founded the family in this country in 1836. After coming to America the rest of his life was spent in Reading, where he died at the age of eighty-three years. Mr. Breedy was a stone mason by trade, and was a gifted musician, teaching all of his children music. He married Emma Keen, who was also born in his Fatherland, and to them were born children as follows: Theodore; John, a bricklayer of Reading; Mary, single, resides in Reading; Emma, deceased, was the wife of Wilson B. Houck; Barbara, deceased, was the wife of Charles Manegold of Reading; and Lizzie, who married George Young of this city. Of these children Emma and Barbara were talented vocalists, and sang in church choirs throughout Reading.

Theodore Breedy was born Jan. 8, 1855, in Reading, where he was educated in the public schools, and then learned the upholstering trade at Herbein's furniture store, which he followed until Mr. Herbein's death, From his youth he had shown remarkable talent in music, and at the age of eighteen years played with the celebrated old Ringgold Band of Reading, with which he was connected until the organization of the Germania Band, when he became a member of that body. This was later reorganized and again took the name of the Ringgold Band. Mr. Breedy also played at the Academy of Music for a number of years. In political matters he is a Democrat. Mr. Breedy married Mary E. Moyer, born in February, 1855, daughter of George M. and Amanda (Petree) Moyer, and to this union there were born four children: George J.; Charles and Edward, who died in boyhood; and Paul J., a student at the High School.

George John Breedy obtained his education in the public schools of Reading, leaving after the completion of his grammar school course, and when fourteen years of age secured a position as clerk in J. H. Obold & Company's hardware store. There he remained for a period of two years, and in 1894 he began the study of music under Professors Joseph Rowe and George Holcombe of New York. For one year he played the drums at the Academy of Music, Reading, and in 1899 with his father joined the famous Ringling Brothers' Shows, with which organization they traveled in every State and territory in the Union. Their pleasant stay in California and the exciting times experienced by them throughout the Southern States will be events ever clear in their memories. After the close of the show season in 1900, Mr. George J. Breedy returned to Reading, and was for some years a member of the Bijou Theatre orchestra, and is now at the Orpheum Theatre, also teaching music to a large class of pupils. Professor Breedy has been very successful, residing in his own home at No. 235 South Twelfth street. He is genial and companionable and has many warm friends. He and his wife are members of St. Paul's Catholic Church of Reading.

On Oct. 30, 1901, Professor Breedy was married to Amelia Imgrund, born Jan. 18, 1878, daughter of John and Louisa (Gray) Imgrund. No children have been born to them.

JOHN H. CLAUSER, a representative agriculturist of Berks county, Pa., who is carrying on operations in Robeson township, was born in that same township May 10, 1836, son of Samuel and Hannah (Hertzel) Clauser.

John Clauser, grandfather of John H., came from Oley township to Robeson many years ago, and bought the old George Moore farm, now owned by one of his grandsons, Simon Clauser. He followed farming and lime burning for the remainder of his life, also owning and operating canal boats on the Schuylkill canal, which he used to carry his lime to market. Mr. Clauser died about 1841 or 1842, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which his wife, Catherine Feigle, was also a member. Their children were: Daniel, John, Benjamin, Samuel, Lydia (who married Henry Moyer) and Sarah (who married Isaac Moore).

Samuel Clauser, son of John and Catherine, was born in Oley township, but early in life came to Robeson with his parents, and most of his life was spent working for the Seyfert forge at Gibraltar. He was active in the work of the Lutheran Church, where he held numerous positions, and also was much interested in Sunday school work. His death occurred in his fifty-third year, and his wife passed away when about sixty-two or sixty-three years old. Their children were: John H.; Samuel, deceased; Daniel, a grocer at Seyferts; Albert, a blacksmith of Philadelphia; Kittie, deceased; Malinda, who married Peter Neidich; and Hannah and Susan, deceased.

John H. Clauser was educated in the schools of Robeson township and until fifteen years of age worked on a farm, at that time beginning to learn the blacksmith's trade with John Schaeffer, at Beckersville, Robeson township, and he continued with him for two and one-half years. He then went to Bucyrus, Crawford county, Ohio, and thence to Fort Wayne, Ind. Returning to Berks county by way of Bucyrus, after one winter at school, Mr. Clauser went to Reading, and there engaged at his trade and after a short time purchased the blacksmith shop at the Junction in Robeson township, which he operated three years. He next purchased a shop in Philadelphia, which he carried on for one year, when he sold out, married and returned to Robeson township, purchasing the "Naomi Hotel" at Seyferts. He conducted this hotel for some thirty years, and then purchased the Hettie Dick farm, which he still owns—a one-hundred acre tract of some of the finest land in the county. Mr. Clauser has brought this property to a fine state of cultivation, has improved it with good, substantial buildings, and in connection therewith operates a dairy of eight cows. In politics he is a Democrat. He is public-spirited and progressive, and is always found in the front rank of any movement tending toward the public welfare.

In 1856 Mr. Clauser was married to Miss Mary Kennedy, daughter of Thomas Kennedy, and seven children have blessed this union: William, deceased; Heber, of Reading; John K., proprietor of the "Naomi Hotel;" Annie, wife of Reuben Redcay; Ida; Sallie, wife of Henry Eshelman; and Bessie, who married Walter Rickey.

BENJAMIN F. LEINBACH, who since 1898 has lived retired at Friedensburg, was one of the progressive and prosperous farmers of the county. He was born on the home farm of his grand-uncles, John and Daniel Hoch, Jan. 19, 1853, son of Samuel and Mary (Reppert) Leinbach, and a member of one of the early settled families of the county.

The Leinbachs of Berks county are descended from Henry Leinbach and his wife, Barbara Lerch, of Wetterau, Germany, the line of Benjamin F. Leinbach being through their son, Johannes, Sr. (the first of the name in America) and his wife, Anna Elizabeth (Leiss); their son, Johannes, Jr., and his wife, Catharine (Riehm); their son, John Daniel and his wife, Catharine (Graul); their son, Samuel and his wife Elizabeth (Hoch); and their son, Samuel and his wife, Mary (Reppert).

Samuel Leinbach, son of John Daniel and grandfather of Benjamin F., was a native of Oley township, born April 14, 1798. His sponsors were Daniel Hartman and Maria Lerch. He passed his entire life as a farmer, removing from Berks county to Upper Northumberland county after his marriage, and there he died, and was buried at Turbotville. He was twice married. His first wife, Elizabeth Hoch, died in Berks county before his removal to Northumberland, the mother of two children: Samuel; and Sabilla, who married David Bertolet. He married (second) a Miss Barto, and they had six children: Ephraim, Jeremiah, Nathan, Uriah, Ann Maria and Malinda.

Samuel Leinbach, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Hoch) was born June 5, 1827, and he died June 25, 1897, aged seventy years and twenty days, and was buried at Spies's church, of which he was a member. He made his home in Alsace township, where he followed farming. He married Mary Reppert, who was born in 1827, daughter of Jacob Reppert, and she died in 1864, the mother of four children. Benjamin F.; Elizabeth; Mary Magdalena, who died young; and Daniel, of Pottstown.

Benjamin F. Leinbach received his education in the district schools, Oley Academy and later in a fifteen weeks' course at Brunner's Academy in Reading. He taught school five terms in Alsace township, beginning in the fall of 1871, and receiving a salary of thirty dollars per month. He was early trained to farm work, and in 1882 he began farming at the place where he was born, and in that same year bought the homestead. This consisted of 328 acres in one tract, sixty-five in a second, and seven and one-half in a third, making 400½ acres all together. Here Mr. Leinbach was profitably engaged from 1882 until 1898, when he was succeeded by his son Beriah. In the spring of 1898 he built a comfortable and modern brick residence at Friedensburg, located at the corner of Main and Water streets, and here he has since lived retired.

Unlike most of his family, Mr. Leinbach is a Democrat, and for six years he served as school director in Alsace township. He is a member of Spies's Church, in which he has served as deacon.

In 1874 Mr. Leinbach was united in marriage with Sarah H. Yoder, daughter of Gideon and Mary (Houseman) Yoder. Three children were born to them, namely: Beriah, who married Maggie Beidler, and has two children, Benjamin and Ray; Mary, who married Charles Swoyer, of Reading; Sallie, who married William H. Lutz, of Oley.

JACOB PETERS, of the borough of Mohnton, who is engaged in plaster contracting, was born Oct. 30, 1858, in West Earl township, Lancaster county, son of Henry K. and Lydia (Harman) Peters.

John Michael Peters, the grandfather of Jacob, was a native of Ireland, and came to this country when a boy with his sister, his parents being deceased. He located in West Earl township, Lancaster county, and there the remainder of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He married Polly Kelly, who died in middle life, and both were buried in Rollans cemetery, near New Holland, Pa. Their children were: Isaac, who died while defending his country in the Civil war; Joseph, who was a farm hand, met an accidental death while working for a Mr. Bare; John, who died suddenly in Indianapolis, Ind., where he had been successfully engaged in the milling business; Gibson, a soldier in both the Mexican and Civil wars, who was of a roving disposition and had a wonderful career; Susanna, who married Henry Swergert, a farmer of Lancaster county; Elizabeth, who married George Smith, a soldier in the Civil war; Henry, father of Jacob; Cornelius, who married Joanna Witzel of Berks county; and Rev. Lewis, a minister of the United Brethren Church, was a noted pulpit orator, and for many years had been presiding elder. He died in New Holland, Pa., in 1890, aged fifty-four years and is buried at Steelton, Dauphin county. He married a Miss Rand, and they had three children, Dr. Jacob, Dr. Augustus and a daughter.

Henry K. Peters was born in Earl township, Lancaster county, Oct. 16, 1830, and died there May 9, 1882, having been engaged for a number of years in operating a sawmill for Benjamin Schaeffer. Mr. Peters was a highly respected citizen, and all his life was a regular attendant of the United Brethren Church at Hinkletown, Lancaster county. He was twice married, (first) Oct. 4, 1853, to Lydia Harman, born Aug. 4, 1830, who died Sept. 17, 1865, daughter of Daniel Harman. Six children were born to this union: Lemon, born July 29, 1854, married Cecelia Holman; Herman, born July 19, 1856, married Emma Schaeffer; Jacob; Harriet, born April 23, 1860, married William Carpenter, deceased; Mary Ann, born Dec. 11, 1861, died June 14, 1880; and Henry, born Feb. 14, 1864, is a bachelor of Lancaster. Mr. Peters was married (second) to Fannie Dietrich, daughter of George W. Dietrich of Lancaster county, and to them was born one son, Benjamin Franklin.

Jacob Peters was reared to agricultural pursuits, but when sixteen years of age began to learn the trade of plasterer with Jacob Shatz of Lancaster, in whose employ he continued for three years, then connecting himself with J. Madison Dietrich, a contractor of Vogansville, Lancaster county. In 1880 Mr. Peters engaged in business on his own account in Lancaster county, following his trade throughout the county for a period of twelve years and employing an average of six people the year round. On Dec. 12, 1892, he located in Mohnton, and for two years worked for Adam Wentzel of Sinking Spring, a plasterer contractor. In 1895 Mr. Peters re-engaged in business on his own account, doing work in Reading and the surrounding country, and in this he is at present engaged. Himself a thorough mechanic and skilled workman, Mr. Peters employs only those who are skilled at the trade, and his staff of workmen comprises twenty mechanics. He has been handling all of the contracts of the Reading Real Estate Co. since 1902, this company building from thirty-five to forty-five buildings annually, and he also did the work in forty-five houses erected by Mertz & Christman of Reading in 1905. In 1906 he had the contract for plastering the large Barbey Hall at Hamburg, Pa., and in the fall of that year did the work in J. Dives' summer residence in Cumru township. Politically Mr. Peters is a stalwart Republican, and takes a great interest in public matters. He is a member of Hill Side Camp, Modern Woodmen of America. In religious belief he and his family are members of Salem Evangelical Church of Mohnton, and in earlier life Mr. Peters was much interested in Sunday school work, being for a number of years superintendent of the Evangelical Sunday school at Vogansville.

On Nov. 21, 1878, Mr. Peters was married to Dora R. Reitz, born Aug. 1, 1852, in Ossenberg, Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, daughter of Baltzer and Caroline(Reitz) Reitz, and to this union there have been born six children: Harry C., born July 24, 1879, married Ada Shirk, of Mohnton; Caroline R., born Dec. 4, 1882, married Frank R. Good, of Lancaster county; Lizzie R., born April 2, 1883, married Irwin R. Mosser, of Mohnton; George W., born June 26, 1884, married Stella Hittle, of Boyertown; Lydia, born March 8, 1886; and Chester A., born Sept. 14, 1888.

J. W. KLINE, of Reading, who is proprietor of the Kline & Company brass foundry, was born Dec. 5, 1871, in Reading, son of William and Rebecca (Kinzer) Kline, and grandson of John R. and Esther (Lutz) Kline.

John R. Kline was a brick manufacturer in early life, and later engaged in building boats for Asa Packer. He retired about six years prior to his death in his sixty-first year. He was first married to a Miss Homan, who bore him one son, Mahlon, and his second marriage was to Esther Lutz, who died in 1905, aged eighty-one years, one son also being born to this union, William. Mr. and Mrs. Kline were members of the Reformed Church. In political matters he was a Democrat.

William Kline, who now lives retired at No. 600 Center avenue, Reading, was born in Reading in 1840, and was educated in the public schools, after leaving which he learned the cabinet maker's trade. Later he engaged in the furniture business, in which he continued for seventeen years, and then for several years engaged in the foundry business at Second and Beech streets. This he later sold out to his son, John W., purchasing the Bechtelsville furnace property, where he operated a crusher until 1905, and since that time has lived a quiet life. He was married in 1864 to Rebecca Kinzer, and to them four children have been born :Emma, Amanda, John W. and Harry. Mr. Kline is a member of Chandler Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 227, Reading Chapter and Reading Commandery No. 42, K. T. Politically he is a Democrat.

John W. Kline received his education in the common schools of Reading, and after leaving the grammar school entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co., as a clerk in the freight department under Mr. A. T. Gorman, and resigned this to accept a position with the Reading Iron Co., under Messrs. Dodds and Schumann. He remained there three years, at the end of which time he engaged in his present business at Second and Beech streets, where he has been successfully carrying on business since 1897. He erected a new plant in 1906, and here he is engaged exclusively in the manufacture of brass castings. He has a modern plant, with the latest and most improved machinery, and under his management the business is proving a great success. Mr. Kline is a member of Reading Lodge No. 115, B. P. O. E. Religiously he is connected with St. Paul's Reformed Church, while his wife attends Trinity Lutheran Church. Mr. Kline is identified with numerous other business enterprises in addition to his foundry business, among which may be named the American Slag Co., of Reading.

Mr. John W. Kline was united in marriage with Miss Emma L. Klapp, daughter of Joseph Klapp, a sketch of whom will be found in another part of this publication.

DAVID B. RAUCH, farmer near Huff's Church, in Hereford township, was born on the old homestead there Dec. 23, 1842, son of John Rauch and grandson of David Rauch.

David Rauch, born Nov. 27, 1769, in eastern Berks county, died Dec. 11, 1843, aged seventy-four years, fourteen days. He was a farmer, and lived in Hereford township, owning the farm near Huff's Church which is now the property of his grandson, David B. Rauch, and which consists of 150 acres of fertile land, improved with good buildings. He built the stone house there in 1830. The old part of the barn was built in 1803 and the other part in 1823. There is an old burial ground on this tract, covering a half acre of ground, and about one hundred people are interred there. As late as 1879 one Elizabeth Zimmerman, unmarried, was buried there. This was the principal burial ground of the settlers in the vicinity before the establishment of the one at Huff's Church. In 1901 Mr. David B. Rauch sold three acres of land, to the Huff's Church congregation for cemetery purposes, and on this plot are now buried a number of people to whose memory have been erected creditable monuments. David Rauch, the grandfather, and his wife are buried at Huff's Church. She was Barbara Lieser, born Feb. 16, 1770, died March 22, 1838, aged sixty-eight years, one month, six days. They had children as follows: Elizabeth; David, who lived in Springville, Bucks Co., Pa. (he had a daughter); Barbara, married to Jonas Saul; Magdalena; Maria, married to Philip Hertzog; Catharine, married to Abraham Moyer; Rachel, married to John Hertzog; Henry L. (1813-1850), a watchmaker, who lived in Washington township, Berks county (his children were Maria, Sarah and Jefferson); John, mentioned below; and Samuel (1796-1853), of Hereford, who never married.

John Rauch, son of David, born in Hereford township, near Huff's Church, Nov. 9, 1815, died there on his farm Nov. 10, 1875, aged sixty years, one day. He was a farmer, owning and working the place which now belongs to his son David B., and which has been in the possession of this family since 1804, having formerly belonged to David Rauch. He was a member and deacon of the Reformed congregation of Huff's Church. John Rauch married Maria Bossert, born in 1819, daughter of Adam Bossert; she died March 4, 1880. Mr. and Mrs. John Rauch had children as follows: Maria (married Martin Landis), David B., Sallie Ann (married John D. Baus), Caroline (married Horatio Hertzog), Charles B., John B., Emmalinda (deceased wife of William Benfield) and Annie (who died when young).

David B. Rauch commenced his education in an old pay school, which he attended one winter, and after their establishment he went to the free schools. He was reared upon the farm, working for his parents until he was twenty-two years old, after which he learned the carpenter's trade. He followed that calling fourteen years, after which he farmed the homestead for eighteen years. In the spring of 1894 he purchased the Samuel Baus farm, in the upper part of Dale, a tract of twenty-seven acres, on which are a nice set of buildings. Mr. Rauch built the present house on the place in 1894, and he made an addition to the barn the following year. The place is an ideal home in more ways than one. Besides this place, where he still makes his home, Mr. Rauch owns the old homestead of 150 acres, and he is regarded as a substantial resident of Hereford township, where he is well known, having served two terms as auditor and two years as tax collector. Mr. Rauch is a Democrat in politics.

In the year 1868 Mr. Rauch married Eliza Ann Moll, daughter of Christophel and Susanna (Repp) Moll, of Hereford township, farming people, who had a family of nine children, namely: Horatio, Sarah, Elizabeth, Susanna, Eliza Ann, William, Daniel, Caroline and Emeline. John and Elizabeth (Bittenbender) Moll, grandparents of Mrs. Rauch, lived in Siesholtzville. Their children were: George, Jacob, John, Christophel, Susan, Peggy, Betzy, Polly, Catharine and Nancy.

Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rauch: James M. is mentioned below; Mary married Epheniah Fronheiser, a farmer of Hereford, and they have children—John, William, Mamie, Eliza Ann, Katie and James; John, third child of Mr. and Mrs. Rauch, died in infancy; Allen, a farmer living near Siesholtzville, married Eve Gerhart, and they have two children, John and Jennie; Annie married Frank Derr, of District township, and they have had three children, Claude, Harvey and Stella.

James M. Rauch, son of David B. Rauch, was born Nov. 17, 1868, and was reared upon the home farm. From early youth he showed a fondness for books, was studious at school, and when eighteen years old was licensed to teach public school, receiving his certificate from Prof. D. S. Keck. His first experience was gained at the Rhode school-house in Greenwich township, where he taught one term; then for a term he was engaged in Hereford township. He then took a competitive examination, and was appointed Sept. 9, 1893, under civil service rules, to a clerkship in the treasury department, where he has ever since been employed. Since July, 1906, Mr. Rauch has also been engaged in dealing in coal, in which line he has met with success, giving employment to five men. He deals in wood, coal, coke and ice.

Mr. Rauch married Mary Moll, daughter of Reuben and Katie (Baus) Moll, and they have had three children, Amy, Arthur R. (who died when seven months old) and Stella.

HENRY E. REMP, resident in the borough of Mohnton, since 1870, is a native of Berks county, born in Brecknock township, Oct. 31, 1846, son of Richard and Sarah (Eshelman) Remp.

Jacob Remp, the great-grandfather of Henry E., was born May 6, 1756, and died June 6, 1841, after a long and useful life. He was a farmer by occupation, owning the old Remp homestead, on which he and his wife and his son Benjamin and wife are buried. The wife of Jacob Remp, whose Christian name was Catherine, was born Dec. 22, 1753, and died May 31, 1829. Among their children were: Mrs. John White; Eve, who married Daniel Barlot; Benjamin; and a daughter who died single.

Benjamin Remp, grandfather of Henry E., was born on the old homestead, now the Kissinger farm in Brecknock township, Aug. 30, 1786, and died April 15, 1872. Like his father he was a lifelong farmer, owning the homestead, which consisted of 100 acres, and was a faithful member of the United Brethren Church. Mr. Remp married Barbara Trostle, born Jan. 6, 1786, who died March 15, 1857, and to them were born these children: William; Jacob; Elijah; Richard; Sally, who married Abraham Hartz; Polly, who married Samuel Eshelman; Elizabeth, who married David Blankenbiller; Mrs. Isaac Ziegler; and Candace, who married Henry Fritz.

Richard Remp, the father of Henry E., was born in May, 1824, and died Nov. 25, 1903. He followed agricultural pursuits in Cumru township the major portion of his life, owning a farm of eighty acres, and was known as a man of integrity. A Republican in politics, he always took an interest in public matters, and for three years served efficiently as school director. Mr. Remp was a member of the Mennonite Church at Brecknock, where he was buried. He married Sarah Eshelman, born in Cumru township, who since 1907 has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Richard Matz, of Mohnton. To Richard and Sarah Remp were born nine children as follows: Henry E.; Sarah, who married Richard Matz; Mary, who married William Manier; Kate, who married Augustus Hartz, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased; Emina, who married Henry Messner; Charles B., a lumber merchant at Lippig, Mont.; Albert E., who resides at No. 1019 Church street, Reading; and Owen, who died young.

Henry E. Remp was reared upon his father's farm, and until twenty-two years of age worked for his parents. At this time he was married, and during the following year lived at home, but in 1870 he removed to Mohnton, where he has since resided. For a number of years he worked in the hat factories of his town, but since 1900 he has worked at carpentering, being connected with W. D. Mohn. In 1902 Mr. Remp erected two large frame houses on Summit street, in the borough of Mohnton, in one of which he himself resides, renting the other. In politics he is an Independent Republican, and he and his family attend Zion's Evangelical Church.

In 1869 Mr. Remp was married to Emma Fritz, daughter of Baltzer and Barbara (Fitterling) Fritz, and to this union there has been born one daughter: Ellen, the wife of B. Frank Steffey, a musician of Reading. They have five children, namely: Maizy, Emma, Lawrence, Alda and Lee.

SAMUEL L. GRAEFF, a contractor and builder of Reading, who as senior member of the firm of Graeff & Brother, has handled some large contracts in Reading and the surrounding country, was born in 1856, in Centre township, Berks county, son of Isaac S. and Mary (Loose) Graeff.

Mr. Graeff received his educational training in the schools of Centre township, and worked upon the home farm until twenty-one years of age, when he learned the carpenter's trade with Backenstose & Co., with whom he worked three years. He was then employed in bridge building for about one year for the Wilmington & Northern Railroad, and then came to Reading, where he worked as a journeyman carpenter until 1897. In this year he formed a partnership with his brother, Isaac L. Graeff, under the firm name of Graeff & Brother, and this partnership has continued to the present time, the brothers meeting with great success in their business.

Samuel L. Graeff was married to Sidney Richard, born in Penn township, Berks county, and to this union there were born three children, one of whom, Eve, survives. She married and has one child, Irma. In religious belief Mr. Graeff and his wife are connected with the Reformed Church. Politically he is a Democrat.

MORRIS Y. JOHNSON, a miller and farmer located near New Berlinville, in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, is a member of the fourth generation of his family to reside in that neighborhood. The Johnsons are descended from one Nicholas Johnson, a native of England, who settled in Colebrookdale township in an early day.

(I) Nicholas Johnson was born Jan. 12, 1758, and came to America in young manhood. He was a wool dyer by trade, and was working for a man in Germantown, Pa., at the time the Continental army was encamped there. One night he slept on the floor to give up his bed to General Washington; the bed is now in the possession of Albert J. Fisher, of Reading. Later he was at Skippack, in Montgomery county, whence he came to Berks county, locating near New Berlinville, where he followed farming. He died Sept. 4, 1839, when over eighty-one years of age, and is buried in the Mennonite cemetery at Boyertown. Mr. Johnson was not a member of the Mennonite Church, but he attended the services of same. His wife, Mary Updegrove, was born Sept. 18, 1761, and died on her seventy-third birthday. Among their children was a son William.

(II) William Johnson was a native of Colebrookdale township, born in February, 1788, and died May 8, 1867, aged seventy-nine years, two months, twenty-one days. He is buried in the Mennonite cemetery at Boyertown. He was engaged in the manufacture of linseed oil, his plant being located along Swamp creek, and later he conducted a woolen mill on the same stream. This he subsequently changed to a grist and saw mill, and he was successful in business, becoming a man of substance. He married Susan Bechtel, born Oct. 6, 1782, who died Jan. 9, 1869, and was buried by his side. Three sons and two daughters were born to them, namely: Isaac, Nicholas, David, Mrs. John Ritter and Polly (who married Henry Fisher).

(III) Nicholas Johnson, father of Morris Y. Johnson, was born in Colebrookdale township, and died on the homestead. By occupation he was a miller and farmer, owning the Johnson homestead of sixty acres and operating a mill at New Berlinville, prospering in both lines. He was well and favorably known, and served acceptably as school director of Colebrookdale township. His remains rest in the Fairview cemetery at Boyertown. Mr. Johnson was a Schwenkfelder in religious belief, attending church with his family in Hereford township, and a Republican in political opinion. His wife was Mary Yoder, daughter of Jacob Yoder, of Oley township, and they had a family of six children: William, now a resident of Montgomery county, Pa.; Nicholas, deceased; Henry, of New Berlinville, Berks county; Eli, of Spring township, Berks county; Rosanna, wife of John E. B. Bechtel; and Morris Y.

(IV) Morris Y. Johnson was born July 21, 1854, and was reared in his native place, attending the district school and later Kallynean Academy, at Boyertown. He received a good education, and was licensed to teach by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner in 1871. His first term, in Hereford township, was followed by five terms at New Berlinville and one year at Gablesville. Ever since he has worked on the farm. In 1880 Mr. Johnson moved to Douglass township, Montgomery Co.,

Pa., where he bought a seventy-acre tract upon which he engaged in farming for twenty years, and which he still owns, having rented the land since he settled at his present location. Since the fall of 1899 he has owned his present mill property and farm of thirty-five acres near New Berlinville, in Colebrookdale township. The land was formerly known as the Henry Gilbert tract, and is fertile and productive, and in a good state of cultivation. The mill had been burned in 1898, but Mr. Johnson rebuilt it, opening his present establishment Oct. 17, 1900, since which time he has enjoyed a large patronage and the good-will of his entire neighborhood. Besides milling and farming he deals in flour, feed and grain, and he is an energetic man in everything he undertakes. He is a Republican in political belief, and while a resident of Montgomery county took considerable interest in the affairs of his community, serving as school director of Douglass township; he was also elected to the office of poor director for a term of three years.

In 1876 Mr. Johnson married Elizabeth Bahr, daughter of Jacob Bahr, and to them have been born children as follows: Edwin, of New Berlinville; William, who is now at East Greenville, in Montgomery county; Nicholas, who lives at home; Warren, living at Vera Cruz, Pa.; and Morris B., at home. The members of this family are Lutherans, attending St. John's Church at Boyertown, in which Mr. Johnson has been active, having held the offices of deacon and elder.

FRANK PLOWFIELD, of Reading, who is engaged in the manufacture of artificial ice at No. 227 West Green street, was born Feb. 7, 1865, in Morgantown, Pa., son of Frederick and Christiana (Graeff) Plowfield.

Frederick Plowfield was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and in his native country served in the standing army. When a young man he came to America and settled first in the Conestoga Valley, and later at a place where he engaged in farming and lime burning for several years. Later he purchased a farm near Joanna Furnace, and there the rest of his life was spent, his death occurring in February, 1891, at the age of seventy-two years. His widow survived him until 1894, and she passed away in her seventy-second year. They were members of the Lutheran Church, and the parents of children as follows: Mary, born in 1847, m. George Miller; Joseph, born in 1848; Jacob, born in 1850; Ludwig, born in 1853; Eliza, born in 1854, m. William Hunsberger; Catherine, born in 1855, m. John Hartenstine; Annie born in 1857, m. Herman Bandles; Emma B., born in 1859, m. Theodore Bush; William, born in 1861; John born in 1863; Frank; Ella, born in 1867.

Frank Plowfield was educated in the common schools of his native locality and his first employment was on a farm, on which he worked until about twenty-four years old. In 1889 he moved to Gibraltar, Berks county, where he drove a team until 1891, and in the latter year located in Reading and engaged as a driver for the Excelsior Bottling Works. After one year at this occupation he engaged in the coal and flour business with Francis Keller, and in this continued for four years, in 1897 engaging in the ice business, in which he has continued to the present time. He has two delivery teams, using the extra one for afternoon service, and employs three assistants. He has a storage plant, although he buys the ice direct from the manufacturers, and his trade is large and constantly increasing. Mr. Plowfield owns a valuable residence at No. 1230 Oley street, Reading, in which he resides.

In 1891 Mr. Plowfield married Sarah H. Merkle, daughter of William and Mary A. (Noll) Merkle, and to this union have been born two children: William F. and Harvey H. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Plowfield are Lutherans. He is a Republican in politics and his fraternal connections are with the Foresters of America; Harmony Fire Relief Association and Schuylkill Fire Company.

HENRY G. CLEMMER. The Clemmer family is one of the oldest of the Mennonite families in the State. Henry Clemmer (as his name is signed to his last will and testament on record at Norristown) came over to America in the ship "Alexandria Ann," which landed its forty-six passengers at Philadelphia Sept. 5, 1730. His will was probated June 2, 1791. In Vol. 17, Second Series Pa. Archives, page 21, his name is recorded Henrick Cleimer. The name has been changed to Klemmer and Clymer, but a large number of the descendants spell it as did the emigrant ancestor, Clemmer. Henry Clemmer settled in Philadelphia (now Montgomery) county. In 1779-80-82 the names of Henry Clemmer, Sr., and Jr., appear on the Federal and State tax lists in Franconia township, then in Philadelphia county, where they paid a large tax, showing them to be land owners at that time. Henry Clemmer, Sr., died in Franconia township. In his will he mentions nine children as follows: Catharine m. Henry Leatheroth; Elizabeth m. Jacob Oberholtzer; Ann m. Jacob Kile; Mary m. Jacob Moyer; Christian; Henry, Jr. (died in Hatfield township, and will recorded at Norristown, Oct. 14, 1802); John; Valentine; and Abraham (died in Franconia township, and will recorded at Norristown March 7, 1838). On the same vessel on which Henry Clemmer, Sr., came to America was one Hans Jacob Oberholtzer, a Mennonite, who also located in Montgomery county. Elizabeth, daughter of Henry, Sr., married Jacob Oberholtzer, who was probably a son of Hans Jacob. The Clemmers are a numerous family and scattered throughout the State, especially in the counties of Montgomery, Bucks, Berks and Lehigh. The early members of the family were all Mennonites, but George Clemmer, a grandson of the emigrant, married into a Catholic family named Kuhns, and then he himself became a communicant of that faith; his descendants live near Bally, and are members of the parish of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

Christian Clemmer, great-grandfather of Henry G., was a farmer near Sellersville, Bucks county. His children were George, Abraham, Samuel, Catharine (m. John Derstein) and Mrs. Jacob Detweiler.

George Clemmer, son of Christian, was born in the vicinity of Sellersville, Jan. 29, 1786, and died June 25, 1864. He came to Berks county before his marriage, and began farming on the farm now owned by James B. Funk. This is a large and fertile tract of land, and on it is located "Clemmer's Mill." He married Anna Geissinger (1787-1872), and their children were: Catharine m. David Hiestand, of Lehigh county; John lived on the farm now owned by Amos B. Pannepacker, near Bally; Rev. Christian; Rev. Samuel; Abraham lived in various places, but died and is buried in the State of Washington; and Anna m. John H. Bechtel.

Rev. Christian Clemmer, son of George, was born near Clayton, in Hereford township, on the old Clemmer farm, Feb. 8, 1813, and died on the farm now owned by his son Henry G., March 9, 1883, and is buried in the Union cemetery at the Mennonite Meeting House in Bally. He was first a farmer, and was then, in 1842, selected by lot to preach the Word of God, and he continued active in the ministry until his death. He contracted a cold at a funeral in Oley, and his death resulted seventeen weeks afterward. He owned the farm now the property of Henry G., and was successful in its cultivation. He married Barbara Gehman, daughter of John Gehman, and to their union five children were born: (1) Maria died in her fourth year. (2) Henry G. (3) Abraham G., who died in Hereford township April 8, 1877, aged thirty-four years, eight months and nine days, was extensively engaged in burning lime, for eight years having burned 17,000 bushels annually, and he also owned the seventy-three acre farm, now owned by his son David F. He m. Mary Funk, daughter of Philip Funk, of Hereford, and their children were: David F., Jacob, Oswin, Annie, Amanda, and Mary. (4) Annie died Aug. 21, 1864, aged twenty years, seven months, and twenty-one days. (5) Malinda m. Jacob Oberholtzer, of Bechtelsville.

Henry G. Clemmer, son of Rev. Christian, and now living retired at Clayton, was born on the Clemmer homestead, in Hereford township, March 11, 1841. He attended the public schools of his township after they were established, and later was in school at Collegeville —now Ursinus College. He was reared to farm work, and when twenty-five years old began farming on his father's farm, and this place has continued to be his home. He has been retired from active work since 1894, his son Alfred assuming the cares and duties. He farmed from 1866 on for twenty-eight years, and met with the success that comes from industry and honest intelligent effort. In 1895 he began huckstering to Philadelphia, and they went once a week to the Philadelphia market, selling considerable produce and poultry. They also have a stand at the Reading Terminal market, and have an established trade.

The Clemmer farm has been in the family since 1838, having before that time belonged to the Gehmans. It consists of 115 acres of excellent land. The house is quite large. The old part was built during the Revolution, and is of stone, but the newer part was built at a much later period. The barn was built in 1857, replacing one erected in 1759 and covered with split cedar shingles.

Mr. Clemmer was one of the charter members of the Clayton Butter and Cheese Company, and became one of its first directors, and later its manager. In politics he is a Republican, and was committeeman of the township during the days when the high and anti-high factions were at war. He and his family attend the New Mennonite Church at Bally.

On Jan. 27, 1866, Mr. Clemmer married Mary Geissinger, daughter of Abraham and Anna (Bechtel) Geissinger, of New Zionsville, Pa., and granddaughter of Philip and Veronica (Hiestand) Geissinger, of Lehigh county. To this union have been born two children: Alfred G.; and Miss Emma, who lives at home.

Alfred G. Clemmer, born Feb. 1, 1867, received his education in the public schools and at Kutztown, and for two and one-half terms was engaged in teaching in Hereford township. He worked for his parents until he reached his majority, and in 1894 he became the active manager, engaging in farming and huckstering. He also sells cattle in the fall of the year. In 1893 he married Naomi Markley, of Norristown, daughter of Richard and Sophia (Kehl) Markley, and they have children as follows: Henry, Ira, Leroy, Alfred, Warren, Mary, Ella, Annie and Bertha.

HORACE M. SASSAMAN, farmer of Colebrookdale township, Berks county, lives in a section where his family has been settled for several generations. He is a son of John S. and Elizabeth (Muthard) Sassaman, and a descendant in the fifth generation of August Sassaman, who founded the family in America.

(I) August Sassaman, of Witgenstein, in Westphalia, Germany, emigrated to America in 1775, and located in Ontelaunee township, Berks Co., Pa., where he took up a large tract of land with a family named Gernand. In 1787 he sold his interests to the Gernands and with his family located at Clayton, in Hereford township. He was a member of the Reformed Church. The family Bible he brought with him from the Fatherland; it was printed in 1770 and is still in excellent condition. It is now in the possession of his great-granddaughter, Mrs. Joel W. D. Whitman, of Reading. August Sassaman's children were as follows: Johan Christian, Daniel, Johannes, Mrs. Elizabeth Guarty and Mrs. Catharine Roth. Both the daughters lived in Bern township.

(II) Johannes Sassaman was born in Germany and was only a child when brought by his father to America. He lived to a good old age, dying in October, 1851, on his farm in District township. He was a blacksmith as well as farmer. For a number of years he lived in Hereford township, along the State road, to Tamaqua, and all but two of his seven children were born in that township. He married Barbara, daughter of Henry Geyer, and she died only a few weeks before her husband, passing away Sept. 12, 1851, at the age of seventy-two years. Their children were born as follows: Barbara, 1806 (died young); John, 1807; Christian, 1809; Abraham, 1811; a son, 1813 (died in infancy); Mary Ann (Polly), 1814 (married Joseph Fritz); Daniel, 1816 (died in 1817).

(III) Christian Sassaman, son of Johannes, was born Dec. 25, 1809, in Hereford township and died on his farm March 17, 1890, at the age of eighty-one years. He passed his active life in farming, retiring some years before his death. He was a progressive man, and took particular interest in the question of public education, serving his township as school director, as well as in other local offices. Religious matters and church work also claimed his attention, and for many years he was a member and official of the Reformed Church at Boyertown. He married a distant relative, Maria Sassaman, who was born Sept. 10, 1813, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Boyer) Sassaman, and granddaughter of Jacob Boyer. Mrs. Maria Sassaman died June 29, 1893, aged nearly eighty years, and was buried July 4, 1893, in the family lot at Boyertown, in Fairview cemetery. She was the mother of six children, as follows: Willoughby, who lives in Montgomery county, Pa.; Judge Augustus S., now deceased, mentioned elsewhere; Mary, deceased, who married Henry S. Hoffman, of Boyertown, Pa.; Lucy, who is the wife of Joel W. D. Whitman, of No. 322 North Ninth street, Reading; Henry S., a justice of the peace, of Pottstown, Pa.; and John S., deceased, who was the father of Horace H. Sassaman.

(IV) John S. Sassaman, youngest member of Christian Sassaman's family, was born in 1846, and died in 1904, at the age of fifty-eight years. Though he was in poor health for twelve years before his death he was for many years a most active man, and he carried on farming all his life, living in Colebrookdale township for twenty-five years, and in Douglass township for five or six years. He took part in local public affairs, was school director for six years in Colebrookdale township, and also served some years as supervisor. Like his father he was also interested in the religious life of the community, and he was a member and deacon of the Reformed Church of Bechtelsville, where he is buried. In politics he was a Democrat.

Mr. Sassaman married Elizabeth Muthard, daughter of Joel Muthard, and to them were born six children, namely: Horace M., Jeremiah, Mary (deceased), Anna, William and Alice.

(V) Horace M. Sassaman was born Nov. 19, 1867, at the home in Douglass township. He attended common school in Colebrookdale township, attending the Landis school, and was reared to farming which he has followed with success all his life. He worked for his parents until eighteen years old, in 1896 beginning on his own account and on his own place, which contains seventy-six acres. It was formerly the property of his maternal grandfather, Joel Muthard. Here Mr. Sassaman has been located ever since, and he is in comfortable circumstances. He keeps four horses and ten head of cattle.

Mr. Sassaman was married June 2, 1894, to Miss Sarah Amanda A. H. Johnson, daughter of Gideon and Hannah (Houck) Johnson. They have no children. Mr. and Mrs. Sassaman are members of the Bechtelsville Reformed Church. He is a Democrat in politics.

EPHRAIM Y. HILL was a farmer all his life in Earl township, where he was born Jan. 29, 1844, and where he died Oct. 6, 1891.

Abraham Hill, his great-grandfather, was a farmer in what is now Earl township, and lived on and owned the farm that is now the property of Mrs. Rebecca Hill and her sister. He is buried in a private burial ground on this farm. Among his children were two sons, Peter and Abraham. Of these Abraham, who died in 1844, married a lady whose first name was Hannah, and they had a son Samuel (1807-1853) and a daughter Sarah. In 1802 Abraham Hill was assessed as a wheelwright in Earl township.

Peter Hill, son of Abraham, was a farmer in Earl township, owning the farm along Manatawny Creek, which later was the property of his son Jacob, but is now owned by Daniel Gross. Peter Hill located on that farm before 1802, and in that year his name appears as one of the taxables of the district. He died about 1863, aged eighty-seven years. Both he and his wife, Hannah Knabb, are buried at the Oley Churches. Their children were: Jacob; Mary, m. to Frederick Brendlinger, of the Swamp; Lydia, m. to David Gresh; and Daniel, who died young.

Jacob Hill, son of Peter, was like his father and grandfather, a farmer in Earl township, where he died in 1881, aged seventy-eight years. He owned the farm above described as the present property of Daniel Gross. He married Sallie Yoder, who died about 1883, aged seventy-six years. They were members of the Oley Reformed Church, where both are buried. They were the parents of twelve children: James, deceased; Mary Ann, who died unmarried; Abner; Jacob; Jacob Y., born Nov. 24, 1835, living at Stony Creek, Pa.; Peter; Ephraim Y.; Darius; Augustus; Ellen m. to John Specht; Frank Y., a grocer at Reading; and one that died young.

Ephraim Y. Hill was familiar with farm work from boyhood, and after his marriage he became a tenant farmer. In 1880 he obtained by inheritance through his wife the farm of David Davidheiser, in Earl township, located on the Manatawny Creek. This contains 187 acres of good land, and Mr. Hill was engaged in its cultivation until his death, being very successful in his work. This farm has been in the Davidheiser name since 1858, but before that it was the property of Abraham Hill, and before him it was owned by his father. An old stone house on this farm was built in 1805, and the date in the south gable is given as "1805. H. H." The big house was built by a Hill in 1838, but the new part of the present residence was built by David Davidheiser.

In politics Mr. Hill was a Democrat, and was very active in party work. He was frequently a delegate to county conventions, and at one time held the office of supervisor. He was a member of the Reformed congregation, and his wife of the Lutheran, of the Amityville church, and both are buried there in the Hill lot.

On Aug. 31, 1862, Mr. Hill married Rebecca Davidheiser, daughter of David and Rachel (Weaver) Davidheiser, and their children were: Elsie M., who died aged four years; Irwin S., deceased in infancy; and Catharine, who became the wife of Daniel Achey, the farmer of the Hill homestead for Mrs. Hill.

DR. FRANKLIN H. GOOD, physician of Reading, resides at No. 1012 Greenwich street.

Benneville Good, the father of the Doctor, was for some years engaged in teaming between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, and his death occurred in 1871, at the age of sixty-two years. He also raised flax for some time and engaged in spinning, but in his later years he gave up all active work, and for some time prior to his death lived a retired life. He and his wife had a large family of children, four of whom survive, as follows: Amelia, wife of Henry Piper, is of Jonestown, Lebanon county; Amanda, wife of Henry Fastnacht, lives on a farm in Lebanon county adjoining the old home; Mary, widow of Ephraim Armstrong, who was for many years treasurer of the Reading school board, resides in Reading; and Dr. Franklin H.

Dr. Franklin H. Good has four children: Benjamin F., Robert G., Sadie I., and William C. He is fraternally connected with the Eagles and the Foresters.

HARRY JACOB WEIDNER, engaged in the shoemaking business in the Sixteenth ward, Reading, is a member of the old Weidner family of Berks county. Mr. Weidner was born Oct. 14, 1866, in Reading, son of Daniel W. and Sally (Price) Weidner.

Tychicus (Dietrich) Weidner, the progenitor of this branch of the family in America, was one of three brothers who came from the Fatherland about 1750 and settled in Oley township, where one of his brothers, Lazarus, also settled, the other one, Adam, locating in Amity township. The death of Tychicus Weidner occurred in 1798, he being at a very advanced age, and his will, which was probated in that year, mentions these children: Jacob, John, Hannah, Catherine, Esther, Susannah, Mary, Peter, Jonathan, Christian and Daniel. Of these Jacob Weidner was the great-great-grandfather of Harry J., was a farmer and owned the old homestead, where he was buried, and had a number of children, among them the great-grandfather of Harry J., William.

William Weidner, like his father, spent his life in Oley township, where his entire attention was given to agricultural pursuits on the homestead farm. He married Susannah Yoder, and to them were born the following children: Daniel; Jacob, who married Mary Ann Weidner; William, who married Catherine Bean; Reuben (1832-1889), who married Mary Bean; Amanda, who married Reuben Dry; George, who married Theresa Barndt; Rachel, who married William Dilaplain; Leah, who married Israel Keim; and Polly, who married David Weidner.

Jacob Weidner, grandfather of Harry J., was a native of Oley township, and was engaged in farming and wheelwrighting above Pleasantville, but in 1855 he located in Reading and there engaged in car building for Shaaber & Johnson until his death in 1888. He married Mary Ann Weidner, daughter of David Weidner of Friedensburg, and to this union there were born children as follows: Augustus, who died young; Jacob, who died aged eighteen years; James, who was killed in the Civil war; Gideon, born in 1842, who died in 1906, was a shoemaker of Reading, married Esther Graul and had two children, of whom James, born Aug. 8, 1865, a shoemaker of Reading, married Mary Monroe, by whom he has two children, Annie and Charles; Daniel W., father of Henry J.; and Malinda, who married Luke Koch, of Reading.

Daniel W. Weidner was born Oct. 12, 1844, in Oley township, was reared on the farm, and when eleven years old came with his parents to Reading. When seventeen years of age he learned the shoemaking trade, and he has been engaged in this business to the present time. For twelve years he was located at No. 214 Chapel Terrace, but since 1904 he has resided at No. 231 South Tenth street, where he owns property and conducts his business. Mr. Weidner was married in 1866 to Sallie Price, born Sept. 2, 1847, and to them have been born three children: Harry Jacob; Annie, who married Jeremiah Auge, of No. 214 Chapel Terrace, Reading; and another that died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Weidner are members of the Gospel Tabernacle on Franklin street, above Eleventh, where Mr. Weidner is an official and exhorter.

Harry J. Weidner obtained his education in the public schools of his native city, which he left after completing the grammar school course. At the age of fourteen years he became an errand boy in A. Haugen's shoe store, where he remained one year, and from 1871, when he learned the shoemaking trade with his father, until 1888, they worked together at No. 231 South Tenth street. At the latter date Mr. Weidner married and opened up a shop of his own at Maple street and Benner's court, and there he followed his trade until 1892, when he bought the house at No. 239 Miller street, and here he has continued to the present time, having all the trade that he can handle. Mr. Weidner is very proficient at his trade, and his good work has won for him much custom, while his pleasant and courteous manner has won for him many friends. In political matters he is independent, and socially he is connected with the Knights of Good Templar of Reading. He and his wife are regular attendants of the Gospel Tabernacle.

On Oct. 11, 1888, Mr. Weidner was married to Clara D. Hartline, born June 29, 1867, daughter of George A. and Deborah (Drumheller) Hartline, the former a shoemaker and farmer of Alsace township. To Mr. and Mrs. Weidner have been born five children, sons as follows: Earl R., born Sept. 29, 1889; Harold C., born Jan. 1, 1891; Daniel W., born July 10, 1892; George S., born Oct. 16, 1895, died May 9, 1904; and H. Clifford, born Oct. 15, 1903.

HENRY JOSEPH HARTMANN, a rising young business man of the Tenth ward, Reading, Pa., who is engaged in cement contracting for builders, is a native of this city, born Jan. 29, 1874, son of Godfrey and Modesta (Bruder) Hartmann.

Staffron Hartmann, the great-grandfather of Henry J., was a laborer in the Fatherland, and lived in Grossherzogthum Hessen. He had a family of children, among them Nicholas Hartmann, who was born in the Grand Duchy in 1818, and died in 1874. He married Theresa Houck, and to them were born eight children: Charlotte, of Reading; Magdalena, of Reading; Barbara, who was blind and died at the age of nine years; Jacob and Godfrey, twins; Heinrich, who died at the age of two years; Margaretta, and Anna.

Godfrey Hartmann was also a native of Grossherzogthum, Hessen, Germany, born Jan. 22, 1840. He was educated in the German schools, which he attended until fourteen years of age, and then learned the milling trade, which he followed for one year. Mr. Hartmann then learned the millwright trade, in which he was engaged until coming to America in 1863, and after landing at Castle Garden, New York, proceeded immediately to Reading, where he worked at carpentering for many years in the car shops. Later he engaged in the contracting business, and erected a large number of houses in Reading including the double brick residence at Nos. 412-414 South Eleventh street, which now belongs to his son, Henry J., and here lived until his death. He and his family were members of St. Paul's Catholic Church. Mr. Hartmann married Modesta Bruder, and to them were born four children, namely: Godfrey, who died single, aged twenty-one years; Mary, who died at the age of seventeen years; Henry J.; and one that died in infancy.

Jacob Hartmann, the twin brother of Godfrey, and uncle of Henry J., of Reading, lived for some years in Rei Breidenbach, Kreiss Ehrbach, in Odenwald, and on Oct. 29, 1881, embarked on the ship "Rheinland," at Antwerp, and came to Castle Garden, where he landed Nov. 12, 1881. He at once came to Reading, and worked for seven years in the employ of the Reading Iron Company, but in 1888 went back to Germany, returning to America the year following and settling in Reading, where he has since resided. He and his family are members of St. Paul's Catholic Church. In 1871 Jacob Hartmann was married to Anna Maria Emmich, daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Bollander) Emmich, and to them have been born these children: Frantz, who died in infancy; Adam, who married Ella Mosser, lives in Reading; Annie, who resides at home and is single; and Magdalena, who died in 1900, at the age of twenty-one years.

Henry J. Hartmann was educated in St. Paul's Catholic Parochial school, after leaving which he worked in a box factory, and for the Reading Hardware Co. When seventeen years of age he learned the machinist's trade with Orr & Sembower, of Reading, after leaving whose employ he engaged with his father, assisting him in contracting until 1900, since which time he has been carrying on business on his own account, doing contracting jobs for builders. Mr. Hartmann is a man of more than ordinary business ability and has gained a reputation for living up to the word of his contracts. In political matters he is a Democrat, giving his support to the candidate he thinks best fitted for the office. Socially he is connected with the Knights of St. John, No. 271, of Reading. Mr. Hartmann and his family are members of St. Paul's Catholic Church, and his children attend the parochial school.

On Nov. 27, 1897, Mr. Hartmann was married to M. Elizabeth Rohrbach, born Dec. 11, 1874, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Hiller) Rohrbach. Mr. Rohrbach, who was a native of Hereford township, Berks county, was a blacksmith by trade, and he and his wife had four children: Henry, who is single and lives in Reading; Charles, who married Mary Good, of Reading; Samuel, who married Minnie Pinyard; and M. Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Hartmann have two children: Clarence J., born July 20, 1898, and Catherine, born May 16, 1904.

LLOYD M. NUNEMACHER, who is engaged in an extensive contracting business in Reading, is one of the leaders in the ranks of the Democratic party in Reading, and has been favorably mentioned as candidate for the office of sheriff of Berks county. Mr. Nunemacher was born Sept. 2, 1863, in Upper Bern township, Berks county, son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Miller) Nunemacher.

Jacob Nunemacher, the grandfather of Lloyd, was a well-to-do farmer of Berks county, and an influential Democrat. He married Lovina Henne, and to them were born two children: Benjamin, and Jacob, who is now living at Tower City, Pa. Benjamin Nunemacher, an uncle of Benjamin the father of Lloyd, was a State Senator on the Democratic ticket and served his constituents at the State Capitol in 1868. Benjamin Nunemacher, father of Lloyd, was a carpenter by trade, an occupation which he followed all of his life. He died in 1887, aged forty-eight years, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. In politics he was a Democrat. To Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Nunemacher were born these children: Rosa, who married Luther Rhodes; Clayton J., a blacksmith of Reading; Katie, who married Simon Hiester of Chester Co., Pa.; Sally, who married Paul Keim, of Pittsburg; Charles F., in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company, Reading; John, employed with Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart; Maggie, who resides with her mother on the old homestead; and Lloyd.

Lloyd M. Nunnemacher was educated in the common schools of Bern and Centre townships, and worked at farming for four years, after which he engaged in coal mining from 1877 to 1883. In the latter year he came to Reading and apprenticed himself to the carpenter's trade with Wesley Wells, serving five years. He then engaged with the Reading planing mill (Fink & Huyett), and continued with this firm until 1899 when the business was dissolved and since that time Mr. Nunemacher has been engaged in contracting for himself. He employs on an average five men, but at times has as many as fifteen to twenty men on his pay list. He is well and favorably known in Reading, especially in the Fifth ward, where he has resided for sixteen years, and where he owns a home at No. 233 South Third street. Mr. Nunemacher has been prominent in the Democratic party for a number of years. He has been a member of the school board for eight years, has served as a delegate to thirteen county, four State and three city conventions, and has ever been active in public life. His fraternal connections are with the P. O. S. of A., with which he has been affiliated for the past twenty-six years; the I. O. R. M., Juniata Tribe, No. 74; and Reading Castle, No. 49, K. G. E., of which he is a charter member, and an officer for twenty-one years. In religious belief Mr. Nunemacher and his family are connected with the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Nunemacher was married March 24, 1887, to Miss Catherine Stitzer, the estimable daughter of Augustus Stitzer, and to this union there have been born three daughters: Rosie M., Florence C., and M. Ruth.

HARRY Y. YOCOM. The name of Yocom has been long familiar to the inhabitants of this section of Pennsylvania, and the family is particularly prominent in the lower end of Berks county. The earlier generations were identified with Oley township, but Nicholas Yocom, grandfather of Harry Y., who founded the family in Cumru township, settling there about the beginning of the last century, came from Douglassville.

Late in the seventeenth century a colony of Swedes settled at the Wissahickon, near Philadelphia. In 1701 a number of these Swedes, among whom were three "Yocom" brothers, settled along the eastern bank of the Schuylkill, in the locality of Douglassville, Berks county. Surveys for land for these pioneers were made on Oct. 21, 1701, and patents were issued between 1704 and 1705 for these lands. One J. Jonas "Jocum" (then "Yocomb," also spelled Yokham, Yocum, and now Yocom), the youngest of their brothers, had a patent granted him by the Penns for 350 acres in Amity township. On the eastern bank of the Schuylkill where the Douglassville bridge spans the river, is an historic stone house erected in 1716 by Mounce Jones. He was a son-in-law of J. Jonas Yocum, and was an executor with Peter Yocum, of the will of J. Jonas Yocum. This document was made Aug. 8, 1757, and was witnessed by these Quaker people of Union township: Mordecai, Thomas and Joseph Millard. The will was entered in Berks court house for probate Dec. 27, 1760, and is on record in Will Book I, page 89. This noble ancestor left a large estate, which he equitably divided among the following children: Peter, who obtained one of the homesteads; Judith Mary; Margaret, and John. At the making of the will, the "beloved" wife of the ancestor was still living. The son, John, who had died prior to the making of his aged father's will, left his widow Margaret and three sons, Jonas, Peter and John, the youngest child born after the father's death. The ancestor amply provided for his widowed daughter-in-law. An item of the will states "and should she give birth to a son—he shall have an additional inheritance."

Moses Yocom, of Douglass township, a descendant of J. Jonas, made his will May 20, 1823; it was probated Feb. 28, 1824, and is recorded in Will Book D, page 449. His wife Susanna survived him. The executors of the will were: Daniel Yocom and Jacob Fritz. His children were: Moses, John, Peter, George, Mary, Ann and Hannah.

The will of Maria Yocom, of Douglass township, probated in 1829, provides that each of the legatees of her will shall buy a large family Bible for each of their children. Her children were: Ann, who married Jonas Yocom; Rachel Ragsize, who had a daughter Mary; and Daniel Yocom. Daniel Yocom, son, and Jonas Yocom, son-in-law, were executors of the will.

John Yocom (son of John, and grandson of J. Jonas) was born in 1749, and died Oct. 14, 1823. He had a son Moses, born on the homestead in Amity township, Oct. 11, 1786, who died Aug. 30, 1850. Moses Yocom was married to Susanna, a daughter of Jacob and Anna Weaver, who were the parents of Peter Weaver, who was the father of Col. Jeremiah Weaver. Susanna (Weaver) Yocom was born Aug. 18, 1791, and died May 19, 1872. Moses and Susanna Yocom had a son William, born Jan. 23, 1817. He married Mary B. Kline, a daughter of George Kline, and they had a son William B. Yocom, a prominent man of Amity township.

Nicholas Yocom, a descendant, probably a grandson of J. Jonas, was born in Oley township, Sept. 3, 1776. As a young man he went to Lancaster county, and he learned to make gun-barrels. When ready to begin for himself he chose Cumru township as his location, bought the old Seidel forge, and there prepared his own iron for the manufacture of his gun-barrels, following this calling many years with great profit, but he was of so generous and sympathetic a disposition that he was remembered for his benefactions rather than his wealth, and many were the men in financial straits whom he helped. In person he was tall, powerful and of commanding presence. He died April 23, 1857, aged eighty years, seven months, twenty days. His wife, Catherine (Lorah) Yocom, to whom he was united March 14, 1801, was born Oct. 3, 1783, and died Feb. 13, 1851, at the age of sixty-seven years, four months, ten days. They had four children, as follows: Daniel, born in 1805, who married Miss Catharine Thompson, and died in 1864; George, born 1803, of Sinking Spring; Moses; and Samuel, who married a Miss Spohn and settled at Sinking Spring.

Moses Yocom, father of Harry Y., was born in Lancaster county, Aug. 12, 1815, and died at Grill Oct. 25, 1886, aged seventy-one years, two months, thirteen days. He was an iron manufacturer, following his father's line, and after the latter's death became the owner of Yocom's forge. He, too, was successful financially, while he found time in addition to his business to assist in the educational progress of his section. A man of keen intelligence himself, he was much interested along educational lines and for nearly twelve years was school director. He was likewise prominent in church work, was an elder and treasurer of Yocom's Church for many years and one of the three substantial contributors toward its erection in 1854. Of devout spirit and regular in his attendance, the sincerity of his worship was made manifest in his daily life.

Moses Yocom married Miss Lydia Yost, who was born Oct. 5, 1821, and died Oct. 24, 1888, aged sixty-seven years, nineteen days. She was a daughter of Nicholas and Susanna (Seidel) Yost. The children born to her and her husband were three in number. (1) Nicholas is a farmer and also proprietor of one of the two licensed places in Chester county, outside of Chester. He has as bondsmen citizens whose aggregate wealth is at least $8,000,000. He married Miss Sarah Althouse, now deceased, and has one child, Emily. (2) Harry Y., whose life follows, was the second son. (3) George Y. married Miss Susan Hornberger, by whom he has had two children, viz.: Carrie M., wife of John Hollenbach, a builder in Reading; and Arthur, at home. Mr. George Yocom resides in Reading and is the real estate agent of the Pennsylvania Trust Company.

Harry Y. Yocom was born on the Yocom homestead April 26, 1849. He was given a good education, especially for those days, as he went first to the public school in his immediate vicinity, and then to the C. N. Farr Business College in Reading, from which he was graduated in 1869. Later he resumed his literary studies in the Weaversville Academy near Bethlehem. At the age of twenty-five he began his business career in the office of A. S. Boas and Company, lumber merchants, at the corner of Eighth and Elm streets, with whom he remained as bookkeeper for four years. From there he went to E. S. Ammon, a dealer in dry-goods and notions at No. 354 Penn street, and worked with him as a clerk for four years more. With this experience Mr. Yocom went into business for himself in the same line, opening a dry-goods store at Lincoln, Lancaster county, and ran it from 1882 till 1889 with great success, and with the capital thus accumulated he embarked in the latter year upon the manufacturing enterprise with which he is still identified. Returning to Cumru township he erected his factory on the Wyomissing and began the manufacture of seamless half hose, of a high grade. His goods have a market all over the United States, and the business has prospered from the first. The plant is twenty by fifty-eight feet, two stories high, and twenty-five people are employed. Mr. Yocom possesses all the qualifications for success in business and well deserves his present assured position.

Since 1899 Mr. Yocom has served as justice of the peace for Cumru township. So efficient did he prove during his first term that he was unanimously re-elected. In the course of his incumbency there has been not a single case sent to court nor one discharged.

On May 14, 1885, was solemnized the union of Mr. Yocom to Miss Louisa Yetter of Lancaster county. She was a daughter of Michael and Louisa (Smith) Yetter, who came to Pennsylvania from Germany. Mrs. Yocom is a woman of many accomplishments and for ten years before her marriage was one of the most popular and efficient teachers in Lancaster county, having begun her career when only seventeen years old. Both Mr. and Mrs. Yocom are devout members of Christ Union (or Yocom's) Church, of the Lutheran persuasion. Mr. Yocom was a deacon and superintendent of the Sunday school for many years, while his wife is usually assiduous in the latter department. To her untiring efforts and skill in training the children, the church and Sunday school festivals owe much of their success. Their present home, "The Briarmere," was built by Mr. Yocom in 1903, and is located on the old State road leading from Reading to New Holland, at the corner of the cross road from Yocom's Church to Mohnton. It is one of the handsomest residences in that section, is surrounded by a beautifully kept lawn, equipped with every modern improvement and is furnished in a style fully commensurate with its attractive exterior.

CHARLES S. YOCOM, who entered into rest, Feb. 6, 1901, aged fifty-five years, was a lifelong resident of Spring township. By occupation he was a carpenter, and for many years also carried on farming. In political faith he was a Republican, and in religious connection a Lutheran member of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring, serving on the building committee when the present edifice was erected in 1897. He was twice married. By his first wife, Catharine Faust, he had one son, William H., of Sinking Spring. He married (second) Mrs. Kate A (Shalter) Reeser, widow of Cyrus Reeser. She was born Oct. 19, 1848, and by her first marriage had four children, namely: J. Pierson, a coal, grain and lumber merchant at Sinking Spring; George G., employed by his brother, J. Pierson; Cora E., wife of Thomas Huyett, Sinking Spring; and Kate L., who died in infancy.

The early history of the Yocom family will be found in the sketch of Harry Y. Yocom, grandson of Nicholas Yocom.

George Yocom, son of Nicholas, was born in Cumru township Oct. 3, 1803. He was an iron worker by trade, and he and his father bought the old Spohn estate in Lower Heidelberg township, consisting of 101 acres of the best land in the county. Here he engaged in farming until his son Benjamin took charge, and he then retired to Sinking Spring, where he died Aug. 17, 1881, aged seventy-seven years, ten months, fourteen days. He is buried in the cemetery at Sinking Spring. His wife Catharine Hemmig, daughter of John and Susanna Hemmig, was born Dec. 23, 1805, and she died April 21, 1874, aged sixty-eight years, three months, twenty-nine days. Their children were: William, a farmer near Stouchsburg, married Mary Potteiger; Aaron, a flour merchant in Reading, married (first) Hannah Manery and (second) Kate Heffer; Sarah married Frederick Graeff; Amanda died unmarried; Amos, a shoemaker and farmer, married Isabella Miller (1843-1885); Benjamin is mentioned below; Lizzie married Aaron Fox, a butcher at Sinking Spring; Anna married Reuben Beecher, formerly at Wernersville.

Benjamin Yocom, son of George, was born on the Yocom homestead Nov. 7, 1836, and was reared upon the farm, working for his parents until after he was twenty-one years of age. He then began farming on his father's farm in Lower Heidelberg township, where he lived six years, after which he moved to the old Daniel Dechert farm, where he lived nineteen years. At the end of that time he bought a tract of eighty-one acres in Lower Heidelberg. This was an exceptionally fertile tract, with fine water and good substantial buildings, and was in every way a comfortable and commodious place, where Mr. Yocom made his home for sixteen years. In the spring of 1907 he came to Sinking Spring, where he now lives retired, making his home with his son-in-law Charles E. Potteiger.

In politics Mr. Yocom is a stanch Republican. He and his family are Lutheran members of St. John's Church, in which he has served as deacon and elder. On Oct. 7, 1858, he wedded Catharine Huyett, born Dec. 16, 1838, daughter of Jacob and Magdalena (Hill) Huyett. To this union have been born four children, namely: Benjamin F., born May 2, 1860, married Alice Bieber, and is a farmer in Jefferson township; Mary M., born Oct. 12, 1865, married August Scheetz, of Denver, Pa.; Kate, born Dec. 31, 1868, married Charles E. Potteiger, a farmer and cattle dealer at Sinking Spring; and George W., born Aug. 17, 1871, married Katie Brown, and is farming the old home farm.

ISAAC L. GRAEFF, of Reading, engaged in contracting and building, was born Nov. 21, 1853, in Centre township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Isaac S. and Mary A. (Loose) Graeff.

Isaac L. Graeff attended the public school of his native township which was then taught by the well-known schoolmaster, Squire Zerby, and as a boy assisted in the work on his father's farm. At the age of nineteen years he started to learn the trade of painter, and as an apprentice came to Reading, which city has been his home to the present time. Since the age of twenty-three years he has been engaged in carpentering. After being employed by different builders of the city, he engaged in business on his own account, and in the spring of 1898 he took his brother, Samuel L., into partnership, the firm being known as Graeff Brothers. Their first job was at the Carpenter Steel Works, and they have also erected several schoolhouses, and a number of dwellings, and their business is a large and growing one.

Mr. Graeff was married to Miss Alice S. Winters, daughter of John R. and Amanda (Spotz) Winters, and to this union there has been born one daughter, Miss Jennie V., who resides at home. The family live at No. 462 Centre avenue, and have a wide social circle. In political matters Mr. Graeff is a Democrat. His religious belief is that of the Reformed Church.

BAHR. Among the early Mennonites who settled in Pennsylvania and particularly in Berks county, was a family by the name of Bähr. Tradition says the emigrant ancestor of this family was Leonard Bar, who is buried in the cemetery at Hill Church. He was born in 1734, and he died March 9, 1813, and his wife, Maria (also called Magdalena) was buriel at his side. She was born Aug. 28, 1738, daughter of Nicholas Ihst (Ehst), a native of Switzerland and a pioneer of Colebrookdale township, Berks county. She died July 2, 1820, aged eighty-two years, two months, four days. On her tombstone the name is spelled Bahr; and on that of her husband Bar, the latter also stating that there were two sons and two daughters.

Jacob Bahr was born Dec. 25, 1759, and his death occurred Dec. 11, 1825, when he was aged sixty-five years, eleven months, sixteen days. His wife, Esther Stauffer, born June 23, 1759, died Feb. 10, 1836, aged seventy-six years, seven months, seventeen days. They were Mennonites in religious faith, and were buried in the Mennonites cemetery at Boyertown.

Johannes Bahr, son of Jacob and Esther, was born Dec. 26, 1780. He owned the farm of over seventy acres now owned by William Keim, and also the tract belonging to William C. Edinger, and the farm of his grandson John B. Bahr. He died Jan. 20, 1864, aged eighty-three years, twenty-four days. On July 5, 1807, he married Catharine Bechtel, born Oct. 15, 1784, daughter of Isaac Bechtel. She died Oct. 10, 1850, aged sixty-six years, one day. Both she and her husband are buried in the Mennonite cemetery at Boyertown. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Aug. 18, 1808, died May 16, 1809; Rebecca, born Dec. 5, 1810; Elizabeth, born Feb. 6, 1812, died Jan. 15, 1815; Jacob B., born July 18, 1814; Ester, born Dec. 19, 1816; Catharine, born Feb. 5, 1818, married John Maurer, and lived on the homestead; Susanna, born Sept. 3, 1820, died unmarried; Isaac, born June 21, 1826.

Jacob B. Bahr, son of Johannes, was born in Colebrookdale township, July 18, 1814, and he died July 19, 1882, and is buried in Fairview cemetery. He was a life long farmer and prospered in his undertaking. He owned a farm of 125 acres near Boyertown, the farm now the property of his son, John B., and he built all the buildings there, the barn in 1864, and the house in 1869. In politics he was a Democrat, and served as school director of the township. His wife, Catharine Bliem, was born April 27, 1823, and died March 16, 1890, daughter of John Bliem, of Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county. They were the parents of children as follows: Elam, who died young; Sarah, who married Samuel Noll, of Reading; Lucy, wife of Chester Kepner, of Pottstown; Lizzie, who married M. Y. Johnson, of New Berlinville; Matilda, who became the wife of William Davidheiser, of Pottstown; Mary, who died unmarried; Kate, wife of Samuel Bechtel, of Congo; John B., on the homestead; a daughter who died unmarried; Jacob B.; and Annie, who married John Y. Shultz, of Trexlertown.

John B. Bahr, son of Jacob B., is a prosperous farmer living at Gabelsville, in Colebrookdale township, Berks county. He was born Jan. 26, 1861, and was educated in the common schools of his district, and later in Boyertown Academy, which he attended for a short time. He worked for his parents until he was twenty-five years old, and then began farming for himself on the homestead, which he continues to operate. This is a tract of one hundred acres, Mr. Bahr having added twenty acres to it. He has a fine dairy, keeping twelve to fifteen cows, and ships his milk to Boyertown. His land is kept in fine condition, and the home is comfortable and attractive with its well kept lawn. There is an excellent spring on the place. Mr. Bahr has some of the finest horses in Lower Berks county. In politics Mr. Bahr is a Democrat. He and his family attend St. John's Church at Boyertown, in which he served four years as deacon. He has the old family Bible, once the property of his grandfather, bearing the date 1765. Mr. Bahr was married in October, 1888, to Annie Hartman, daughter of John and Hannah (Clouser) Hartman, of Spangsville. They had children: Luella, Arthur, Nora, William, Edna and Warren, the last named dying in infancy.

Jacob B. Bahr, son of Jacob B., and now a leading merchant, miller and sawmill proprietor, was born in Colebrookdale township, near where he now lives, April 11, 1863. He attended the schools of his district, and was reared to farming pursuits, working for his parents until twenty-five years old. He then married and located in Gabelsville, in 1888, at once engaging in the lumber and sawmill business, and in a small way operated a gristmill. In 1900 he engaged in the mercantile business, where he has two persons employed. He runs a huckster team, and does a profitable business. There are fifty-seven acres of land in his farm, three houses (two of which he rents) a mill and a sawmill, barn and necessary out-buildings. He is the leading spirit in the town, and altogether employs three men besides his three sons. The place on which he lives is the old Gabel nomestead. His wife was Mary Gabel, daughter of John L. and Leah (Hoch) Gabel. She is buried in Fairview cemetery. To this union were born four children: William, who died in infancy; Elmer, assisting his father; and Raymond and Lawrence, also working on the home place. Mr. Bahr married (second) in November, 1905, Mrs. Alice Nester, nee Scheetz, widow of William Nester. Mr. Bahr and his family belong to St. John's Church at Boyertown, where he was deacon for two terms of two years each.

JONATHAN B. MILLER. The Millers or Muellers have more representatives in Berks county than any other one family. There were many by that name who immigrated in the early days, and a number of these were evidently not related in any way. It is possible that there are two or more immigrant ancestors of that name to be found in some localities, but the oldest Miller family in the county located in the Tulpehocken valley in the spring of 1723.

In a list of members of the Tulpehocken Lutheran Church, from 1743 to 1746, as given in Rupp's "Thirty Thousand Names of Immigrants," there are shown the following named Muellers: Michael, Joh. Michael, John, Joh. Adam, Joh. Peter, Jacob and Leonhard.

In a list of members of the Tulpehocken German Reformed Church, between 1735 and 1755, same authority, there are shown Muellers as follows: Nicklaus (Nicholas), John, John Jacob.

The following information has been gleaned from various sources: From the records of births and baptisms of the "Little Tulpehocken Church" (near Bernville, Berks county), as published in Dr. W. H. Egle's "Notes & Queries" (annual volume, 1899); from tombstone inscriptions in the graveyards of the Little Tulpehocken and Host Churches, and from private sources. The Proprietary and State Tax Lists of Berks county show for taxables of the name in 1768; seventy in 1779 (returns of twenty-three of the twenty-nine townships and Reading); and sixty-one in 1784.

(I) Jacob Mueller, the immigrant ancestor, according to his tombstone inscription at Little Tulpehocken Church was born Oct. 22, 1697, died Dec. 18, 1772; married three years to Catharine (middle name badly worn probably, according to will, it was Charlotte, maiden not shown, born Oct. 11, 1699, died April 5, 1777); "a good name, a sorrowing widow and four children." Jacob Mueller and his wife had ten children, of whom three sons and one daughter survived the father. He was the immigrant Jacob Mueller who, with Charlotta (very likely his wife), John Jacob (under sixteen) and Barba (no doubt another child), all grouped together on the "original list" of passengers, is shown as having landed at Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1732, having come over in the ship "Johnson," of London, David Crocket, master, from Rotterdam, last from Deal; passengers, 112 males above sixteen, 98 under sixteen; 98 females above sixteen, 85 under sixteen. He came from Germany. In 1759 Jacob Mueller paid £11 tax. He is mentioned as a yeoman in his last will and testament, made Jan. 29, 1766, witnessed by Balser Unbehauer and Henrich Kettner, and recorded in Book II, page 117. The oldest son was allowed £25 over and above all others for his birthright. The children mentioned are: John Jacob, born Sept. 24, 1728 (was single in 1759); Johannes, born Nov. 9, 1733 (was married in 1759); Elizabeth Barbara Hess; and Mathias, born Oct. 18, 1743. In the Little Tulpehocken Church records of births and baptisms are found the following children of Jacob Mueller: John Jacob, born Sept. 24, 1728, in Europe, baptized Sept. 26, 1728 (sponsors, Frederic William Beckle, Christopher Haist, Joseph Rohr and Joh. David Bauer); John, born Nov. 9, 1733, in Pennsylvania, baptized Nov. 16, 1733, by Rev. Philip Boehm, Reformed minister at White Marsh at the time (sponsors, Joh. Henry Fegner and Mary Elizabeth Barbara Schneider); Mary Elizabeth

J. B. Miller

Barbara, born Sept. 9, 1736, baptized Sept. 28, 1736, by Rev. Bartholomew Rugner, who was Reformed pastor at Germantown, Pa., at that time (sponsors, same as for John); Matthias, born Oct. 18, 1743, baptized Nov. 6, 1743, by Rev. Joh. Casper Stoever (sponsors, Matthias Schmidt and wife); Elizabeth Barbara, born June 7, 1755 (baptism not given). It seems doubtful that the last named child belonged to the family of Jacob, the immigrant.

The line of Jonathan B. Miller from (I) Jacob is through (II) Matthew or Matthias, (III) Johannes, (IV) John and (V) Samuel W. Miller. We have the following details concerning these generations.

(II) Matthias Miller, born Oct. 18, 1743, was the father of children as follows: Maria Barbara, born Jan. 24, 1762, baptized Jan. 31, 1762 (sponsors, Christopher Muench—Minnich—and wife); Maria Magdalene, born 1764 (?), baptized 1764 (sponsors, Jacob Wagner and wife Maria Apollonia); John, born 1766, baptized 1767 (sponsors, John Mueller and wife); Catharine Charlotte, born May 21, 1769, baptized June 4, 1769 (sponsors, the grandfather and grandmother); Maria Elizabeth, born May 22, 1771, baptized 1771 (sponsors, Casper Heckel and wife); Anna Maria, born Sept. 21, 1772, baptized Oct. 23, 1772 (sponsor, Anna Maria, single, daughter of Jacob Mueller); Susanna Catharine, born March 31, 1774, baptized May 17, 1774 (sponsors, Christopher Winder—Winter—and wife).

(III) Johannes (John) Miller, born Aug. 25, 1766, died March 6, 1846. He lived in Tulpehocken township, where he conducted a tannery. On May 30, 1789, he married Maria Salome Gilbert (born Dec. 7, 1772, died June 6, 1854), and tradition says he had eight children, but the will mentions only three, though "all my other children" are referred to, thus substantiating the tradition. It is known he had sons John, Samuel, Henry and Matthew, and daughters Catharine and Justina. The other two are said to be daughters. (The tombstone inscription shows that there had resulted from his marriage at the time of his death six sons and five daughters, forty-eight grandchildren, and fourteen great-grandchildren).

(IV) John Miller, son of Johannes, was a native of Tulpehocken township, born Sept. 18, 1790, baptized Oct. 20, 1790, sponsors Matthew Miller and wife Maria. He lived on a farm belonging to his father a short distance from the tannery on homestead farm. In later years his brother Henry lived on the homestead and succeeded to the tanning business. John moved to Bernville, where with his son Samuel he carried on the tanning business. Afterward the tannery was sold. John Miller married Elizabeth Wagner, and they had one son, Samuel W., born Jan. 15, 1816. He died March 21, 1861.

(V) Samuel W. Miller, born Jan. 15, 1816, in Tulpehocken township, received a common school education there and then went to work in his father's tannery, early becoming familiar with the business, which he followed with his father. As previously noted, the tannery was sold, and Samuel W. Miller engaged in mercantile pursuits at Bernville in 1847, beginning in a small way, as his limited means necessitated, but enlarging his establishment as the demands of trade required until he had a well-equipped establishment. He was alone in the business until he admitted his son to partnership, in 1866, and they continued together as S. W. Miller & Son until Samuel W. Miller's retirement, March 1, 1878. He died Nov. 23, 1885. He married Sarah Brossman, also of Tulpehocken township, born Dec. 4, 1821, and to them were born three children: Monroe, deceased; Isabella, wife of Dr. D. D. Deppen, and Jonathan B.

(VI) Jonathan B. Miller was born Nov. 21, 1841, at Bernville. There he spent his boyhood days and received his education in the public schools. From childhood he had assisted in and about his father's store, and when fourteen he began to work there regularly, continuing thus until he was admitted to partnership, in 1866, at the age of twenty-four, this association continuing, as previously stated, until 1878. Meantime the business had increased in volume and the establishment was steadily enlarged to accommodate the growing trade. In 1867 the son, J. B. Miller, erected a new store on the site which the business has ever since occupied, and this proving inadequate within a few years a large extension was built, bringing the proportions of the building up to 55 by 106 feet, three stories in height. Mr. Miller conducted the business alone from the time of his father's retirement until April 1, 1903, when he sold out to James F. Talley. He carried on what was known as the "model store" at Bernville, and his establishment was reputed to be the most up-to-date mercantile house in Berks county outside of Reading. His business was also the largest in the county outside of Reading, and he employed six clerks regularly, with two extra on Saturdays, retaining the general oversight of the business himself. He was always solicitous for the comfort and welfare of his employes, and his store was not only run in a business-like manner but well appointed, being heated with steam, which was also supplied to the adjacent dwelling, and having the illuminating plant on the premises.

On Nov. 26, 1887, Mr. Miller bought the property and furniture business at Bernville formerly owned and carried on by Frank Schroeder, carrying on same as a branch to the general merchandise business until April 4, 1891, when he sold the property and stock to James H. Hollenbach.

Mr. Miller conducted his mercantile business on a cash basis, having made it a principle to buy and sell for cash in early life. For over a quarter of a century he maintained his standing as the foremost business man of western Berks county. His store in Bernville probably made him more widely acquainted throughout the county than any of his other interests, but they were equally important, if not more so. For ten years he had a large branch store at Lebanon, Pa., which was conducted under the firm name of J. B. Miller & Sons. He established the Bernville creamery and the bakery, and in his active years was a large real estate dealer in that borough. He was also interested in the manufacture of men's shirts for New York firms. In 1901 he bought out the grocery stock of Daniel S. Esterly, of Reading, who did a wholesale business, and it was continued for a year at the same stand, until J. B. Miller erected the new building at Nos. 39-41 South Seventh street, to which they moved. They did a very large business there until after the death of Mr. Miller's eldest son, Harry G., who was a victim of the Honda railroad wreck in 1907, after which the business was sold to the Hooven Mercantile Company of New York. Jonathan B. Miller is now living retired, enjoying the rewards of a successful career. He lives in a handsome residence at No. 815 Centre avenue, in Reading, and is best known as J. B. Miller of Centre avenue or Bernville. He still retains many interests and paying properties, including the Hiester mill and farm in Bern township. There are 116 acres of land in the property, and the mill was established many years ago; Mr. Miller remodeled it in 1899, when he put in a roller process with a capacity of fifty barrels daily. The mill is leased. Mr. Miller is also the owner of the block known as the Star building, in Buffalo, N. Y., at the corner of Broadway and Pratt streets. He has been a director in the Schuylkill Valley Bank of Reading since 1898 and is also connected with the Bernville Bank, with which he has been connected since its organization.

Mr. Miller's friends are not confined to Bernville and Reading, but are found all over Berks county, and he has many acquaintances in Philadelphia. He is a Republican in politics, and held a number of offices while living in the borough of Bernville, serving as school director there (for eight years), as burgess, member of the town council, and in minor offices. He has long been prominently identified with the Berks County Merchants Association. In 1907, when Bernville celebrated its now historic "home week," Mr. Miller, although then a resident of Reading, took a very public-spirited interest in the occasion. He suggested to the committee of arrangements that a "Reading Day" might be an acceptable feature, and the suggestion was adopted, Mr. Miller being made chairman of the Reading committee of arrangements. On a beautiful autumn morning a parade over one mile long started from Reading over the Bernville road, and more than fifteen thousand people attended "home week" on that day. All the prominent merchants had lavishly decorated wagons or vehicles in the parade, and Mr. Miller and his family were given the place of honor in the procession. They had a handsomely decorated carriage, on which were displayed two placards, one bearing the words "Ye Old Home," the other "We're here because we're here." They were taken up all over the county and by the Philadelphia and New York papers, which gave the home week proceedings very gratifying notices.

On Dec. 24, 1863, Mr. Miller married Eliza L. Dondore, born Dec. 11, 1844, daughter of Gabriel Dondore, descendants of Jacob Dondore, a pioneer resident of Bern township. Mrs. Miller died April 13, 1908, the mother of children as follows: Sarah Lydia, born May 27, 1865, is deceased; Harry Grant, born Dec. 12, 1867, died May 11, 1907, a victim of the railroad wreck at Honda, Cal., in which so many Shriners met disaster (he was married and had children—Helen, deceased, Albert Rauch, Frederick Dondore and Virginia Dorothy); Benjamin Franklin, born Aug. 17, 1870, has two children, Richard Shane and Benjamin Franklin; John S., born July 4, 1872, has three children, Sarah Lydia, Ralph Jonathan and Robert Henry; Catharine E., born June 11, 1874, was married Nov. 28, 1899, to Rev. Thomas H. Leinbach, and has three children, Theodore Miller, Harold Miller and Arthur Miller; Amelia I. was born June 16, 1876; Mary M., June 27, 1878; James Garfield, June 21, 1882 (deceased); and Emily N., June 13, 1885.

Mr. Miller and his family are Evangelical Lutherans, and still retain their membership in the Friedens Church at Bernville, which he served as deacon and treasurer for many years. He has always been liberal in his contributions toward religious and charitable objects. He is a member of Keim Post, G. A. R., having served in the State defense during the Civil war as a member of Company I, 48th Regiment, Pennsylvania State Militia. He has also been a member of the Pennsylvania German Society for many years.

(IV) Samuel Miller, born July 4, 1792, son of (III) Johannes, was baptized July 26, 1792, sponsors, Conrad Gilbert and wife Anna Elizabeth. He died Nov. 23, 1859, and is buried at Host Church. He was a tanner by occupation, and lived in Tulpehocken township, on the road from Rehrersburg to Bernville. He married Anna Maria Moyer (born Oct. 12, 1796, died Oct. 14, 1855), and to them were born eleven children, as follows: (1) Michael, born in 1818, died March 19, 1882, m. Cath. Klahr and had ten children: Franklin K., of Reading (m. Caroline Nunnemacher and had nine children, George W., Mary, Elva, William, Stella, Henry R., deceased, Phoebe, Laura and Beulah), Mary, William, Rebecca, Charles, Edward and Lewis (twins, born July, 1850), Sybilla, Levi and Albert. (2) Jonathan, who lives on Fourth street, Reading, married Lydia Klahr, and they have had six children: Martin, Jonathan (of Philadelphia), Daniel, James H. (a stationer of Reading), Maria and Matilda. (3) Sarah married Elijah Weaver. (4) Rebecca married Israel Wagner. (5) Catharine married David Koenig. (6) Matthias married Eliza Snyder and they have had seven children: Willoughby, John, George, Henry, Samuel, Lizzie and Mary. (7) Jacob married Mary Gerhard and they had five children: Gussie, Annie, George, Dora and Maggie. (8) Samuel, who lives in Perry, Iowa, married (first) Hettie Christman and (second) Henrietta Scholl. By the first union he had three children, Harvey, Mary and Amelia, and by the second five, Beulah, Lillie, Lizzie, Thomas and John. (9) John, who died at the age of thirty-five years, was married and had a family of four children: Sarah m. Levi Himmelberger; Rebecca m. John Himmelberger; Catharine m. Jacob Riehl; John. (10) Leah married (first) John (?) Miller and (second) Joel Kantner. (11) William married Theresa Wilhelm, and they had one child, William.

ISAAC GRAEFF, a retired farmer of Centre township, Berks county, was born Aug. 5, 1825, in Bern township, and is a member of the fourth generation of the family in this country.

Jacob Graeff, great-grandfather, was a native of Germany, and emigrating to this country settled in Maidencreek township, Berks Co., Pa., where he died in the winter of 1806. At that time he owned over two hundred acres of land, and left a large estate to his children. He and his wife, Catherine Margaretha Kindt, are buried at St. Peter's Church, in Richmond township. They had these children: Abraham, who obtained the old homestead; Sebastian, John and Jacob, who each received £200 in lawful money of Pennsylvania; Eva Maria, who married Jacob Murria; Elizabeth, who married Adam Kindt; Catherine, who married Jacob Trowitz—each of these daughters receiving £150 of lawful money of Pennsylvania; and Rosina, who married a Miller, by whom she had three children, Rosina, Susanna and Hannah, all of whom were provided for in the will. Of this family Abraham Graeff lived on the homestead for some years and there carried on farming, later moving to Reading, where he died; he was married to a Miss Kieffer, and they had two children, Isaac and Abraham.

Jacob Graeff, grandfather of Isaac Graeff, was born in 1762, and died in 1841. He was a lifelong farmer, and owned a tract of 180 acres near Gernand's Church, where he is buried. He married Rosina Adam, and to them were born the following children: Jacob, a farmer of Maiden-creek, who married, and died at Reading; Daniel, who died unmarried; Samuel; John, a farmer of Maiden-creek, who died and was buried at Gernand's Church; Isaac, who was a farmer on the homestead; Solomon, a farmer of Upper Tulpehocken township; Elizabeth, who died unmarried and is buried at Gernand's Church; and Sallie, who was married.

Samuel Graeff, father of Isaac Graeff, was born in Maiden-creek township Nov. 17, 1793, and died Sept. 11, 1876, in Centre township, in which district he settled after his marriage. He owned a farm at Belleman's Church, where the cemetery is now located, his tract consisting of 136 acres. He erected a house in 1849 upon the farm on which his son Isaac lived until after his marriage, was a prosperous man and a good, useful citizen. He was a member of the Reformed congregation of Belleman's Church, and served as deacon and elder. He married Elizabeth Stamm, born Jan. 27, 1797, died Sept. 26, 1877, daughter of Nicholas Stamm, and they had seven children: Mary, who died young; Benjamin, a retired citizen of Heidelberg township; Isaac; Catherine, who married John Faust, of Reading; Sarah, who married Elias Kreider, of Bern township; Samuel, who was a farmer of Centre township; and Anna Eliza, who married John Haak.

Isaac Graeff attended the public schools and was reared to farming, which he followed throughout his active years. He lived for many years on the old homestead, in 1887 buying his present place of 124 acres in Centre township. He has been retired since 1893. Mr. Graeff gave his time principally to his private affairs, though he has served his township as school director. He is a Democrat in political sentiment, and in religion an adherent of the Reformed denomination, holding membership in Belleman's Church, which he has served as deacon and elder.

Mr. Graeff married Mary Loose, born Sept. 2, 1830, died Nov. 3, 1891, daughter of Daniel Loose, of Centre township; she is buried at Belleman's Church. A large family was born to this union, as follows: Daniel, living in Centre township; Isaac, of Reading; Samuel, of Reading; Milton, of Dauberville, Pa.; Adam, of Kansas; Aaron, of Leesport, Pa.; Fred, of Kansas; Catherine, who married Frank Bucks; Ella, who married Howard Zerby; Sally, who married Levi Becker; Ida, who married Milton Rentschler; Mary, who married Samuel Mast; and Jacob, of Kansas.

FREDERICK BARTH, deceased, who was for many years engaged in the contracting business in Reading, and who was a veteran of the Civil war, was born in Reading, Pa., in 1847, son of Everhart and Catherine (Eppler) Barth.

Everhart Barth was a native of Germany, and when a young man came to America, landing at Castle Garden, New York City, from whence he came at once to Reading, settling at Twelfth and Buttonwood streets. He was a stone cutter by trade, and that occupation he followed for some time, later engaging in the stone business. He later sold his property in Reading and purchased a vineyard in Alsace township near what is now the borough of Mt. Penn, from John Fair, and there he remained until his death, which occurred in his seventy-first year, his wife passing away when seventy years old. They had the following children: Frederick; Carrie, m. John Fair; Henry; Mary, wife of Calvin Caldin; John, and Ellen.

Frederick Barth attended the schools of his native city and then engaged in teaming for a time, later going to the Scott works; while there he enlisted for service in the Civil war under the name of Frederick Bard. He enlisted in Co. B, 205th P. V. I., and was honorably discharged at Alexandria, Va., June 2, 1865. While in the army Mr. Barth contracted rheumatism, from which he never fully recovered. On his return he was employed at the "Mineral Spring Hotel," and while there he was married in October, 1867, to Miss Barbara Spearley, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Maurer) Spearley. After his marriage he engaged in the hotel business on his own account for nine years, then going into the mercantile business, at which he continued seven years. For the next nine years he was employed in his father's vineyard in Alsace township, after which he returned to Reading and was for four years in the mercantile business. Then he engaged in the contracting business, digging cellars, with Henry Schaeffer, and they became the leading men in their business in the city. The partnership continued eight years, after which Mr. Barth continued the business alone, becoming very successful. At a later time Mr. Schaeffer joined Mr. Barth for eight months again, but at the time of his retirement, in 1903, he was doing business alone. He then was for two years foreman for Adam H. Leader in the same business, but in 1905 he re-engaged in business on his own account, and continued therein until his death, Sept. 2, 1905. He was well-known in Reading, where he had the esteem and respect of his fellow citizens. In 1891 he built the home where his family now reside, No. 1327 Buttonwood street. He was religiously connected with the Lutheran Church. He was a member of the Rainbow Fire Co., and the Veteran Firemen's Association. In politics he was a Republican.

Mr. Barth's children were: Frederick, deceased; Clara, wife of Augustus Hare; John; Ella, deceased; William, who resides with his mother, is conducting his father's business; Aaron; Henry, a carpenter by trade, employed by the P. & R. Co., resides at No. 418 Linden street, Reading; Susan, at home; and Frederick, a carpenter of Reading.

C. MILTON RENTZ. Among the well known residents of West Reading, Pa., who have been identified with the social, political and professional life of the borough, may be mentioned C. Milton Rentz, a well known and popular educator of Spring township. Mr. Rentz was born Jan. 9, 1871, at Vinemont, Spring township, son of John and Emma E. (Weitzel) Rentz.

John Rentz was born in Germany, and came to America with his parents when ten years of age. Throughout a long and successful career Mr. Rentz followed agricultural pursuits near Wernersville, where he cultivated a tract of forty-eight acres until 1903, and since that year he has lived retired. He now resides in his own home on the boulevard at Wyomissing, which he erected in 1907, and also owns a residence on Mory avenue, in the same borough. Mr. Rentz is a member of Hain's Reformed Church, where he was an elder for two years. In 1869 Mr. Rentz was married to Emma E. Weitzel, born in Cumru (now Spring) township, daughter of John and Rebecca (Gruber) Weitzel, of Bern township, and to this union there were born children as follows: John W. died in infancy; C. Milton; George M. lives in Montello, Pa.; Albert resides in Wyomissing, Pa.; Rebecca m. Isaac Whitmoyer, of Sinking Spring, Pa.; Rosa m. James Hill, of Wyomissing; Amelia m. Harry Sheidy and died at the age of twenty-one years; Howard lives in West Reading; Emma died at the age of nineteen years; and Fred is attending Franklin and Marshall College.

C. Milton Rentz obtained his early training in the township schools of Spring and Lower Heidelberg townships, and later he attended a private school under the tutorage of Prof. H. H. Clouser, at Sinking Spring. In 1894 he was graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, Pa. Except during his senior year at the Normal school Mr. Rentz has been teaching school during the winter months since 1889, nine terms in Spring and eight in Lower Heidelberg township, eleven of which were in the grammar school, and until 1902 he was engaged in agricultural pursuits during the summer months. In that year he removed to No. 436 Penn avenue, West Reading, where he owns a residence. Mr. Rentz has become very well known as a school teacher, and his popularity is great. He has always been an ardent supporter of the Democratic party and its principles, and at present he is serving the borough of West Reading as town clerk, a position to which he was appointed by the council. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp No. 99, P. O. S. of A., of Wernersville; and Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F., of Reading. He and his family are Reformed members of Hain's Church, of which he served as deacon and secretary, each two years.

On Sept. 15, 1894, Mr. Rentz was married to Ida S. Miller, daughter of Peter and Susan (Epler) Miller, of Fritztown; and to this union there have been born two children: Irwin J. and Emma E.

WILLIAM B. BORKEY, a resident of Centreport for over fifty years, formerly a merchant at that place and at one time postmaster, was born Oct. 1, 1825, in Centre township, and has passed all his life in Berks county. His grandfather was a farmer in Bern township, Berks county, where he died.

Michael Borkey, father of William B. Borkey, was born in Bern township, May 24, 1794, was a farmer by occupation, and died March 4, 1875, aged eighty years, nine months, ten days. He is buried at Belleman's Church, in Centre township. He married Anna Maria Bentz, born Feb. 23, 1808, died Dec. 2, 1872, aged sixty-four years, nine months, nine days. Their children were: William B.; John, who is a resident of Centre township; Mary, married to Frank Schock; Elvina, deceased; Sydenham, who married Leah Strouse and lives in Centre township; Nathaniel, living in Scull Hill; Samuel, of Jefferson township; Eliza, married to Albert Backenstose; Sarah, deceased, and Isaac, deceased.

William B. Borkey attended the schools of his district, and after he began work became a clerk in Samuel Miller's store at Bernville, where he remained until 1850. He then went to Leesport, where he clerked until 1854, after which he engaged in business on his own account at West Leesport, where Samuel Lenhart is now located. There he continued for three years, at the end of that period coming to Centreport, in 1858. He was the second merchant at this point, succeeding John Faust, who was the first, and he continued general merchandising at Centreport for fifteen years, meeting with gratifying success. He then retired from that line, and he has since devoted his attention principally to his property, being an extensive owner of real estate in both the borough and the township. Among other borough property he owns eight houses, and he has two fine farms in Centre township, one being the old Christ place, of 120 acres, and the other a tract of sixty acres near Belleman's Church. He is a man who has accumulated his means by honorable methods, and he is accordingly highly esteemed, no citizen commanding greater respect among his fellow townsmen. He has been quite active in the civil administration of the borough, for several years served as councilman, and also as assessor, and in 1889 he was appointed postmaster, serving one term in that office. He is a Republican in political sentiment.

Mr. Borkey married Miss Anna Christ, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Yoder) Christ, and three children blessed their union: Lillie A. and Emma L. are at home; Mahlon D. died when twelve years old.

MATTHIAS C. SIGMUND, of Reading, proprietor of the only hat block manufacturing establishment in the city, was born in Thurmont, Md., in 1858.

In 1881 Mr. Sigmund removed from his native place to Ohio, and was for some time employed in the experimental department of the Champion machine works at Springfield. He learned the pattern-maker's trade in Waynesboro, Pa., and on coming to Reading in 1887 engaged at the Malleable Iron works. Later he erected a plant at Detroit, Mich., and one in Montreal, Canada, and in 1888 engaged in his present business. He not only furnishes the leading hat manufacturers of Reading and the surrounding country, but ships his goods to Boston, New York, St. Louis, Chicago, and all of the leading cities of the United States. He manufactures block forms, some of which are of his own invention, and employs from four to six men in his establishment, which is furnished with the latest machinery, and which has electricity for its motor power. Mr. Sigmund is not only an able business man, but is a man of much mechanical ability, and his inventions are practical and labor saving.

In 1887 Mr. Sigmund was married to Adelaide Sigmund, and to this union there have been born four children, as follows; Amy, a graduate of the Reading High School, class of 1907; Irma, who is attending high school; Jeanette, in high school; and Olive, in grammar school. Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund and their four daughters attend St. Matthew's Lutheran Church.

FRANCIS I. ROLLMAN, a leading citizen of Rehrersburg, Tulpehocken township, who has been serving as justice of the peace since 1900, was born Aug. 14, 1866, in Bethel township, Berks county, son of Thilon J. and Emma (Kurr) Rollman.

Peter Rollman, the great-grandfather of Francis I., was born May 23, 1791. He was a drover and farmer, and resided for some time near Wernersville, Berks county, and later in Tulpehocken township, near Rehrersburg, where he died March 22, 1859. He was married to Rebecca Margaretha Fisher, born March 14, 1795, who died Nov. 14, 1868, and they had the following children: (1) Elizabeth, who resided in Tulpehocken township, m. John Stump, and had two children: Lovina, who married Isaac Reedy; and Jonathan. (2) Daniel, who was a farmer, resided below Strausstown, where some of his descendants still live. (3) Samuel was the grandfather of Francis I. (4) Peter, a miller who was employed at various mills in Berks, Schuylkill and Lancaster counties, married and had three children. (5) Benjamin, who was a farmer of near Rehrersburg, married and had four children. He died aged sixty years, while his widow still survives in good health, at Fleetwood, Pa. (6) Pauline m. Jonathan Deck, a miller by trade and later a farmer, and had seven children, five boys and two girls. (7) Mary m. David Dieffenbach and resided near Freystown, where Mr. Dieffenbach carried on coach-making; they had eight children. (8) Catherine m. Thomas Carver, a veteran of the Civil war, resided at Myerstown and had six children. Both parents are deceased. (9) Carolina m. Daniel Anspach and resided in Rehrersburg where she died. (10) Ellen died unmarried, aged thirty-one years, ten days. (11) Rebecca also died unmarried.

Samuel Rollman, grandfather of Francis I., was born and reared near Wernersville, and at an early day learned the trade of blacksmith, which he followed all of his life. He was married to Mary Bordner, daughter of Jacob Bordner, whose biography appears elsewhere in this work, and they had four children: Thilon J.; Catherine m. Seranus Noll, a tailor of Freystown, Berks county, and has one child, Rev. Elmer; one son died when sixteen years of age; Mary S., who is unmarried, resides near Mount Aetna.

Thilon J. Rollman, father of Francis I., learned the trade of blacksmith with his father, but later, evincing a desire for a higher profession, entered Freeland Academy, and after graduating from Palmyra College engaged in teaching, for a number of years being principal of the Millersburg high school. He was elected to the office of justice of the peace, which he filled with credit for a number of years. He was married to Emma Kurr, and to them five children were born: Francis I.; Ella m. Charles Schreiber of Lebanon, Pa., and has three children; Minnie m. Jonathan Bressler, a baker of Lebanon, Pa., and also has three children; Eva died at the age of eighteen years; and Emma m. John Carpenter, a soap manufacturer of Lebanon.

Francis I. Rollman was educated in the common schools, the Millersburg high school and the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa. He is a Democrat in politics, and has been active in the ranks of that party, being elected justice of the peace in 1900, an office which he still holds. With his family he attends the old Lutheran Church at Rehrersburg. Mr. Rollman is a prominent member of Camp No. 567, P. O. S. of A., and is a past president thereof.

Mr. Rollman was married May 19, 1888, to Kate A. Snyder, daughter of Aaron and Lovinia (Lebo) Snyder, the former of whom was a justice of the peace of Tulpehocken township for thirty-five years. Three children have been born to this union: Laura R., born Oct. 28, 1888, who when but nineteen years old had taught two terms in the public schools of Tulpehocken township, at the same time taking a course in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown; Lillie G., born Nov. 8, 1890, who graduated from the township schools at the age of twelve years; and Robert S., born Aug. 31, 1895, who is still attending school.

JOHN MELL, postmaster at Montello, Spring township, where he is the proprietor of a flourishing mercantile business, is a veteran of the Civil war. Mr. Mell was born May 3, 1840, in Cumru (now Spring) township, near Sinking Spring, son of Bennewell and Maria (Dinkelberger) Mell.

John Mell, grandfather of John, was born in Bern township, Berks county, whither his father, a native of Germany, had come at an early day. John Mell in early life engaged in agricultural pursuits, and enlisted in the war of 1812, in which he contracted sickness which caused his death, while still a young man. His widow passed away at Montello, Berks county, at the age of eighty-five years. Their children were: John, Isaac, David, Bennewell, Mrs. Keim and Rebecca, Mrs. Jeremiah Engelhart.

Bennewell Mell, father of John, was born Nov. 19, 1815, and died June 15, 1894, being buried at Sinking Spring. He was a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township, where he owned and cultivated a small tract of land. Mr. Mell married Maria Dinkelberger, born Dec. 1, 1816, who still survives and lives at Shillington. Their children were: William, who was killed at Ridgefield, Va., during the Civil war; John; Isaac, who was killed in the first day's fight at Gettysburg during the Civil war, being buried with the many unknown; Henry, also a soldier in the Union army, who after the ending of the war enlisted in the regular army, serving for twenty-eight years, and who now resides at Shillington, Pa.; Charles, who died at Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Mary, m. to Peter White, of Shillington; and Emma, m. to William Noll.

John Mell attended the pay schools of his native township, after leaving which he engaged for three years in farm work. He then learned the carpenter trade, which he followed until the outbreak of the Civil war, when, in 1861, he enlisted in Company G, 6th P. V. Cav., being mustered in at the old Keystone Hotel, Reading. Later he was transferred to Co. H, of the same regiment, as first sergeant, and later was promoted to second lieutenant. Mr. Mell gave long and faithful service to his country, and participated in many important engagements, including that of Brandy Station, where he was twice wounded, once by a musket ball in the upper part of his hip and again by a sabre thrust in the forehead, of the latter of which he still bears evidence. After the war Mr. Mell went to Juniata county, Pa., and engaged in the lumber business for one and one-half years, a business which he continued in his home county for some time. He then went to West Virginia, where he carried on lumbering for ten years, but subsequently returned to Berks county, and in 1892 engaged in a mercantile business at Montello. He named and established the postoffice there, where he has been postmaster ever since.

Mr. Mell married Sarah Leffel, daughter of David Leffel, of Oley township, and they have these children: David, who married Ida Keefer and resides at Montello; and John, single, of Reading.

Mr. Mell is a Republican in politics. Religiously he is connected with St. John's Reformed Church, of Sinking Spring. He is a popular comrade of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., and is in all respects a highly esteemed citizen.

LEVI BROWN (deceased), whose death occurred Feb. 24, 1894, in Gibraltar, Pa., was for many years a leading hotel man of Berks county, where he was also engaged in blacksmithing and farming. He was born Oct. 17, 1835, in Robeson township.

Mr. Brown was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and learned the blacksmith trade when a young man, an occupation which he followed for many years, later engaging in farming. After seven years spent in agricultural pursuits, Mr. Brown engaged in the hotel business at the Junction Hotel stand, where he remained eight years, and then sold out to move to Gibraltar, where he built a hotel in 1875. This he operated until his death in 1894, becoming well known for his honesty and integrity in all business transactions, and esteemed and respected wherever known.

Mr. Brown was married Nov. 8, 1857, by Rev. F. A. M. Keller, a Lutheran minister, to Mary Ann Fritz, born Aug. 2, 1837, in Cumru township, Berks county, daughter of Elias and Anna (Lutz) Fritz, and to this union there were born children as follows: Albert m. Sallie Wenpelt; Mary E. m. Albert Wenpelt; B. Franklin died at the age of two years; Sarah L. m. Levi Cramp; Annie m. John Cramp; Kate F. is unmarried; Dora m. Peter Detemple; Ella M. is unmarried; Harry m. Emma Quinter; and John m. Lillie Eames. Mr. Brown was a Lutheran in religious belief and was buried at Yocom's Church. He is remembered as a man of much business capacity, and was identified with some of the leading enterprises of Gibraltar, including the coal and lumber yard, which after his death was conducted by his son for some years. In politics he was a stanch Democrat.

Elias Fritz, son of Martin, and father of Mrs. Brown, was a pillar of the Lutheran Church, and donated the ground upon which the church bearing that name now stands, as well as the burying ground. He and his wife had these children: Catherine; Eliza; Alice; John; Jeremiah, who served three months during the Civil war; and Mary Ann.

Mrs. Brown built her present home in Gibraltar in 1895, and here, with her two daughters, she is living quietly, enjoying the sunset of her life surrounded by many friends.

LEWIS P. G. FEGLEY, of Boyertown, was born Aug. 15, 1851, on the Jacob Gottshall farm at New Berlinville, in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, son of Peter and Rebecca (Gottshall) Fegley. The family is an old one, Bernhard Fegley, the first of the name in this country, coming from Switzerland and settling in this section of Pennsylvania in its early days. He first located in Montgomery county, near East Greenville, but died in Longswamp township, Berks county, in 1782. Little is known of his son, Peter Fegley, the great-grandfather of Lewis P. G. Fegley, except that he was born in Montgomery county and settled in Douglass township, that county, induced by the fact that his uncle (a brother of Bernhard) had made a permanent settlement there. Some members of the Fegley families write the name "Bird," the English version of the original name, and others "Vogel" or "Fogel." There are descendants of Peter Fegley living in New Jersey who use the English form.

Peter Fegley, grandfather of Lewis P. G., was born in Montgomery county, and there, like his father, passed all his life, engaged in farming at a small village called Cedarville, now Congo.

Peter Fegley, father of Lewis P. G., was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Aug. 14, 1815, and was one of a family of thirteen children. He died Feb. 23, 1905, in his ninetieth year. He was a man of regular habits and was never ill. He followed the millwright's trade for a short time, in 1843 moving upon the farm of his father-in-law, Jacob Gottshall, at New Berlin (now called New Berlinville) in Colebrookdale township, where he continued farming until 1870. He then retired to the village, and afterward oversaw the cultivation of his farm. He was a Democrat in politics and a member of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd at Boyertown, in the work of which he was active. He married Rebecca Gottshall, and they had four children, namely: Mary G., Lewis P. G., Rebecca (wife of B. F. Ackerman, of Reading) and Caroline (who died in youth).

Lewis P. G. Fegley received his early education in the common schools of his native township, later attending the Mount Pleasant Seminary, which was located at Boyertown; the home farm where he passed his youth was a mile northeast of that borough. At Boyertown he was under the instruction of Profs. Hankey and Koons, two noted educators in their day, and he completed his schooling in the fall of 1870. Meantime, however, he had commenced teaching, having been licensed by Prof. James N. Ermentraut, then deputy county superintendent under his brother, Prof. John Ermentrout, in 1869. In the fall of 1868 he began teaching among the Mennonites in Butter Valley, his first experience being in Hereford township, where he taught for two terms, in 1869 being engaged in Treichlersville, and for the succeeding four terms in New Berlin, at the grammar school. Then for three terms he was in the Boyertown high school, and he was awarded professional certificates by Profs. D. B. Brunner, S. A. Baer and David S. Keck. His last experience as a teacher was in 1881, when he taught the Colebrookdale grammar school, but meantime he had been otherwise engaged. In 1878 he had been appointed by the heirs of a deceased uncle, Jacob Fegley, to go to California to look up their interest in the estate, and he made a most successful trip, this being only the first of a long series of similar trusts, for he has become quite noted in his satisfactory settlement of estates.

During the eight years he was engaged in teaching school Mr. Fegley assisted his father on the farm at

New Berlinville, and in 1874, when only a little over twenty-one years old, he was elected a justice of the peace, serving continuously until Dec. 1, 1884, when he resigned after his election to the State Legislature. On Jan. 6, 1885, he took his seat in the State House of Representatives, and he never missed a single session nor a single vote either for or against a bill as the Legislative record will show, during his first term of service in that body. He served four years. In 1887 he was a member of the committee appointed by the Legislature, with Governor Beaver as president, to view the Gettysburg battlefield and report on the advisability of erecting monuments in honor of Pennsylvania's fallen heroes, and he voted for the $81,000 appropriated for the erection of eighty-one monuments, one for each Pennsylvania regiment represented in that famous battle. Since his retirement from the Legislature, at the end of 1888, he has filled a number of important public offices. He took a notary's commission at the close of his legislative experience and has held it ever since, finding it most convenient in the class of business which has occupied his attention.

Mr. Fegley was the principal organizer of the Boyertown Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which was chartered Jan. 2, 1886, under the General Incorporation Act of 1874, and he has served ever since as secretary of the company, which now has net assets of $4,000,000. During its existence of over twenty-three years the company has levied nineteen assessments, the latest on June 1, 1908, with all its losses paid up to date and a satisfactory surplus. On Jan. 2, 1883, Mr. Fegley was appointed acting cashier of the National Bank of Boyertown, to fill a vacancy for a short time. He has assisted in the organization of a number of business concerns in Boyertown, and his services as secretary of various bodies, and in the settlement of estates, have made him particularly well known. In fact there are few citizens of Boyertown who have been more intimately connected with the fortunes of its residents. Since 1874 he has at various times been assignee, executor, trustee and administrator of estates in lower Berks and Upper Montgomery counties, his ripe experience and trustworthy disposition making him particularly valuable. At the time of the Boyertown opera house holocaust, Jan. 13, 1908, Mr. Fegley lost records of little intrinsic value to others, but greatly prized by him, representing the accumulation of thirty years. Fortunately his most valuable books and papers were in a fireproof vault. He took temporary office in Dr. Rhoads' residence, Philadelphia avenue and Chestnut street, and Nov. 20, 1908, located in Room 2, second floor, Farmers National Bank, in the new fireproof building, where he has a large vault. He devotes himself now exclusively to insurance and the settlement of estates. For over fifteen years he has been an active member of the Lehigh County Agricultural Society, serving as judge of periodicals, public records and relics, and he is also a member of the Berks County Historical Society.

Mr. Fegley has often refused public honors, such as nominations for the offices of burgess and councilman of his town, but he has taken a prominent part in the administration of various organizations with which he has been connected, particularly religious associations. He has been secretary of seven different institutions, including a church body; was secretary of the council of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd, of Boyertown, and has been secretary of the congregation from Sept. 24, 1882; was superintendent or assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school of that church from 1882; and was deacon of the church for six years. He is a Democrat in political opinion, has always been active in the councils of his party, and filled a number of minor local offices before his extensive business interests demanded so much of his time. In addition to the insurance business he does in connection with the Boyertown Mutual Company, Mr. Fegley represents several strong old-line insurance companies.

On April 5, 1891, Mr. Fegley married Miss Emma G. Leidy, daughter of Daniel and Hannah (Gabel) Leidy, of Boyertown, and they have a beautiful home on North Reading avenue, beyond Fourth street, which Mr. Fegley erected in 1890. It is in the most desirable residential district of the borough. Mr. and Mrs. Fegley had one child, Lulu L., born Oct. 29, 1895, who perished Jan. 13, 1908, in the terrible theatre catastrophe which brought sorrow to so many homes in and around Boyertown.

HARRISON R. EPLER, a well-known business man of Riverside, North Reading, Pa., where he is engaged in the manufacture of hosiery, was born in the Hotel Penn, Reading, in 1838, son of Jared and Deborah (Rothermel) Epler, and a grandson of Jacob Epler, a farmer of Bern township.

Jared Epler, father of Harrison R., was born in Bern township, where he followed farming until 1837, and in that year removed to Reading and purchased the old "Hotel Penn" property, which he conducted for a period of two and one-half years. This he sold and in 1840 purchased the farm at Leinbach's, now known as the Harrison Epler farm. There he died in 1865, aged fifty-three years. He and his wife had four children, of whom two are now living: Deborah R., who married John Z. Althouse, deceased, and Harrison R.

Harrison R. Epler was educated in the schools of Bern township, and was reared on the farm, on which he worked until 1902, when he engaged in the manufacture of hosiery, in order that his son, the only living child, Jared V. R., could have a business in which to engage. In religious belief Mr. Epler is connected with the Reformed Church. He held several township offices during his residence on his farm, among them the office of member of the school board. During the Civil war Mr. Epler was a member of the State Militia.

Mr. Harrison Epler was united in marriage with Emma Van Reed, daughter of Henry Z. Van Reed, and the only surviving child of their family is Jared V. R. Epler.

AMOS M. DE TURK, a well known resident and prosperous merchant of Tulpehocken township, was born Jan. 26, 1847, in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, son of Jeremiah and Kate (Moll) DeTurk.

Mr. DeTurk was educated in the common schools of his native district and assisted his father on the farm until twenty-one years of age, after which he worked for various farmers in the neighborhood until his marriage, Nov. 23, 1872, to Louisa Deisher, daughter of Gereon and Helena (Seidel) Deisher. Mr. Deisher was a prominent business man of Tulpehocken township, at Wintersville, having previously resided in Perry township. Mr. Deisher while in Tulpehocken township carried on farming and later engaged in the mercantile business. Shortly after his arrival he was appointed postmaster at Wintersville, an office which he retained until his death in 1901. He was a prominent politician, but never served nor aspired to county offices. He served as school director and in other minor township offices, and was frequently appointed executor or administrator of estates, and served as guardian of minors.

After his marriage Mr. DeTurk located on his father's farm, where they resided for eight years, and then removed to Wintersville, keeping the hotel and store for some time, when he subsequently gave up the hotel business, and one of the oldest stands in Berks county went out of existence. After residing for five years at the present store property, Mr. DeTurk removed to his own property, about one mile away, which he cultivated for fourteen years, and then returned to the store, which he has since conducted.

Mr. DeTurk is a brother of Jeremiah DeTurk, present prison warden of Berks county, formerly clerk to city treasurer Bright. Like all the family he is a Democrat, but has never aspired to office. Mr. and Mrs. De-

Turk are members of the Reformed Church, where he served as deacon and elder for some years.

FRANK W. TROUTMAN, of Marion township, has been prominent in public affairs of the township and county for some years, and is now serving in the office of justice of the peace. He was born Jan. 28, 1862, on the old Troutman homestead near Host Church, in Berks county, son of Benjamin and Hannah (Leiss) Troutman.

The Troutman family of Western Berks county had settled prior to the organization of the county in 1752, in Tulpehocken township where the ancestor, Hieronimus Troutman, Oct. 15, 1752, obtained two warrants, each of twenty-five acres of land, located in that part of Lancaster county now embraced in Lebanon county. March 23, 1802, he and Abraham Troutman jointly obtained a warrant for 152.80 acres of land in Northumberland county. The records show that at this time he was a taxable in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, the Pennsylvania Archives recording the following in 1768; "Peter Troutman, eighty acres of land in Tulpehocken; Philip Troutman, 100 acres; Valentine Troutman, six acres; and Michael Troutman, 217½ acres." In 1779 the tax lists show: "Valentine, single-man; John, single-man and tailor, and Peter, weaver." In 1779 Michael Troutman owned 275 acres of land, six horses, six cattle, and paid seven pounds, thirteen shillings tax, showing that he was a large property owner. It is traditional, and records confirm it that Hieronimus Troutman had these sons; Michael, born Nov. 8, 1746, died Nov. 1, 1804, aged fifty-eight years, less seven days; Valentine, born June 17, 1752, died April 19, 1823, aged seventy years, nine months, two days; Johannes, born Feb. 4, 1755, died Dec. 2, 1823, aged sixty-eight years, nine months, twenty-eight days; and Johann Philip, born Aug. 9, 1758, died Feb. 23, 1830, aged seventy-one years, one month, eleven days.

Michael Troutman, the oldest of these brothers, made his will Aug. 3, 1804, and his death occurred about three months later. In it he mentions his wife Susanna, who was to receive the property in Tulpehocken township on which they lived, besides other items. Ample provision was made for her. They had no issue. The rest of Michael Troutman's estate he divided among his brothers, after leaving a bequest to Host Church of twenty pounds, for the care of his grave. He mentions the brothers thus: Valentine, John who had a son Michael, and Philip. Philip was married to Magdalena, a born Troutman, possibly a descendant of Abraham, who was a relative of Hieronimus. She was born Feb. 16, 1753, and died Dec. 29, 1831, aged eighty-one years, ten months, thirteen days. Valentine was also married, and had children, among them was a daughter, Eva Elizabeth, who was born in 1785 and died unmarried in 1804.

All the above Troutmans are buried at Host Church, in the old graveyard adjoining it on the southwest. Many of the gravestones are brown sandstones, and the inscriptions on them were deciphered with some difficulty by William J. Dietrich of Reading, and Squire Frank W. Troutman of Stouchsburg. Immediately back of the church is an old sandstone, on which appears the following inscription:

"Eva Elizabeth Troutman Sei ist gaboren den 6 Januar, im yahr 1716, und starb am 1 Januar in yahr 1794. Bracht ehr alter zu 78 yahr, 4 monat, und 3 tag." This possibly was the wife of the ancestor Hieronimus Troutman, and the mother of the sons before mentioned.

Johannes Troutman, son of the ancestor, was born in 1755 and died in 1823. He was married (first) May 13, 1787, to Maria Elizabeth Hoffman, and (second) to Sybilla Himmelberger, who was born Jan. 7, 1774, and died Nov. 29, 1858, aged eighty-four years, ten months, twenty-two days. Among his children were. Michael, the grandfather of Frank W.; John Jacob, born in 1791, who died in 1862, the grandfather of John M. Troutman of Marion township; and Elizabeth, born in 1796, who died in 1866.

Michael Troutman, grandfather of Frank W., was born Aug. 2, 1787, and died July 19, 1840, aged fifty-three years, less thirteen days, being buried at Host Church. He was the original owner of the old Troutman homestead, was a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, and died in comfortable circumstances for that day. He married Susanna Schaeffer, Dec. 28, 1908, and their children were: Benjamin; Eliza m. Jonathan Kurr; Lydia m. Henry Knoll; Rebecca m. Jacob Forrer, and Susanna m. Isaac Stupp.

Benjamin Troutman, father of Frank W., was born on the old homestead, May 13, 1813, and died July 16, 1898, at the home of his son-in-law, John Anspach. He owned the homestead in Marion, and carried on operations there until his retirement twenty-five years prior to his death. He was a Reformed member of Host Church, where he is buried. In politics Mr. Troutman was a strong Democrat, and during war time served as assessor. Mr. Troutman was married to Hannah Leiss, who was born Aug. 10, 1812, and died March 8, 1880, daughter of John Adam and Eva Leiss, and they had these children: Malinda m. Isaac Beckey; Sarah m. George A. Brown; Ezra E. m. Kate Anspach; Rebecca m. Reily W. Zeller; Adam L. m. Isabella Gerhard; Eleanora m. George Heckman; Amelia m. John E. Anspach; Michael B. m. Amelia Himmelberger; and Frank W.

Frank W. Troutman's youth was spent upon the homestead farm, and until his twelfth year he worked for his parents, at this time going out among the farmers of the vicinity, by whom he was employed for six years more. He attended the local schools, and took advantage of every opportunity to gain an education, and when nineteen years old was licensed to teach in the public schools of Berks county, by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner. He taught two terms in Marion township, and one term in Tulpehocken, the latter being under the administration of Prof. S. A. Baer. After completing this experience as an educator, Mr. Troutman learned the trades of house painting and paper hanging, which he has followed to the present time in his immediate community.

A Democrat of the Jeffersonian type, Mr. Troutman has been active in his party's ranks since attaining his majority. His first official position was that of township assessor, an office in which he served for fifteen consecutive years, during the first six years of which the office of tax collector was included with that of assessor. During this time Mr. Troutman served to the utmost satisfaction of all parties concerned, and in all the years had not one complaint nor appeal. He was fair, impartial and just to all. In 1904 George L. Groff, the only justice in the district, died, and Mr. Troutman was persuaded by his friends, both in the Democratic and Republican parties, to allow the use of his name as Mr. Groff's successor. He was subsequently appointed in May, 1904, by a Republican governor, and in the following February, he was elected by the people to serve the full term of five years. Judge Troutman is very popular in Marion and the surrounding townships. In his official capacity of justice of the peace, he is actually a peace-maker, and his intelligent and persuasive arguments have in many cases influenced the disputing parties to settle their differences amicably. Kind and open-hearted, honest and upright, he has won the confidence of his fellow-townsmen, who respect and esteem him for his many sterling traits of character. On a number of occasions Mr. Troutman has been a delegate to county conventions, and he assisted in the nomination of Hon. James N. Ermentrout to the judgeship. He is a member of the Ancient Order of Good Fellows, No. 42, of Stouchsburg, where he has twice gone through the chairs; and of the P. O. S. of A., Lodge No. 237, of the same town, in which he has been serving as financial secretary since 1898. He also belongs to Reading Encampment No. 1, Patriotic Americans.

On Feb. 5, 1874, Mr. Troutman was married to Isabella C. Rhine, daughter of Jacob and Susanna (Bohn) Rhine. Mr. and Mrs. Troutman have had no children of their own, but have two foster children, both the offspring of Mrs. Eleanora Beckert, Katie L. Hechler and O. F. Moyer. With his family Mr. Troutman attends Host St. John's Church, in which he has been deacon and elder, and is now serving as trustee.

JOHN M. TROUTMAN, a well-known farmer and representative citizen of Marion township, where he is now cultivating a fine farm, was born on the Troutman homestead, June 8, 1847, son of John and Susanna (Moyer) Troutman.

John Jacob Troutman, grandfather of John M., was born on the Troutman homestead, May 18, 1791, and there his death occurred March 6, 1862, aged seventy years, nine months, sixteen days. Susan Peiffer, his wife, was born Jan. 21, 1793, and died Sept. 17, 1866, and both are buried at Host Church, of which they were members of the German Reformed denomination. Their children were: William; Augustus; Jacob; John; Susanna m. Elias Batdorf; Leah m. Stophel Batdorf; Eliza m. Jacob Manbeck; Sybilla m. Jacob Krauss; and a daughter whose name is not remembered.

John Troutman, the father of John M., was born on the Troutman homestead, Jan. 27, 1815, and died May 9, 1898, aged eighty-three years, three months, twelve days, being buried at Host Church, of which he was a deacon, elder and trustee. He was a lifelong farmer and owned the homestead at the "Summer Hill" in Tulpehocken. In politics he was a Jacksonian Democrat and served his district as school director and supervisor for many years, being well-known and highly esteemed throughout the township. He married Susanna Moyer, who was born May 19, 1808, and died Aug. 15, 1863, and they had these children: Isaac, Daniel, George; John M.; Mary m. William Stoudt; Leah m. Joseph Keener, and Eve m. a Mr. White.

John M. Troutman's educational advantages were somewhat limited in his youth, but he has educated himself, and is conversant with all the topics of the day. Until twenty-five years of age he remained under the parental roof, and he then spent two years in farming in Marion township, whence he removed to the homestead in Tulpehocken township, where he remained five years. In 1879 he located in Marion township, and here he has made his home ever since. He successfully conducted the Hill farm for many years and in 1907 he purchased the Frank Oxenreider stand in the eastern end of Marion township, a farm consisting of fifty acres of good, fertile land. The farm is supplied with good water, contains a heavy bearing orchard of all kinds of fruit, and is supplied with fine, substantial buildings. This farm he took possession of in the spring of 1908. Mr. Troutman's interests have not been given entirely to farming, as for many years he has been engaged in the huckstering business, dealing in country produce, poultry and calves the year round. He has regular customers in Pottsville and New York, with whom he has done business for a number of years. He is an enterprising and successful business man, and he stands high in the esteem of his fellowmen. With his family he belongs to the Reformed denomination of the Host Union Church, in which he has served as deacon, elder and trustee for many years.

In 1872 John M. Troutman was united in marriage with Miss Agnes Schoener, the estimable daughter of Andrew and Mary (Kintzer) Schoener, and to them the following children have been born: Mary m. Walter Webber; Katie m. Charles Trautman; Eva m. Oliver Schoener; Agnes m. Samuel Schoener; Herbert, John, Elsie and Laura—all are single and reside at home with their parents; Harry died of scarlet fever; and Charles met an accidental death when nineteen years old.

In his political views Mr. Troutman is a Democrat, but he has never aspired to public office, although he takes a lively interest in the progressive movements incorporated in his township, and is ready at all times to assist in the same.

WILLIAM KOCH was a builder and contractor of Reading, belonging to a family long resident in that city, his father, also named William, having likewise been a native of that place.

William Koch, Sr., was born July 2, 1824, and was one of four children, the others being: Daniel, of Reading; Adam, of Elmira, N. Y.; and Mary, who married George Roland. William became a tanner, but after following that occupation for many years, finally went into the mines at Topton, and there was killed May 6, 1862, breaking his neck by falling down a shaft. He was survived by his widow and three children. Mrs. Koch was a Miss Louisa Neider and was the seventh child in a family of fourteen born to Henry and Mary (Dumm) Neider. Of these there are living, only Mrs. Koch, who was born Oct. 27, 1832, and Clara, the youngest. The brothers all died at home except Lafayette, whose death was caused by starvation during the war. William and Louisa Koch were married Oct. 4, 1851, and their three children were: Louisa, Mrs. John Neider, of Reading; Sarah, Mrs. Harry Button, of Reading; and William.

William Koch was born Aug. 10, 1859, and after going to school until he was eleven years old was obliged to begin work, beginning at the rope walk. While still very young he was apprenticed to his uncles, Michael and Simon Neider, to learn the trade of bricklaying, and spent about three years with them. The next seven years he passed as a journeyman, and then was employed as a boss by many of the largest and best known contractors in the city. In 1897 he went into business for himself and in the years following put up a number of fine buildings and made a good reputation for himself by his satisfactory work. Mr. Koch died May 17, 1909, aged forty-nine years, nine months, seven days.

Mr. Koch was married April 7, 1880, to Miss Katie Fick, daughter of Henry and Catharine (Tobias) Fick, of Reading. The children born to their union were: Bessie; William H., who was educated in the high school of Reading, and is now a clerk for the Reading Iron Company; and Carrie, a graduate of the high school, class of 1903, now at home. Mr. Koch was a member of the Lutheran Church, and socially he belonged to the Sons of America. He was a man of much ability, who had made his own way in the world successfully and was much respected by all who knew him.

SHOWALTER. A well equipped shoe store is that conducted by Mrs. Emma V. Showalter at Thirteenth and Cotton streets, Reading.

ELWOOD SHOWALTER was born in Phoenixville, Chester Co., Pa., son of William and Mary Showalter. He there received a good common school education and learned the trade of painting and paper hanging. In 1887 he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company and worked as painter on the parlor and day coaches at Trenton Junction, but for the past fifteen years he has been stationed at Reading. In 1879 he married Emma V. Ziegler, daughter of J. F. and Emma L. (Ondinot) Ziegler, and they have two sons, John and William. The former married Jennie Wagner and they have one son, John, Jr. In religious belief the family is Lutheran. Mr. Showalter is a member of the order of Golden Eagles. In politics he votes independently.

Mrs. Showalter is an admirable business woman and has been engaged as at present, since May 1, 1890. She has a good store and carries a complete line of men's, boys', women's and misses' shoes. For many years she was a very active worker in Sunday school and charitable organizations. She is a member of Lady Jefferson Home Mission Society and was the first superintendent of Rev. Myers' infant Sunday school, which Henry J. Rhodes founded.

J. F. Ziegler, father of Mrs. Showalter, was born at Philadelphia, in 1835. He was an expert machinist. In boyhood he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and remained with that corporation until a short time before his death. He was accidentally drowned in the Delaware River. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler were: George, Emma V., Anna L., Julia Ellsworth (deceased), William A., John (deceased), Sally, Samuel, Louisa, and Minnie (deceased).

Mrs. Ziegler became interested in philanthropic work and accepted the position of assistant matron of the City Hall police court at Reading, being appointed by Mayor Adam Leader. She continued in that position for three years, during which period she saw so much cruelty to children, in various ways, that she made an appeal to the Woman's Club of Reading, with which she was affiliated, for the formation of a society to correct abuses. She proposed that it should be called the Reading Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Through her monthly reports the club became interested, and as a result a society of this kind was founded, with Mrs. Ziegler as matron, a position she still fills most efficiently. Great credit is due this lady for her arduous work in the cause. She has secured many comfortable homes for innocent children who have been abandoned or who have been orphaned. She is known and admired all over the city for her Christian work.

SAMUEL S. REIFSNYDER, one of the representative men of Lower Heidelberg township, who was for seventeen years the proprietor of the "Tulpehocken House" at the Blue Marsh in North Heidelberg township, was born April 12, 1839, in Lower Heidelberg township, son of Samuel and Justina (Stiely) Reifsnyder.

Johann Ernst Reifsnyder (also spelled Reiffschneider), a native of Germany, was a passenger on board the ship "Phoenix," which qualified at Philadelphia, Sept. 30, 1743, and soon after this date he settled in Berks county. His children were: (1) David was the grandfather of Samuel S. (2) Daniel married and died young at New Wales, Pa. (3) George, who was born June 1, 1786, and died May 23, 1859, m. Elizabeth Spangler (born March 3, 1786, died Aug. 17, 1878), both being buried at Hain's Church. They lived at Brownsville, and had these children: Polly m. Daniel Greth; Susanna m. Emanuel Greth; Elizabeth m. Joseph Fox; Martha m. William Phillips; Kitty Ann, twin of Martha, m. Peter Leininger; and Ellen died unmarried. (4) Jacob, who lived at Dengler's and is buried at Schwartzwald Church, had these children, Samuel, Perry, Jacob, William, Elizabeth, Maria and Rebecca. (5) John, who was lame, lived below Reading and kept Giles Locks, having three children, Charles, Solomon and Dr. William. (6) Catherine m. Wilhelm Stiely, a weaver of Stielytown, in Lower Heidelberg township.

David Reifsnyder, grandfather of Samuel S., was born April 13, 1781, and died July 15, 1849, being buried at Hain's Church. He was a farmer and lived at Brownsville, Berks county, which town he was instrumental in building up. His brother-in-law, Michael Brown, built the first house there before 1800, and hence the name Brownsville. Mr. Reifsnyder owned a tract of sixty acres of land near Hain's Church, and there his death occurred. He was also a wheelwright by trade, and this he followed for many years. He was married to Elizabeth Knerr, who died without issue, and he then married her sister Catherine Knerr, daughter of Christian Knerr. She was born Jan. 6, 1784, and died May 20, 1861, having been the mother of these children: Samuel; Ellen m. Daniel Shower, a stone mason of Lower Heidelberg township; Catherine m. Daniel Dunkelberger; Jonas, of Womelsdorf, was the twin of Catherine; Maria, widow of Henry Seibert, was born Feb. 7, 1825, and lives with her son George at Sixth and Bingaman streets, Reading; and Sarah, born on the homestead, Oct. 2, 1827, m. Reuben Spangler, who died in 1901 in Reading, where Mrs. Spangler has lived since 1867.

Samuel Reifsnyder, father of Samuel S., was born at Brownsville. He was the owner of two hundred and seventy acres of land in North Heidelberg township, and was a farmer all of his active life with the exception of five years spent in the lumber business in Luzerne county. After the death of his wife he cut the farm in two parts, one part going to his son Samuel and the other to his son Adam. He was a Democrat in politics and served his township as assessor, tax collector and supervisor. He was a member of Hain's Reformed Church, of which he was a deacon. Mr. Reifsnyder was married (first) to Justina Stiely, born June 16, 1817, who died Feb. 23, 1850, and they had three children: Mary m. William Brossman of Lower Heidelberg township; Adam, who died in North Heidelberg township, m. Sarah Ernst, who still survives, and had these children, Candace, Adam, George, David, Sallie, Samuel, Calvin, Kate, Charles and Lillie; and Samuel S. is mentioned below. Mr. Reifsnyder's second marriage was to Elizabeth Huyett, and to them four children were born, three of whom died young. The surviving daughter, Rosa, married Elmer Snyder and lives at Allentown, Pennsylvania. Mr. Reifsnyder is buried at Sinking Spring.

Samuel S. Reifsnyder worked for his parents until he was of age, at which time he married. In 1863 he became the tenant on the John Addams tract of thirty acres, where he remained one year, and then tenanted on other farms in that section for five years more, also engaging in huckstering for a period. Subsequently he returned to his father's farm, which he operated for eighteen consecutive years. In 1890 he purchased the "Tulpehocken House" at the Blue Marsh in North Heidelberg township, where he did a large business until 1907, in which year he sold it to Nicholas Bortz, of Reading, the present proprietor. Mr. Reifsnyder is a Democrat in politics, and takes an active interest in anything pertaining to the welfare of his township. He and his family are members of Hain's Church, where his wife rests from her labors.

On Aug. 8, 1856, Mr. Reifsnyder was married to Mary Gicker, born June 22, 1838, who died March 9, 1904, daughter of John and Annie (Leib) Gicker, of Lower Heidelberg township, along the Tulpehocken. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Reifsnyder: Agnes, m. to Martin Hacker, of Reading; Wellington A., who died at the age of seventeen years; Nathaniel M.; Albert J., who lives at Egypt, Lehigh county; Sarah, m. to George Dunkelberger, of Lower Heidelberg township; Clara, deceased, wife of Benneville Lamm; Miranda, m. to Irwin Hafer, of Reading; Annie, who died at the age of two years; and Adaline, m. to Thomas Heister, a teacher of Brownsville, Pennsylvania.

Nathaniel M. Reifsnyder, son of Samuel S., was born in North Heidelberg township, May 14, 1863. He assisted his father upon the farm until his marriage at the age of twenty-seven years, and he also helped to conduct the hotel at Blue Marsh. He has always worked with his father with the exception of two years spent at laboring in Sinking Spring. Mr. Reifsnyder married Aug. 30, 1890, Emma Bare, daughter of Percival Bare, a well-known resident of Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Reifsnyder have been born two children, a son and a daughter, Miles S. and Florence M. Mr. Reifsnyder and his family attend Hain's Church.

JAMES D. CHRIST, senior member of the well-known contracting and building firm of Christ & Albert, of Reading, Pa., was born Nov. 18, 1848, in Penn township, Berks county, son of John and Elizabeth (Dundore) Christ, natives of that township.

John Christ, father of James D., was born March 9, 1809, on the old Christ homestead in Penn township, son of John, Sr., and there he carried on agricultural pursuits, and died Jan. 19, 1887, at the age of seventy-eight years. His wife, Elizabeth Dundore, died when seventy-three years old. They had ten children, as follows: Louisa, m. to Levi Staley; Levi, who died aged five years; Jonathan D. (had Thomas, Mrs. Joseph Leinbach and Clara); Harrison D. (had Mary, Alice and Howard); Kate; Aaron D. (has Monroe, Minerva and Oscar); Sarah; Henry D. (has Helen and Rosa); James D.; and Levi D. (has Verna, Willard and Norma). Mr. and Mrs. Christ were members of the German Reformed Church, and in politics he was a stanch Democrat.

James D. Christ was educated in the schools of his native township, and as a boy was reared on the home farm, on which he continued to work until 1896. In this year he sold his farm, and in company with Morris Kuehn he engaged in the contracting business for one year, when the partnership was dissolved and Mr. Christ carried on building operations alone until 1905. In this year he associated with Willover and Wagner, under the firm name of Christ, Willover & Wagner, but in the spring of 1906 he withdrew from this firm, and with Henry S. Albert, his brother-in-law, founded the firm of Christ & Albert, which has been very successful. Charles F. Denlinger, a young man of much ability, is associated with the firm. Altogether, Mr. Christ has erected about 175 first-class buildings, and has never had the slightest trouble in disposing of them. He has an enviable reputation for honest dealings, and is known to be a man to live up to the letter of his contracts. He is at present engaged in the erection of twelve houses.

Mr. Christ was married (first) to Mary A. E. Obold, by whom he had two sons, Evan P. and Samuel J. Mrs. Christ died March 1, 1897, and he m. (second) Ellen Albert, daughter of Isaac Albert, and sister of his business partner, and to them one child was born: Anna E. In religious belief the family are members of St. Mark's Reformed Church. Mr. Christ is a Democrat in politics.

JOHN H. HOFFMAN, farmer of Hereford township, Berks county, was born there Oct. 6, 1847, on the old homestead of his grandfather, Michael Hoffman.

This family of Hoffmans came to America from Germany, a family of ten, father, mother and eight children, embarking from the Fatherland on an Easter Monday. The first few days aboard the ship were pleasant enough, but a severe storm arose, and the voyage was both long and weary. Many of the passengers died, among the number being the father and mother and six of the children of the Hoffman family. The two who were left, the son Casper and one daughter, landed safely at Philadelphia, and Casper spent the remainder of his life in Pennsylvania. The daughter married, and it is said moved to South Carolina.

In course of time Casper Hoffman married and resided in Hereford township, Berks county, where he reared his family. In 1790 Casper Hoffman and his son Michael, both then residents of Hereford township, are mentioned, the former as the head of a family then in Berks county. It is possible that Casper Hoffman, of Hereford township, may have moved to Earl township, this county, in his later years, as there is a last will and testament of one Casper Hoffman recorded in Will Book 4, page 252, and in the will are mentioned the names of sons Jacob and John. But whether this was the Casper who was also the father of Michael and Georg Hoffman is not certain, though the maker of the will mentioned died in 1804, and it is known that the ancestor of these Hoffmans died in the latter part of 1804 or about 1806. The members of this family are now numerous, and are scattered over all sections of Berks county and indeed all over the United States. According to tradition Casper Hoffman had five sons, three of whom located in South Carolina, and a daughter of Casper Hoffman was married to Philip Will, of Hereford township; there was also a daughter Eva.

Georg Hoffman, son of Casper, lived in Hereford township, where his son Heinrich (Henry) and grandson Jonathan were born, and was a farmer and wagoner by occupation. His 100-acre homestead is now owned by Aaron Benfield. He died in 1847, and is buried at Huff's Church, of which he and his family were Reformed members. Mr. Hoffman married Elizabeth Huff, and they had a family of nine children: Dorotha, 1797-1860; Elizabeth, 1801-1860; George, who died unmarried (in his father's will he was given the "weaver's loom"); Catharine, 1805-1855; Abraham, 1807-1854, who married Maria Moyer and had two sons and three daughters (this family lived near Perryville); Hannah, who married David Seisholtz; Rebecka, who married George Nester; Jacob, who lived on the homestead; and Heinrich, 1817-1879.

Henry Hoffman, son of Georg, was born on the Hoffman homestead at Siesholtzville Dec. 6, 1817, was a farmer and wheelwright, and died Sept. 12, 1879, aged sixty-one years, nine months, six days. He and his wife, Susanna (Moll), born in 1819, died in 1873, are buried at Huff's Church. They had three children: William; Elizabeth, wife of Peter Wetzel; and Jonathan M. The last named was born in Washington township, Berks county, Sept. 4, 1849, where he is now engaged in farming, having a sixty-two-acre farm. He married Elizabeth Reidenauer, and they have four children, Ella, Ambrose, Mary and Sallie.

Michael Hoffman, another son of the Casper who emigrated from Germany, was the grandfather of John H. Hoffman, whose name introduces this sketch. He was born May 18, 1776, and died Sept. 18, 1857, aged eighty-one years, four months; he and his wife, Mary (Miller), daughter of Henry Miller, also of Hereford township, are buried at Huff's Church. Michael Hoffman was a blacksmith in Hereford township, and also owned a farm there. His family consisted of four children: John; Michael M.; Judith married Benjamin DeLong, a tanner of Hereford township, at Devil's Hole; and Sally married Henry Garrett, of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

Michael M. Hoffman, son of Michael, born May 15, 1808, in Hereford township, died there April 9, 1885, aged seventy-six years, ten months, twenty-four days. He followed farming all his life, owning a tract of 145 acres in that township, and also occasionally engaged in blacksmithing. In 1859 he built a barn on his place which was burned in 1895; it is not known how the fire started. The present house on this property was put up by his father, Michael Hoffman, Sr., in 1836. Michael M. Hoffman married Catharine Haas, daughter of Jonathan Haas, of Topton, born Jan. 5, 1817, died Dec. 3, 1881, aged sixty-four years, ten months, twenty-eight days. Seven children were born to them, viz.: Emma, who died when seven years old; John H.; Frank; Sallie, who married Jacob N. Gery; Mary, who married Silas Smith; Catharine, who married Henry B. Moyer; and Benjamin.

John H. Hoffman was reared upon the farm and attended the common schools of his district. He has always been very handy with tools, has worked to some extent at the blacksmith's trade, and does all his own carpenter work, though farming has been his principal occupation through life. In 1870 he began farming on the land where he has since lived, the John Fox place, near Huff's Church, where he has fifty-five acres well improved and cultivated. Mr. Hoffman built the present barn in 1875 and the house in 1888, the new dwelling replacing an old log cabin which was one of the earliest houses in the township; old residents say that it stood fully 150 years.

Mr. Hoffman has taken an active interest in the life of his community, having served nine years as school director of his township, and he was president of the board during the greater part of his incumbency. He has served four years as deacon of Huff's Church, of which he and his family are Lutheran members. Mr. Hoffman is a Democrat in his political views.

In 1869 Mr. Hoffman married Emma Fox, daughter of William and Caroline (Gaumer) Fox, of Hereford township, and granddaughter of John and Anna (Berger) Fox, also of Hereford. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman have had two children: James, of Freemansburg, Northampton county, is engaged in teaching, being at present principal of a grammar school at East Allentown, Pa.; Tillie married Benjamin DeLong, of Longswamp township, Berks county, and has one child, Pearl.

JOHN C. BRADLEY, one of the best known citizens of Birdsboro, Pa., has been connected with public affairs in Berks county for many years, is a prominent factor in Democratic politics, and is now serving as high sheriff of Berks county, to which office he was elected Nov. 5, 1907. He was born Aug. 30, 1857, at Birdsboro, Pa., and is a son of James and Charlotte (Bell) Bradley.

James Bradley, his father, was born in 1814, in County Donegal, Ireland, and in 1844 came to America, settling at Spring Grove, Lancaster county, Pa. Some years later he removed to Birdsboro, Berks county, where for twenty-six years he served as gardener for Edward Brooke, and through industry and economy succeeded in accumulating some means and property. He died April 6, 1875, and was buried in the St. Paul's Catholic cemetery, Douglassville, Pa., of which church he had been a consistent member. He was a leading Democrat of Birdsboro from the time of his arrival in the town until the day of his death. He married Charlotte Bell, born Feb. 14, 1825, who survives her husband and makes her home with her son, John C. She is well preserved in mind and body, notwithstanding her advanced age, enjoys good health, and is able to read and sew without the aid of glasses. There were born to Mr. and Mrs. James Bradley five children: Clara, who married L. B. Umstead, a coal merchant of Birdsboro, Pa.; James, who died at the age of seven years; Edward, a foreman car inspector for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Wilmington, Del.; John C., the subject of this sketch, and Thomas, who died in infancy.

John C. Bradley was educated in the common schools of Birdsboro, Pa., and early in life began working at the E. & G. Brooke Iron Company mills in his native borough. After some years employment at various occupations with this company, he became a nailer in their cut-nail factory, a vocation which he pursued for many years. He was in the continuous service of the Brooke concern for a period of twenty-seven years.

In the year 1890 he engaged in the coal business in Birdsboro, Pa., conducting it for seven years and then disposing of it to his brother-in-law, L. B. Umstead.

In politics Sheriff Bradley is a stanch Democrat, and has for many years been active in the ranks of his party. His first political office was that of committeeman, which he held without interruption from 1881 until 1907 and at the time of his withdrawal therefrom, held the record of being the oldest member of the county standing committee in point of service. In the year 1892 he was appointed deputy coroner of Birdsboro, and served acceptably until 1908, when he resigned owing to press of other duties. Sheriff Mogel, in 1901 appointed him a deputy sheriff, and three years later he was re-appointed to the same position by Sheriff Jacob Sassaman. On June 1, 1907, after a spirited contest, he was made the nominee of the Democratic party of Berks county, for the office of sheriff, receiving at the primaries 3,995 votes, while his next highest opponent, Thomas G. Werley received 2,655 votes. On Nov. 5th, of the same year, he was elected over his Republican opponent, George R. Dietrich, by a majority of 4,011 votes.

Mr. Bradley is very popular throughout the county, and is well known in many parts of the State. He is honest, intelligent, kind-hearted, companionable and has many warm friends. In society organizations he maintains membership in but one, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, and is in good standing in Aerie No. 66, of Reading. He was reared in the Catholic Faith and was a member of St. Paul's Church, Douglassville, until the services there were discontinued some years ago, when he transferred his membership to St. Peter's Church, South Fifth street, Reading.

In the administration of the office of sheriff he has shown marked ability, characterized by fairness to all parties concerned and thus far has given great satisfaction to his superiors in State and County and received the praise of all with whom he has had business relations in the performance of his duties.

On Feb. 28, 1880, Mr. Bradley was married to Serena F. Smith, who was born in 1864, a daughter of Joseph and Barbara (Gilmer) Smith, farming people of Caernarvon township, Berks county, Pa. These children have been born to the couple: Isabelle F., Clara and Joseph S. (who died young), Mary A., Katharine H., John, Jr., Agnes L., Alice F., and Serena F. (who died young).

EDWARD W. SPAAR, a farmer in the eastern end of Washington township, has passed all his life in that section of Berks county, having been born near his present home, Sept. 30, 1841.

Peter Spaar, his father, was born May 10, 1798, in Switzerland. He had three brothers and two sisters, and one of his brothers, Frederick, was a priest in Switzerland, the Spaars being devout Catholics. Peter Spaar came to America before his marriage, when a young man, to avoid military service, and settled in the eastern end of Washington township, Berks Co., Pa., where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in that township July 19, 1872, aged seventy-four years, two months, nine days. He was engaged in farming, owning a tract of forty acres, on which there were three houses. He was a member of the Catholic Church at Bally, where he is buried. Peter Spaar married Elizabeth Wingert, daughter of John and Phoebe (Covely) Wingert, of Washington township, born March 10, 1808, died Oct. 7, 1889, aged seventy-two years, six months, twenty-seven days. Their married life covered a period of thirty-eight years. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Spaar, one dying unnamed. The others were as follows: John is a resident of Barnesville, Schuylkill Co., Pa.; Lucy Ann, twin of John, died young; Horatio died unmarried; Henry lived at Pittstown, Pa.; Edward W. is mentioned farther on; Mary, twin of Edward, married Augustus Grow; Phoebe died unmarried; Augustus, deceased, lived in Montgomery county, Pa.; Aaron is a resident of Shamokin, Pa.; Peter lives in Allentown. Of this family, Henry and Aaron spell the name Sparr; the original name, however, is Spaar.

Edward W. Spaar received his education in the schools of the home neighborhood, attending the public schools the first day the system was inaugurated in his district; it was held on the second floor of an old mill building, where John Shuler now lives. He was reared on the farm, and still continues to follow farming, owning thirty-five acres of good land, on which are a stone house and a good barn. By thrift and industry he makes a good living from this place. For some years Mr. Spaar worked at the cigar-maker's trade. He has served three years as constable of his township, having been elected on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. Spaar married in 1863 Mary Ackerman, born Nov. 9, 1843, daughter of Stephen and Fietta (Griffith) Ackerman, of Washington township, and fourteen children have been born to them: Frank, who is deceased; Edwin, of Bally; David, who lives in Allentown; Jonathan, of Allentown; Elmer, of Allentown;

Anthony, of Allentown; Tevillia, wife of E. Deysher; Joanna, wife of William Fister; Jane, wife of Earnt Waller; Amanda, wife of Frank Bauer; Estella, unmarried; Saphora, unmarried; Lydia, wife of Laurence Frey; and George, deceased. The family belong to the Catholic Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament, at Bally, Berks county.

ALFRED J. GENNER, president and general manager of The Temple Ornamental and Structural Iron Works Company, one of the important and prospering industries of Temple, Pa., has been identified with the development of this enterprise since its organization, having been its careful and conservative presiding officer since that time. He is a man of wide experience in his line of activity and occupies a position of prominence in the business world. Mr. Genner is a native of England, where his education was received.

While in his native country Mr. Genner learned the method of iron making, and in the spring of 1880 he came to America and settled in Chester county, Pa., where he secured employment with the Crucible Iron Works. After about ten years with this company, he accepted a position with Jackson and Sharp, at Wilmington, Del., and served with them for six years as manager of the iron department. He then resigned to engage in the ornamental iron business, but subsequently located in Reading, and for five years was employed at the W. F. Remppis Iron Works. Mr. Genner then organized the Temple Ornamental and Structural Iron Works Company, which was later established on a joint stock basis, the officers being: Alfred J. Genner, president and general manager; J. D. Brockway, vice president; and Wilfred Wolcott, secretary, of Camden, N. J.; and K. B. Genner, treasurer. The above gentlemen, with Herman P. Roeper, compose the board of directors. Mr. Genner still controls the chief interest in this enterprise, and its continuous growth and expansion is directly attributable to his intelligent and well-applied efforts.

Ever since its organization the company has maintained an office in New York, which is located at No. 207 Broadway, and it has executed many large and important contracts in that city and vicinity. Lately the company has furnished all the ornamental iron work used in the construction of the new Bellevue Hospital, New York, as well as all the ornamental iron work for the Essex County Hospital buildings for the State of New Jersey: while another contract includes fire escapes for the Dupont Building, Wilmington, Del. How extensive has been the work of the company during recent years will be seen from the fact that it has filled orders for such representative concerns as the Bell Telephone Company, Lyric Theatre Company, University of Pennsylvania, and others in Philadelphia; West Chester State Normal School, West Chester, Pa.; Wilmington Pumping Station, Wilmington, Del.; New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, Jamaica, L. I.; Monroe County Bank, East Stroudsburg, Pa.; Schuylkill Trust Company, Pottsville, Pa.; the new Mishler Theatre, Altoona, Pa.; and numerous contracts throughout the State for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The business of the Temple Ornamental and Structural Iron Works Company was never in a stronger or more prosperous condition than at the present time and it is steadily increasing in volume from month to month. It was owing to the growth of the company's business that a branch office was opened in April, 1907, at No. 308 Harrison Building, Philadelphia, where its interests are constantly growing in volume and importance. Mr. Genner divides his time between the main offices at Temple and the branches at Philadelphia and New York. The company's output embraces a wide and varied line of architectural and ornamental wrought and cast iron work, plain and artistic iron work of all kinds, office and bank work, elevator enclosures, iron stairs, fire escapes, railing, fencing, grilles, etc., and the facilities at its command are of the most complete and advantageous character.

JAMES Y. HARTMAN, a well-known resident of the Twelfth ward, Reading, who is now living retired, was for many years engaged in butchering and contracting, and was also prominently connected with public affairs of the city. Mr. Hartman was born in Reading, Oct. 21, 1838, son of John and Elizabeth (Bower) Hartman.

John Hartman was born in Alsace township, Berks county, where as a young man he learned the stone mason's trade, and this occupation he followed successfully for many years in Reading, employing from six to eight men, and becoming one of the best known men in his line in the city. He died at the age of eighty-four years and was buried at the Catholic cemetery. Mr. Hartman was married to Elizabeth Bower, who attained the remarkable age of ninety-four years and was buried at the Alsace cemetery, and to this union there were born the following children: Elizabeth, who married (first) Jacob Kulp and (second) Joseph Baker; John; Angeline, who married Peter Shaffer; Sophia, who married Emanuel Fritz; Mary, who married Adam Schwenk, a resident of Reading; Christiana, who married Jacob Danig; Henry; Amos, who died young; and James Y.

James Y. Hartman attended the public schools of Reading, and when a boy was employed with his father. At the age of seventeen years he went to learn the butchering trade with William Mengel and John Simmons, with whom he served an apprenticeship of three years, and then engaged in business for himself for twenty-seven years, serving many families and being located most of this time at Tenth and Marion streets. In 1887 he gave up butchering to engage in the contracting business, and in addition to furnishing many of the cobble stones that were used in paving streets and gutters, the last being the stones used on Fidelity street, east from Twelfth, between Elm and Buttonwood streets, he has dug many cellars and built the foundation walls for many houses. Among Mr. Hartman's many contracts may be mentioned the cellars and foundation walls for four houses on Douglass street above Birch, built by Joseph Loder and Irvin Impink, and the foundation walls for Loder & Impink's thirteen new houses on Locust and Elm streets. Mr. Hartman for a number of years lived at No. 839 Hampden street, but after his retirement in October, 1907, he started the erection of a fine three-story residence at No. 1239 Douglass street.

On June 24, 1874, Mr. Hartman was married to Catherine Weaver, daughter of Daniel and Hettie (Oswald) Weaver, and to this union there have been born children as follows: Charles N., born April 6, 1875, who married Gertrude Becker, July 14, 1909; Henrietta, born Jan. 28, 1878, who married William Dailey of Reading; Franklin F., born July 6, 1880, who lives at home; Maggie M., born Jan. 14, 1883, who married Harry Grube, of Reading; and Matilda, born Oct. 10, 1885, Emma E., born Nov. 16, 1887, Cecelia, born Feb. 17, 1890, and Josephine E., born July 29, 1893, who all live at home.

In political matters Mr. Hartman is a stanch Democrat, and served his ward, then the Eleventh, in the city council in 1874-5 and again in 1882-84. He is a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church, while Mrs. Hartman belongs to the Lutheran faith.

STEINMAN. The Steinmans of Berks county are descendants of Hans George Steinman (also spelled Stoneman), who in a deed for land is said to have come from Holland at an early date. Prior to 1760 he had located in Hereford township, Berks county, and in 1764 Agnes Steinman, relict of Hans George Steinman, purchased from Michael Schell a tract of land in Hereford township consisting of thirty-two acres. She also purchased a tract of twenty acres, with an allowance, from Thomas and Richard Penn, which is still in the family name, being at present owned by the brothers John F. Steinman and George H. Steinman. The deeds are of parchment, and beautifully written with a goose quill. One of the deeds begins as follows:

"This Indenture made the Tenth Day of April, in the Eighth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord, George III, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, etc., and In the Year of our Lord 1768, between Agnes Stoneman of Hereford township—in County of Berks, in province of Pennsylvania—Widow—the relict of Hans George Stoneman, late of same township, yeoman, deceased, John Stoneman of Hereford township—aforesaid—yeoman, and Andrew Mamer, of Upper Hanover township—in County of Philadelphia—in the said Province, Miller, and Anna Barbara his wife, They the said John and Anna Barbara being of the children of the said Hans George Stoneman by the said Agnes his wife—on the one part and George Stoneman of Hereford township—aforesaid—Yeoman, another of the sons of the said Hans George Stoneman, by the said Agnes his wife of the other part." Hans George Steinman it appears had three children. He is buried in the old graveyard, but the exact location of his grave is uncertain. One of his sons who bears his name has the following tombstone inscription:

"Dieser Stein zeiget die Ruhestette des verstorben Johan Georg Steinman geboren June 14, 1747, gestorben Nov. 25, 1826, war alt 79-5-10."

The following refers to his wife: "Hier ruhe in dieser Grabe die Gebeine von Catharine Steinman, eine Ehefrau von Georg Steinman. Sie erblickte das Licht dieser Welt d. 12 Oct. Anno 1750. Zeugte in ihrem Ehestand 8 Kinder, davon 4 mit der Mutter in die Ewigkeit gegangen, die unbrigen noch am Leben. Sie wurde alt 47 Jahr, 10 Monat, und 2 Wochen."

Among their children were Peter (1775-1813) and George (1775-1817), twins, and Catharine (1788-1829).

The second wife of Johan Georg Steinman was Elizabeth (Lehr), born in 1774, died in 1852, by whom he also had a number of children, among them being: Johannes is mentioned farther on; George, who located at Bethlehem, Pa., where he died, had four children, Amanda (who married Dr. Henry Dickensheid), Angeline (Mrs. Snyder), Henry (who died unmarried) and Willis; Heinrich, born in 1801, died in 1822; Jesse, born in 1804, died in 1827; Elizabeth married George Weigner, who lived in Hereford at the mill now owned by Lewis Kehl.

Johannes Steinman, son of Johan Georg, was born in Hereford township June 24, 1799, and died on his farm—the old Steinman homestead—Feb. 23, 1870, aged seventy years, seven months, twenty-nine days. He is buried in the graveyard at New Goshenhoppen Church, of which church he was a member. He owned the old place of 139 acres, and the farm of forty-eight acres now belonging to his grandsons, John F. and George H. Steinman. He built the brick house which still stands on the homestead in 1851, and had erected the barn some time previously. He also built the present house and barn on the old homestead now owned by Jeremiah H. Schultz, located on the Treichlersville and Clayton turnpike. He married Catharine Kehl, born Dec. 18, 1802, died April 11, 1857, and they had two children, William F. and James A.

William F. Steinman, son of Johannes, was born on the old homestead in Hereford township, Berks county, Nov. 15, 1836, and died April 22, 1890, aged fifty-three years, five months, seven days. In his early life William F. Steinman clerked in a store at Philadelphia, beginning at the humble salary of $1.75 a week and board, and he traveled with a show for a year before settling down to farming on the old homestead in Hereford with his brother, in 1859 or 1860. They continued in partnership until 1870, when William F. Steinman moved to the farm now belonging to his two sons, James remaining on the old homestead, where he farmed until his death in 1898. William F. Steinman was a member of the Reformed Church at New Goshenhoppen, and he was a Democrat in political opinion; he served six years as school director in Hereford township. He was married April 26, 1862, to Ellena Gery, daughter of John W. and Catharine (Glaser) Gery, of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., born Nov. 21, 1831, died March 4, 1905. They became the parents of two children, John F. and George H., both of whom are mentioned below.

James A. Steinman, son of Johannes, owned and lived upon the old homestead until his death, which occurred April 25, 1898, when he was aged fifty-eight years, four months, sixteen days. Like his brother he was a Democrat in politics and served as school director of Hereford township. He married Fianna Christman, sister of Charles, who hailed from Kutztown, and they had a large family, namely: Katie, John, Agnes, James, Annie (who died young), Ida (who died young), Lottie, Charles and Ralph.

JOHN F. STEINMAN, eldest son of William F. Steinman, was born Nov. 7, 1863, on the old family homestead in Hereford township, and began his education in the public schools of the neighborhood. Later he went to the Perkiomen Seminary. He was reared to farming, and so far has spent all his days on the farm, making his home with his brother. They own the old David Gery tract, located on the old Maxatawny road, now better known as the Green Lane and Goshenhoppen turnpike, over which the early residents of Maxatawny township hauled their grain and produce to Philadelphia in the old-time Conestoga wagons. The Steinman brothers have made their home there since 1870. To the forty-eight-acre tract previously mentioned as having formerly belonged to their grandfather they have added twelve acres.

The Steinman brothers are Democrats in politics, and in religion they adhere to the Reformed faith, belonging to the New Goshenhoppen Church. John F. Steinman was active in the Sunday-school for many years, serving long as teacher, and George H. Steinman is one of the deacons at the present time.

GEORGE H. STEINMAN was born July 1, 1869, on the homestead in Hereford township, attended the common schools, and for a time was a student at the Perkiomen Seminary. He married Mary Christman, daughter of Jacob and Matilda (Gery) Christman, and they have had three children: Katie A., William F. and Willis J.

An old building on the Steinman brothers' property, and used by them as a store-house for farm implements, is one of the landmarks of the community and must be almost two hundred years old. People now in the eighties say that it was very old when they were children, and that their parents told them it was over one hundred years old then. It was one of the first stone houses in the township, and is of German architecture throughout, 26 feet wide and 40 feet long, two stories in height, with an attic. Standing on the pike formerly known as the old Maxatawny road, it was one of the earliest taverns in the county and was long known as the "Stone Tavern." Store and hotel were kept there up to about 1825. It was the stopping-place for teams and travelers between Kutztown and Maxatawny and Philadelphia, and old residents recall that people from Kutztown and Maxatawny remained there overnight going to and coming from Philadelphia, whither they took their grain and produce, bringing merchandise back. In those days they laid on the floor, rolling themselves in their blankets, and according to tradition they took turns keeping the wood fire going—a story which undoubtedly had its foundation in fact.

WILLIAM R. KRICK, an influential citizen of Reading, Pa., who is well known among hotel men of the city as proprietor of the "Fifteenth Ward Hotel," was born in Reading, June 2, 1840, son of Peter and Susanna (Reber) Krick.

Adam Krick, the grandfather of William R., was born June 22, 1792, and died April 5, 1857, aged sixty-four years, nine months, fourteen days, being buried at Sinking Spring Church, of which he was a Reformed member, as well as chorister. He was an early school teacher of Berks county, was later the proprietor of a hotel in West Reading, which he himself erected, and was a well known and highly esteemed citizen of his day. On Nov. 30, 1811, he was married to Catherine Fisher, and they spent a married life of forty-five years, four months and five days. Their children were as follows: William; Peter, John; Maria; Susan; Abraham; and Rebecca, who married John Reedy, who died at Sinking Spring in 1906, in the ninety-fourth year of his age.

Peter Krick, the father of William R., was born in 1813, and died in 1872, being buried at the Charles Evans cemetery. In 1837 he came to Reading borough, locating in the Northwest Ward, and there he became a tradesman and boat-builder for the Union and Schuylkill canals. He married Susanna Reber, daughter of Nicholas Reber (1780-1844) and his wife Susanna Lash, born in 1783, and to this union there were born children as follows: Catherine Anna, born in 1837, died single; Levi J., born in 1839, married Mary Ann Hinnershitz, and they had five children,—Joel, Anna, Emma, Monroe and Mary; William R.; Ellenora, born in 1841, who died young; Joel, born in 1844, who married Sarah Young; Adam, born in 1846, who married Ella Adams; Ella, born in 1847, who married William Leas; Peter, who married Mary Riegel; and Catherine, twin of Peter, who died aged thirteen years.

William R. Krick has been a resident of the city of Reading all of his life, with the exception of ten years when he was engaged in the boat building business with James Rickenbach at Leesport. For six years he was employed at Barbey's Brewery, and at different times worked at Jacob Bushong's paper mill. For some time he was engaged in hauling for the city and private individuals, having as many as nine horses and carts, and he is still engaged in this business to some extent, having three horses and carts. On Nov. 1, 1900, he engaged in the hotel business, which he has continued to the present time, and in addition to his hotel property, he owns a dwelling and two building lots in the Sixth Ward and one dwelling in the Fifteenth Ward. He is a member of the Junior Fire Company, with which he has been connected since reaching his majority, and he is a charter member of the Schuylkill Fire Company, as was his brother, Levi, who is now deceased. He is connected with the Veteran Firemen's Association, the Harmony Club, Nursery Literary Association, and Democratic Club.

In 1859 Mr. Krick was married to Catherine Leinbach who died in 1896 and who was the daughter of Joshua Leinbach and Hannah Noecker, and to this union there were born seven children: Adam; Harvey; Laura, who married Daniel Frymoyer; Ella, who married Henry Humma; Alice, who married Moses Lessig; Albert, and Peter.

Mr. Krick belongs to Zion Reformed Church, Reading.

JOHN A. L. JENNINGS, one of the prominent citizens of Reading, Pa., who is now serving the city in the capacity of councilman, was born at Ninth and Walnut streets, Reading, Feb. 29, 1848, son of John S. and Julia (Long) Jennings.

John Jennings, grandfather of John A. L., was a native of Reading, where he spent all of his life, his occupation being that of a carpet weaver. He was first buried at Sixth and Walnut streets, but later, with many others, his remains were removed to the Lutheran graveyard. Among his children were John S. and Mrs. Weaver. John S. Jennings was born at Reading in 1800, and died there in November, 1867. He was a carpenter by occupation, as well as an all-around mechanic, resided on Maple street, and was a member of the Lutheran Church. He married Julia Long, daughter of Joseph Long, a Chester county Quaker. She was born in 1803, and died in 1887, having been the mother of four children: John A. L.; Susan, who married Levi Miller, both deceased; Julia, who is the widow of John Yerger; and Anna Elizabeth, who died aged five years, in 1857.

John A. L. Jennings was educated in the public schools of the city, and when but thirteen years old he commenced working for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, being an apprentice boy in the machine shop at Seventh and Chestnut streets. In 1864 during the strike, he was a fireman on the main line, when the Government sent thirty-five crews to operate the trains. For four years, from 1874 to 1878, Mr. Jennings worked as a special officer on the same road, and was in Schuylkill County during the Molly Maguire troubles, witnessing the hanging of the first six offenders. After 1878 he returned to the shops and took up the machinist trade, which he followed until he was made foreman in about 1880. He has charge of the old shop and about 150 men are under his employ, doing all the yard work and the heavy work in the shop. Since 1887, Mr. Jennings has resided at No. 1346 Cotton street. He is a member of Camp No. 212, P. O. S. of A., and the Twenty Century Quakers No. 2, both of Reading. In religious belief he is a Methodist. In political matters, Mr. Jennings is a stanch Republican, and since he attained his majority he has taken an active interest in his party's welfare. He was ward chairman from 1900 to 1903, and in the spring election of 1908 was elected by a good majority, to the office of common councilman.

On Oct. 12, 1869, Mr. Jennings was married to Clara Derrick, born Oct. 12, 1852, at Reading, who died aged twenty-eight years, daughter of Charles Derrick, of Reading, and granddaughter of Charles and Libby Derrick. Five children were born to this union: Minnie, who married Jacob Ganster, has a son, Earl, who lives at home with parents; Viola, who died in 1901; Emma E., who married Walter W. Troxel, of Reading; Laura, who married Joseph Miller, of Reading; and John, who is single.

JARED G. YARNELL, a highly esteemed retired citizen of West Reading borough, Pa., who was for many years engaged in contracting in Spring township, Berks county, was born Feb. 23, 1840, in Bern township, son of George and Margaret (Lerch) Yarnell.

The Yarnell family is of old English Quaker stock. Francis and Peter Yarnell came from their native land with the Hugheses, Boones, Penroses, Kirbys, and Lightfoots, and settled in Oley township. They were of the fifty or more families who had been left out when the township was erected. The people to the "south part of Oley" therefore petitioned the Court at Philadelphia, in 1741, to erect that part into a township. The petition was granted. Among the sixteen signers to this petition were Francis and Peter Yarnell, one of whom was the great-grandfather of Jared G.

Peter Yarnell, grandfather of Jared G., had a brother Jasper, who was a blacksmith by trade, and who had settled in Maidencreek township prior to 1800; in 1802 he bought a tract of land in that district from Michael Dunkel. The Yarnell family was related by marriage to the Lightfoot family of the Revolutionary days. Peter Yarnell, the grandfather, is buried at the Quaker Meeting House in Maiden-creek township. He married Maria Yarnall (the original spelling of the name), and their one son, George, was born Aug. 4, 1793, in Maiden-creek township.

George Yarnell, son of Peter, obtained a fair education in the local schools and learned the shoemaking trade, which, however, he did not follow. He worked at the carpenter's trade, and also followed farming, having a small tract of land in Bern township, near "Leinbach's Hotel," where he died April 23, 1842, and was buried at Epler's Church. Mr. Yarnell married Margaret Lerch, born Jan. 3, 1803, in Bern township, daughter of John and Margaret (Steffe) Lerch, who died Sept. 27, 1888, and was buried beside her husband. They were members of the Reformed Church, and in politics Mr. Yarnell was a Whig. To George and Margaret (Lerch) Yarnell there were born these children: Mary, born Feb. 16, 1825, is unmarried and resides at the Home for Widows and Single Women, Reading; Reuben J., born Jan. 1, 1834, died unmarried Feb. 17, 1861; Catherine, born April 26, 1837, married Henry R. Tobias, of Bern township; and Jared G.

Jared G. Yarnell attended the schools of Bern township, and the Normal school for two terms, and then taught two winters in Bern and Brecknock townships, after which he learned the stone mason's trade, which he followed in connection with stone cutting for several years. He engaged for a short time in boating on the Schuylkill canal, and in 1867 engaged in the contracting business, beginning operations in this line by building the Albright school house in Bern township. He built ten county bridges, the waterworks at Fleetwood, the Maiden Creek pumping station and pipe line, and did a great deal of sewer contracting in the city, also breaking the ground for the City Park at Reading. For twenty-five years he did work for the city and county. In 1884 he located in West Reading, where he built fifteen private residences, but since 1905 he has been living retired. On Sept. 18, 1906, Mr. Yarnell met with an accident, through which he lost his left leg, eight and one-half inches below the knee.

At the beginning of the Civil war Mr. Yarnell enlisted in Company E, 42d regiment for the State defense, and in 1864 re-enlisted, becoming on Sept. 2d, a private in Company H, 205th Pa. V. I., with which he served until the close of the war, being with the Army of the Potomac. For many years Mr. Yarnell was a member of Keim Post, G. A. R. He was raised a Mason in 1882, belongs to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., Reading Commandery No. 42, and Excelsior Chapter, No. 237. He was a member of LuLu Temple, of Philadelphia, and a charter member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading. In politics he is a stanch Republican, being one of the first councilmen of West Reading, and a prime mover in the establishment of the borough. He is a member of Bethany Lutheran Church, of which he has been an elder since 1902. On Feb. 10, 1867, Mr. Yarnell was married to Katie M. Adams, of Cumru township, daughter of Amos and Mary A. (Moore) Adams. One child has been born to this union: Charles W., alderman of the Fifth ward of Reading, who married Sarah, daughter of Albert Franks.

JONAS S. KRIEBEL. The Kriebel family was planted in Pennsylvania by members of the Schwenkfelder band who came over from Silesia, Germany, in 1734, and located in Towamensing township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

(I) Casper Kriebel, the ancestor of that branch of the family to which Jonas S. Kriebel, of Hereford township, Berks county, belongs, lived in Towamensing township, Montgomery county, on land which he owned, and which is now in the possession of his descendant, Abraham K. Kriebel. On his emigration to this country he was accompanied by his wife, Susanna, who died April 17, 1769. They had two children, George and Abraham.

(II) Abraham Kriebel, son of Casper, was born in Pennsylvania, Oct. 8, 1736. He died Jan. 30, 1801. He inherited the farm on which he lived and died, at the Schwenkfelder meeting house, and this in 1879 was occupied by his grandson. In 1762 he married Susanna, daughter of George Schultz, and she died in 1820. Their children were: Christian (1764-1812) and Andrew.

(III) Andrew Kriebel, son of Abraham and Susanna, was born Oct. 5, 1765, and he died Oct. 15, 1853. In 1793 he married Maria, daughter of George Heebner. She died in 1857, in the eighty-fifth year of her age. Their children were: Lydia, Daniel, George, Hannah, Abraham, Susanna and Sophia.

(II) Rev. George Kriebel, son of Casper the emigrant, was born in Saxony, Germany, Nov. 3, 1732. He was well educated, and in his younger days taught school. For many years he was a minister in the Society of Schwenkfelders. He was frequently engaged as a conveyancer and in settling differences in his vicinity. He lived on property which in 1879 was owned by a man named Brey. The Rev. Mr. Kriebel died Dec. 1, 1805. In 1758 he married Anna, daughter of Blathaser Anders, and she died in 1822 in the eighty-seventh year of her age, at their home in Lower Milford, Lehigh county. Their children were: Abraham, born May 26, 1760; Susanna, July 1, 1761; Jacob, Feb. 12, 1764; and Anna, Nov. 20, 1766.

(III) Abraham Kriebel, son of Rev. George, born May 26, 1760, owned and lived on a farm that in 1879 was owned by Joel Yeakel, in the Hosensack. In 1784 he married Salome Yeakel, who died in 1815. They had eleven children: Benjamin, Lydia, Daniel, Jacob, Anthony, Jonathan, Sophia, Anna, Samuel, Susanna and Rachel.

(IV) Jonathan Kriebel, son of Abraham, was born May 5, 1795, and died April 10, 1873. On April 22, 1820, he married Anna, daughter of George Heydrick, and she died April 9, 1836. Their children were: George, born 1821, and died the same year; Charles, born 1828, and died 1838; and Abraham.

(V) Abraham Kriebel, son of Jonathan, was born in Lower Milford township, Lehigh county, on his father's farm, Aug. 22, 1823. He is buried at Washington Schwenkfelder Church. He was a life long farmer, and owned a 120 acre farm in Douglass township, Montgomery county, immediately opposite the old Gehman farm. On Nov. 27, 1845, he married Regina Schultz, daughter of Matthias Schultz. Their children were: Susanna, born 1847, died unmarried, 1876; Jonas S.; Charles, who lived on the homestead; Sarah, who died unmarried; Samuel, born 1854, and died 1860; John; a daughter that died in infancy; and William, born 1861 and died 1862.

(VI) Jonas S. Kriebel, son of Abraham and Regina, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Aug. 19, 1848. He attended the township school, and one winter term he attended a school of higher education at Wadsworth, Medina Co., Ohio. He remained with his parents until he was of age, and then for three years hired out among neighboring farmers. After his marriage in 1876 he began farming on his present place, then the property of his father, and this he tenanted until the latter's death, when he purchased it from the estate. The farm contains one hundred acres, and is well located. The present set of buildings were erected by Christopher Schultz.

Mr. Kriebel is a Republican, and was a director of the Clayton Butter & Cheese Company for one year. Since its organization in 1889 he has been one of the trustees of Union Chapel, at Chapel. For three years he was a deacon in the Schwenkfelder church, to which he and his family belong. Mr. Kriebel has a grandfather's clock that belonged to his parents.

On Jan. 8, 1876, Mr. Kriebel was married to Annie H. Krauss, daughter of Aaron Krauss. Ten children have been born to them, as follows: Harvey, a student at State College, Pa.; Minerva; Alice, who married Harry Huber, of Norristown; Mary; Amanda, who married George Gerhart, and lives in Worcester township, Montgomery county; Adaline; Edna; Annie; Oswin; and Irene.

ALLEN C. PAINE, proprietor of the "City Hotel" and a prominent citizen of Reading, Pa., was born in Lebanon county, Pa., and is a son of William and Rebecca (Urich) Paine.

The Paine family is of English extraction and was founded in America by the grandfather of Allen C. Paine, who, settled in Berks county, Pa., but later removed to Lancaster county, where he became a man of substance and prominence. He owned two fine farms and also operated a distillery, and continued in active business life until his death. His children were: William; John; Levi; Joseph; and Mary m. a Mr. Wagner and now resides in Lebanon.

William Paine, father of Allen C., was born in Berks county, Pa., and he was engaged in farming for many years in Lebanon county. Practically his whole life was spent there. His marriage was to Rebecca Urich and they had three children, namely: Allen C., James, in a grocery business at Reading, and Elizabeth, who married a Mr. Klinefelter, of Illinois. In political sentiment William Paine was a Democrat.

Allen C. Paine was educated in the schools of Lebanon County and in boyhood commenced learning the trade of cabinet making. After working for three years at this business he turned his attention to mercantile pursuits and was in business at Schuylkill for twelve years and then disposed of his stock and returned to Lebanon. Since then he has been more or less connected with hotel-keeping at different points. He has been proprietor of the "Central," the "Palace" and the "Valley" hotels and has established an enviable reputation as a host.

In October, 1897, Mr. Paine came to Reading and purchased the "Windsor Hotel," which he successfully operated for four and a half years, when he disposed of it to other parties. For the two succeeding years Mr. Paine retired from business but returned as the owner and proprietor of the "Hotel Weiler," on the corner of Eighth and Washington streets. This property he leased and he remained its owner until the site was secured by the city for a public school building, the hotel being dismantled. The school building cost $25,000. Mr. Paine then purchased the "City Hotel" on South Sixth street. This is one of the finest hostelries in the city. It has sixty well furnished rooms, fitted with all modern improvements, and the cuisine is second to none. This hotel is a favorite one with theatrical people and commercial travelers.

In 1876 Mr. Paine married Miss McCorkle and they have six children, viz.: Thomas, Raymond, Robert, Lizzie, Beulah and Virginia.

Politically Mr. Paine is a Democrat. Fraternally he belongs to the Royal Arcanum, the I. O. O. F., the P. O. S. of A., and the K. G. E.

WILLIAM JACOB BOBST, proprietor of a hosiery mill at Reading, was born in Maxatawny township, near Kutztown, Jan. 14, 1838, and died at Reading April 8, 1909. Mr. Bobst received a limited education in the public schools near his home. While still a boy he began to work out on a farm for his board and clothing, but his industry and perseverance so won the esteem of his employer that he was soon paid two dollars a month extra, which, at that time, was regarded as very much, and evidenced the satisfactory performance of his duties. After working on a farm until he was seventeen years old, he manifested a preference for machinery and manufactures, and securing employment in the woolen mills of William Brumbach in Exeter township, three miles below Reading, he worked there for several years. Then he sought a position in a hosiery mill at Lockport, N. Y., for the purpose of familiarizing himself with the manufacture of hosiery, and he remained there for a year. With this experience he located at Reading, finding employment in the large wool hat factory of the Hendel Brothers. After working for this firm about ten years, he was invited to become a partner on account of his skill and steady character, and he retained his interest in this great local enterprise for nearly thirty years, retiring in 1893.

In 1889, while in the hat business, he started a factory for the manufacture of hosiery, with his son William as the manager. Guided by his long experience as a manufacturer, he made this venture a success from the start, and the increasing orders from different parts of the country coming to require all of his time, he was obliged to withdraw from the firm of Hendel Bros., in 1893; and from that time he devoted his attention to the manufacture of men's half hose. In 1895 he erected a substantial two-story mill on Pearl street below Chestnut and equipped it with the best machinery. He employed upward of one hundred hands, and kept the plant running constantly, shipments being made direct to all parts of the United States.

From his early manhood Mr. Bobst took an earnest interest in religious affairs and identified himself with the Evangelical Association, the church of his parents, becoming a member of the Salem congregation at Eighth and Court streets. His zeal and devotion won the high regard of the members, and he quite naturally was selected to fill various positions in carrying on its affairs, both in the Sunday-school and in the church; and his successful efforts were evidenced by his acting as class-leader, exhorter, and president of the trustee board for the management of the financial affairs of the congregation, and also as president of the steward board for the management of its ministerial affairs; and though constantly active in the work for upward for fifty years, he continued to be devoted to the welfare of the congregation to the end of his life..

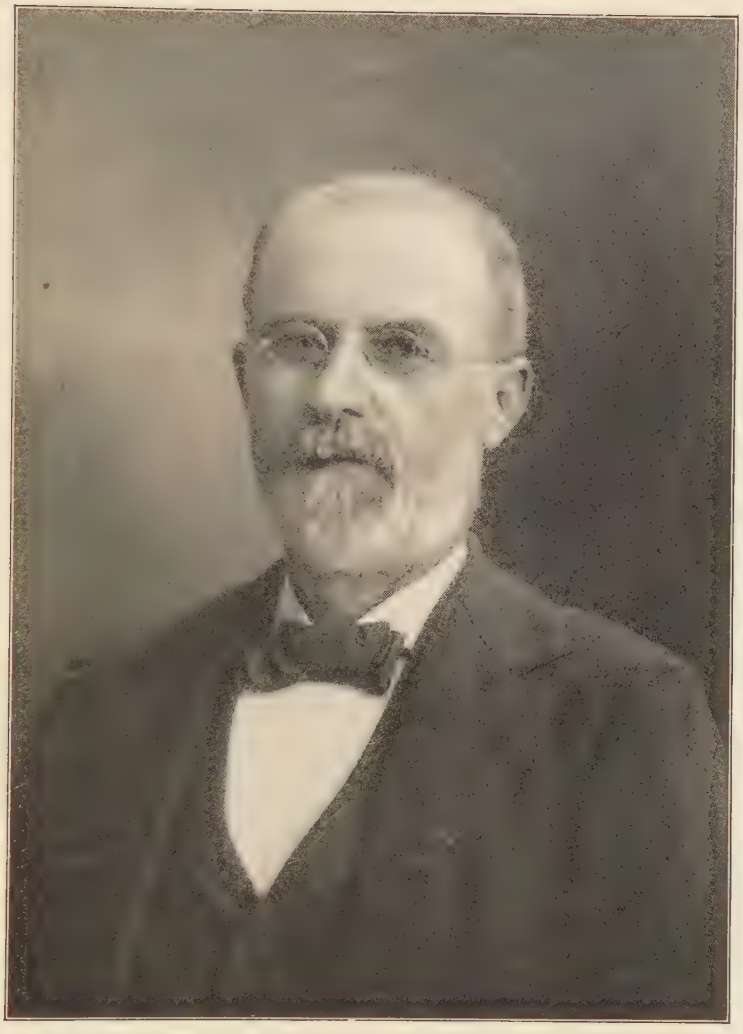
In 1875, when thirty-seven years old, Mr. Bobst imbibed the commendable principles of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and became a charter member in the institution of a new lodge, called Mt. Penn, and he kept up his membership in this lodge until his death. In 1868 he was initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by becoming a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, and he was advanced into Excelsior Chapter and Reading Commandery of the Knights Templars; in all of these bodies he continued an active membership.

Notwithstanding his devotion to the church and secret societies outside of his business, Mr. Bobst felt it his duty as a citizen of a prosperous city like Reading to show an active interest in the educational and municipal affairs of the community; accordingly he was elected to serve as a common councilman from the First ward for two terms from 1880 to 1884; and also as a school controller from the Fourth ward for two terms from 1891 to 1899, acting as chairman of the Teachers' committee for six years. He also officiated as president of the Aulenbach Cemetery Company for five years from 1898. In January, 1907, he was elected a director of the Commercial Trust Company of Reading, and from that time serving the corporation in its management.

When Mr. Bobst became of age he cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln as President, and he ever after held firmly to the Republican party. When the Civil war broke out in 1861, he espoused the great cause of Lincoln's administration, and in 1863 when a call for special troops was made to defend the State from the invading enemy, he enlisted in the company of independent artillery from Reading, commanded by Capt. William C. Ermentrout, and served a term of three months from July 3, 1863.

In 1858 Mr. Bobst married Sarah Clark, daughter of William and Susan (Hiester) Clark, of Exeter township, and by her he had three children: William Clark; Emma, m. to William H. Romig; and Laura, m. to Warren Rotz.

Charles Bobst, father of William J., of Maxatawny township, near Kutztown, was born in 1808 and learned the trade of a weaver, which he carried on in connection with farming for many years until shortly before his death in 1871. He was married to Mary Smith, of the same township; and by her he had six children: Catharine m. John Shively; William J., above; Lucy m. John Clark; Samuel m. Leah Houpt; James m. Alice Heffelfinger; and Jacob died unmarried.



W. J. Bobst

Philip Bobst, grandfather of William J., was of Kutztown, where he conducted a popular inn for many years, which was largely patronized in the days of stage-coaches traveling daily on the great thoroughfare from Reading to Easton. He was married to Rebecca Swoyer, of the same township and a descendant of the prominent family of that name, and by her he had six children: Michael married a Schmeck; John married a lady whose Christian name was Elizabeth; Samuel m. a Schoedler; Charles, above; David m. Leah Diener; and Lucy m. John Swenk. He died in 1851, aged seventy-three years, and his wife died in 1855, aged eighty years. The family name was formerly Brobst. The Maxatawny branch migrated from Albany township before 1800.

JAMES B. GRESH, justice of the peace and real estate agent at Little Oley, Douglass township, Berks county, was born on the Henry Gresh homestead, July 24, 1867, son of Urias F. and Rebecca (Baker) Gresh.

Johann Georg Gresch (to use the old spelling of the name) was the founder of the family in this county. He was born in Germany, Oct. 18, 1724, and was twenty-five years of age, when in 1749 he came to America, and shortly after he located in Douglass township, Berks Co., Pa. He was a farmer, and it is likely that he was unmarried when he came to this country. He died Oct. 29, 1788, and both he and his wife Esther, born Sept. 22, 1738, died Jan. 31, 1827, are buried in the Fritz burying ground near Little Oley, where also sleep many other members of the family. They had sons: Georg, Johann Adam and Nicholas.

The village of Greshville perpetuates the name. It is located in Douglass township, and was named after Johann Adam Gresch, son of the pioneer. The postoffice was established in 1853, and was continued for fifty years.

Johann Adam Gresch, son of the emigrant Johann Georg, was born in Douglass township, March 19, 1778, and died May 28, 1831. He was a prominent business man in the very early days in Douglass township, having a store, tavern and distillery, his place being a very busy business center. In 1796 he married Anna Maria Reifschneider, born March 30, 1779, and died Feb. 29, 1864, after a married life of sixty-eight years. They had three sons and two daughters, among whom were: Elizabeth, 1799-1805; Charles, 1802-1849; and Adam, 1804-1846.

George Gresh, great-grandfather of James B., was born Oct. 16, 1767, and died Nov. 3, 1823, passing his entire life in Douglass township. He was a farmer and owned considerable land. His remains were buried in a private burial ground, known as Fritz's Burial ground, on the farm now owned by Warren Hoffman. He married Elizabeth Handwork, and their children were: George; Henry; Jacob; Isaac; Aaron; Elizabeth, m. to Jacob Moser; Joseph, of Monocacy; Susan, m. to John Sassaman; Sarah, m. to Samuel Fox; Polly, m. to Henry Hartranft; and several whose names are not recalled.

Henry Gresh, son of George, was born Jan. 20, 1800, and died in 1880, and is buried in Fairview cemetery at Boyertown. He was a farmer and also operated a saw and oil mill. His farm, which consisted in his time of 103 acres, has been cut up into two tracts, and the mill property is now owned by James G. Hartranft. He married Catharine Fox (1803-1871), and she too, is buried in Fairview cemetery. Their children were: Urias F.; Sarah, m. to Frederick Hornater; Henry who lived in Douglass township; David, a shoemaker in Douglass township; Jeremiah, who died in infancy; George, a willow basket maker living at Iron Stone Creek; and Mary Ann and Catharine, twins, the former the widow of William Yoder, and the latter the widow of Milton Hatfield.

Urias F. Gresh, son of Henry and father of James B., was born in Douglass township Oct. 24, 1830. His earlier life was spent upon the Gresh farm near Little Oley, where he lived for thirty years, and operated the saw and oil mills, the latter for fifteen years, making flax seed oil. After the establishment of the free schools he taught at Manatawny two years, at Mock's school two years, and at the old eight corner school in Douglass two years. In 1866 he opened the first business house at Little Oley, and carried on a general merchandise business there until 1906, when his son Jacob succeeded him. He established the Little Oley postoffice in 1871, and was made postmaster, an office he has since continued to fill. His business has so increased that he was obliged to build an addition to his store. In politics he is a Democrat, and for forty years was a justice of the peace, at the end of that time being succeeded by his son, James B. He also served as auditor and school director. He and his family are Lutheran members of the Boyertown church, and he has been an officer of the Sunday-school. In 1862 he married Rebecca Baker, daughter of Jacob Baker and his wife who was a Miss Eagle, of Earl township. To this union have been born twelve children: Maggie, m. to Henry Yergey; Miss Emma, at home; James B.; Jacob B.; Thomas B.; Katie, m. to Irwin Sands; Bessie, m. to Harvey Bower; Mary B., m. to Orlando Leh; and four died in infancy.

James B. Gresh received a good education in the public schools. At the age of sixteen he learned the cigar making trade, and at nineteen became a cigar manufacturer, following this business ever since. He has a factory at Little Oley, and employs five hands, making the well known "Graso," a five-cent cigar, which has a good local trade, and as well in the towns of Schuylkill Valley, between Reading and Conshohocken. The capacity of the factory is 200,000 per annum. Mr. Gresh is thoroughly familiar with the raising of tobacco, and has made a study of the different grades and stages. In 1906 he began growing it, and at present raises about three acres a year. He built his two-story brick factory at Little Oley in 1889, and his modern residence in 1894.

In politics Mr. Gresh is a Democrat, and has held several local offices. In the spring of 1907 he was elected a justice of the peace. In 1908 he was treasurer of the supervisors of his township. He and his family are Lutherans. Mr. Gresh is a member of Aerie No. 626, F. O. E., of Pottstown.

In 1892 Mr. Gresh married Lizzie Anderson, daughter of James and Catharine Anderson, and they have three children: Clarence, Grace and Paul.

ISAAC Y. KINTZER (deceased), at one time U. S. Internal Revenue Collector and warden of the Berks county prison, was born in Womelsdorf, Berks county, Pa., Aug. 2, 1837, son of John and Louisa (Yeager) Kintzer.

John George Kintzer was the emigrant ancestor of this family in America, he having settled along the Potomac river. His estate is still unsettled, and his lands along the river are now occupied by the United States Government. He had a son, George, who was the father of John Kintzer, grandfather of Isaac Y., who settled in Marion township, Berks county, and there owned several farms, and there died aged eighty-six years; he was buried at Host Church. He was three times married, his first wife being a Miss Leiss, by whom one son, John, was born. To his second marriage, to a Miss Brown, a child, Adam, was born, and he married (third) a Miss Zillars, who also bore him one child, Caroline, who married a Mr. Beidel. In religious belief he was a member of the Reformed Church, and in politics he was an old line Whig.

John Kintzer, father of Isaac Y., was reared upon a farm in Marion township, but when a young man removed to Womelsdorf, operating a farm on the outskirts of that borough, and following agricultural pursuits all of his life, dying in 1886, at the age of ninety. His wife passed away in 1902, when eighty-four years old. In politics a Democrat, in religion he was a member of the Reformed Church, and he served many years as a deacon. He and his estimable wife were the parents of four children, viz.: Isaac; John H., deceased; Rebecca, who married William Kline, of Reading; and Elizabeth, who married William Reeser, of Reading.

Isaac Yeager Kintzer received his literary training in the schools of Womelsdorf, and commenced teaching school when but a boy, continuing to act in that capacity for twelve terms. Mr. Kintzer was then elected justice-of-the-peace, an office he filled very efficiently for seventeen years, resigning his last commission to accept the position of Deputy Revenue Collector, during Cleveland's first administration. This position he held for a term of four years, and in 1894 was elected warden of the Berks County Prison. This important office Mr. Kintzer filled for a period of four years, and it is scarcely too much to say that he was one of the most satisfactory incumbents of that office that the county ever had. It was during his superintendence that many improvements were inaugurated, these including the placing of electric lights and an entire change made in the sanitary conditions. Both he and his estimable wife took a personal interest in the charges under their control, and even so captious a body as prisoners were entirely satisfied with the food provided for them. After leaving this position Mr. Kintzer engaged in the grocery business at Third and Franklin streets, and here he was very successful. Before coming to Reading, however, Mr. Kintzer was engaged for seven years in Womelsdorf, and for one year in Robesonia in the hotel business.

Mr. Kintzer was married (first) in 1858 to Elvina Smith, and to them were born six children: Valeria married H. P. Keiser, Esq., of Reading, Pa.; John, of Fayette county, is a clerk with the Pittsburg Coal & Coke Co.; Lizzie, who died in October, 1908, married E. M. Keller; Nova D. married George Schupp; Mary married William Kurtz of Womelsdorf; and William, unmarried, is of Reading. Mrs. Kintzer died in 1883, and in 1885 Mr. Kintzer married (second) Amelia S. Behney, of Marion township, Berks Co., Pa. Mr. Kintzer was a member of the United American Mechanics from 1857, and was also connected with the K. G. E. at Womelsdorf and the K. of P. of Robesonia. In politics he was a Democrat and in religion was a member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Kintzer died Jan. 4, 1907.

LEWIS BOLLMAN, one of the highly esteemed citizens of Hyde Park, Berks county, who served three three-year terms as tax collector of Muhlenberg township, was born Dec. 5, 1842, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of John and Mary (Fisher) Bollman, and died there April 8, 1908.

Jacob Bollman, grandfather of Lewis, was a native of Berks county, and owned and operated a farm near Sinking Spring, in which locality he spent his life. He and his wife, whose name is not remembered, were the parents of these children: George m. Sarah Fisher; Susan m. Levi Hendel; Barbara m. Absalom Fisher; and John. In religious belief the family were Reformed. Politically Mr. Bollman was a Whig.

John Bollman inherited the farm formerly owned by his father, which is now known as the Reuben Gaul estate, and here he spent a few years, but on account of bad management was forced to give up his farm and engage in common laboring. He died in 1863, when fifty-four years of age, his wife surviving until her sixty-ninth year. Both were members of the Reformed Church, and the parents of these children: Sarah m. George Cordeman; Leonard, who died single, was a soldier in the Civil war, being a member of the 128th Reg., Durell's Battery; Catherine m. Benjamin Luft; Lewis; Mary m. Isaac Behm; Emma m. William D. Sand; and Samuel died young. Mr. Bollman was a Whig, but never was the holder of any public office.

Lewis Bollman was educated in the schools of Sinking Spring, which he attended winters, and in the summer months, from the age of eight years, he engaged at laboring for $1.50 per month until 1862, when he enlisted as a substitute for William Mahnader, in Co. E., 167th P. V. I., Durell's Battery, in which he continued to serve until the close of the war, having an honorable and gallant record. On his return from the war, he became the driver of a six-mule team for the Clymer Iron Company, with which firm he continued about two years, and then engaged with Leisz and Schrack, lumbermen, who were operating in the Blue Mountains. He remained with this concern for several years, and then found employment in the Philadelphia and Reading rail mill, in which he continued until Coffoth & Sailor took charge thereof, and then with these gentlemen until they suspended business. He then engaged in farming for himself for three years, but subsequently engaged at Wilhelm's Bolt and Nut Works, and continued with this company until it was closed in 1898. At this time Mr. Bollman was elected tax collector of Muhlenberg township, and he served his third three-year term in this office, while he was also roadmaster by appointment of the board of supervisors. Mr. Bollman was a Democrat in his political belief, being the only member of his family to vote with that party.

Fraternally Mr. Bollman was connected with Washington Camp No. 68 P. O. S. of A., and Nathan Hale Commandery of that order; and with Lodge No. 372, K. G. E. He was also a member of Durell's Battery Association. He was a member of Grace Alsace Reformed Church, in which he had been an elder.

Mr. Bollman married Rebecca Moyer, daughter of Jacob Moyer.

HORATIO K. SCHULTZ, the present owner of the old homestead in Hereford township, near Hereford, owns land which has been in the family name since 1746, on Oct. 4th of which year his collateral ancestor. Melchior Schultz, purchased it. Record of this transfer is found in Patent Book A, Vol. 13, page 124. In 1729 Casper Wistar, a noted land agent in his day, purchased from John, Thomas and Richard Penn a tract of 200 acres, which he sold to Henry Stauffer, who in turn sold it to Melchior Schultz. The land was a perfect rectangle, level and productive, and included the present Horatio K. Schultz farm, which has been in the family name since 1746; the farm of Jonas S. Kriebel, and the tract of Erwin N. Schultz. In 1749 Melchior Schultz (or Scholtz) bought a tract containing 120½ acres in the Manor of Ruscombe (Ruscombmanor township), in Berks county, Pa.; this was woodland. In 1783 Melchior and Maria Schultz sold three separate tracts to his nephew, Andrew Schultz, all located in Hereford township, and containing, respectively, 190, fifty-three and fourteen acres.

Andrew Schultz, the great-grandfather of Horatio K. Schultz, was born Jan. 29, 1753, son of Rev. Christopher Schultz, the great leader of the Schwenkfelders in this part of the country, who was a brother of the Melchior Schultz mentioned in the preceding paragraph. Andrew Schultz died Feb. 5, 1802, aged forty-nine years, six days. On Nov. 24, 1776, he married Charlotte Yeakel, daughter of Jeremiah Yeakel. She survived him many years, dying Feb. 11, 1825. Their children were Christopher (Rev.), Susanna, Regina, Esther, Maria, Christina and Henry.

Rev. Christopher Schultz, son of Andrew, born Oct. 12, 1777, died on his farm March 22, 1843, aged sixty-five years, five months, ten days. He is buried at Washington meeting-house. On May 29, 1804, he married Susanna Yeakel, daughter of Abraham Yeakel, and she died April 3, 1861, at the age of seventy-eight years. They had children: A son who died in infancy, Joseph, David, Sarah, Regina, Thomas, Lydia, Hannah, Leah and Rebecca. A grandson of the first Rev. Christopher Schultz, he lived on the fine farm in Hereford township now owned by his grandson, Horatio K. Schultz. He, too, like his famous namesake, was a minister of the Schwenkfelder Church, and continued in the active ministry until his death. He always drew large audiences, wherever he preached, whether in his own church or a neighboring pulpit, as he was frequently called upon to officiate elsewhere. His fine personal appearance, fluent speech, fervent and impressive piety, well-stored mind and high social qualities, tempered by a true Christian spirit and kindly nature, commanded the respect of all with whom he came into contact, and he was popular as well as esteemed.

Thomas Y. Schultz, son of Rev. Christopher, born Dec. 25, 1813, died April 13, 1873, aged fifty-nine years, three months, eighteen days, and is buried at the Schwenkfelder Church in Washington township. He was a farmer, owning the place which now belongs to his son Horatio in Hereford township, and followed agricultural pursuits all his life, prospering in his work. He built the large barn which now stands on the home place. He was married Nov. 21, 1850, to Hannah Kriebel, daughter of Jacob Kriebel, born April 6, 1823, and two children were born to them, Horatio K. and Thamar K. Mrs. Schultz now makes her home with her son, Horatio K., on the homestead. She is well preserved, and in possession of all her faculties. Mr. Schultz was a Schwenkfelder in religious faith.

Thamar K. Schultz, daughter of Thomas. Y. Schultz, born Feb. 17, 1858, is the wife of Howard W. Kriebel, of East Greenville, editor and proprietor of the Pennsylvania German, a valuable magazine, which champions the interests of the German settlers and their descendants.

Horatio K. Schultz was born Sept. 22, 1851, on the farm in Hereford township where he now resides. He received his education in the public schools of his district, was reared upon the farm, and worked for his parents until he reached his majority. In 1877 he began farming on the homestead on his own account, and there he has since remained, engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he has met with success. His farm comprises 123 acres, located three-quarters of a mile west of Hereford post-office, and on this property stands, besides the large barn previously mentioned as having been built by his father in 1854, a stone dwelling which was erected before the Revolutionary war, and rebuilt in 1822 by Christopher Schultz, who added a second story to the original structure, besides making an addition to the northern side. An interesting relic in Mr. Schultz's possession is a "grandfather" clock which Andrew Schultz's wife bequeathed in her will to her son, Rev. Christopher Schultz, from whom in turn it has descended through Thomas Y. Schultz to Horatio K. Schultz, along with the old property. Mr. Schultz's farm is finely stocked and well taken care of in every respect. He is a man esteemed for his worthy life and honorable character, highly regarded wherever he is known.

On Jan. 20, 1877, Mr. Schultz married Magdalena Schultz, daughter of Andrew and Magdalena (High) Schultz, and to this union were born five children: Ellenora, who is unmarried; Flora; Webster, of Mauch Chunk, Pa.; Homer; and Sadie, who married Milton Bieler, a farmer of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa. The mother of this family died April 6, 1889. On Sept. 3, 1898, Mr. Schultz married for his second wife Mrs. Ida (Fry) Fetterman, widow of Oscar K. Fetterman, of Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, and daughter of Readen and Mary (Miller) Fry, of that township. Two children have been born to this marriage, Ada and Catharine.

Mr. Schultz and his family cling to the faith of his forefathers, belonging to the Schwenkfelder Church, of which he has been deacon. He is a Republican in politics.

JACOB K. SPANG, a prominent retired citizen of Reading, was born in Oley township, Berks county, son of Jacob S. and Deborah (Kline) Spang, and a grandson of Frederick Spang, an important figure of the time of the iron boom in the early part of the eighteenth century.

Jacob S. Spang early in life took up the pursuits of his fathers, and for many years was engaged in the iron business. He also owned and operated much farming property throughout Berks county, and at one time conducted a mercantile establishment at Spangsville, a settlement named in his honor. He died in 1862 aged sixty-four years. His wife lived to the advanced age of eighty-one years, dying in the faith of the Lutheran Church, to which her husband had also belonged. He was a Whig, and at the time of the formation of the Republican party joined its ranks.

Jacob K. Spang received a common school education, and while still in his 'teens worked in his father's store and around the furnaces. In 1865 he went to Dauphin county and engaged in the manufacture of iron, later removing to Hamburg, Pa., in the same line of business, and after three years in the latter place came to Reading, becoming associated with Bushong & Co., being one of the promoters of the Keystone Furnaces, holding the responsible position of superintendent for fifteen years. He then left the firm and purchased the Maiden-creek furnace property, which he personally conducted for a number of years, after which, in 1894, he discontinued the manufacture of iron and lived retired for a few years. Mr. Spang still owns this property, a very valuable one, and has also several fine farming properties, which he rents. Mr. Spang has been a very active business man, and has done much to further the business and manufacturing interests of this section.

Mr. Spang was married in 1861 to Sarah Kauffman, daughter of Samuel Kauffman, one of the early iron manufacturers of this section. Four children have blessed this union: Fanny m. Charles Breneiser, a tobacco manufacturer; Mary; Samuel m. Miss Ella Rick, and is connected with the Colonial Trust Co.; and Alice, at home. Politically Mr. Spang is a Republican.

JACOB H. REESER, a prominent farmer in Bern township, where he has a well-improved and well-stocked farm of 135 acres, was born in that township, in August, 1841, on the old Reeser farm.

Philip Reeser, great-grandfather of Jacob H., was a farmer and prominent citizen in Bern township. He became very wealthy, and at his death left a large estate to be divided. His will is on record, and was made Aug. 23, 1786. His death occurred in 1789. To him and his wife Elizabeth were born the following children: Jacob; Philip Jr.; Anna Elizabeth, who married John Winter; Elizabeth, who married Christian Bossler; Daniel and John, who were bequested with bonds; Catherine; Mary; and William.

John Reeser, son of Philip and Elizabeth, was a successful farmer in Centre township, where he owned 100 acres of fertile land. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a member of the Reformed Church. His children, two sons and two daughters, were: Jacob, Catherine, Betsy and John (2).

John Reeser (2), son of John, lived the greater part of his life in Centre township, where he was born. As a young man he learned the shoemaker's trade, and worked at it some years, then taking up farming. He became the owner of 224 acres of land. In political faith he was a Democrat, and was frequently called upon to serve as a delegate to county conventions. He was a member of Belleman's Church (Reformed). He married Hannah Himmelberger, and they had twelve children, as follows: Elizabeth, John, Catharine and William, all deceased; Jacob H.; Mary, deceased; Sarah, who lives with her brother, Daniel H.; Hettie, deceased; Daniel H.; Caroline, who married James D. Weikel, a machinist at Reading; Susan, who married Jacob Kramer, a merchant at West Leesport; and Amelia, deceased. John Reeser (2), the father, died Jan. 9, 1869.

Jacob H. Keeser, son of John (2), was brought up to farming. When he was twenty-five years old he engaged in that calling on his own account near Leiss' bridge, and that place has since continued to be his home. He erected a good barn in 1885, and has otherwise improved the place, adding both to the value of the farm and to the comfort of his family. He has a good stock of farm implements, and his horses and cattle are kept in excellent condition. In politics Mr. Reeser is a Democrat, but he has never cared for public office.

In 1867 Mr. Reeser was married to Ellen Hartman, daughter of Daniel Hartman, and she died aged fifty-four years. Four children blessed this union: James of North Reading; Valeria, who married John Tobias, of Bern township; Mary Ellen, who married Ammon Hoffman, of Bern township; and Bessie, who keeps house for her father.

Daniel H. Reeser, son of John (2), and brother of Jacob H., was born Aug. 14, 1846. He was educated in the Kutztown Academy before it became a Normal school, and later in Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy at Reading. He taught school for some time, and has since then been in public life. In 1893 he was postmaster at West Leesport; in 1895-96 he was county, State and school tax collector; and Nov. 2, 1897, was elected recorder of the county, on the Democratic ticket. He is a man of high principles and is greatly respected.

R. A. FRASSO, notary public and proprietor of the First Italian Exchange Bank of Reading, was born in the Province of Benevento, Cusana Mutri, Italy, son of Pasquale Frasso, also a native of that country.

R. A. Frasso came to America March 22, 1883, landing at Castle Garden, N. Y. His first employment was on the West Shore Railroad with a construction gang at Syracuse, N. Y., and this line of work he followed for about three years, when he engaged in supplying contract labor for different corporations, principally the Broadhead Co., of Philadelphia, and also furnished labor for the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. He is one of the best known men in this line in Pennsylvania. He also furnishes supplies to Italian help, and is one of the best interpreters in this section. In 1901 he came to Reading and engaged in supplying help for one of the contractors on the Reading railroad, later opening an Exchange Bank and office, on Penn, between First and Second streets. He is agent for several steamship companies, representing some of the best of both this and foreign countries. Mr. Frasso was appointed notary public March 7, 1904, by Governor Pennypacker. He is well and favorably known in Reading and the adjoining country.

Mr. Frasso was married in 1891, to Miss Kate Bolich, a native of Schuylkill county, and five children have been born to this union: Frank, George, Sadie, Eddie and Mabel.

BARTO. The Bartos of Berks county are an old family of French Huguenot extraction. The French form of the name is Perdeau. Three of the name came to America in the early days, one John Barto locating in Berks county, Pa., in 1730, one Isaac Barto prior to 1750, and one Nicholas Barto in 1778. The Isaac Barto mentioned was a large taxable in Oley township in 1759, in which year he paid £14 tax. He was the great-great-grandfather of William Clarence Barto, who lives near Barto, in Washington township, engaged in the growing of tobacco.

Isaac Bartow (as he spelled the name), a grandson of the Isaac just referred to, was born in Oley township, Aug. 17, 1786. In 1813 he moved from that township to Hereford (now Washington) township, where he purchased land and settled down for the remainder of his life, dying June 27, 1865. He owned 150 acres of land, was a prosperous farmer, and highly respected as a man. In 1812 he married Elizabeth Feger, by whom he had two daughters, the mother and children all dying in April, 1838. On Nov. 24, 1843, Mr. Bartow married Magdalena Huber, and to this union was born one son, Abram H.

Abram H. Barto was born March 4, 1855. He began his education in the public schools, later attending Mount Pleasant Seminary and the Kutztown State Normal School, and in 1875 he took a scientific course in the Allentown Business College. He inherited his father's farm, which with the advent of the Colebrookdale railroad became very valuable. In 1868 the company surveyed its line from Pottstown, via Boyertown, to a terminus on and near the western border of the farm, where a fine depot was erected. The road was soon completed, and in 1870 building lots were surveyed on the farm, a number being sold and built upon. The name of the station was changed from Mount Pleasant to Barto, as it has since been known, and the post-office bears the same name. The place is now a thriving village, and much of its growth is due to Mr. Barto's enterprise. He conducted a store there for a number of years, and in his death, the place lost one of its best citizens. He was a church member and took a deep interest in church matters and the welfare of the Sunday-school.

Mr. Barto married a Miss Stauffer, and they became the parents of three children, one son and two daughters, and they make their home in Reading.

William Clarence Barto, only son of Abram H. Barto, was born at Schultzville, in Washington township, May 10, 1885. He received his early education in the public schools of the city of Reading, whither he removed with his mother when five years old, and also took a commercial course at the Kerst National Business College, graduating in 1902. For one year he was engaged in clerking in the grocery store of his step-father, in Reading, for two years he sold liquor and for another year he sold jewelry for Loftis Brothers, of Chicago. In the spring of 1907, he began working upon his farm, which is in Washington township, near Barto, and in the spring of 1908 he commenced the cultivation of tobacco, of which he now makes a specialty. He planted ten acres, thus reviving the culture of tobacco in the upper end of the Perkiomen valley after that industry had been abandoned in this section for a period of thirty-five years. Considerable tobacco was raised in the old days, and as much as $1.25 a pound was paid for the product, but when the price dropped until it reached 25 cents a pound the culture died out, and the art of growing the plant was almost forgotten. Mr. Barto, believing there is profit in the weed, is experimenting thoroughly with its cultivation. He has a fine place of 138 acres of clear farming land, with fifteen acres of woodland. In 1883 his father built a Swiss barn, 40 x 92 feet in dimensions, and also a good frame dwelling, upon the place. It is well improved in every respect and is a valuable piece of property.

On June 20, 1907, Mr. Barto married Miss Annie P. Schlegel, daughter of Edwin H. and Sallie A. (Miller) Schlegel, of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Barto are members of St. Stephen's Reformed Church of Reading.

A. M. KERSHNER, of Reading, who is engaged in the manufacture of ice cream and water ices at Nos. 15, 17, 19, 21, 23 North Third street, was born May 3, 1856, in Bernville, Pa., son of William B. and Henrietta (Faust) Kershner.

As a boy Mr. Kershner started to work as office-boy for Dr. Brobst of Bernville, receiving as compensation his board and schooling. He remained with the Doctor for three years, and then started to work as a farm laborer, and for some time was engaged at various employments, including teaching school in Centre township for one session. Mr. Kershner then apprenticed himself to the shoemaker's trade, which he followed successfully for a period of nineteen years, and in 1892 was appointed to the position of deputy under Sheriff Fahrenbach. He located in Reading, and served in the position throughout the administration, giving universal satisfaction. He continued in that capacity under Sheriff Schmuck, then taking a position in his brother's hotel, remaining with him until the latter's retirement, when he took a like position with Al. Payne at the Windsor Hotel. He was then appointed deputy sheriff during Frank Brobst's administration, serving in that office for eighteen months, when he was appointed clerk in the prothonotary's office under Daniel Schmuck. For one year after leaving this position, Mr. Kershner lived practically retired, but on July 28, 1902, he purchased the stock and fixtures of the Sherman Ice Cream Co., 19-23 North Third street. Since taking possession of the business Mr. Kershner has increased the capacity of the plant sixty per cent. He has built a brick store room and factory, and has a seating capacity of 250 people, this, however, being inadequate during busy seasons. He caters to Reading's best families, making a specialty of weddings, festivals, etc., and the Kershner trademark is well known as a guarantee of pure goods. Mr. Kershner himself is affable and courteous, genial and obliging, and none have ever left his place dissatisfied. He hires a corps of twenty assistants, and three delivery teams are used by him in the business, orders being promptly attended to. Mr. Kershner deserves the success that has come to him. Starting out in life entirely upon his own resources, he has worked his way to the front, and may now be considered one of Reading's substantial citizens.

Mr. Kershner was married in 1875 to Rebecca Wenrich, and they have three children: Estelle L., Anna H. and John W., all at home. In religious belief the family are Lutherans. Politically he votes for the man, not the party. Mr. Kershner is fraternally identified with Bernville Lodge, No. 122, I. O. O. F., P. O. S. of A., Camp No. 113, of Bernville, Wyomissing Council of the Royal Arcanum, Foresters of America, Reading, and Lexington Commandery, P. O. S. of A.

ROTHENBERGER. The branch of the Rothenberger family to which Daniel and Lewis Rothenberger, brothers, of Hereford township, Berks county, belong is traced back to one John Nicholas Rothenberger, who emigrated from the German Fatherland to America about 1741. He located in that part of Northampton county now included in Lehigh county, and not much later bought land there. In 1734 the proprietors of the Province of Pennsylvania sold a tract of 150 acres, located in Upper Milford township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, to John Teeter, who on April 21, 1742, sold it to John Nicholas "Rothenburger" (also "Rodenburger"). On April 30, 1776, he and his wife, Maria Catharine, sold this tract to their son, Jacob, and as the name is signed Rothenberger in the deed setting forth this transfer that spelling is regarded as correct.

The property mentioned, through various changes in ownership, remained in the Rothenberger family until 1872. On May 13, 1830, Jacob Rothenberger, whose wife was then deceased, sold it to his son George for $1,800 lawful money. After the death of George Rothenberger it was old to his son Daniel, in 1858, and he sold it to William Rothenberger, who owned it until his death, in 1872, when it was disposed of at public sale to Daniel Yeakel, from whom it passed to Albert Snyder, who now owns and lives upon the place. It is in the vicinity of Sigmund, Lehigh county, near where Sigmund Furnace was located.

Jacob Rothenberger had four sons: George, who is mentioned later; John, who had a son Charles; Peter, who was the father of Ephraim and Daniel; and Jacob, who had Daniel, Ephraim and Willoughby. Three of these sons lived in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, and belonged to the old Zionsville Church. Jacob located in Indiana in 1858, moving out in the big covered Conestoga wagons.

George Rothenberger, son of Jacob, was born at the homestead at Sigmund, and died in 1857-58, when about seventy years old. He is buried at Old Zionsville. He was a farmer by occupation. His wife, Sallie (Mensch), died in 1873, the mother of eleven children, namely: Rachel, Dinah, Lavina, Susanna, Daniel, Reuben, David, George, Christian, William and Samuel.

Daniel Rothenberger, son of George, was born May 8, 1808, at the old homestead in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, and died May 10, 1865, at the place in Hereford township, Berks county, where his sons, Daniel and Lewis now live. He is buried at Zionsville, where he was a member of the Reformed Church. He followed farming, owning a tract of forty acres, upon which he built the present dwelling in 1860, and in winter engaged in cigar making. Being a progressive man, he was interested in education, and served as school trustee under the old pay system. In politics he was a Democrat.

Mr. Rothenberger's first marriage was to Sallie Marsteller, who was born about 1814, daughter of Peter Marsteller, of Hereford township, and died in 1847. She was the mother of six children, three sons and three daughters, viz.: Joel, Daniel, Lewis, Catharine, Sallie and Amanda, the two last named dying in infancy. Mr. Rothenberger's second marriage was to Lydia Stahler, who died in 1888. To them were born two children, both of whom died when young.

Joel Rothenberger is a native of Hereford township, where all of Daniel Rothenberger's children were born. He began housekeeping there, but has long lived in Clinton county, Ind., where he followed farming until his retirement. He is now (1909) in his seventy-third year. He has been twice married, and by his first union, with Maria Krommis, had four children, William, Daniel, Sarah and Flora. By his second wife, Lydia Mohler, he had two, Lydia and Perry.

DANIEL ROTHENBERGER, son of Daniel, was born July 12, 1838, in Hereford township, and there attended Traub school, No. 7, receiving all his education in the public schools. He was reared to farming, but for twelve years he and his brother Lewis engaged in lime-burning, doing a large business. They had their kilns at Sigmund, conducting the plant now operated by Daniel Yeakel, and burning considerable lime for building purposes as well as for farmers. In one year they burned over 28,000 bushels, and they employed as many as ten men, and kept two teams busy all the time. In 1866 the brothers took their father's homestead, where they have ever since resided, their families occupying the same house. Both tried life in the West for a short time, Daniel Rothenberger going to Indiana in the fall of 1860 with his uncle, George Rothenberger, and his brother Joel, who had gone out previously. He remained for two years, and in 1863 went out for another year.

On April 4, 1868, Mr. Rothenberger married Rebecca Helfrich, and they have had five children: Emma C., Sallie A. (who married George R. Gregory, of Reading), Charles W., Daniel H. and Cassilia R. Mr. and Mrs. Rothenberger are Reformed members of Zion's Church. He is identified with the Democratic party in politics, and is well known throughout the township, where he has served five years as treasurer and seven years as school director.

Mrs. Rothenberger is a daughter of Daniel and Margaret (Buck) Helfrich, of Weisenburg township, Lehigh Co., Pa., and a granddaughter of Rev. Johannes Heinrich Helfrich, who began his labors as pastor of Ziegel's Church, in Lehigh county, in 1778. His death occurring in 1810, his son, Rev. Johannes Helfrich, was elected to succeed him, and served this and other congregations for a period of thirty-five years. In 1852 Rev. William A. Helfrich, son of Rev. Johannes, was elected pastor, serving until 1879, when his son, Rev. Nevin W. Helfrich, took his place. Thus for long over a century four generations of the one family have filled the pastorate of this church.

LEWIS ROTHENBERGER was born Sept. 23, 1844, on his father's homestead in Hereford township. He attended school No. 7, Traub's, in that township. He was in Clinton county, Indiana, for one year, working on the farm, and also helped to clear twenty acres of land, and as previously stated, he was engaged in the lime-burning business with his brother at Sigmund for a number of years. He has been out to Indiana seven times on visits, but like the brother with whose interests his own have been identified for so many years he has been content to settle down at the old home of his father. He, too, is active in the local circles of the Democratic party, and served four years as township treasurer.

On March 28, 1873, Mr. Rothenberger married Maria Reinhart, daughter of Reuben and Angelina (Reinhart) Reinhart, of Upper Milford township, Lehigh Co., Pa., and they have had one son, Calvin, born May 3, 1874, who died in his twelfth year.

MILTON L. SHIREY, grocer at Reading, was born in this city in 1861, the only son of David Y. and Emma L. (Leedom) Shirey, and a grandson of Samuel Shirey, who was a native of Caernarvon township, Berks county. He was a stone mason by trade and also manufactured hearthstones. He carried on business in Reading for a number of years.

David Y. Shirey, father of Milton L., was born in Caernarvon township, in the old homestead there, and after completing his schooling he engaged with his father in the manufacture of hearthstones. Later he accompanied the family to Reading and found employment with Conrad Frame, who kept a store at "The Locks." Mr. Shirey remained with Mr. Frame for several years and then went into business for himself at the same place, with John Newkirk. They carried on a general store and did a big trade supplying the surrounding country and the canal boatmen, traffic then being heavy on the canal. Later he came to Reading and engaged in business at Third and Franklin streets, where he remained a few years, and then moved on Penn street above Sixth, into the S. Young building. In partnership with Henry Shearer, Mr. Shirey did a large business in garden produce of all kinds. Later he engaged in a livery business, but subsequently returned to the grocery line and for a number of years was established at No. 1129 Chestnut street, on the corner of Wunder. Some twelve years before his death, which occurred in February, 1901, he retired from active business life. He was a man who was respected and esteemed and was an active member of the orders of K. of P. and the Sr. O. U. A. M.

David Y. Shirey married Emma L. Leedom, daughter of John and Louisa Ann Leedom. She still survives and resides with her son, M. L. Shirey.

Milton L. Shirey completed the grammar school course at Reading and then assisted his father in his store until he was eighteen years of age, when he went with Joseph S. Esterly, in the produce business. He continued with him for one year and then returned home and continued with his father until he was twenty-three years old. His next business connection was with the Adams Express Co., with which he remained a year, and then was with Howard L. Goodman, in the bakery business for the next ten years.

He took over his father's store, making many improvements and introducing modern methods and also enlarging the capacity for doing business. His store room is 20x60 feet and he has a warehouse in the rear, 14x40 feet. He possessed business enterprise and may justly be considered a representative man in the city's commerce.

Mr. Shirey married Katie Goodman, daughter of Daniel and Amanda Goodman, and they have three children, viz.: Harold A., Thaddeus I., and Minerva L. He is a member of St. Peter's M. E. Church. He belongs to the I. O. O. F. and Red Men.

DAVID B. CLEMMER, now living retired at Bally, was born in Washington township, Berks county, July 5, 1839. The name Clemmer is also spelled Klemmer. The family originally were Mennonites, but in the branch herein described, George Clemmer, grandfather of David B., married a member of the Roman Catholic faith, and later was himself confirmed therein.

George Clemmer lived between Bally and Barto, in a small stone house near James Melchior's mill. He was a laborer. He is buried at the Church of the Most Blessed Sacrament, of which he had become a member. His death occurred before the Civil war. He married into the Kuhns family, and his wife survived him only a short time. They had six children: John and Jacob, living at Reading; Joseph, mentioned below; Samuel, of Norristown, who became a Methodist; a daughter that married David Greth, of Reading; and Eliza, who married Henry Kuhns, a mason at Reading.

Joseph Clemmer, son of George, was born in Washington township, April 26, 1800, and he was killed by a cave-in in the ore mine at Barto, March 21, 1862. He is buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Bally. His home was one and one-half miles north of Bally. He married Anna Bauer, daughter of Peter and Rosina Bauer. She was born Sept. 18, 1800, and died Dec. 24, 1876, in Union township, where she was living with her daughter, Isabella. These children were born to Joseph Clemmer and wife: Isaac, born 1822, died 1852; John, born 1825, died 1863; Nathan; Joseph; David B.; Jonas; Mary, who married Samuel Koch, of Pricetown, Pa.; Catharine, born 1827, died 1852; Sarah, who married Henry Richards, and lives at Philadelphia; Isabella, who married Joseph Bauer. All the children are now deceased except Joseph, David B., Isabella and Jonas.

David B. Clemmer learned the stone mason's trade when he was seventeen, and this he followed nine years. After his marriage he worked in the ore mines at Siesholtzville and Red Lion, and for fifteen years at Barto, rising to the position of foreman. In 1888 he engaged in the butchering business, and carried this on for twelve years at Barto, residing in that town altogether twenty-three years. In 1894 he came to Bally, and that town has since been his home. He conducted a meat market and dry goods store for two years, but since the spring of 1908 he has been retired from active work. He helped to build the towns of Barto and Bally, and gave employment to a number of men. In his younger days he was very active, and being a man of progressive ideas was a source of great usefulness in his community. In politics he is a Democrat, and for two years he was assessor, and he has served as delegate to a number of county conventions. He and his family all belong to the Most Blessed Sacrament Roman Catholic Church at Bally.

On Dec. 18, 1863, Mr. Clemmer was married to Mary Stengel, daughter of Sophierus Stengel, of Bally. Thirteen children have been born of this union, all in Washington township, as follows: Rosa, who married George Melchior, had children—Charles, Willie, Bertha, Mary, Tillie, John, Paul and Bennett—and died in 1903; Clara, who married Frank Melchior, a farmer of Washington township; Emma, who died in the fifteenth year of her age; William, who died aged twenty-three; Matilda, born 1870, and died 1878; Mary Ann, born 1872, and died 1878; Agnes, born 1873, who married Peter Fichter, and died 1898; Katie, who died in infancy; Dora, born 1876, and died 1878; Franklin, born 1877, and died 1878; Charles, who died in infancy; Mary, who married Leo Eck, of Bally; and John, a tailor at Bally. Four of the children died within one month of diphtheria.

LEVI MALTZBERGER, for many years one of the most prominent citizens of Reading, Pa., both in business and public life, whose death occurred in 1884, was born in 1819 in the city of Reading, son of John and Phoebe (Stone) Maltzberger. John Maltzberger was the proprietor of a tobacco store, and he and his wife had three children: John; Levi; and Esther m. Albert Auman of Pottsville, they having these children—Levi of Reading, Oliver of Reading, and Luther, who died in March, 1906. Both John Maltzberger and his wife were members of the Reformed Church.

Early in life Levi Maltzberger learned the stone mason trade, and worked also for his father in his tobacco establishment. When a young man he worked for the Griscom Brothers, general contractors of Reading, keeping this firm's books, and this experience, no doubt, helped him greatly in after life, when he became extensively engaged in contracting and building. Mr. Maltzberger built the first Homeopathic hospital in the city of Reading, the E. P. Boas residence and many of the fine residential properties of Reading, also being an expert at valuing real estate, doing much work in this line for the Bushongs. He was self-made in every sense of the word and was known as a man of integrity and honesty.

Mr. Maltzberger was married to Lydia Harbold, daughter of Adam and Elizabeth (Saylor) Harbold, early settlers of the vicinity of Hampden Reservoir, known then as Helltown. The children born to Levi Maltzberger and his wife were as follows: John H., cashier of the Keystone National Bank, m. Catherine Keeler, and they have two children: B. Elizabeth and Catherine; Esther, deceased, m. (first) Martin Wagner and had one son, Martin S., deceased, and m. (second) Jacob S. Wingert; Clayton, deceased; Emma E., of Reading, and Victoria, deceased.

Levi Maltzberger was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., the Chapter, R. A. M., and DeMolay Commandery, of Reading. In political matters he was a Republican and under Diller Luther served in the U. S. Revenue service in Reading. Mr. Maltzberger was also a member of the council from the Seventh ward and was a member of the school board.

DAVID G. TREICHLER, miller at Treichlersville, in Hereford township, Berks county, was born on the homestead, where he still resides, Feb. 18, 1854. He is a son of David M. Treichler and grandson of Samuel Treichler, Sr.

There is a tradition in the Treichler family that the immigrant ancestor was Jacob Trycler, and that he came from the city of Treichlerdorf, Holland, landing at Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1727. It is also believed that his wife came from Amsterdam, Holland. The Treichlers originally settled in New Jersey.

Samuel Treichler, Sr., grandfather of David G., is supposed to have been the first of the family to come to Berks county, where he settled in Hereford township. It is said he came from Kintnersville, Bucks county, on the Delaware river, on which stream the Treichlers were engaged as rafters. He followed mercantile pursuits and also engaged in the manufacture of linseed oil, and was the founder of Treichlersville, Berks county. Born July 14, 1776, he died March 29, 1865, aged eighty-eight years, eight months, fifteen days. He married Maria Magdalena Mumbauer, daughter of Philip and Barbara Mumbauer, born May 18, 1781, died Dec. 28, 1851, aged seventy years, seven months, ten days. They had these children: John, Jacob, David, Samuel (born Oct. 15, 1806, died Jan. 29, 1860), Joseph, Mollie (married Samuel Wehr), Sally Anne, and two who died in infancy. The will of Samuel Treichler, Sr., is on record in Will Book 11, page 380. The executors were his sons, David M. and Joseph. The following children are mentioned in the will: Jacob, John, David M., Samuel, Sarah, Mary and Joseph.

Anna Treichler (1763-1792) and Elizabeth Treichler (1768-1851), sisters of Samuel Treichler, Sr., were the second and third wives, respectively, of Jacob Gery, an early resident of Hereford township, who was married three times.

David M. Treichler, born May 6, 1809, died of Bright's disease May 24, 1878. He was a farmer and miller at Treichlersville, and successful in business. He was a Republican in politics, a member of the Reformed Church, and is buried at the New Goshenhoppen Church at East Greenville, Montgomery county. Mr. Treichler was married in May, 1840, to Luzetta Gaumer, daughter of John Adam Gaumer, born Nov. 20, 1814, died Dec. 5, 1893, and they had these children: Sarah Ann, who married William Butz; Mary, unmarried; James G., a resident of Kutztown; Emma, who married Jacob Bittenbender; Lucinda, who married John Smith, and died in 1888; David G.; Caroline, who married J. M. Gainley; and Samuel, who married Amelia Lorentz.

David G. Treichler attended the public schools of his native township, later studying at Mount Pleasant Seminary and at the Trappe, at the institution which in time became Ursinus College. He was reared to farming and milling, learning the trade from his father, and in 1878 engaged in the milling business on his own account, succeeding his father. Here he has since continued to carry on operations. The present mill, which is a stone structure, was built in 1854 by David M. Treichler, and before that time there was a stone mill at this site, built by Samuel Treichler, Sr. The place has been a mill property for many years, and was formerly a part of the Thomas Maberry tract, though it has been in the Treichler family since 1800. Mr. Treichler makes a specialty of the manufacture of rye flour, which he ships to Allentown, Bethlehem and Catasauqua. He also has a good market for his buckwheat flour and cornmeal, but his mill is particularly famous for its rye flour, which is a popular brand in this section. There is also a sawmill on the property, which was conducted by his father and grandfather before his time, but it has been inactive since 1888. The tract of land upon which the mill is situated comprises sixty-three acres, and the present stone house thereon was built by Samuel Treichler, Sr., in 1811, and the present barn was put up by David G. Treichler. The one which preceded it was burned about 1881, with all the contents, including cattle, horses and poultry, entailing a loss of $1,500. The fire started at night, so there was little chance to save anything.

Mr. Treichler is a progressive and prosperous business man, a good representative of a family which has always been noted for energy and enterprise. He applies sound principles to the conduct of all his affairs, and he is big-hearted and broad-gauged in all the relations of life, having a disposition which has never cost him any patronage and has gained him many friends.

In November, of 1879, Mr. Treichler was married to Maria Schantz, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Roeder) Schantz, of Lehigh county, Pa., and they have had children as follows: David W., Harry S., Sallie, Frederick, Carrie, Newton, Jeremiah and Minnie. Mr. Treichler and his family are Reformed members of the New Goshenhoppen Church. He is a Republican in politics, and socially holds membership in East Greenville Castle, No. 298, K. G. E., and in Old Zionsville Lodge, No. 1077, I. O. O. F.

SAMUEL K. HOWERTER, of Reading, extensively engaged in the cement business, was born in Kutztown, Jan. 8, 1869, son of Samuel Howerter, who for a number of years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Long Swamp, and later in the manufacture of woolen goods, and is now living retired in Lehigh county. He had these children: James; Nathan; Alice; Lizzie; Samuel K.; Edwin, a dentist of Reading; William, a physician of Monroe county; Katie; George; Cora; and Emanuel, who was a physician and died aged forty years.

Samuel K. Howerter attended the public schools of his native locality, and subsequently entered Stoner's Business College, after leaving which he taught school for three years in Long Swamp and Maxatawny townships. Mr. Howerter then took a business course, after which he went to Philadelphia, being there employed as a clerk for three years. After being employed in different shops for a time, Mr. Howerter came to Reading, being employed by the P. & R. R. Co., at the shops for one year, and then with the Acme Bicycle works for a period of six years. In 1900, with Adam Hartman, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume, Mr. Howerter engaged in his present business, the firm being known as the Reading Cement & Paving Co. The partners have been very successful, their work being of the highest grade, and their contracts always properly filled.

Mr. Howerter was married in 1892 to Miss Cora Krause, daughter of Jacob Krause, a prominent farmer of Albany township, Berks county, and to this union have been born: Arthur and Sherman. Mr. and Mrs. Howerter live in their fine residence at No. 917 Locust street, and are members of Alsace Lutheran Church. He is very popular fraternally, and is connected with the Eagles, the Red Men, and the Maennerchor.

AARON S. ESCHBACH, a venerable citizen of Barto, Berks county, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born April 13, 1832, in Washington township, where the family has been located for several generations.

There is a tradition that three Eschbach brothers came to America from Switzerland before the middle of the eighteenth century, and it is said that they first located in Berks county, Pa., but that two of them later settled in other parts, one supposedly in the vicinity of Millersburg, Lancaster county, where Eschbachs are still living. Where the other settled is unknown.

Two Andrew Eshenbachs came to America (according to the Pennsylvania Archives), one in 1740, the other in 1744. The former, a native of Germany, came in the ship "Friendship," landing at Philadelphia, Sept. 23, 1740, and made a settlement in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, where it is known an Andrew Eshenbach was located in 1752. In 1759 he was an assessed taxable there, paying £9 tax that year. However, he is said to have left these parts.

In 1737 one Peter Eshbach (Espacher) and his son Christophel (also Christopher) came to this country on the ship "St. Andrew." In 1752 Christopher Eshbach (Ashbach) was assessed as a single man in Hereford township. The ship "St. Andrew" in 1749 brought two Christian Eschbachers (Eschbach) to America, undoubtedly father and son. In the graveyard at the Hereford (Bally) Mennonite meeting-house is a tombstone bearing the following inscription: "Christian Eschbach, born 1737, died April 27, 1809, aged 71 years, 11 months." This Christian Eschbach was presumably the son of Christian Eschbach (er), who emigrated in 1749. Abraham Ehst, born in 1816, at present a resident of Barto, Berks county, Pa., and who has a most remarkable memory, gives the children of Christian Eschbach (1737-1809) as follows: John, Christian, Heinrich, Abraham, Peter, Martin and Elizabeth. We have the following account of this family.

Johannes (John) Eschbach, born Oct. 24, 1764, died Feb. 28, 1826, and is buried at the Hereford Mennonite meeting-house. He owned the large farm at Barto which is now the property of William C. Barto, of Reading, and lived and died there. He married Elizabeth Latschaw, born in May, 1765, died in September, 1844, and they had children as follows: Abraham, Peter, Christian, Henry, John, Barbara (married John Bliem) and Catharine (married Jacob Fox).

Christian Eschbach, born June 3, 1763, in what is now Washington township, died Oct. 31, 1838. He was a carpenter and cabinet maker, and besides building many houses in his district followed undertaking. His home was at Barto, in Colebrookdale township. He married Froene Moyer, born July 30, 1777, died Sept. 13, 1838, and both were Mennonites and are buried at the Hereford (Bally) meeting-house, where they belonged. They had the following children: William; Henry; Jesse, born Nov. 24, 1810, who died Aug. 28, 1838; Nancy, who married Jacob Yoder; and Betzy, who died unmarried. Of these children, William was the father of Aaron S. Eschbach, whose name introduces this sketch.

Heinrich Eschbach, born Jan. 4, 1771, made his will in 1732, and died March 11, 1841. He lived and conducted a sawmill which stood where the county cement bridge is now located, at Barto. His wife, Maria Anna (Moyer), born May 4, 1765, died July 21, 1851. Their children were: Elijah, Mrs. Koch, Mrs. Haas and Elizabeth, the last named dying unmarried. Another account gives the children as, Catharine, Rebecca, Elizabeth, Molly, Barbara and Elijah. The son Elijah and Andrew Koch, a son-in-law, were named as executors of the will.

Abraham Eschbach, the next mentioned in the family of Christian, owned the farm near Hoffmans, in the upper part of Montgomery county, where Yerkers clover mill now stands. He was twice married, first to Mary Bechtel, by whom he had these four sons, Abraham, David, Joseph and John. By his second wife, who was from Montgomery county, he had three sons.

Peter Eschbach, son of Christian, lived above Grim's Mill, in Colebrookdale township, and followed farming, owning his 100-acre farm, which is now the property of Elam Moyer. He was a thrifty farmer and useful citizen, serving as supervisor, tax collector and in other local offices. He was a Republican in politics. He is buried at the Hill Church, of which he was a member. Peter Eschbach was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Bechtel, by whom he had four children: Christian, who married Anna Ritter; Isaac, who married Susan Moyer; Susan, who married John Roland and lived in Hereford township; and William, who was much younger than his brothers and sister. To the second marriage was born one son, John, who lived back of Clayton, Berks county.

Martin Eschbach, son of Christian, was married and had one daughter, Jane, who became the wife of Daniel Bobb, from near Barto. In later years Martin made his home with his brother, Christian.

Elizabeth Eschbach, daughter of Christian, is buried at the Hereford Mennonite meeting-house. The following inscription is on her tombstone:

There is another tombstone inscription, which probably refers to a daughter of the elder Christian or the wife of the son, Christian, and which reads as follows: "Catharine Eschbach, died July 17, 1787, aged 57 years."

William Eschbach, son of Christian (1766-1838), was born in Washington township March 2, 1805, and died May 2, 1878, aged seventy-three years, two months. He is buried in the Bally Mennonite graveyard. He lived at Barto and engaged in weaving, making all kinds of homespun articles, such as table-cloths, bed-spreads, and other household linens. He married Esther Stauffer, born Sept. 13, 1808, daughter of Jacob Stauffer, died May 7, 1870, aged sixty-one years, seven months, twenty-four days. Mr. and Mrs. Eschbach had a married life of forty-four years. They had a family of four children: (1) Edward, born Nov. 26, 1826, died Aug. 5, 1883, aged fifty-six years, eight months, nine days. He lived near Pleasant Run, Montgomery county, and followed the tailor's trade. He had two sons, Addison and William. (2) Eliza married a Mr. Stahler. (3) Reuben was for a time a shoemaker at Barto, later in life owning and operating a large farm at Barto, where he died. He married Mary Gehman, and they had six children, Prof. Dilworth (of Vineland, N. J.), Allen (of St. Louis, Mo.), Annie (Mrs. Longacker), Lydia, Daniel (of Lancaster, Pa.), and Frank (of California). (4) Aaron S. is mentioned below.

Aaron S. Eschbach learned tailoring in early manhood and followed that trade for many years, in fact throughout his active life. He is now living retired in Barto, where he owns a nice home, and although advanced in years is well preserved and able to enjoy life. Mr. Eschbach served as a Union soldier during the Civil war, on Oct. 27, 1862, becoming a member of Company G, 167th Pennsylvania Regiment, with which he served nine and a half months, receiving his honorable discharge at Reading Aug. 12, 1863. He served as sergeant of his company, and his certificate states that he was five feet, seven inches tall, had dark complexion and dark eyes. He has a new $1 greenback note which he received in his pay upon his discharge from the service and which he prizes highly. He has a number of other valuable relics, of various kinds. Mr. Eschbach receives a substantial pension.

True to the faith of his forefathers, Mr. Eschbach is a Mennonite, attending the meeting-house near his home. He is unmarried.

On the Colebrookdale railroad, running from Pottstown to Barto, is Eschbach Station, named for George Eschbach, now deceased, and there is a post-office of the same name at that point. The town of Eshbach has about twenty-five houses.

R. E. LEFEVRE, M. D., of Reading, was born in Montgomery county, Pa., in 1876, son of William H. LeFevre, a prominent cigar manufacturer of Montgomery county.

The Doctor spent his early school days in his native county, and in 1894 entered Ursinus College, from which he was graduated two years later, when he entered the Medical College of Philadelphia, being graduated in 1900. He at once located at Boyertown, attaining a large practice, and winning the confidence and patronage of a large number of people. In November, 1905, the Doctor located in Reading, where he is now enjoying a large and lucrative practice. He is located at No. 138 South Eighth street, where he has commodious and well-appointed offices.

Dr. LeFevre married Miss Jennie C. Dengler, daughter of William and Mary Dengler, of Birdsboro, Berks county, and they are members of the Lutheran Church. Dr. LeFevre is fraternally connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Red Men, the Odd Fellows, and the Knights of Friendship. He is a member of the Reading Medical Society, the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Association and the American Medical Association. He is a charter member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M.

ALBERT M. SWOYER, retired farmer, living at Sinking Spring, was born in Maxatawny township, Berks county, Sept. 14, 1845, and was brought up on a farm. He attended the township school until he was thirteen years old, when he was hired out on a farm in the neighborhood of his home, where he continued four years. He then secured employment with Eckert & Co. (who were then operating the Henry Clay Furnace at Reading and iron ore mines in the vicinity of Topton), and served as engineer for three years, when he was promoted to be manager of a mine, and he filled this position successfully for thirteen years. The business of mining was then suspended on account of the prevailing panic, and being thrown out of employment, he directed his attention to farming. Renting a 100-acre farm of Daniel Huyett, in Lower Heidelberg township, near Wernersville, he carried on its cultivation for eight years. During this time he served as a school director of the township. He then removed to Ruscombmanor township, near Pricetown, where he had become the owner of a large farm comprising 250 acres, and this farm he cultivated for nearly thirty years, until April, 1908, when he rented the place and moved to Sinking Spring, where he is now living in retirement. While farming in Ruscombmanor township he also served as a school director for six years, filling the offices of president and treasurer of the school board for part of the time.

In 1873, Mr. Swoyer married Caroline Zacharias, daughter of Daniel Zacharias, of Muhlenberg township, and Sarah Huyett, his wife (who was a daughter of John Huyett, of Spring township, and Sarah Hartman, his wife). By this union there were three children: Ambrose died when six years old; Charles, educated at the Keystone State Normal School and now occupied as a clerk in the recorder's office in Berks county, married Mary Leinbach; Nora, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, is now engaged as a teacher in the public schools.

In politics, Mr. Swoyer has been a Democrat from the time he began to vote, and he has frequently attended the county conventions as a delegate. He and his family are connected with the Lutheran Church at Sinking Spring.

Mr. Swoyer's father was Peter Schweyer, farmer of Maxatawny township, and Elizabeth Dumn, his wife, was a daughter of Michael Dumn, of Richmond township.

LEVI KELLER, who for a number of years was a resident and well-known business man of Reading, Pa., was an honored veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, in 1827, son of Samuel and Sarah Keller, who emigrated to America in 1844. Landing at New York City, they remained there but a short time, emigrating to Easton, Pa. While in Germany, Mr. Keller was engaged as a drover, but never engaged in business after coming to America. He died at the age of eighty-two years, his children being: Otto, Eli, Levi, Mrs. Jennie Goldsmith (of Brooklyn, N. Y.), Sarah (the wife of Jacob Summerman, of Philadelphia) and Rosa (who died young).

Levi Keller came to America with his parents when twenty-seven years of age, and with his brother, Otto, engaged in the butchering business at Easton, where he remained until the breaking out of the Civil war. He then enlisted in Company B, 14th P. V. I., Aug. 4, 1861, for a term of three years, under Capt. Henry Rockfellow. He served his entire time, being mustered out of service in August, 1864. Mr. Keller participated in some of the hardest fought battles of the war, and was wounded in the upper part of his leg, which wound no doubt hastened his death. He was a brave soldier, and with the exception of the time spent in the hospital, was with his regiment in every march, skirmish and battle. On his return from the war, Mr. Keller came to Reading and engaged in the dry goods business on Tenth street, below Franklin, continuing there some years. He retired from active life about fifteen years prior to his death, which occurred May 26, 1897. Mr. Keller was a member of Post No. 16, G. A. R., and later joined the Union Veteran Legion. He was a member of the Reformed Church.

In 1870, Mr. Keller married Miss Amelia Benjamin, daughter of Samuel Benjamin, a drover of Germany, who died in his native country. Mrs. Keller came to America when nineteen years of age, and after living in New York for a time, came to Reading, where she met Mr. Keller. She is now living at No. 1039 Walnut street with her two oldest sons, who are unmarried. Mr. and Mrs. Keller had these children: Samuel and Emanuel M., are engaged in the manufacture of cigars at Fourth and Franklin streets, Reading; Joseph W., also a cigar manufacturer of Reading, at No. 1043 Greenwich street, m. Sallie Bahn.

GRIESEMER. The ship "Thistle," which in 1730 arrived at Philadelphia, had on board three "Gresamere" brothers, Casper, John Leonard and Peter. The name Griesemer has been variously spelled. In Oley township the village of Griesemersville perpetuates the name. Casper Griesemer located in Oley township, where his descendants reside to the present time. He died in 1794, the head of a large family. His sons, John and Peter, were the executors of his last will and testament, which is recorded in Will Book A, p. 293. Peter Griesemer located in the Goshenhoppen Valley, Montgomery county. There Valentine Griesemer had also located for a few years, but before the organization of the county in 1752 he had settled in Hereford township, Berks county. He became a prominent factor in that township, and was one of the three largest land owners there, the township having been erected in 1753. Thomas Maberry, an Englishman, Peter Fetherolf, a Hollander, and Valentine Griesemer, a French Huguenot from Alsace, owned nearly the entire eastern part of Hereford, the Griesemer land comprising about 600 acres, and including the present farm of Joseph M. Griesemer (who is of the fifth generation of the family in this country), the Benjamin Grassley farm, the Samuel S. Schultz farm, the tract owned by the Mary Urffer estate, part of the Henry Kriebel farm, the James Roberts tract, the William H. Sallade farm, the F. W. Huber farm, all of Treichlersville, and the Ambrose H. Huber farm, the Albert Fry and Elmer Huber tracts, besides parts of other farms along the eastern end of the township. Thomas Maberry owned the land about Mensch's Mill, the David G. Treichler farm and the Daniel N. Schultz farm, besides considerable other lands. Peter Fetherolf owned the land to the east and southeast of Siesholtzville, and he is buried in a private burial ground on the late Samuel Bittenbender's farm. Valentine Griesemer erected the first set of buildings on the tract now owned by Joseph M. Griesemer. In 1878, Gabriel G. Griesemer tore down the old log house that Valentine Griesemer built long before the establishment of Berks county. Valentine Griesemer is buried at New Goshenhoppen Church, but the inscription on his sandstone tombstone is no longer legible. He was a member of the German Reformed congregation. Among his children were Leonard and Gertrude (m. Jacob Gery).

(II) Leonard Griesemer, son of Valentine, was born in 1733, and died Jan. 5, 1821, and is buried at New Goshenhoppen Church. He was a farmer. He also established a pottery on the farm now owned by his great-grandson, Joseph M. Griesemer, about fifty yards southeast of the present stone residence. The pottery was conducted by Gabriel Griesemer as late as 1865, when it was destroyed by fire. Leonard Griesemer was public-spirited and enterprising. In that early day he was greatly interested in the intellectual development of the community and was officially connected with the establishment of the primitive pay schools that marked the beginning of the present great school system. During the war of the Revolution he did hauling for the Continental army, and suffered the loss of a valuable team. On the farm now owned by Joseph M. Griesemer, he built a barn in 1811, and added to the stone house, but the barn has since been remodeled. He married Elizabeth Faber, born Oct. 14, 1739, died Jan. 14, 1814. They had children: John Jacob, George, Abraham, Isaac, and Catharine (m. Abraham Mertz).

(III) Jacob Griesemer, son of Leonard, obtained the lands now in the farms of Benjamin Grassley, Samuel S. Schultz, and the Mary Urffer estate, besides thirty-five acres of woodland located in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county. He was a farmer and also conducted a pottery which was located on the Benjamin Grassley farm, about fifty yards northwest of the present residence. The pottery represented an important industry many years ago, and even as late as 1850 Jacob Frederick operated it, but in 1865 or 1866 it was torn down, though fragments of the foundation are still to be found below the surface of the ground. On Nov. 25, 1809, Jacob Griesemer purchased of his parents two tracts of land in Hereford township, containing altogether 145 acres. On Sept. 10, 1810, Jacob Griesemer and his wife, Sarah, sold this land to John Gery, of Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county. On Sept. 13, 1816, John Gery sold it to Samuel Gery, of Hereford township; and on April 5, 1834, Samuel Gery and wife, Susanna, sold it to David Schultz, of Upper Hanover township, for $10,500. In 1873 title passed to the present owner, Samuel S. Schultz, but the tract known as the homestead was accepted by Manoah S. Schultz, who in 1905 sold same to Benjamin Grassley. Samuel S. Schultz received forty-two acres of this same tract.

(III) Abraham Griesemer, son of Leonard, became the father of six children: John, located in Ohio; Julia; Mrs. Grim; Mrs. Wendling of Pennsburg; Mrs. Miller; and Abraham, born in 1821, and still living, located in Allentown, where he was the first dentist. (He married and had two children: Elizabeth, wife of Thomas A. Strasser, a specialist in diseases of the eye, ear and nose, and an inventor of note, at Reading; and Dr. Asher, who died in 1885, the father of Mark, Asher, Paul and Robert.)

(III) Isaac Griesemer, son of Leonard, was born on the homestead in 1777 and died in 1872, and is buried at the Reformed Church in Old Zionsville. He was a farmer and owned the old original homestead, consisting of ninety acres. He was well built physically and possessed of great strength. He was very fond of attending battalion meetings, and could well take care of himself and his friends. In politics a Democrat, he served as township supervisor. He married Catharine Gross, of Maxatawny township, born May 23, 1773, died Oct. 2, 1839. He married (second) Catharine Jacoby. His children, all by the first marriage, were: Joseph, Solomon, Isaac, Peter, Gabriel and Hettie (died unmarried).

(IV) Gabriel G. Griesemer, son of Isaac, was born Dec. 27, 1813, on his father's farm, and died in Hereford in 1895, and both he and his wife were buried at Goshenhoppen Church. He was a farmer, and operated the pottery, making roofing tile. He built the present large substantial stone residence in 1878, containing twelve large rooms with a wide hallway, and he also remodeled the barn. He and his family were Reformed members of New Goshenhoppen Church. On Sept. 2, 1841, he married Regina Meschter, daughter of George and Susanna (Heimbach) Meschter, and their children were: Elizabeth m. Henry Kriebel, deceased; Susanna is unmarried and lives with her brother, Joseph M.; Sarah, deceased, m. Henry Schuler; Matthias, died in infancy; Owen is a school teacher at Walnutport, Pa.; Mary, deceased, m. Levi Moll, also deceased; Percival, lives at Goshen, Ind.; and Joseph M.

(V) Joseph M. Griesemer, son of Gabriel G., was born at the family home March 17, 1857, and was educated in the township schools and later in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He early became thoroughly versed in farming duties, and this vocation he has continued to follow to the present time. He owns the old homestead farm, which is one of the best in the township, the buildings and improvements being first-class in every respect. Mr. Griesemer is one of the influential Democrats in his district, and he has frequently served as delegate to county conventions under the old system. In 1903 he was a delegate to the State Convention at Harrisburg, and he is active in the political affairs of the county, many a successful candidate owing his success to Mr. Griesemer's influence. In the spring of 1906 he was elected one of the supervisors of his township under the new road law, and this office he continues to hold. He belongs to the Reformed congregation at Goshenhoppen Church. He has been committeeman since 1899.

ST JOHN'S EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH, Hamburg, Berks County, Pa. Since June, 1901, the Hamburg charge has consisted of three congregations, namely, St. John's, Hamburg; Zion's, Perry township, and St. Paul's, Windsor township.

In 1773, a period when Hamburg was a wilderness and people worshiped in private houses, a Martin Kercher, or Kearcher, donated a piece of land to be used by the Lutheran and Reformed people as a place of worship. The first structure was built of logs and was dedicated in 1790 the lower floor being used as a school room and the upper as a place of worship. About a score of years later a larger building was erected, with a weather vane in the shape of a fish, and its pulpit fashioned like a tulip, which served until 1857, when a more spacious one took its place, and was burned to the ground in 1898. The present church was erected at once and was ready for use early in 1899.

St. John's has a Bible society of three hundred members, a Luther Guild, a Luther League, a society formed by the children of the congregation and called The Children's Temple, and a Lutheran Aid Society. The organization last mentioned has done noble work, among its activities being the purchasing of a splendid pipe organ, contributing rich altar cloths and collecting more than $4,000 for the liquidation of the indebtedness on church and parsonage.

Following are the ministers who have preached for the Lutheran congregations:

Peter Mishler—not ordained.
Rev. Daniel Lehman, 1778-1803.
Daniel and John Knoske, 1803-1816.
Rev. F. Engel, 1816-1823.
Rev. Carl Strein, 1823-1828.
Rev. Ludwig Walz, 1828-1832.
Rev. F. A. M. Keller, supply.
Rev. G. F. I. Iaeger, 1832-1860.
Rev. J. H. Eberman, 1860-1861.
Rev. S. S. Kline, 1861-1867.
Rev. T. T. Iaeger, 1868-1880 (German).
Rev. Benjamin Zweizig, 1868-1880 (English).
Rev. C. K. Drumheller, 1880-1883.
Rev. O. D. Miller, 1884-1896.
Rev. Z. H. Gable—supply for a few months.
Rev. H. C. Kline, 1897— [Supplied by Rev. H. C. Kline.]

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, WINDSOR TOWNSHIP. This church is on the State Road in Windsor township, about two miles northeast of Hamburg, Berks county. It is a plain stone structure, and said to have been for more than 75 years an exclusive Lutheran church. The first church was built of logs after 1750, and was dedicated November 6, 1756, by Rev. Daniel Schumacher, as the "Lebanon Evangelical Lutheran Church, at the Blue Mts." The membership was very small, and the services were at long intervals. It is said that the Indians destroyed this church and drove off all its members.

On Sept. 25, 1767, a request was issued to collect funds for erecting a new church near the Blue Mts. On Oct. 9, 1767, permission was granted to collect £500. This, added to their own funds, enabled them to build a second church, which was also built of logs and was dedicated on the 15th Sunday after Trinity, 1769. This church endured 63 years.

In 1832 the third church was built, which was also the first Union church. The corner-stone was laid April 29, 1832. The building is a plain stone structure. Rev. G. F. I. Iaeger and Rev. A. L. Herman were the officiating pastors at this time. On October 20, 1832, the church was dedicated. In 1868 the church was remodeled, the interior was entirely changed with new pulpit, new altar and new pews, and re-dedicated on September 27; and in 1892 the interior was repainted and refurnished at a cost of $500.

In the fall of 1872 Rev. B. F. Weiss was elected pastor of the Reformed congregation and served until 1898. In 1900 Rev. J. S. Bartholomew was elected as pastor of the Reformed congregation. June 16, 1870, Rev. F. K. Huntzinger became Lutheran pastor and served until 1875, when Rev. B. S. Smoll was elected and served until 1880; then Rev. C. K. Drumheller became pastor and served until June, 1883. Rev. O. D. Miller was elected June 1, 1884, and served until 1896; was then supplied for a short time by Rev. Gable. Rev. H. C. Kline, the present pastor, began his official ministrations June 23, 1897. [Supplied by Rev. H. C. Kline.]

ZION'S CHURCH, PERRY TOWNSHIP, formerly of Windsor township, stands on the hillside surrounded by the cemetery, about one-half mile from Windsor Castle and about three miles from Shoemakersville. In 1760 a movement to erect a house of worship in this immediate vicinity was begun, and in 1761 or 1762 the first log church was built.

The Lutherans of this community were originally connected with the Moselem church, which was and still is an exclusive Lutheran church. But because of certain misunderstandings they withdrew from the Moselem congregation, joined hands with the Reformed people of this community and organized a union church. This step was taken when Rev. Bernhard Michael Hausihl, Lutheran pastor, was pastor at Reading and served Moselem and other churches, 1759-1763.

It is said that Mr. Conrad Kerschner, a man well educated for the time, went to Philadelphia and obtained from the Colonial authorities a grant of land originally donated by William Penn for church and school purposes in this vicinity. The tract originally comprised 40 acres. The land was secured and the site selected opposite the organist's home to build the first church, which was built of logs. It is impossible to give the dates of the corner-stone laying or consecration of the first church, or of the second, or of the third. It is indeed a pity that there are no records of these events. However, it appears that the first church was soon found to be too small, and a larger stone structure was built about the year 1774.

The congregation then decided to build the third church of brick, and for some reason or other selected this elevated site in preference to the one below. For this purpose additional land was purchased. The brick were burnt on the church's own land. The dimensions of the church were not given. The exact date of the corner-stone laying is not given, but it is supposed in May, 1804, therefore the present church has stood for more than a century, while the organ is seventy-five years old, and John Starr, one of the organists, served for thirty-six years.

The Reformed pastors beginning about 1661 are as follows:

Philip Jacob Michael.
Henry Herzel.
Rev. Wack.
Rev. Henry Dieffenbach.
Rev. Carl G. Herman.
Abraham Schaeffer (not ordained).
Rev. Abraham Berkey.
Rev. Carl G. Herman.

FRANKLIN K. SCHWEITZER, of Spring township, Berks county, who makes a specialty of fruit growing and trucking, is a member of the Schweitzer family which has been so long represented in Brecknock township, and which is fully mentioned elsewhere in this work. Mr. Schweitzer was born in Brecknock township, Sept. 14, 1875, and was brought up on his father's farm there, from boyhood being familiar with agricultural work. When twenty-four years old he learned the hatter's trade at Hendel's hat factory in Hendleton, and later he learned the wool hat business at Spatz's hat factory, in Mohnton. He followed this line of work for four years, and since the spring of 1904 has been engaged at farming, having then purchased the C. H. Schwartz farm, near Textile, in Spring township. This place comprises thirty-five acres of valuable land, in fine condition, and Mr. Schweitzer has given special attention to fruit growing and the raising of truck. He also keeps excellent live stock, and he disposes of all his products in the Reading market, having stands Nos. 21 and 22 on West Buttonwood street, at the Market House. Mr. Schweitzer keeps his place up well, having good buildings, a substantial barn which was erected in 1898, and a neat lawn around the house, his surroundings indicating thrift and industry.

On Oct. 16, 1899, Mr. Schweitzer was married to Miss Cassie Trostle, daughter of Levi and Lizzie (Brendel) Trostle, and to this union have been born two children, Lillie May and Violet Elizabeth, the latter of whom died when five months, nine days old.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN LEINBACH, of Reading, who holds the responsible position of superintendent of the fulling department in the Leinbach mills of that city, is a native of Reading, born June 20, 1862, son of Albert and Sarah (Nagle) Leinbach.

Albert Leinbach, who is now living retired at his home at No. 415 North Fifth street, spent all of his active life as a woolen manufacturer. Although not actively engaged in the duties at the mills, he is still a member of the firm and takes a great interest in its success. He married Sarah Nagle, and to this union there were born four children, as follows: William, of Atlantic City, N. J.; Benjamin Franklin; Sallie m. John Morrison, deceased; and Hattie m. Warren Thomas.

Benjamin Franklin Leinbach received his education in the public schools of Reading, and in 1876, when still a lad, entered the Leinbach mills, with which he has been associated to the present time. He has worked his way up through every department of the business, learning each detail, and now holds the position of superintendent of the fulling department, much of the success of this great enterprise being due to his good business judgment and untiring efforts. Mr. Leinbach was married Sept. 14, 1893, to Alice Hartman, daughter of Benjamin Hartman, of Reading. No children have been born to this union. Mr. Leinbach is fraternally connected with the Royal Arcanum. In politics he is a Republican. He and his wife attend Trinity Lutheran Church.

CHARLES Y. FRONHEISER, a farmer in Washington township, Berks county, is a descendant of Georg Fronheiser, a farmer, who is given in the federal census list of 1790 as the head of a large family. His early home was in that part of Colebrookdale township now embraced in Washington township, and he died in 1820, when very old. His will is on record in Book C, page 186, and the witnesses were Isaac Kummerer and William Stapleton. The executor was his son "Georg" (pronounced Jurick). His wife Elizabeth bore him eleven children, viz.: Georg; Johannes; Daniel; Joseph; Jacob (1799-1854) who married Rebecca Derr (1804-1866); Samuel; Henry; Abraham; Molly, who married Jacob Herb; Catharine, who married Conrad Kister; and Elizabeth, who never married.

Georg Fronheiser, previously mentioned as the executor of his father's will, was born Jan. 20, 1783, in Pike township, Berks county, on the farm now owned by Elmer Fronheiser, and died May 3, 1863, aged eighty years, three months, thirteen days. He was twice married, first to a Miss Herb, by whom he had a family of seven children: George; Samuel; Daniel; Jacob; Catharine married Samuel Watter; Betzy married George Dierolf; Polly married (first) Abraham Dotterer and (second) Gehret Bechtel. For his second wife Georg Fronheiser married Betzy (Elizabeth) Derr, born in 1781, died in 1846, and with whom he had a married life of nearly forty-four years. By her he had three sons, as follows: Abraham, Henry, and William, all of whom are deceased.

Abraham Fronheiser, son of Georg, born March 25, 1819, died Feb. 8, 1900, aged eighty years, ten months, thirteen days. He was a farmer, owning the place of 140 acres in Pike township where he died, and which is now owned by his grandson, Elmer Fronheiser, though it is now included in Washington township. His land line bounded the Washington township line, and his grandson, Charles Y. Fronheiser, owned land in Washington township which in his grandfather's day belonged to Pike. Abraham Fronheiser put up the present set of buildings upon Elmer Fronheiser's farm. He was a prominent man in his day, and very influential in the affairs of his locality. He was a stanch Jeffersonian Democrat, and served many years as a school director in Pike township. He married Elizabeth Gries, an Englishwoman, daughter of Jacob Gries, a blacksmith from above Reading. Mrs. Fronheiser died in August, 1873, at the age of fifty-five years, the mother of six children, as follows: Sarah, who married Henry Gilbert, of Bechtelsville; Mahlon; Jefferson; Elizabeth, deceased, who married Jacob Zwoyer; Catharine, who married Mahlon Clauser, of Griesemersville; and Sybilla, who married Thomas Rohrbach, of Ohio.

Jefferson Fronheiser, son of Abraham, was born in 1851, in Pike township, where he is at present employed, working also in the surrounding townships. His home is at Bechtelsville. For some years he worked at Hyde Park, in Muhlenberg township. Mr. Fronheiser married Mary Ann Yoder, daughter of George S. and Catharine Yoder, of Oley township, and they had one child, Charles Y., whose name introduces this sketch. Mrs. Fronheiser died in September, 1869. She is buried at Oley Churches.

Charles Y. Fronheiser was born Dec. 7, 1868, on the Abraham Fronheiser homestead in Pike township, where he was reared, making his home with his grandfather during his boyhood and youth. He was trained to farming there, and also worked on neighboring farms, and from 1888 to 1891 was engaged in driving the mail from Shanesville to Reading. He then became proprietor of the "Keystone House," at Bechtelsville, which he conducted for three years, and in the spring of 1894 he began farming on one of the old Dotterer homesteads, where he has ever since lived. This farm consists of seventy-one acres, and was originally owned jointly by him and his uncle, Mahlon Fronheiser, Charles Fronheiser purchasing his uncle's interest in the property in the winter of 1893. The place was formerly owned by Joseph Dotterer, and before him by D. Dotterer, a pioneer, and the old stone house, built during Revolutionary days, is one of the landmarks of this district. The present barn, however, is modern, having been built by Mr. Fronheiser and his uncle in 1891. Many improvements have been made by Mr. Fronheiser during his residence on the place, which is very productive and yields him a good income. He is a progressive farmer and also engages in dairying, keeping from twelve to fifteen milch cows.

Mr. Fronheiser has served his fellow-citizens in various capacities, and he has been constable of Pike township ever since 1896. He was fire warden of Berks county for three months, and on different occasions has acted as tipstaff in the court-house corridor at Reading. In politics he is identified with the Democratic party, in which he has been a good worker. He is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, belonging to Council No. 1019, of Eshbach.

On March 7, 1890, Mr. Fronheiser was married to Rosa Weller, daughter of William and Hettie (Fronheiser) Weller, of Pike township, later of Boyertown, and granddaughter of Gideon Weller and his wife, who was a Miss Hartline. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fronheiser, namely: Verna W.,

Sallie W., Herbert W., Leroy M. and Elmer C. Mr. and Mrs. Fronheiser are both members of the Hill Church, Mr. Fronheiser belonging to the Lutheran congregation and Mrs. Fronheiser to the Reformed congregation.

ST. LUKE'S EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH, Rev. F. K. Huntzinger, Pastor. One of the largest Lutheran congregations in Pennsylvania is St. Luke's, in the city of Reading. It is a child of Trinity. Its Sunday-school was organized in 1862 by Messrs. Frederick Fox and Solomon L. Moser, both of whom were deeply interested in Sunday-school work. It was organized in the public school house at Tenth and Green streets, and became the nucleus of the congregation. Seeing the importance of having a church in that section of the city, a lot was purchased by Trinity Lutheran congregation on the east side of North Ninth street near Green, 60 x 110 feet, on which was erected a frame building 30 x 50 feet, known as "The Chapel of the Reformation." The corner stone of this chapel was laid on July 26, 1868, and the building was dedicated on the 31st of October following. The cost of the ground was $600, and of the building $3,000. The Sunday-school at Tenth and Green streets, which had been conducted as a mission of Trinity Church, was now transferred to the chapel. Rev. J. Fry, D. D., pastor of Trinity Lutheran Congregation, assisted by other Lutheran pastors of the city, conducted services in the new building.

In May, 1869, the Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania held its annual convention in Reading, and among the young men who were ordained to the ministry during its sessions was Rev. F. K. Huntzinger, and he was selected to take charge of the new field. He therefore preached his first sermon there as pastor on the 6th of June, 1869. His labors proving satisfactory, he was duly installed in October of that year, one year after the church had been dedicated. The attendance at the services was small for some months—often not more than ten to fifteen persons were present. That section of the city had just been laid out, and streets were being opened. When the first services were held, there were but few houses in the immediate vicinity; in fact the neighborhood was of a suburban character. The section, however, commenced to improve rapidly about the year 1870, and as fast as new houses were erected many of their occupants sought the nearest church, and the attendance at the services increased correspondingly. On Jan. 12, 1871, a meeting was called for the organization of a congregation, at which Rev. Dr. Fry, of Trinity, presided. Thirty-eight persons signed the constitution of the new parish, and identified themselves with it. The name chosen was St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Reading, Pa. The first class of twenty-five catechumens was confirmed April 21 (Good-Friday), 1871.

St. Luke's now began to thrive. Trinity, the mother church, gave it encouragement and aid, and on Jan. 10, 1879, a conveyance of the property was made by Trinity congregation to St. Luke's church for a nominal consideration. During the ensuing seven years the new congregation continued to grow, and before the close of 1885 the necessity of providing a more commodious house of worship was plainly evident. Accordingly, in 1886 the present roomy and substantial edifice was erected. The basement is 50x110 feet, while the main auditorium on the first floor is 50 x 94 feet, and is supplied with wide galleries. The seating capacity of the church is 1,400, but there have been occasions when many more persons have been crowded into the building. The corner-stone of the new church was laid June 13, 1886, and the basement was regularly opened for services on the 10th of October of that year. During the four months that intervened from the laying of the corner-stone services were held, by permission of the Reading school board, in the Boys' high school building at the southeast corner of Eighth and Washington streets, and the Sunday-school occupied the two public school houses at Tenth and Green streets. The church was dedicated Feb. 13, 1887.

The growth of St. Luke's church has been phenomenal. The additions by confirmation having averaged 116 each year for the past twenty years. The largest class confirmed in any year was 183, in 1902. The present membership is fully 1,700, and the Sunday-school numbers between 1,000 and 1,200. Services are held in both English and German. Since 1907 the morning services are conducted in English on alternate Sundays. All the evening services are conducted in English. In 1893 the large pipe organ was placed into the church at a cost of $2,700. The quarto-centennial of the congregation was celebrated in 1894, as well as of the pastor's pastorate, and in June, 1909, the pastor celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his connection with the congregation. Truly he has witnessed its development from a very humble beginning into one of the most influential in the city.

EDWARD L. ANTHONY, miller, of Forge Dale, Washington township, Berks county, was born Jan. 7, 1832, at the place where he now lives, son of Jacob Anthony. His grandfather lived in Lehigh county, Pa., probably in Weisenburg township, where his son Jacob was born. Among his children, besides Jacob, was a daughter Betzy, who married a Mr. Hottenstein, and they lived in the vicinity of Moselem, in Berks county.

Jacob Anthony was born in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, in 1792, and died in April, 1875. He was reared upon the farm, but began to learn the milling business in boyhood, and on coming to Forge Dale, in 1831, he bought the mill which has since been known as the Anthony mill. It was formerly the Steltz mill property. Jacob Anthony conducted this mill successfully until his death, and the opinion of his neighbors as to his character is summed up in the name by which he was best known—"Honest Jacob." He was active in religious affairs as a Reformed member of Huff's Church, where he is buried. He was twice married, and by his first union had two children, one son and one daughter. The son, Charles, lived in Montgomery county, near Hoover's Church, where he is buried. Mr. Anthony's second wife was Maggie or Molly Leiby, born in 1798, in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, died in 1863, and they had four children: Fietta married Benjamin Fry; Hannah, born in 1824, died in 1904, unmarried; Sarah L., born May 6, 1829, is unmarried and lives in Forge Dale; Edward L. is mentioned below.

Edward L. Anthony received his early education at Forge Dale, in the pay schools conducted during his boyhood, and also attended the free school for a few winters. He learned milling early, assisting his father, and he has followed that business all his life, being now the proprietor of the Anthony mill, which he bought upon his father's death. On Oct. 27, 1862, Mr. Anthony became a member of Company G, 167th Pennsylvania Regiment, and served nine and a half months, being mustered out at Reading Aug. 12, 1863. After his return home he farmed for his father as well as working in the mill.

The Anthony mill is one of the landmarks of the district. One of the large millstones bears the date 1793, and it is believed the mill was built before that time. Mr. Anthony is one of the respected residents of his district, where he has become widely known in his long connection with the mill business.

In 1863 Mr. Anthony married Anna Dotterer, daughter of Matthias and Kate (Herb) Dotterer, and five children have been born to them: Jacob A. M., now of Boyertown; Mantana, unmarried, who assists her parents at home; Sapora, married to Harry Spaydt, of Pottstown; Edward C., of Allentown; and Malara M., unmarried. This family belong to the Reformed congregation of Huff's Church, where Mr. Anthony served a number of years as elder.

ABRAHAM H. YOUSE, of Oley township, Berks Co., Pa., is a native of this township, where he was born July 16, 1860, a son of Levi and Emma (Haas)

Youse, and grandson of John and Esther (Weiser) Youse.

(I) John Youse, the originator of the family in Berks county, located in Rockland township before 1800, and died there in 1823, the year in which his will was probated. This will was made in 1820 and is on record in will book C, page 276. The executor of his estate was his eldest son, Adam. The children mentioned in the will are: Adam, Jacob, John, Catherine and Maria.

(II) John Youse, grandfather of Abraham, and son of John, was a native of Rockland township, where he lived, working as a laborer. The grandmother of Abraham Youse was born May 4, 1788, and died July 20, 1852, aged sixty-four years, four months and sixteen days. She was a daughter of Christian and Magdalena (Lobach) Weiser, the former born in 1741 and died in 1807, and the latter born in 1760 and died in 1812. Esther Weiser and her parents are buried on private ground on Seth De Turk's farm in Oley township.

(III) Levi Youse, father of Abraham, was a tailor by trade and followed that calling at Friedensburg for many years. He was born Sept. 24, 1819, and died May 6, 1898, aged seventy-eight years, seven months and twelve days. He is buried at Friedensburg. His wife was Emma Haas, a daughter of John Haas, and she was born April 2, 1822, and died Oct. 5, 1887, aged sixty-five years, six months and three days. These two had children as follows: Naomi, born in 1843, died in 1853; Augustus is of Friedensburg; Harriet married James Seyler; Esther, born in 1850, died in 1851; Mahlon, born in 1852, died in 1853; Emma married William Remack; Levi, of Friedensburg, died in 1906, aged forty-nine years; Abraham; Mary married John Gross; and Edward, of Reading, lives at 832 North 11th street.

(IV) Abraham H. Youse was reared in Oley township, and secured his education in the common schools and Oley academy. He learned the carriagesmith trade, completing it when he was twenty-two years of age. He followed this calling twelve years, and then for one year clerked in a grocery store. His next work was huckstering produce, but after two years he began to learn butchering, and followed it with success for twelve years, building up a large business that necessitated his keeping two wagons delivering. In August, 1908, he resumed the business of butcher, which he is now conducting. At present Mr. Youse resides in his pleasant home on the Main street of Friedensburg, which he built in 1898. In addition to other interests, he owns stock in the First National Bank of Oley. He is a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Reading, and has been since 1886. He is also a member of Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E., and the Order of Red Men, both of Oley, Pa. He and his family are members of the United Evangelical church of Oley, of which he is a trustee, and was assistant exhorter for several years.

On Jan. 24, 1888, Mr. Youse was married to Hannah Deysher, a daughter of David G. and Malinda (Weidner) Deysher, and granddaughter of Johanes Deysher of Oley township. David G. Deysher was born July 25, 1831, and died May 10, 1902, aged seventy years, nine months and fifteen days. His wife was a daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca Weidner, and she was born Sept. 29, 1836, and died Sept. 20, 1872, aged thirty-six years less nine days.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Youse were: Luella, who has taken a commercial course; Ivy; Tynes and Margaret. Mr. Youse is very much interested in giving his children good educations. He is active in church work and is a conscientious, Christian gentleman and one who stands very high in the esteem of his fellow citizens.

HARVEY S. HEISTAND. One of the oldest families in Pennsylvania and certainly one of the most prominent in the region of Berks county is that of Heistand. The first on record to come to America was Jacob Heistand, who emigrated in 1727. He was followed in 1731 by Johan Heistand, who was then nineteen years old. In 1752 came another Jacob Heistand, and in 1754, one Heinrich Heistand landed, and as late as 1770 came Johannes Heistand. The family are all Mennonites, and are numerous in the southeastern counties of the State. Tradition says that Jacob Heistand was the ancestor of the Berks county family, and the records of Montgomery county show that Heistands lived there as early as 1741, in which case it would seem that Jacob, who landed in 1727, was the ancestor of the family.

Jacob Heistand, great-grandfather of Harvey S., was born near Goshenhoppen, in Montgomery county. His brothers and sisters were: Christian (lived at Goshenhoppen), Maricha and Susanna were all three unmarried and lived on the original Heistand homestead; and Abraham settled in Upper Milford, Lehigh county, with his brother Jacob, having a farm of sixty acres which he cultivated in connection with his trade of weaver (he m. a Borneman, and had children, Abraham, Polly, Rebecca, Anna and Catharine). Jacob Heistand located in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, in his young manhood. He bought a large farm of 140 acres, erected a barn before 1800, part of which is still standing. Later he purchased an adjoining farm of 111 acres. On his original tract he built a distillery which he operated many years, making both apple-jack and rye-whiskey. He was very prosperous, and at his death left a large estate, including a third farm near Peters Church. In religion he was a Mennonite, and belonged to New Zion Church, and there he and a number of his descendants are buried. He died at the age of eighty-four. His children were: (1) Nancy m. Jacob Bortz. (2) Elizabeth m. Jacob Gehman. (3) A daughter who m. John Musselman. (4) John is mentioned below. (5) David, born in 1813, obtained the 140-acre farm, and engaged in its cultivation until his death in 1881. He was a Mennonite. He married Katie Clemmer, daughter of George Clemmer, who died in 1866, the mother of Maria, William, Charles, a daughter (deceased in infancy), David C., Elizabeth, Susan, Samuel, Nathaniel C. and Jacob. Of these children, Nathaniel C., born Dec. 9, 1857, began farming in 1882, and in 1903 retired and moved to Chapel; in 1881 he m. Hannah B. Kratz, daughter of Daniel Kratz, and they have children—Hannah, Horace K., Katie, Sallie, Lizzie, and Geneva and Jennie (twins, the latter an invalid). All are Mennonites.

John Heistand, son of Jacob, was born in Upper Milford, Lehigh county, and he died aged forty-three years, and is buried at New Zionsville. He was a life long farmer, living on one of the old homesteads, containing 110 acres of good land. The log house on this tract was built long ago, and was torn down about 1856, when the present stone house was built, by Mrs. Elizabeth (Bechtel) Heistand, widow of John and daughter of Jacob Bechtel. John Heistand passed all his life on this farm. Like all his people he was a Mennonite. To him and his wife were born: Anna; Jacob; John died unmarried; Jonas succeeded his father on the home farm; and Levi lives at Allentown.

Jacob Heistand, son of John, and now a venerable resident of Chapel, was born in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, Nov. 17, 1835. He attended the old pay school, and his teacher's wages were from 2½ to 3 cents per day for each pupil. He was trained to farming, and this he followed until his retirement in the spring of 1906. He began farming in 1873 on the farm in Hereford township, now tenanted by his son. This at the time he purchased it, in 1872, contained some fifty acres, but he later purchased twenty-five acres more. This was an old Deysher homestead, the last of that family to own it being Joel Deysher, son of Jacob, son of Daniel, who in 1790 was the head of the family in that township, and who is buried on the farm in a private burying ground located on the line of the Jacob Heistand and Benjamin M. Grassley farms. This graveyard is now abandoned, and since 1880 has been plowed. About twenty-four persons are buried there. Jacob Heistand built the barn in 1879, and he also built all the other buildings except the house. He and his family all attended the New Zion's Mennonite Church, of which he was trustee for three years. In 1870 Jacob Heistand married Emma Stahl, daughter of Nathan and Bevvy (Albrecht) Stahl, and their children were: Harvey S.; Henry, of Lower Milford township, Lehigh county; Calvin, who died in infancy; Allen, of Hereford township; and Elmer, at home with his parents. In 1906 Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Heistand purchased a home at Chapel, where they are now living retired.

Harvey S. Heistand, son of Jacob, was born in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, May 26, 1870. He attended the common school in Hereford township, Berks county, to which place his parents moved in 1873. He was reared to farming pursuits, and in the spring of 1892 began farming in Hereford township on his father-in-law's farm, and this he cultivated for fourteen years. In the spring of 1906 he came to his father's farm, and this has since been his home. He has eighty acres under good cultivation, and he keeps four horses and twenty-one head of cattle. In politics Mr. Heistand is a Republican, and in religion is a member of the New Zion's Mennonite Church, of which he has served as a deacon. On Jan. 16, 1892, he married Agnes A. Heil, daughter of Samuel D. Heil, and they have one daughter, Verna M.

On the farm whereon Mr. Heistand is now living was an old silk mill, which was abandoned about 1855. Dr. Joel Y. Shelly was president of the Company. The building was then used as a barn, but was torn down in 1897 and replaced by the present more modern structure. The old building was of frame, and stood about sixty yards southeast of the new barn.

THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, READING, PA. Baptist interests in the present County of Berks had one of their earliest beginnings at the time of the Tulpehocken land surveys made for the proprietors by young Rees Thomas about the year 1722. Some time later a number of Welsh Baptists, among them Rees Thomas, settled on these lands and on Aug. 19, 1738, formed themselves into the Tulpehocken Baptist Church, with twenty-one constituent members.

German Baptists or Dunkards had entered Oley township in 1719.

There probably was an attempt made at an early date to form a Baptist Church in Reading, but of this there is only indefinite tradition. One of the several meeting houses of the Tulpehocken Church was situated near the western bank of the Schuylkill river, opposite the town of Reading.

The Tulpehocken Church after an existence of sixty years became so reduced in membership that in the year 1800 it ceased to exist, and a part of its property was sold. The proceeds of the sale were retained for a number of years in hope that the work on that side of the river might be revived, but after long waiting the money and the effort were transferred to the town across the river, and on Dec. 20, 1828, the First Baptist Church of Reading was formed with six constituent members, who were: William James, Adam Johnston, John Faulkner, Ann S. Oliver, Sarah Faulkner and Mary A. Lockhart. This church has maintained a continuous and successful existence since its organization; its present membership is seven hundred and seventy three.

The pastors of the Church have been: George Higgins, 1829 to 1830; Enoch M. Barker, April 1, 1835, to about July 14, 1838; Thomas T. Kutchin, Dec. 1, 1838, to about Aug. 1, 1839; Enos M. Philips, June 10, 1840, to April 3, 1841; Samuel Davison, Feb. 12, 1842, to Feb. 1, 1844; Charles R. Hendrickson, March 1, 1844, to Sept. 1, 1844; Emerson Andrews, May 24, 1845, to May 1, 1846; Joseph Hammitt, May 2, 1846, to May 1, 1849; Enoch M. Barker, May 26, 1849, to March 24, 1850; Isaac Bevan, July 1, 1850, to Dec. 31, 1857; George Frear, June 16, 1858, to Jan. 31, 1872; Alpheus H. Sembower, June 1, 1872, to Aug. 31, 1884; Charles M. Deitz, Jan. 1, 1885, to April 1, 1889; Joseph S. Bromley, Jan. 1, 1890, to Dec. 31, 1905; and James A. Maxwell, April 11, 1906, ——— .

There have been gone out from this Church, the Berean Baptist Church, July 17, 1879; and the Memorial Baptist Church, Oct. 6, 1908. The Church also conducts a mission at Millmont. The first meeting house of the Church was erected in 1829, at the southeast corner of Front and Cherry streets. The second meeting house was erected in 1836, on Chestnut street above Fourth street. The third meeting house was erected in 1845, on Chestnut street above Fourth street; this building is still standing. The fourth meeting house was erected in 1893-95 at the southwest corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets. This is the building at present occupied by the Church. The parsonage of the Church is at No. 221 South Fifth street. [ANDREW SHAABER, Church Historian.]

FRANK BABB LONG, of Reading, Pa., where he was born Dec. 16, 1867, is a son of Henry R. and Mary A. (Babb) Long.

Mathias Long, grandfather of Frank B., was born in Douglass township, Montgomery Co., Pa., a son of George Long, who lived and died in Douglass township, where he was a farmer and an old-time planemaker. This business his son Mathias learned, first working at home, but after 1821 at Reading, where he subsequently went into the railroad shops and remained connected with the wood department until 1844. He died Oct. 3, 1857, aged sixty-seven years, six months, fifteen days. Mathias Long married Rebecca Long and they had the following children: William, Henry R., Franklin, Matilda, George and Catherine, the last named, Mrs. John Steckert, being now the only survivor of this family.

Henry R. Long, father of Frank B., was born May 16, 1832, on the corner of Seventh and Court streets, Reading, and was a life long resident of the Ninth ward. After obtaining a fair education in the common schools he went to work as a tobacco stripper, but in 1846 he began to learn the cooper's trade with Henry B. Shearer, following same successfully, at different periods, up to 1903, when he retired. He conducted a shop in the rear of his residence. During the sixties Mr. Long became employed as mailer in the Gazette and Democrat office, in the Adler building, on Penn below Fourth street, then owned by J. G. Hawley and William S. Ritter. When that partnership was dissolved, about 1870, he was employed in the mailing room of the Eagle, and for a period of twenty-seven years, until four years before his death, was mailer in that office. He worked altogether thirty-nine years with the Adler Publishing Company. He was engaged by Mr. Ritter, of the Adler, until four months before his decease, when obliged by ill health to relinquish all work.

Mr. Long married Mary A. Babb, daughter of John and Mary (DeHart) Babb, of Stony Creek, Berks county, where the Babbs are among the early families. Their children were as follows: Ida, who died Aug. 6, 1900, the wife of William H. Horner; Harry B., pressman at the Adler office, Reading; and Frank B.

Henry R. Long joined the Masons Sept. 2, 1857, and was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and of Reading Chapter, No. 152, which he joined May 9, 1859. In May, 1858, he became affiliated with Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F. In political faith he was a Democrat, and he was appointed the first assessor of the Ninth ward at Reading, but declined to serve. He resided at No. 209 North Eighth street, where he died Oct. 10, 1906. He had a pleasant home, and had many friends in all parts of the city, who mourned the death of a faithful friend and excellent citizen. Mr. Long was a member of the Reformed Church.

Frank Babb Long completed the public school course and then took a commercial course in a local business college. He was employed at the Adler publishing house, in different departments, for three years. When nineteen years old he passed the civil service examination and entered the post office as clerk, being the first Democrat in that office, where he remained for four years. Then he entered the employ of William Shafer, the well-known baker, and remained with him as city salesman for sixteen years. In July, 1906, he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, Cyrus G. Ream, who is the proprietor of the "Mineral Spring Hotel" at Reading, where his tact, experience and genial qualities make him very efficient.

In 189— Mr. Long married Sarah K. Yerger, daughter of George and Mary (Kantner) Yerger, and they reside at No. 237 North Ninth street, Reading.

In politics Mr. Long is a Democrat. He is a member of the Order of Foresters and the Golden Eagles. In religious faith he is connected with the Reformed Church.

SAMUEL P. LEWIS, who died in Reading Oct. 18, 1904, had been a resident of that city since 1881. He was born in Chester county, Pa., July 27, 1868, son of John and Mary (James) Lewis.

The parents were both natives of Chester county, and were among the representative farming people of that section. John Lewis owned valuable properties there, which he operated until 1881, in which year he removed to Reading. He entered the employ of Orr, Painter & Co., with whom he remained until he died in 1891. He had a family of six children, namely: Frank, Lizzie (m. Samuel Price), Samuel P., John H., George O. and Charles. Both Mr. Lewis and his wife were Presbyterians.

Samuel P. Lewis received most of his education in the public schools of Reading, but he left school early, and when not much more than a boy commenced to learn the trade of stove molder in the foundry of Orr, Painter & Co. He remained with them several years, until he accepted the position of special officer for the city, a place which he was filling most acceptably when his career was cut short by death in 1904. Not only faithful in the discharge of his duties, he was greatly esteemed by his superior officers, and he was very popular socially. He was a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M.

Mr. Lewis married, Feb. 6, 1892, Miss Emma E. Gnau, daughter of Jacob and Amelia (Frill) Gnau. Three children were born to this union, namely: John H. (born Sept. 10, 1893, is at school), Florence A. and Russell R.

Jacob Gnau, father of Mrs. Lewis, was born in October, 1846, and died Aug. 31, 1899. He was a native of Reading, and was educated in the schools there. Learning the trade of stove molder, he followed that occupation until 1872, when he went into the hotel business at Columbia Hall, on Penn street. This proved so successful, that in 1887 he was able to retire. Mr. Gnau served in the Civil war and was a member of McLean Post, G. A. R. He also belonged to Friendship Fire Company and to the Masonic fraternity. Twice married, by his union with Miss Rebecca Britton there was no issue. By his marriage with Miss Amelia Frill there were two children: one who died in infancy and Emma E. (Mrs. Lewis).

DR. ISAAC W. NEWCOMET of Stouchsburg, Pa., was born in Bethel township, Berks county, Oct. 8, 1842, and was reared upon his parent's farm, working there until he was fifteen years old, when he began teaching at the Merkel school in Bethel township. He taught in all three terms in Bethel, one in Jefferson, and one in Ontelaunee (the latter the best paying township in the county). He was a great success as a teacher. He was educated in the common schools, the Reading Classical Academy (then in charge of the late Rev. William Good, at one time county superintendent, and later in charge of Prof. D. B. Brunner). He then enlisted in the Independent Battery, Ringgold Light Artillery of Berks county. This company of 144 men was attached to Gen. Couch's brigade. He was in service three months, and was mustered out in the latter part of June, 1863. After the expiration of his enlistment he returned to Reading and became assistant teacher in the Reading Classical Academy, teaching upward of two years. In April, 1866, he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, and was graduated in 1867. He afterward took a special course, becoming very proficient, and in October, 1867, he located at Stouchsburg, where he has since engaged in practice, having a large clientele. He is well and favorably known in his district, and is frequently called far beyond the confines of his own county.

In politics Dr. Newcomet is a Democrat. He is a consistent member of Christ Lutheran Church which was organized in 1727, and is at present serving as an Elder. In his younger days he was superintendent of Crosskill Mills Sunday-school, for several years.

The Doctor resides on the main street in the central part of town in his own residence, which was formerly a Klopp property. He also owns the historic Spyker homestead on which was in 1742 the colonial residence which is still standing and in good state of preservation. Mr. Spyker was a co-patriot and worker with Conrad Weiser.

Dr. Newcomet married Elizabeth S. Bickel, daughter of Samuel and Mary A. (Gruber) Bickel. They have no children. Dr. Newcomet is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, and the State Medical Association. He is a member of Williamson Lodge No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf, and was a charter member of the Order of Good Fellows of his town, of which he was an official during its later years.

The Doctor's emigrant ancestor was Christian Newcomer—who came over from Switzerland on the ship "Francis and Elizabeth," which landed Sept. 21, 1742, at Philadelphia. On the same ship with him came his wife and at least one son—Christian, Jr.,—whose name appears on the list of passengers of the ship. In 1790 the elder Christian Newcomer was a resident in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, when he had three sons above sixteen years of age, and four sons under sixteen, and five daughters at home, apparently fourteen in his family. Christian, Jr., and his brother Peter were the oldest of the family, and lived in Bethel township, Berks county, each one having a family of his own. Christian Newcomer, Jr., had two sons and two daughters, and Peter Newcomer had three sons and two daughters. Another of the ancestor's sons was Wolfgang Newcomer. School teachers added the "t" to the name.

Abraham Newcomer, grandfather of William W., and Doctor Isaac, was a miller, as was Christian, Jr., his father. The name of "Abraham Neicomer" appeared on his grain bags in his mill. This mill was situated in Bethel township and was known as "Crosskill Mill." It was operated during the Revolutionary war times by Christian Newcomer, Jr.

JOHN E. HARBSTER, one of the prominent business men of Reading, Pa., is a son of Matthan and Susan (Bingham) Harbster. He was educated in the schools of Reading, and then entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company. Starting at the very bottom, he rose rapidly from one position to another until he reached the head of the great industry, the second largest in its line in the United States. He started as special order clerk, to which he was appointed in 1884, and was then promoted to the position of superintendent of the pattern department. Shortly afterward he was advanced to superintendent of the lock department, and, still later, of the cost department of the entire plant. He was then made assistant superintendent of the works, then superintendent, and finally, in 1904, elected president. This establishment manufactures all kinds of light and builders' hardware, and employs upward of 2000 mechanics beside a large clerical force.

Mr. Harbster was chief marshal of the great Firemen's parade on Labor Day. He is an active member of the Liberty Fire Company.

JACOB GNAU

ADAM HEILMAN, late of Reading, Pa., was a native of Germany, born Feb. 24, 1820, son of Michael and Elizabeth (Miller) Heilman, both of whom died in the Fatherland.

Adam Heilman learned the trade of shoemaker in his native country, and on coming to America in 1838 he engaged at that occupation first in Philadelphia, where, however, he remained only five weeks. Removing to Reading, young Heilman engaged at his trade and made it his life work, his first place of business being at the present site of William Rosenthal's printing establishment, which was owned by the Borrells, and later at No. 660 Penn street. Mr. Heilman remained at the latter place until February, 1897, from which time and until his death he lived in retirement. He was what may well be called a self-made man. On his arrival in this country his capital was little more than a great amount of ambition, tireless energy and unbounded honesty. He was one of the successful men of his section. Always a good, skilled workman, he instructed others in his trade, and some of the leading shoemakers of Reading owe their success in the business to his valuable teachings.

In 1842, Mr. Heilman was married (first) to Hannah Miller, born in Amity township, Berks county, and seven children were born to this union, three of whom are living. On March 20, 1859, Mr. Heilman was married (second) to Mrs. Caroline Kieffer, and there were seven children born to this marriage also, five of them still surviving. In religious belief the family are Lutherans, and Mr. Heilman was prominent at the time of the erection of St. John's Lutheran Church, in which he was an elder, trustee and deacon, and treasurer for seventeen years. In political matters he was a Democrat, but in local matters took an independent stand. He was connected with the I. O. O. F. and Teutonia Lodge, F. & A. M., of Reading. Mr. Heilman was well-known as a musician and in this connection was identified for many years with the old Germania Band.

PIERCE K. STEFFY, a cigar manufacturer and active citizen of Sinking Spring, Berks county, was born here, in Spring township, Nov. 23, 1864, and is a member of a family which has been numerous in this section for several generations.

Daniel Steffy, his great-grandfather, was born in Cumru township and was engaged as a laborer in the vicinity of Sinking Spring, where he is buried. Among his children were Daniel, Lizzie, Penina and John.

John Steffy, son of Daniel, was born Jan. 14, 1800, and died Aug. 6, 1865. He is buried in the old graveyard at Sinking Spring, close to where his father lies, and like his father he was a laborer in that section. He married Lydia A. Luft, born Aug. 28, 1805, daughter of Johannes Luft (born Aug. 15, 1777, died Aug. 17, 1864, and his wife Magdalena (born Sept. 23, 1777, died Oct. 27, 1865). Mrs. Steffy died Nov. 28, 1869, aged sixty-four years, three months, and is buried beside her husband. They had a family of twelve children, namely: Rebecca, John, Lydia, Jane, Daniel, Isaac, Elizabeth, Maria, Molly, William (who died in infancy), William and Benneville.

Isaac L. Steffy, a respected resident of Spring township, living just above Fritztown, was born in that township, near Sinking Spring April 28, 1841. When only five years old he moved with his parents to Heidelberg township, where he lived for fourteen years with the family of Adam Ruth, a farmer. After leaving the Ruths he continued to do farm work for two years longer, in 1863 beginning to work as a repairman on the Reading & Columbia railroad, where he was employed for eight years as a journeyman. For twenty-four years he was engaged as foreman of a section, during this time having under his charge at different times two to sixty men, with corresponding responsibilities. In the spring of 1894 Mr. Steffy became the proprietor of the "Fanners Hotel" at Fritztown, which he himself conducted for three and a half years. Since 1900 he has been engaged in the coal and fertilizer business at that place, and he has prospered by thrift and good management. He has his own home above Fritztown, a comfortable dwelling with one acre of ground. Mr. Steffy is known to all as a conscientious and honorable man, and he is highly esteemed in his community. In 1860 he married Margaret Kline, daughter of William and Mary (Ruth) Kline, and granddaughter of William Ruth. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Steffy, as follows: John, who lives at Lyons, Pa.; William, of Montello, this county; Pierce K.; Ida, married to James Grimes, a shoemaker of Reynolds, Pa.; Ellen, wife of Henry Bucher, a painter of Denver, Pa.; Mary, wife of Harry R. Gring, a cigar manufacturer of Fritztown, Pa.; Rufus, who died in infancy; and Maggie, married to Stephen Hornberger, a cigar maker at Denver, Pa. Mr. Steffy and his family belong to the church, which they attend, at Sinking Spring. He is a Democrat in political opinion.

Pierce K. Steffy received his education in the public schools of his native township, and learned his trade at Lititz, Lancaster Co., Pa., from John Yenland. After following his trade for six years at Lititz, Denver (Lancaster county) and other points he became foreman for John S. Nolde, a cigar manufacturer at Denver, continuing in that capacity for seven years, until he started in business on his own account, at Denver, in 1891, as Mr. Nolde's successor. He carried that business on until 1896, in the fall of which year he came to Sinking Spring, where he has since been engaged in cigar manufacturing. He is established in a two-story factory on Main street, 20 x 44 feet in dimensions, and gives employment to about forty people. The product is confined to high-grade cigars, which are disposed of through jobbing houses at Philadelphia and other Pennsylvania cities, as well as in New Jersey. Mr. Steffy has a lucrative business, and he owns his factory and his home. In addition to cigar-making he runs a coal yard at Fritztown, having a profitable patronage.

Mr. Steffy has taken an interest in the administration of public affairs in the various communities in which he has resided. He is a Democrat in politics, and has been active in the local workings of the party. While a resident of Lancaster county he was delegate to many county conventions, and during President Cleveland's second administration he served as postmaster at Denver, that county. Since he became a resident of Berks county he has served a term of three years as school director of Spring township, was treasurer of the board, and at present holds the office of supervisor, being president of the board of roadmasters. He has done able work for the township, where his efforts have been highly appreciated. In 1907 he was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention.

Socially Mr. Steffy is well known, being a member of Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; of Sinking Spring Lodge, No. 660, I. O. O. F.; of Lexington Lodge, No. 155, K. of P.; and of Wyanet Tribe, No. 301, I. O. R. M., of Reading. He is a leading member of Salem U. B. Church at Sinking Spring, which he has served as trustee and steward. His family are also identified with this church.

In October, 1896, Mr. Steffy married Miss Emma Smith, daughter of Levi and Elizabeth (Barry) Smith, of Lancaster county, and to this union have been born six children: Robert P., Charles S., Alvin S., Martha, Russel and Luke.

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH. The first recorded meeting of this congregation was held Jan. 6, 1752, on which occasion, it is stated, the church officers were re-elected; which shows that the Church probably was organized in 1751. At the meeting in 1752 a committee was appointed to build a church. The church, begun 1752, was dedicated Trinity Sunday, June 17, 1753, by the name of Holy Trinity Church. This church was a wooden building fronting on Washington street, and standing nearly where the present parsonage is. In 1791 a new church was begun, fronting on Sixth street. The corner-stone was laid May 10, 1792; and the church was dedicated Trinity Sunday, June 15, 1794. This building still stands. In 1851 the interior was greatly altered, a basement for Sunday-school purposes being introduced, and the pulpit and altar, which had been on the north side of the church, being placed on the east. The steeple of the church was completed in 1833, and rebuilt in 1892, at which time William A. Arnold and Samuel Kutz built and presented a memorial Sunday-school chapel, and the whole church building was thoroughly repaired and embellished.

In The History of Trinity Church by Rev. Dr. J.Fry, the following pastors are named: 1751-1753, T. Wagner and H. B. G. Wordman; 1754-1763, D. Schumacher, J. C. Hartwig and B. M. Hausihl; 1764-1771, John Andreas Krug; 1771-1774, F. Niemeyer and P. J. Grotz; 1775-1781, H. Moller, F. A. C. Muhlenberg and D. Lehman; 1782-1796, C. F. Wildbahn; 1796-1803, A. N. Marcard, D. Lehman, W. H. Scriba; 1803-1829, H. A. Muhlenberg, D. D.; 1829-1850, Jacob Miller, D. D.; 1851-1851, F. A. M. Keller; 1851-1854, J. W. Richards, D. D.; 1854-1857, John W. Hoffman, D. D.; 1858-1861, F. J. F. Schantz; 1861-1864, C. Rightmeyer. From 1865 to 1896 J. Fry, D. D., was pastor; and he was succeeded in 1897 by Edward T. Horn, D. D., LL. D., who is the pastor at the present time.

While Dr. Miller was pastor, Rev. F. A. M. Keller served as assistant, conducting English services, and afterward became the founder of St. James Church. With Dr. Schantz, Rev. J. J. Kuendig was assistant, preaching in the German language, and became the first pastor of St. John's, which separated from Trinity in 1861. During the interval between Dr. Fry's resignation and the present pastorate, Rev. George Drach served as a regular supply. Since 1897 Rev. L. D. Lazarus, and subsequently Rev. J. F. Snyder, have successively served as assistants, and vicar in Peace and Faith chapels, which are maintained as filials of Trinity. All of the Lutheran Churches of Reading look upon Trinity as the Mother Church, and acknowledge her fostering care.

In her earlier charter Trinity was called the German Lutheran Congregation in the borough of Reading, but in 1860 she was named Trinity Lutheran Church of Reading, by Act of Assembly, and in 1888, by an amendment to the charter received the name and style of The Trinity Lutheran Church of the City of Reading.

In the Sunday-school the following have filled the office of superintendent: E. Jon. Deininger 1829-1842; Rev. A. M. Keller 1842-1850; Geo. W. Oakley 1851-1857; W. H. Livingood 1858-1860; Sol. L. Moser 1861-1865; Rev. J. Fry 1865-1867; P. S. Ermold 1868-1880; H. M. M. Richards 1881-1899; Geo. M. Jones, Esq. 1900-1907; A. Raymond Bard 1907—.

We find mention of occasional English services in this church as early as 1758. When H. A. Muhlenberg was called as pastor in 1803, he was obligated to preach in English at stated intervals; but this arrangement seems to have been abandoned in 1806. Rev. F. A. M. Keller was engaged in 1847 as "Assistant preacher in the English language." Dr. Richards conducted English morning services once in every four Sundays, and the evening service was regularly English. After the separate establishment of St. John's Church, English became the only language used in the regular services.

It would be impossible to recite a list of the interesting events which are connected with Trinity Church. Among the most interesting are the organization of the General Council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in North America, which occurred in 1866; and the touching scene when the aged C. F. Hoyer volunteered and was sent to revive the Mission at Rajahmundry, India,—at the meeting of the Ministerium of Pennsylvania in 1869. The General Council's first missionary to Japan, Rev. Frisbie D. Smith, was formally commissioned in Trinity Church, Sept. 6, 1908.

The annual report to Synod, in 1909, shows that 1250 persons communed within the year, and that 1625 are carried on the roll; the Sunday-school had 69 officers and teachers and 961 scholars enrolled; the properties are valued at $175,000; $6,500 were spent for the maintenance of the congregation, and $4,582.72 given to the various benevolent works of the Lutheran Church. J. K. BRINTZENHOFF, secretary and treasurer of the Penn Cigar Company, manufacturers of high grade cigars, at No. 1138 Franklin street, Reading, was born in Washington township, Berks county.

After attending the schools of Rockland township, and the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown, Mr. Brintzenhoff in 1891 engaged in teaching at Womelsdorf for two years, when he was appointed principal and held that position one year. He then accepted the position of bookkeeper for the Relay Manufacturing Company, when after a period he engaged in his present business with Keyser Fry, at No. 838 Chestnut street. There they engaged in the manufacture of cigars until they removed to No. 723 Franklin street. They purchased the Newcomet factory and the business was combined with that of the cigar company, and in 1905 the Penn Cigar Co. was incorporated under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania with Mr. Fry as president and Mr. Brintzenhoff as secretary and treasurer, the latter also having the general management of the business. The Penn Cigar Co. does a very heavy business, and probably ships more cigars than any other firm in the city by express. They manufacture a high grade of five and ten cent cigars, among them the "Chief Rabban," "Wyoming Elk," "Lady Mar," "Ortho" and "American Securities," besides many private brands. They employ an average of thirty hands the year round and the business is steadily increasing in volume.

Mr. Brintzenhoff is a member of Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M., Reading Chapter, R. A. M., No. 152, DeMolay Commandery, K. T., No. 9, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also a member of Mt. Penn Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of which he is past chancellor commander. Mr. Brintzenhoff is politically independent.

HENRY GASS, the owner of a fine farm of twenty-one acres in Muhlenberg township, where he also conducts a custom feed mill, coal yard and stone quarries, was born in Alsace township, Berks county, Jan. 23, 1852, son of Henry and Mary (Phillips) Gass.

Henry Gass, father of Henry, was born in that portion of Alsace township that is now Muhlenberg, in 1817, and died in 1853, and engaged in farming and lime burning all of his life, hauling his lime on the Schuylkill Canal. He married Mary Phillips, a native of the same township, who died in 1861, having borne her husband these children: Sarah, who married Franklin Miller; Mary, who married Edward Snyder; Elizabeth, who married James Wiedner; and Henry. In religious belief the family were of the Reformed faith. Mr. Gass was a Democrat in politics, but was never an office seeker.

Henry Gass was educated in the schools of Alsace township, only attending, however, at intervals when he was not needed on the farm, where he had hired out for his board and clothes. Later he received $7.00 per month, and out of these meagre wages managed to save a little each month. Subsequently his pay was raised to $22.00 per month, at which wages he worked for one year, by which time, by the utmost economy and frugality he had managed to put away enough with which to buy the old homestead. Mr. Gass conducted this land for three years, when he sold out and purchased a house at St. Lawrence, where he remained about nine months, operating a stone quarry on his father-in-law's property. In 1879 he purchased his present land, a tract of twenty-one acres, known as the old Bushong property, and here he has made many improvements. He planted every tree now on the place, opened a new quarry, since 1893 has operated a coal yard, and built a feed mill which is still in operation. The original house was destroyed by fire in 1882, and this was replaced by Mr. Gass as were all of the out buildings.

Mr. Gass was married to Amanda Stauffer, daughter of Abram Stauffer, and eleven children were born to this union: Nora, who married E. H. Zacharias and has one child, Marguerite; Mamie, who married George Shirk and has one child, Franklin Henry; Avin, who married Estella Wahl; Henry W., single; Jennie E., at home; Mary, deceased; Charles and Jennie E., who died of diphtheria within a week of each other; and three who died in infancy.

In religious belief Mr. Gass is Reformed and he has held the offices of deacon and elder. In politics he is a Democrat, and is treasurer of Muhlenberg township, in which capacity he has served for several terms, no man in Berks county holding a better record than he. Fraternally Mr. Gass is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and the K. G. E.

HENRY H. SHULTZ, one of the most influential citizens of lower Berks county, the leading cattle dealer in this section, and a man of large affairs in various lines, belongs to a family which has been particularly prominent in Hereford township and the surrounding district from its settlement in this country.

The Schultz ancestry is traced back to one Mathias Schultz, who was born in 1612, on a Sunday (Invocavit), lived through the Thirty Years' war, and died in 1682, in the seventieth year of his age, at Lower Harpersdorf, in what was then the principality (now a government district) of Liegnitz, Silesia. His son, Melchior Schultz, is said to have been born in 1647, and died on a Sunday (Invocavit), 1708, in the sixty-first year of his age. And his son, also called Melchior Schultz, was born June 26, 1680, and died Feb. 15, 1734, in the fifty-fourth year of his age, at Berthelsdorf, Saxony, about two months before the emigration to this country, then being contemplated. The last-named Melchior Schultz was the father of George, Melchior and Christopher, all of whom married, and descendants of George and Christopher still flourish in Berks county.

Rev. Christopher Schultz, Sr., the youngest son of Melchior, was born at Lower Harpersdorf, Liegnitz, Silesia, March 26, 1718. In the spring of 1726, owing to religious persecution, this family with others left home and possessions and fled by night, arriving at Berthelsdorf, in Saxony, May 1st. Here Christopher became a shepherd boy, but his humble circumstances did not quench his spirit or ambition. In his youth he evinced a burning desire for books. His kind friend, Rev. George Weiss, assisted him in his study of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages. He also had the kindly assistance of Count Zinzendorf. The three orphan boys, George, Melchior and Christopher Schultz, joining some forty Schwenkfelder families, forever turned their backs upon their native land, embarking for Philadelphia, where they arrived after a tedious voyage of about five months, Sept. 22, 1734. Young Christopher kept a diary ("Reise Beschreibung"), which is found in print in the "Erlauterung." At a comparatively early period he was looked upon as a leading spirit among the Schwenkfelders, and was chosen their minister, serving as such efficiently and faithfully until the end of his days. He was the chief organizer of the Schwenkfelders into a religious body or congregation, composed the catechism still in use, compiled their hymn-books and wrote their constitution, as well as a "Compendium" of religious doctrines of faith of 600 octavo pages. For many years, up to the end of the American Revolution, "Father" Schultz, as he was called, kept up correspondence with friends left in Germany. He lived in stirring times and had varied experiences. At the age of eighteen years we find him, with his two brothers, selecting a site for their future home in a dense wood forty-two miles north of Philadelphia, two miles west of what is now the borough of East Greenville, where they had found an excellent spring of water. Here, in 1736, assisted by Melchior Newman, carpenter, they commenced felling the tall oaks, rolling them on a scaffold over a trench, sawed them by hand into three-inch planks, whereof the outside walls of their capacious two-story house were constructed. Wagon wheels were made of the same article, horse collars were skillfully plaited of straw, traces were made of hemp, the grubbing hoe preceded the plow with wooden mold board. There was no sawmill or gristmill within fifteen miles, and every resource of the pioneer was taxed to the utmost to supply the lacks experienced in a new country. For clothing the Schultzes raised their own flax and wool, spun it with the aid of a single spindle, erected a weaver's loom, and wove the yarn into cloth.

The three brothers lived in peace and harmony, and at the end of ten years, under the blessing of Providence, they had considerably extended their landed domains, increased their flocks and filled their coffers, so that the question which once engaged the attention of Abraham and Lot, at their parting, now confronted them. The result was that Melchior and Christopher sold out to their elder brother, George, the former going about three miles north, where he bought a farm; Christopher, having married in 1744, now bought and settled at Clayton, Berks county. Here he lived to the end of his life. Among the early records of Berks county we find the last will and testament of Christopher Schultz, a model of its kind. It is dated the 24th of October, 1788, and is witnessed by his friends, Abraham Schultz, Gregory Schultz and George Kriebel; in it the testator, among other things, disposes of about eight hundred acres of land located in Berks, Montgomery and Northumberland counties, Pa., including two of the finest farms in eastern Berks; one of them, late that of his brother Melchior, had been bought by the testator for and in the name of his son Andrew. His family, all of whom survived him, consisted of his wife Rosina, a daughter of Baltzer Yeakel, and four children, Regina, Andrew, David and Susanna. Father Schultz died May 9, 1789, aged seventy-one years, one month, thirteen days. The immediate cause of his death was apoplexy. The Rev. Christopher Hoffman, of Skippack, preached the funeral sermon, taking for his text the words of Paul, II Timothy 4: 7-8, I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, etc.

David Schultz, son of Rev. Christopher, born April 10, 1757, died Aug. 4, 1833, aged seventy-six years. He resided in Hereford township, Berks county, immediately adjoining the Schwenkfelder meeting house. In 1781 he married Anna Kriebel, and the following are the names and years of birth of their children: Susanna, 1782; Andrew, 1784; William, 1786; Rosina, 1788; Christopher K., 1790; Philip, 1793 (died 1817); Maria, 1795; Jeremiah, 1797; Christina, 1799; Regina, 1801.

Andrew Schultz, eldest son of David, born Oct. 4, 1784, died Nov. 17, 1817, aged thirty-three years. He lived at Clayton, on the border of Washington and Hereford townships, where he owned valuable land, including the homestead farm, and he followed farming. He married Sophia Kriebel, daughter of Andrew Kriebel, born Nov. 16, 1785, died March 24, 1857, in her seventy-second year. Both Mr. and Mrs. Schultz are buried at the Schwenkfelder Church. They had a family of five children: Andrew K., father of Henry H.; Lydia, born in 1814, who married John Anders; Anna, born in 1812, who was married to Joshua Schultz; Susanna, born in 1810, who married Stophel Wiegner; and Elizabeth, born in 1816, who married Samuel Schultz.

Andrew K. Schultz, son of Andrew, born in Washington township May 3, 1818, died in May, 1903, aged eighty-five years. He was a successful farmer all his life, and besides the homestead farm owned the store property at Clayton. He was a man of affairs, and wielded a strong influence for good throughout his district, where he was an active and well-known citizen. Like most of the name he was a Schwenkfelder in religious faith, and very devoted to the church; he is buried at the Schwenkfelder meeting-house in Hereford township. He married Magdalena High, daughter of John High, and she died May 6, 1897, aged seventy-three years, two months, twenty-three days, the mother of ten children: Henry H.; Mary, who married Daniel Longaeke; Andrew H., of Pottstown; Amanda, who married E. K. Schultz; Edwin H., of Philadelphia; Magdalena, deceased wife of Horatio Schultz; John H., of Worcester, Montgomery Co., Pa.; Emma, who married Dr. Stover; and two that died in infancy.

Henry H. Shultz was born July 17, 1844, on the homestead in Washington township where his father was born, at Clayton, and received his education in the public schools of his home township and at Washington Hall, at the Trappe. In 1865 he was licensed to teach public school by Prof. John S. Ermentrout, and he taught two terms in Hereford township, at the Treichlersville school. In 1867 he began clerking in the general store of Diehl & Stover, at Pleasant Valley, in Bucks county, Pa., and the following year was in the employ of Treichler & Brother, who took over the business. In 1869 he engaged in butchering at Pleasant Valley, continuing that line for two years with excellent results, and then for several years he was in the mercantile business at Clayton. His father had purchased the store property there in 1871, and Henry H. Shultz took the business in 1872, carrying it on until 1879, when because of poor health he sold out to his brother Edwin, who conducted the store until 1905, a period of twenty-five years.

In order to build up his health Mr. Shultz went to Florida on retiring from the store, and settling in Orange county he engaged in the cultivation of oranges, lemons and grape fruit, being the first man to send grape fruit into the city of Reading, in 1881. Mr. Shultz made as much of a success of fruit raising as he has of his other lines of effort, and by the application of sound business principles to that undertaking did very well during the seven years he remained in Florida. During that time he also dealt more or less in cattle, a business he had started in 1876, and in which he has been interested continuously to the present. While in the South he had transactions of this kind both in the North and in Florida, and his operations at present entitle him to the rank of the most extensive dealer in his line in lower Berks county. He has handled as many as 125 carloads of cattle yearly, and he shipped 13,000 calves to New York City within ten years. He owns two farms, both in Hereford township, is connected with the Perkiomen National Bank at East Greenville as director, and has other large interests which keep him in close touch with the industrial life of Berks county as well as a leading factor in its material prosperity. However, he has never taken any active part in local public affairs, and though a stanch Republican in political principles has neither sought nor accepted office.

In 1868 Mr. Shultz married Anna Maria Geisinger, daughter of Peter and Catharine (Gruber) Geisinger, the latter a daughter of John Gruber, of Springfield, Bucks Co., Pa., after whom Gruber's Valley, in the same county, was named. Mr. and Mrs. Shultz have one child, Elmer G., born Nov. 19, 1868, who resides at Clayton and assists his father in the management of his business; he married Catharine Rudolph, daughter of John Rudolph, of Springfield, Bucks county, and they have two children, Henry H. and Stella M.

In 1883 Mr. Shultz bought his father's farm at Clayton and the house in which he makes his home, and which he and his family have occupied since 1884. The large stone residence, erected in 1843, is located on a corner, has been completely remodeled and refitted with the most modern conveniences during Mr. Shultz's ownership, and presents as fine an appearance as any place in the surrounding country. It is Colonial in style, and the spacious porches and beautiful lawn give it an air of dignity and comfort which bespeak the ideal home. There is a supply of fine spring water which adds to the value of the property.

Mr. Shultz has probably traveled more than any other man of his section, and during his travels he has collected a number of valuable and interesting relics, from Florida, California and other places, his journeyings having carried him all over the United States.

JAMES B. LEVAN, a farmer at Mountain postoffice, in Albany township, Berks county, was born on the farm on which he now resides, Feb. 23, 1849, son of Benjamin and Anna (Lutz) Levan. At the time of his birth the family home was in the old log house of Indian depredation fame. It was commonly known as the "Fort," and many times when the Indians were on the war path the white settlers would flee thither for protection. It was built with inside stairs to the upper floor, so constructed that they could be drawn up and prevent the Indians from reaching the refugees. During the French and Indian war many of the settlers were cruelly murdered by the savages, among these being a Mrs. Shissler, whose husband and daughter escaped a like fate by crawling through the window of their burning cabin and finding safety with neighbors.

Daniel Levan, grandfather of James B., was a native of Exeter township, Berks county, Pa. He died on his farm in Albany township before 1840, and is buried in a private burial ground on the farm now owned by James B. He came from Exeter to Albany in 1813, and bought the farm now owned by his grandson from his father-in-law, Peter Fries, and on this farm he lived until his death. He met his wife, a Miss Fries, in Reading, and their children were: Lydia m. Reuben Smith; Sally m. Benjamin Kramer; Benjamin; Maria (1815-1891) m. Samuel Lutz; Magdalena (called Molly) (1818-1896) m. David Lutz, brother of Samuel; and Daniel, a farmer and blacksmith at Wessnersville, where he owned the farm now the property of Henry Leiby, and was the father of the following children: Lavina, Casetta, William, Cordelia, Belisa, Mrs. Henry Leiby and Dr. Walter.

Benjamin Levan, son of Daniel, was born in Exeter township, Feb. 27, 1813, and died in Albany, Nov. 17, 1878. He was but one month old when his parents brought him to Albany township, and he lived there during the remainder of his life. He received a limited education in the neighborhood, when schools were held by Germans in private houses. He farmed all his active life, but was retired some years before his death. He hauled the products of his farm over the Blue Mountains to Schuylkill county. He prospered in his work and he saw many changes in the Levan home. He was a member (Reformed) of the New Bethel Church, where both he and his wife, Anna Lutz (born Jan. 7, 1812, died Dec. 31, 1893), daughter of Frederick Lutz, are buried. To him and his wife were born nine children: Amanda m. David Heinly; Loriah m. Samuel Hartman; Leanda m. (first) Jonathan Smith, and (second) Samuel De Turk; Mary Jane m. William Heinly; Casetta, died aged about two years; James B.; Benjamin lives at Lynnport, Pa.; Elmira m. Edwin D. Kistler, a merchant at Wessnersville; and Albert D. is a merchant at Mountain, Albany township.

James B. Levan received his education in the township schools, and later attended a boarding school at Trappe, Montgomery county. He was substitute teacher for several years, and was reared to farming under his father, working for the latter until he was twenty-seven years of age. He began farming for himself, where he now lives, in the spring of 1877. In 1879 this farm came into his possession. It is located at the base of the Blue Mountains, in the potato belt, and consists of 230 acres, about 100 acres being woodland. The log house that sheltered the family for three generations, and which was used as a fort in the Indian days, built about 1749, was torn down by Mr. Levan in 1898. Many Indian relics such as tomahawks, arrows, spear heads, etc., have been found on the Levan farm. Mr. Levan is blessed with a good water supply on his place, the Yellow Spring being on his land, and the so called "sand spring" on the adjoining property. The present set of buildings were erected by Mr. Levan, the barn in 1880, and remodeled in 1905, and the large stone house in the eighties. Everything is strictly modern, and the well kept lawn is enclosed by an iron fence. Mr. Levan raises about fifteen acres of potatoes annually. In politics he is a Democrat, and has been supervisor of his district. He and his family attend New Bethel Church, of which they are Reformed members, and in which he has served as deacon.

In 1877 Mr. Levan married Rosa Kistler, daughter of David and Maria (Fetherolf) Kistler, of Kistler's Valley. Five sons and five daughters have blessed this union: Dr. George K., of Reading; Annie, m. to John Long, station agent at Wanamakers, Pa.; Miss Maggie; Benjamin, a painter, unmarried; James, a miller at Wanamakers; Jennie, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, and now a successful teacher in Albany township; John, a farmer at home; Sallie, in school; Charles, a farmer at home; Pauline, at home.

Dr. George K. Levan, son of James B., was born on his father's farm Nov. 3, 1877, and was educated in the public schools of his district, graduating from the Albany school in 1897. He then went to Reading and worked in a drug store, attending night school, and taking private instruction in Latin from Edward D. Trexler. He then entered the Department of Pharmacy in the Medico-Chirurgical College, and graduated in the class of 1903. In the fall of that year he began the study of medicine at the same institution, and graduated in 1907. He was then elected a resident physician of Reading Hospital, where he served one year. In the fall of 1908 he located at No. 300 South Fifth street, Reading, where he has been very successful in building up a good patronage. He holds the temporary position of physician of the Reading School District. He is a member of the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Fraternally he is a member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M. He is a self made made, his professional training having been gained through his own efforts, and he is justly entitled to the respect of his fellow men.

DERR. From the records of Berks county the following interesting information is gleaned relative to the old Derr family:

Johann Heinrich Derr was born Dec. 13, 1787, and died Aug. 15, 1867, aged seventy-nine years, eight months and two days. His wife was Sarah Schumaker, born in 1803, died in 1882. Another Heinrich Derr was born April 9, 1795 and died Feb. 15, 1878, aged eighty-two years, ten months and six days. His wife's Christian name was Sibilla.

David Derr was born Sept. 13, 1814, died May 14, 1888, aged seventy-three years and eight months. His wife was Sarah A. Leibig, born in 1826, died in 1881.

Henry Derr, son of David above mentioned, was born in 1854, and died in 1893.

John Derr of Amity township, Berks county, has entered in Will Book D, page 274, on March 1, 1821, a will made under the date of Dec. 5, 1820. John Derr had sons,—John, Samuel and Henry George.

Henry Derr, father of Henry Derr and grandfather of Thomas L., had among other children the following: Mrs. Jacob Stout of Emaus, Lehigh county; Mrs. Henry Kemmerer in Emaus; William who was a well known blacksmith near Kutztown; Henry.

Henry Derr, son of Henry Derr and father of Thomas L. Derr, was born in Hereford township, Berks county, in March, 1820, and there received his education. When a young man he learned the tailor trade, and coming to Reading in 1849 he engaged in business on Penn street, below Eighth street, conducting a clothing store for some years. Later he was a grocer at Ninth and Penn streets. Still later he returned to his trade and worked at it until his death which occurred in 1865, when he was forty-five years of age. His body was interred in the Charles Evans cemetery.

The wife of Henry Derr was Maria Fisher, a daughter of William and Catherine (Hippensteal) Fisher. Mrs. Derr died at Reading at the age of sixty-six years. Their children were: William of Wooster, Ohio, veterinary surgeon, who has three children,—William, Emma and Earl; Amanda A. who married Charles Weber of Reading, foreman in the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company's shops; Hezekiah who died at the age of fourteen years; Matilda who married Charles Schanberger; Charles whose wife's first name is Lizzie and who lives at Kent, Ohio; Antura married Roland Laing, health Commissioner of Reading, and Thomas L. Derr.

Charles Weber, son-in-law of Henry Derr, enlisted in Company A, 3rd Pennsylvania Reserves, June 4, 1861, and was honorably discharged June 7, 1864, having served through some of the worst engagements of the Civil war. He again enlisted on Aug. 24, 1864, in Company D, 198th Regiment, and remained in the service until the close of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Weber have had these children: William H.; Charles D., deceased; George; Mary C.; Laura D.; Howard and Arthur G.

Thomas Luther Derr was born at Reading March 27, 1859, and his boyhood days were spent in this city, where he attended school, and later learning the machinist's trade in the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad shops at Seventh and Chestnut streets. He followed his trade for thirty-four consecutive years, and for nine years was foreman in the machine department, and is a very able mechanic. At present Mr. Derr is in the employ of the Metropolitan Electric Light Company, of Reading, having charge of a number of men, and being the chief gas fitter for the company.

Mr. Derr is an inventor, and among other things invented a grease cup in 1906, which runs 19,000 miles for one-half cent's worth of grease. He holds deeds for patents for the United States, Canada, England, Germany, France and Belgium. He was offered $20,000 for this patent in the fall of 1907, but he refused to sell. He has also invented a gage-cock for locomotives, March, 1907, and after a year's trial it has been proven a great success. These inventions are on the market.

Mr. Derr is a man of remarkable ability, and is a deep and profound thinker who carefully studies out problems which perplex other men. His standing is a high one in the world of successful inventors.

In politics he is a strong Republican, and at one time took an active part in party matters. Fraternally he is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, No. 66, and is one of the organizers of that lodge in Reading. He is also a member of the K. G. E., No. 433; and P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 61, both of Reading.

On Dec. 18, 1882, he married Clara V. Eisenbise, a daughter of Jeremiah and Elizabeth (Stuebner) Eisenbise. They have no children.

Mr. and Mrs. Derr reside in their own home at No. 1138 North Ninth street, where they have lived since 1898. This home is a beautiful one, and is numbered among the fine residences of Reading. Here Mr. and Mrs. Derr dispense a cordial delightful hospitality to their many friends.

The work of a man like Mr. Derr must always serve as a lesson and a source of encouragement to young men who have only themselves to depend upon. Leaving school in the grammar grade, Mr. Derr may well claim to be entirely self made. He has patiently developed his talent into genius and has made his name a well known one wherever machinery is used.

CHRIST CHURCH, READING, PA. For some time previous to the war of the Revolution, and at the beginning of that memorable conflict, the Rev. Alexander Murry, D. D., ministered to the congregation of St. Mary's, in connection with St. Gabriel's, Morlattin, as a missionary, under the patronage of that most excellent and Christian institution of the Church of England, "The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts." The members of St. Mary's, who were probably few in number, possessed no regular place of worship. They had made preparation and procured materials to erect a church edifice on the same lot now occupied by Christ Church. This laudable undertaking was frustrated by the commencement of the Revolutionary struggle. In the unrestrained zeal of the controversy, many of the clergy of the Church of England, who were from the nature of the case English subjects, were suspected of lack of sympathy with the Revolution. The missionary at Reading did not escape. His house was mobbed, the furniture carried out and broken to pieces. The fragments were then collected, and, together with books, papers, etc., served to make a bonfire, to blaze abroad the zeal and patriotism of those who instigated and performed the act.

Dr. Murry soon afterward embarked for England, returning to this country after the settlement of the difficulties with Great Britain. On a short visit to Reading he was particularly careful to call on several of those who had been the abettors or actors in the mob; and in the kindness and cordiality which he manifested toward them he presented a noble example of the Christian spirit of meekness and forgiveness. Dr. Murry departed this life in Philadelphia during the prevalence of the yellow fever of 1793.

The lot of ground on which Christ Church stands was numbered 71 in the plan of the borough, being 60 feet wide and 230 in depth. It was given by Mrs. Rebecca Price, and conveyed by James Diemer, Esq., by a Deed of Indenture, dated November 30, 1815, to James May, Marks John Biddle, and George Douglass, Esq's., to be by them "held in trust, for the erection of an Episcopal Church, whenever it should be found convenient, and as a place of burial, for the Episcopalians, within the town of Reading, and the vicinity, and of such other persons, not Episcopalians, as the said trustees shall permit to be buried therein, and for no other purpose whatsoever." From a sand stone at the head of one of the graves it appeared that the lot of ground had been used as a place of burial a century and a half ago.

Christ Church was organized, and the edifice mentioned above erected, under the ministry of the Rev. Robert Davis, who commenced missionary services in Reading in the spring of 1823, under the patronage of "The Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church, for the Advancement of Christianity in Pennsylvania." The Church was admitted into union with the Convention of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, May 12, 1824, Henry Styles and Nathaniel P. Hobart attending as delegates.

The Holy Communion was first administered by the Rev. Levi Bull, to twelve communicants, in the autumn of 1823, and a Sunday-school started the same year. The church was consecrated by the Rt. Rev. William White, May 10, 1826, the annual convention of the Diocese being assembled at the time.

The Rev. Mr. Davis continued his labors about three years, the congregation worshiping in a room of the "public buildings."

The Rev. William C. Meade, the first rector, elected soon after the consecration of Christ Church, resigned at the close of 1826.

The succeeding rectors have been as follows: Rev. Henry John Whitehouse, 1827-1829; Rev. Francis H. Cuming, 1831-1832; Rev. Samuel A. McCoskey, 1833-1834; Rev. Richard Umstead Morgan, 1834-1850; Rev. Milton C. Lightner, 1850-1861; Rev. Alexander G. Cummings, 1861-1866; Rev. J. P. Lundy, D. D., 1866-1868; Rev. J. Pinckney Hammond, 1868-1872; Rev. William P. Orrick, D. D., 1873 to the present time. [Supplied by Rev. William P. Orrick, D. D.]

JOHN A. STROHECKER, one of the foremost citizens of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the painting and decorating business at No. 439 North Eleventh street, has also been prominent in the public life of the city, and was recently Democratic candidate from the Eleventh ward for the select council. Mr. Strohecker was born in Reading July 6, 1867, son of Edward and Ellen (Hafer) Strohecker.

Edward Strohecker, father of John A., was born in Reading, where for upward of thirty years he was engaged in the butchering business, retiring some years prior to his death. He was married to Ellen Hafer, and they became the parents of these children: Emma, who married Sherman Yeager; Rosa, who married Jacob Custer; Sallie, who is single; John A.; and Edwin, who resides in Reading.

John A. Strohecker received his education in the public schools of his native city, after leaving which he learned the painter's trade with Edward Fasig, in whose employ he remained for four years. He then engaged in business on his own account at Phoenixville, Chester county, continuing there successfully for three years, at the end of which time he went to Oneonta, N. Y., and there spent a like period. On his return to Reading he established himself in business at No. 439 North Eleventh street, where he has one of the leading business houses of its kind in the city. A Democrat in politics, Mr. Strohecker has always been an unswerving supporter of his party's principles, and his enterprise and public spirit make him the leading candidate for the office he is seeking. He was one of the first members of Reading Encampment of Progressive Americans, No. 1, and is also connected with Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 65, Knights of Pythias. With his family he attends the Reformed Church.

In 1891 Mr. Strohecker was married to Annie Muringer, daughter of Sebastian and Matilda (Regenfuse) Muringer, of French ancestry, and one son has been born to this union, namely: Raymond.

WILLIAM K. LOTT, one of the old and honored residents of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the grocery and tobacco business, was born in this city, Jan. 1, 1833, son of William and grandson of Nicholas Lott, the first stone-cutter of the town or borough of Reading.

Nicholas Lott came to this country from Germany and settled in Reading on Penn, above Ninth street, where he died at the age of eighty-seven years, he and his wife having four children, namely: Nicholas, William, Jacob and John.

William Lott, father of William K., was born in Reading, and when a young man learned the hatting business, which he followed successfully for a number of years on Penn street, being one of the first in the city to engage in that business. Mr. Lott died at the age of fifty-one years. He married Margaret Kutz, daughter of Adam Kutz, and their children were: Nicholas; William K.; Susan; Adam; Clara J.; Caroline and John.

William K. Lott attended the public schools of his native city, and under the tuition of his father learned the hatting trade, a business which he followed with much success for a period of fifty years in all. For several years he was engaged in the manufacture of hats with William Lenn on Penn street, and after this partnership was dissolved Mr. Lott embarked in the hotel business at Moss and Walnut streets. After continuing in the hotel business for sixteen years, Mr. Lott, in 1885, located at his present place, Tenth and Walnut streets, and here engaged in the grocery and tobacco business, in which he has successfully continued to the present time. His property, which he purchased several years ago, has a frontage of thirty-four feet, six inches on Tenth street, and 110 feet on Walnut street, and is well appointed and stocked with a full line of first class goods.

Mr. Lott was married to Sarah Derr, daughter of Samuel Derr, and she died in 1872, leaving one child, Ellen, who is the wife of Monroe A. Miller, traveling salesman for Kline, Eppihimer & Company, of Reading.

Mr. Lott is a Mason, being a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, and was one of the first members of the Rainbow Fire Company, later joining the Ringgold Hose Company. He is a member of the Reformed Church. For a man of his advanced years Mr. Lott has a wonderful memory, and his many reminiscences of the earlier days of Reading are both interesting and instructing. He is highly esteemed in Reading, where he has a host of friends.

LOUIS BATTENFELD, the proprietor of a hotel at the corner of Reed and Walnut streets, Reading, was born April 19, 1852, in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. Henry Battenfeld, father of Louis, came to America in 1854. He went west where he remained until 1856, when he went to Reading and there resided until his death, which occurred in October, 1905, at the age of eighty-two years. Mr. Battenfeld helped to build the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and to the close of his active life worked in the machine department of that company. He is buried in the German Lutheran cemetery. His wife was Catherine Mengle of Hesse-Darmstadt. They had one son, Louis.

In 1865 Mr. Louis Battenfeld came to America and for eleven years was engaged as a locksmith and hardware merchant at New Britain, Conn. He came to Reading in 1876 and entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Co., at the foot of Sixth street, continuing in the lock department for nine years, resigning to accept a position with a Mr. Fitzgerald. With the latter gentleman he remained until 1887, when he left his employ to engage in the hotel business at No. 647 Walnut street, and was located at this number until 1890, in this year removing to his present property, which was formerly a private residence. Mr. Battenfeld remodeled the building, and is now operating a family hotel of twelve rooms. He has a first-class trade, and also carries a finely assorted stock of wines and liquors, making a specialty of Moselle wine.

Mr. Battenfeld was married (first) in 1874, to Lena May, who died in 1876, aged twenty-two years. His second marriage was to Sophia Bernhardt, of Connecticut, who died in 1891, aged thirty-six years, and by whom he had seven children, two of whom survive: Henry and Gertrude. Mr. Battenfeld's third marriage was to Alice Boas, of Reading, daughter of Albert Boas, and to this union were born two children, one of whom, Lewis S., survives. He is attending school.

In political belief Mr. Battenfeld is independent in city matters, voting for the man rather than the party, but in national issues he is a Republican. He is prominent in fraternal organizations, belonging to Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. E., Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M., and the Junior Fire Company. He formerly was a member of the I. O. O. F. and the Harmonie Maennerchor, of which latter organization he was president for ten years, and of which he is now an honorary member. He is a member of the German Lutheran Church.

ST. JOHN'S EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH of Boyertown, Pa. The first record of this congregation is a baptism on the 30th of June, 1811. Whatever historical records may have been kept are either destroyed or stored somewhere among the old papers and books of the families of the early secretaries of the congregation. This church is a daughter of the historic Falkner Swamp Church in New Hanover, Montgomery county. It was a part of the once large parish of which the Swamp congregation was the central church, but which from 1865 to 1887 consisted of these two only. Since the latter year the Boyertown congregation has been a separate parish. The pastors that have served the congregation were: Rev. Jacob Miller, from 1811 to 1829; Rev. Conrad Miller, 1829-1852; Rev. Nathan Yeager, 1853-1857; Rev. Henry Wendt, 1858-1864; Rev. Abraham H. Groh, 1865; Rev. Leonard Groh, 1866-1891; Rev. Charles C. Boyer, 1891-1893; Rev. Adam M. Weber, 1893 to date.

The congregation occupied jointly with the Reformed congregation the brick church (40x50 feet) on Philadelphia avenue until 1872. A peaceful and friendly separation of property rights was made, the Reformed congregation retaining the old property. The congregation was incorporated April 22, 1871. On August 17th and 18th, 1872, the new church building of brick, 90x55 feet, on Reading avenue, and costing $23,000, was dedicated. In 1882, a steeple 172 feet high was erected and a large bell placed in it. In 1893 an addition of 20x55 feet was erected, to provide more room for the Sunday-school which occupies the whole basement floor, and to furnish the space for the large pipe-organ, pastor's study, church council and society rooms. In 1898 a ten-room parsonage was built.

German was the language used in the services up to the last generation, which has demanded English services, both being now in use. The congregation is the largest of the Lutheran denomination in the county, outside of Reading, numbering over 1,000 members. The Sunday-school is thoroughly equipped and modern in its methods. It has a membership of 650. Other organizations of the members do work for the home church and general benevolence. This church gave the necessary $1,000 as first payment on the farm purchased for the Lutheran Orphans' Home at Topton, Pennsylvania. [Supplied by Rev. Adam M. Weber.]

GEORGE W. SASSAMAN, serving his second term as councilman of the Seventh ward of Reading, Pa., is a native of that city, and is the son of Isaac Sassaman. Isaac Sassaman was born in Amity township, Berks county, but early in life came to Reading, where for many years he was extensively engaged in the ice business, and where he died in 1884, at the age of fifty-one years. He married Sarah Strunk, and to this union were born: Isaac N., of Fort Washington; John C., also of that place; George W.; and Daniel J., of Reading.

George W. Sassaman's literary training was obtained in the public schools of Reading, after leaving which he went to learn the trade of box making at the Reading Box Factory. Mr. Sassaman has been with that firm for ten years, and is now holding the position of foreman. He has been prominent in the ranks of the Democratic party in this section, and is serving his second term as Councilman from the Seventh ward of the city, having also held a number of minor offices, and having been a delegate to numerous county conventions. He is prominently connected fraternally, being a member of Juniata Tribe of Red Men, No. 74, and for two years Secretary of State of Appeals of that order; he is also identified with the I. O. O. F., No. 169. He has served as president of the Haymakers' Association, is treasurer of the Amphion Musical and Social Club, and a member of the Junior Fire Company of Reading.

Mr. Sassaman was united in marriage with Miss Sara Sassaman, daughter of Jacob Sassaman, and they reside at No. 423 Elm street. Mr. Sassaman is highly esteemed both in public and business life, and he has proven himself a worthy citizen and public-spirited man.

JOHN H. MOHR, deceased, who will be remembered by the older business men of this section as a leading merchant of his day, and who spent his life in Mohrsville, which town was founded by his ancestors many years before, was born in that borough in 1804.

Mr. Mohr received his education in the schools of his native place, and early in life his attention was turned to the mercantile business, in which he was successfully engaged throughout his life. His death occurred in the prime of his life, in 1857. Mr. Mohr was married to Angeline Madeira, daughter of Nicholas and Rebecca (Wartz) Madeira, and granddaughter of Michael Madeira, and there were six children born to this union, as follows: John J.; James N.; Lewis; Howard N., who is deceased; Susannah M., and Anna, deceased.

In religious belief Mr. John H. Mohr was a Lutheran, while his wife was connected with the faith of the Reformed Church.

FRANK K. KEMMERER, a leading agriculturist of Berks county, Pa., whose fine tract of land is located in the eastern end of Richmond township, was born May 19, 1861, in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, son of Daniel Kemmerer.

John and Polly Kemmerer, the grandparents of Frank K., were prosperous farming people and landowners of Maiden-creek township, and were the parents of these children: Elvina; Maria; Elias; Daniel and Caroline. This family were Dunkards and strictly observed the principles of that faith, while in political matters the Kemmerers have always been Democrats. Daniel Kemmerer, of this couple's family, is a farmer of Maiden-creek township, and owns two excellent properties in the vicinity of Evansville. He was married to Sally M. Kramer, daughter of Jacob and Polly (Strausser) Kramer, and to them were born these children: Frank K.; and Sarah, the wife of J. S. Hains, the merchant at Molltown, who succeeded Mr. Kemmerer in the spring of 1905.

Frank K. Kemmerer was reared on his father's farm, and obtained his education in the local schools. He commenced farming for himself in 1885 and continued until 1889, in which year he located upon his father's farm. In 1892 he engaged in a mercantile business at Molltown, in Maiden-creek township, but sold out after a successful business career of thirteen years. On engaging in business at Molltown, Mr. Kemmerer was appointed postmaster, and this office he has held to the present time. In the spring of 1905 Mr. Kemmerer purchased the old Kemp Hotel property in Richmond township, on the eastern road between Kutztown and Moselem Springs, this farm consisting of forty-nine acres of good land, which he has placed in the best condition. Mr. Kemmerer is a Democrat in his political views, but has never aspired to office, although he keeps himself well posted on the issues of the day.

On May 31, 1879, Mr. Kemmerer was married to Katie B. Yoder, daughter of John and Sallie (Baer) Yoder, farming people of Maiden-creek township, and to this union there have been born: Sallie, who married Robert Weidenhamer, Reading; Charles, who married Hattie Adam; Cora, Katie and Samuel, all single, who reside at home with their parents.

WILLIAM H. SPERRY, a representative business man of Reading, Pa., who is proprietor of Sperry's Cafe, formerly the Washington Library, was born at "The Buck," in Chester county, Pa., Jan. 18, 1863, son of Samuel and Sarah (Feather) Sperry.

Francis Sperry, the grandfather of William H., was a resident of Warwick township, Montgomery county, Pa., was a farmer by occupation, and died at the ripe old age of ninety-four years, in about 1872. He had two sons, namely: Francis, who died in 1898, and who had two sons, Samuel and Jacob, who both died at Norristown; and Samuel, the father of William H.

Samuel Sperry was born in December, 1829, in Worcester township, Montgomery county, and died at Reading, May 13, 1901, and was buried at Pottstown. He was a farmer and carriage builder in Pottstown, occupations which he also followed in Chester county, and later became the proprietor of the "Mansion House," at Boyertown, which he successfully conducted for a number of years. He married Sarah Feather, who survives him and makes her home with her son William H., and they had three children, namely: Clara and George, both of whom died young; and William H.

William H. Sperry was educated at Washington Hall, The Trappe, Pa., having prior to this attended Koons' Pleasant View Seminary, at Boyertown, Pa. When eighteen years old he became a clerk in J. & H. K. Boyer's general store at Boyertown, learning the grocery, dry-goods and hardware business, and continued one year as an apprentice and one year as a journeyman. He then became a hotel clerk in his father's hostelry at Boyertown, Pa., in which capacity he continued for fourteen years, and in 1889 he came to Reading and engaged in the coal business at Ninth and Marion streets, continuing in this line for four years. Subsequently he rented Frill's coal yard, which had been established by George Frill about 1850, at the present site of Luden's candy factory, and here Mr. Sperry continued for four years, handling about 9,000 tons of coal annually, and also engaging in contracting. He removed the old building located on the site of the present Masonic Temple, on North Fifth street, excavated that cellar, which is the largest in the city of Reading, being 228 x 54 feet, and also delivered 600 tons of iron there from the Eighth street freight house. He then sold out his coal business on North Eighth street, and in July, 1897, he engaged in the hotel business at No. 217 North Eighth street, where he continued about seven years. His next venture was the conducting of the "Hotel Monterey," at Atlantic City, for one year, but in 1903 he returned to Reading and assumed charge of his present place of business, located at No. 640 Penn street, which is one of the most popular and best patronized stands in Reading.

Fraternally, Mr. Sperry is connected with Stichter Lodge No. 254, F. & A. M., of Pottstown; Excelsior Chapter, Reading Commandery, Council at Bethlehem, Lodge of Perfection and Consistory at Bloomsburg, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Reading. He is also a member of Opopokasset Tribe No. 122, I. O. R. M., of Reading, having passed all the chairs and being past sachem. In June, 1907, at the Great Council at Lancaster, Pa., to which he had been elected a representative of his tribe, Mr. Sperry was appointed District Deputy Great Sachem of Pennsylvania, having charge of five tribes of Reading, comprising about 1,800 Red Men. He is very popular in this order, and numbers his friends by the number of his acquaintances.

On Nov. 24, 1887, Mr. Sperry was married to Mary E. Merkel, daughter of Frederick and Fredericka Merkel, natives of Germany, and one son has been born to this union, namely: S. Merkel Sperry.

JAMES O. LEIBOLD, justice of the peace and farmer in Albany township, Berks county, was born in that township Sept. 14, 1876, son of John and Maria A. (Steigerwald), grandson of Johan George Leibold and Maria C. (Gesi) Leibold, and great-grandson of Heinrich and Salome Gesi, of Switzerland.

Johan George Leibold, grandfather of James O., was born in Oberamt Marbach, Reilinghaus, Germany, May 11, 1803, and died in Albany township, Berks county, Pa., April 17, 1892. He was a farmer and shoemaker. At the age of thirty years he came to America, and settled in Longswamp township, Berks county, where lived an elder brother whose emigration had taken place some years before. He then went to Kutztown, where he bought a home and followed his trade of shoemaking. From Kutztown he located in Albany township, where he purchased a farm, but after living on it some years he sold it, and then purchased the one which now belongs to his grandson, James O., and where he died. He was a well educated man, and was especially versed in the Scriptures. He was a man of progress and enterprise, and was highly esteemed in the community. In his business affairs he was eminently successful, and his death was sincerely deplored. He was active in Democratic politics, but always refused to accept public office. He was a Lutheran member of Friedens Church at Wessnersville, where he is buried. He married Maria C. Gesi, daughter of Heinrich and Salome Gesi, of Switzerland. She was born Aug. 8, 1810, and died May 5, 1875. They had five children, as follows: Mary, who died soon after her marriage to Daniel Snyder; John; Henry, who lived in Heidelberg township; Catharine, m. to Cyrus Dries, of Reading; and Elizabeth, m. to John Boyd, of Cementon, Pa.

John (or Johan) Leibold, son of Johan George and father of James O., was born in Maxatawny township March 30, 1838, and was but a child when brought by his parents to Albany township to the farm now owned by his son, James O. He was a shoemaker by trade, and followed that occupation up to the time of his death, Nov. 4, 1906. He also conducted a farm of fifty-five acres, and made many improvements on his place. He was an active member of the Lutheran congregation at Friedens Church, and held a number of offices therein. During the war of the Rebellion, he served in Company G, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He married Maria A. Steigerwald, born Feb. 24, 1845, daughter of John Steigerwald; she died Oct. 20, 1882. Their children were: Amandus A., of Reading; Messina, deceased wife of Elmer Lutz; Frank, of Reading; Fred, deceased; William, of Erie, Pa.; Annie, m. to James Shears, of Reading; Alice, m. to William A. Bauscher, of Albany; Charles E., of Atlanta, Ga.; and Martha L., wife of Henry Knauss, of Allentown, Pennsylvania.

James O. Leibold was educated in the township schools, and was reared upon the farm, working for his parents until eighteen years of age. He was then hired out to a farmer near Allentown, Lehigh county, and when twenty years of age learned the milling trade. In 1898 he and his brother Amandus A. formed a partnership under the firm name of Leibold & Brother, and leased the Van Reed mill at West Reading. In 1900 they took charge of Shadel's mill at Shillington, which they successfully conducted three years. The firm then dissolved, and Mr. James O. Leibold became the representative of H. R. Kearney & Company, of Minneapolis, Minn., extensive flour merchants of that city, and he continued with them for two years, or until he suffered an attack of typhoid fever. He then resigned and accepted his position with M. C. Dietrich, of Kempton, a merchant, grain and lumber dealer, with whom he remained from 1904 to the spring of 1907. At the close of his connection with Mr. Dietrich he purchased his father's farm near Kempton, consisting of fifty-five acres. This he has since cared for, and has made a success of it, paying especial attention to potato culture.

Mr. Leibold is a Democrat in politics, and in the spring of 1908 he was elected a justice of the peace in Albany township, an office he is now filling with great ability. He is also committeeman of his township, and is a very influential factor in politics. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Americans at Shillington, of which he is a charter member; and of the Knights of Friendship, at Mohnton. He and his family are members of Friedens Reformed Church at Wessnersville.

Mr. Leibold married Montana Long, daughter of Jonas and Catharine (Snyder) Long, of Wessnersville, and they have two children: Edith F. and Ethel M.

ST. PAUL'S MEMORIAL REFORMED CHURCH, Reading, Pa. St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church came into being in response to the need of another English congregation in Reading. A constantly increasing number of members of the First Reformed Church desired an exclusively English service, and this fact led to the founding of St. Paul's Reformed Church in 1872, under the inspiring leadership of Rev. B. Bausman, D. D., who had become the pastor of the First Church in 1863. The First Reformed Church donated ground worth about $24,000 to their new daughter. This ground included the cemetery of the old First Church.

With a colony of 198 members Dr. Bausman left the First Church and became the pastor of the new enterprise. His election took place on January 6, 1873. The erection of the building was begun in the spring of 1871. The corner stone was laid on August 27th of the same year, and in August, 1872, the chapel was dedicated. The dedication of the completed church took place on Sunday, Feb. 15, 1874, almost three years after ground had been broken for its erection. In 1892 and 1893 the chapel was remodeled and enlarged at a cost of $15,000. The reopening took place May 7, 1893. The congregation has a plant valued at $125,000.

In 1900 Rev. C. E. Creitz became the assistant to Dr. Bausman, which position he held until Dr. Bausman's death, on May 8, 1909, shortly after which he was elected pastor of the congregation.

The congregation is fully organized for efficient work, having a Sunday-school, a Missionary Society, a Ladies' Society, a Young Ladies' Guild, a Christian Endeavor Society, and two benevolent organizations—a Brotherhood and a Sisterhood. The congregation has raised about $400,000 for various purposes. Nearly one-half of this amount has gone to benevolence. The church has helped nearly all the Reformed churches that have been built in the city during its history. The present membership is 900. [Supplied by Rev. C. E. Creitz.]

SAMUEL ADAM, one of the thrifty young agriculturists of Berks county, Pa., who is engaged in cultivating the fine property in Windsor township, until 1904 the homestead of his father, was born April 27, 1876, on this farm, son of Charles Adam and Lydia (Ritter) Adam.

Anthony Adam, the progenitor of this numerous family in America, who is said to have been a French Huguenot, came to America on the ship "Snow Polly," and landed at Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 26, 1741. As he was then twenty-five years of age he must have been born in 1716. On the same ship on which he crossed the Atlantic were a number of the ancestors of old Albany and Greenwich township families, whose descendants live in the same district, and in a few cases the original lands and homesteads are still in possession of their progeny. Who the wife of this pioneer Adam settler was, is not known. It is probable that he settled in Albany township immediately after his arrival in the New World, as he was a settler there as early as 1752, and he witnessed and participated in the trying times of the French and Indian wars, when such events as the horrible massacre of Jacob Gerhart's family, the killing of the wife of Balser Neyfong and the shooting of David Howell occurred. It is known that Anthony Adam had these sons: Abraham, Anthony and Bernhard, who located in Schuylkill county; and Peter.

Peter Adam, the great-great-grandfather of Samuel, was born Oct. 1, 1765, and died July 1, 1849, aged eighty-three years, nine months. On March 11, 1788 he was married to Catherine Houseknecht, who bore him ten children, as follows: Jacob, who married Anna Maria Gardner; Anthony, who married a Miss Schappell; Peter; Abraham; John; William; George; Betz; who married Abraham Snyder; Hannah, who married Benjamin Merkel; and Polly, who married Daniel Schappell.

Jacob Adam, son of Peter, was born Oct. 18, 1789, and died Dec., 1866, in his seventy-eighth year. His wife was Anna Maria Gardner, born July 16, 1793, and died Aug. 7, 1874, in the eighty-second year of her age. They had these children: Hannah, who married Daniel Bausher; William, who married Betz Kramer; Heinrich, who married Harriet Focht; Jacob (1816-1894) who married Lovine Smith (1822-1905); Peter, who died single, aged twenty-one years; Benjamin, who married (first) Esther Smith, and (second) Catherine Lengel; Isaac, born Nov. 12 1820, who is still hale and hearty, married (first) Lovina Hattenstein, and (second) Esther Adam: Betzy, who married John Gerhart; Polly, who married Reuben Strasser; Lazarus, who died aged fifty-nine years; Simon, who died in 1867, in the thirty-third year of his age; Catherine, who married Samuel Schappell; and Lydia, who maried Jacob Kershner.

William Adam, grandfather of Samuel, was born in Windsor township, where he spent his whole life, and is buried at Moselem Church. He was an excellent carpenter and cabinet-maker and was also engaged in the undertaking business. He was married to Betz Kramer, and to them were born a number of children, one of whom was Charles, the father of Samuel.

Charles Adam was born in Windsor township, July 26, 1836, and died May 3, 1902, from the effects of Bright's disease. He was reared in Greenwich township, where he learned the trade of carpenter when a young man, and this he followed for six years, the next six years of his life being spent in threshing among the farmers of his section. He then purchased a property above Hamburg, at the tunnel, and lived for several years, at the end of which time he sold out and purchased the premises now owned by Samuel Adam. Here he spent the remainder of his life. Mr. Adam was a Democrat, as had been all of the members of his family before him, and served his district as school director for six years. He and his family worshiped at Zion's Union Church, of which they were Reformed members.

Mr. Adam married Lydia Ritter, daughter of Frederick and Sallie (Strasser) Ritter, the former a German immigrant, and a "Swope." On coming to this country Mr. Ritter was very poor, but like many of his thrifty fellow-countrymen, after landing in America worked industriously, and at the time of his death was in comfortable circumstances. His children were: George, a farmer of Greenwich township; Dr. Jonas, a physician of Norristown Hospital; Dr. Nathan, a physician at Allentown, Pa.; David, a merchant; Rev. John, deceased; Simon, a farmer of Montgomery county; Anna, who married Joel Miller; Sallie who married John Fisher, of Berks county; Polly, who married William Balthaser; and Lydia, who married Mr. Adam. To Charles and Mrs. Adam there were born the following children: Louisa; Fianna; B. Franklin; Alvin; Katie; Victoria; Albert; Samuel; Alice, who met her death by gas suffocation in Reading; Ida Louisa; Thomas; Ella; Jeremiah P.; Amy and three who died in childhood.

Samuel Adam secured a good common school education in the schools of his native district, and with the exception of a few years, has spent his entire life on the farm where he now resides. After his marriage in 1900 he located on the Reading Railroad farm in Tilden township, where he tenanted for one year, then became a tenant on John Balthaser's farm in the same township, where he lived another year, afterward, until 1904, locating on Charles Deysher's farm in Maxatawny township. In the year above mentioned he bought the old homestead on which he had been born, settling thereon in the spring of the year. This fine property of ninety-six acres, the work on which has been conducted by Mr. Adam and his estimable wife, is one of the best improved in the community, the buildings having been repaired and remodeled by Mr. Adam. He is considered one of the good, practical farmers of his community, and his many sterling characteristics have won him the esteem of his fellow-townsmen.

On Feb. 25, 1899, Mr. Adam was married to Mary B. Ketner, daughter of Isaac and Emma (Billman) Ketner, and to them have been born these children: Sadie May; Amy A., who died March 10, 1901, of paralysis; Clayton A.; Amandus C.; Hermie A.; and Edith V.

WILLIAM KUNKEL, a prosperous young farmer in Albany township, living near Kempton, was born Sept. 25, 1879, at the place where he now lives, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Hartman) Kunkel. He is a descendant in the fifth generation from (I) Georg Kunkel, who came from Germany and who lived where Nathan Kunkel now resides, near Wessnersville. Georg Kunkel at one time owned all the upper end of Stony Run. His children were George and Peter.

(II) Peter Kunkel, son of Georg, born Dec. 20, 1774, in Albany township, died Oct. 28, 1830. After his marriage he moved to Lynn township, Lehigh county, where he engaged in farming and also operated a distillery on his farm. Later he lived near Wessnersville, where he owned a tract of 275 acres, which is now owned by a descendant, Charles Kunkel. All the land in upper Stony Run was once in the name of this family. In 1797 Peter Kunkel married Maria Magdalena Rausch, born Nov. 10, 1778, died April 12, 1846. They had fourteen children, eleven of whom survived their parents (sixteen grandchildren also surviving). Among these children were: Daniel; David; Andraes; Benjamin; Joseph (mentioned elsewhere); Peter; Polly m. Jacob Elbert; Catharine m. John Dietrich; and Sophia.

(III) Daniel Kunkel, son of Peter, was born in Albany township, Berks county, March 2, 1798, and died Oct. 26, 1863. He was a farmer, living on and owning the farm which later became the property of his son Jacob, who sold it to Henry Bauscher, his brother-in-law, in 1870, for $10,000. It comprises 127 acres of excellent land, situated in the potato belt, and is now tenanted and cultivated by Daniel Bauscher, son of Henry. The present barn on the place was built by Daniel Kunkel. He married in 1821 Maria Magdalena Zimmerman, born Feb. 27, 1797, died July 14, 1859, and they are buried at the Friedens Church at Wessnersville. They had a large family, thirteen children, among whom were: A daughter who married Daniel Brobst; Catharine, who married Reuben A. Dietrich; Mary, who married a Mr. Derr; Benjamin, mentioned below; John, who lived and died at McKeansburg, Pa.; Jacob, born in 1841, died in 1900; and Sarah, who married Henry Bauscher.

(IV) Benjamin Kunkel was born July 27, 1831, in Albany township, where he passed all his life. He died May 24, 1904. He lived retired for a number of years before his death. Mr. Kunkel was a substantial citizen, and in his day one of the best-known men of Albany township. He served as assessor of his township for many years. He and his wife were hospitable people, and visitors to their home were always treated to homemade bread, butter and honey, as they kept many bees and always had plenty of honey. In 1866, Mr. Kunkel built the present brick house. He married Sarah Hartman, born in 1834, who came from a Lehigh county family, and who died Dec. 29, 1904. Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel are buried at the New Bethel Church, where the Kunkel monument marks their last resting-place. They were Lutherans in religious connection, and he was a Democrat in politics.

Thirteen children were born to Benjamin and Sarah (Hartman) Kunkel, five of whom died young. We have the following record of the family: James Monroe, born in 1855, died in 1858; Albert D., born Dec. 28, 1858, is a business man of Klinesville; Matilda, born in 1860, died in 1861; Ellen (deceased) m. Benjamin Levan and lived in Lehigh county; Frances is deceased; Rosa m. Jairus K. Trexler, of Lehigh county; Benjamin is a farmer in Maxatawny township; Sallie S., born in 1872, died in 1894, married Dr. Douglass S. Kistler; Lorenia, married George W. Lutz, of Albany township; Amanda, born in 1876, died in 1904; William; and two who died in infancy.

(V) William Kunkel obtained his education in the public schools and at a select school at Steinsville, which he attended two terms. He worked for his parents until he was of age, and in the spring of 1901 began farming on the old homestead on his own account. He has continued to follow agricultural pursuits with much success. He has owned the place since 1905. It consists of 197 acres of good land in the potato belt, and his crops are good in all lines. He raises from three thousand to four thousand bushels of potatoes annually, besides large crops of grain, and he has a full stock of farm implements as well as many conveniences for facilitating his work, including a wind pump. His farm stock is valuable. On his land are two large barns, one of which was built by his father, and the other by his grandfather, Daniel Kunkel. His large and comfortable brick residence is surrounded by a fine lawn and a neat iron fence incloses the whole, which is remarkable for its neat and attractive appearance. There is an abundance of excellent water on this place. Like his father, Mr. Kunkel raises bees, having seven hives at present.

On Nov. 25, 1899, Mr. Kunkel married Miss Sallie A. Loy, daughter of Phaeon and Louisa (Miller) Loy, farming people of Albany township; her grandparents were Michael and Polly (Behler) Loy, who lived on the farm now owned by their son, Phaeton. Mr. and Mrs. Kunkel have a daughter, Lovie Mae. The family are Lutheran members of the New Bethel (Corner) Church, of Albany, of which Mr. Kunkel has served as organist since 1899. The church music is also under his supervision, Mr. Kunkel being a popular music teacher in this district, where he has given instruction to many of the young people. He is a Democrat in politics, and served three years as township assessor.

CHARLES H. FIX, engaged in the truck and general merchandise business, at Reading, Pa., is a native of the city, born March 8, 1868, son of Harrison and Sarah (Keefer) Fix, and grandson of Samuel L. Fix.

Samuel L. Fix was a native of Berks county, and followed farming all of his life. He was considered well to do for his day, and was a representative citizen of his locality. A consistent member of the Lutheran Church, Mr. Fix was politically a Republican. He died in 1894, aged ninety-four years, and his wife in 1870, when seventy years of age, they being the parents of: Charles; Frank; Hiram; Thomas; Harrison; Amanda, deceased, who married Daniel Miller; Ann, who married David Heifer; Caroline, single; Charles, who owned considerable land in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, and Emma, who married William Phillip, of Philadelphia.

Harrison Fix was educated in the common schools of Exeter township, after leaving which he worked on a farm for several years, and then turned his attention to boating on the Canal, supplying the Reading furnaces with iron ore from Fritz's Island, an occupation which he carried on for seven or eight years. At the time of his death, in 1893, he owned considerable property on South Sixth street. Religiously he was a Lutheran. He was one of the first to answer the call for troops in the Civil war, enlisting with a regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers and serving throughout the war with an excellent record. Politically he was a Republican, and was always greatly interested in public matters although he never sought office for himself. He was a member of the Liberty Fire Company. To Mr. and Mrs. Fix were born: Mary, who married William Hall; Samuel L.; Charles H.; Edward; William; Flora, who married Martin Wall, and Harrison. After Mr. Fix's death, Mrs. Fix married Rev. Mr. Cornman.

Charles H. Fix was educated in the schools of Reading, and as a boy worked for the Reading Iron Company, with which company he remained for fifteen years as foreman over the trough gang. He then engaged in the grocery business, in 1897 locating at No. 600 South Sixth Street, and here he carried a full line of canned goods, groceries, smoked meats, bread, pies and cakes, fruits, vegetables, dry goods, notions and ready-made clothing. He gained a large and constantly increasing trade, the excellence of Mr. Fix's goods insuring him a steady patronage. He owns three properties in Reading. Although a loyal Republican, Mr. Fix is no office seeker, preferring to give his time and attention to his business interests.

In 1890 Charles H. Fix and Elizabeth B. Sowders were united in marriage. She is the daughter of William Sowders of No. 519 South Tenth Street, and four children have been born to the union: Paul, Harry, Esther and George.

HIRAM F. DRY, the present proprietor of the Oley Roller Mills, of Oley township, was born in Rockland township, Berks county, on Jan. 14, 1860. His grandfather, Gideon Dry, was born in the same township. He is buried in Mertz churchyard at Stony Point. His wife was a Miss Kutz. They had the following children: Benneville, who has a son, Glancey, living at Lenhartsville, Pa.; John, father of Hiram F.; Samuel, of New Jerusalem; Nicholas, also of New Jerusalem, Pa.; Hannah and Susann, who own the old homestead, and reside there, near Stony Point; Elizabeth who married Isaac Hottenstein (they had two sons, Charles A. and Frank, and a daughter, Mary).

John Dry, the father of Hiram F., was born also in Rockland township, Sept. 11, 1826, and died there Aug. 8, 1906. He is buried at Mertz's church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He was by trade a stonemason, and in addition conducted a farm of some 26 acres in Rockland township. He married Hannah Funk, daughter of George and Catharine (Gerhard) Funk, and to them were born the following children: Charles, who lives at Mifflinsville, Columbia county, Pa.; Augustus, of New Jerusalem, Pa.; Hiram F., the subject of this review; Henry, who died in youth; Alvin, now residing at Bechtelsville, Pa., and Sarah who died at the age of twelve years.

Hiram F. Dry passed the earlier years of his life on his father's farm, and gave him his services until his full majority, attending the public schools in his childhood; he received a scholastic training in a subscription school conducted at Lyons, Pa. Professor Samuel A. Baer, in 1879, signed his license to teach, and he conducted one of the Rockland township schools successfully for two terms. For reasons which then seemed to him sufficient and satisfactory, he changed the course of his life by apprenticing himself to the milling trade with Lewis Carl, of Bowers. This trade Mr. Dry has since followed, for a number of years as employee, and with success. In 1892 he accepted employment under Morris Carl, and for two years continuing as employee, he then bought out the business, and has since conducted the mill. He makes a specialty of the brands "Peerless" and "White Rose," having a waiting market in Reading and throughout Berks county.

Mr. Dry was married in 1880 to Hettie Boyer, a daughter of Daniel and Judith (Yause) Boyer, old and esteemed residents of Rockland township. Mr. and Mrs. Dry have five children: Sally; Laura; Horace who married Deborah De Turck, and resides with his parents; Elda, and Minnie.

A Democrat in politics, Mr. Dry never fails to cast his ballot, though he has no inclination to hold office. He is a force in the councils of the party at the different conventions, and has served one term as Judge of elections. He is known as a friend of education, having supervised the schools of Oley township for six years as a member of the board of directors. He and his family are worthy members of Mertz's church at Stony Point, and are held in merited esteem by a large circle.

OWEN H. KOLLER, one of the well-known residents of Richmond township, Berks county, who is engaged as an agriculturist and dairyman near Fleetwood, was born June 21, 1858, in Ontelaunee township on one of the Koller homesteads.

Michael Koller, Jr., who was a citizen of Longswamp township in 1759, and who paid tax in that year, is supposed to have been the founder of the Koller family in America. His son, John Koller, had two sons and two daughters: David; John; Polly Mertz and Sally Ann Hoch. Of these children David Koller was the grandfather of Owen H. He was a farmer of Maidencreek township, where he owned property as well as a large piece of land in Ontelaunee township. David Koller married Hannah Kirby, daughter of David Kirby, and to this union were born children as follows: Eliza, who married John Kauffman; Solomon; John; Hannah, who married Stephen Berndt; Mary, the wife of James Leiby; Lydia, who married Nicholas Madeira; and Diana, the wife of Ephraim Peters.

Solomon Koller was born Nov. 1, 1831, and married Hettie Reiser, daughter of Jacob and Maria (Dunkel) Reiser, their children being: Mary, the wife of Joel Hoch, postmaster at Fleetwood, Pa.; Owen H.; Sally R., who is single and lives with her mother in Fleetwood; Isabella, who died aged twenty-nine years; Lena, the wife of Eugene Fegler of Lyons, Pa.; and Howard, whose death occurred in the sixth year of his age. Solomon Koller followed farming all of his life, and was a well known and much esteemed citizen.

Owen H. Koller was educated in the schools of his district and this was supplemented by two full terms at the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown. Mr. Koller has spent his whole life in the vicinity of his present home. He has a fine farm bounding Fleetwood borough on the north and in 1905 he built a spacious cement block residence, surrounded by a large, well-kept lawn, which is enclosed by a modern lawn fence. In addition to his farming interests, Mr. Koller operates a dairy and sends a dairy team to the borough every day, supplying the best families. He is politically a Democrat, and served two terms as supervisor of his township. He and his family are members of the U. E. Church, Emanuel, of Fleetwood.

On Sept. 29, 1877, Mr. Koller was married to Ellen Mertz, daughter of John and Sarah (Sailer) Mertz of Richmond township, and to this union were born two children: Charles I., who married Katie M. A. Burkhert and has one son, Paul B.; and Howard S., who married Clara B. Reider.

BOLICH. The Bolich family is an old one in Berks county, and was founded in America by the great-great-grandfather of Reuben W. Bolich.

Andraes Bolich was a native of the German Palatinate and crossed the ocean with 171 other passengers on the ship "Neptune," which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 24, 1754. It is not known where he spent the intervening time, but it is of record that he settled in Greenwich township, Berks county, some time after 1765. He was a tiller of the soil and a man of decided German characteristics. His will, recorded in Book A, page 11, is of record March 16, 1780, and he died the following month. To his son Andrew (Andraes) were bequeathed the plantation and all the implements, and he was to pay £300 sterling to his seven sisters in installments. An item appears in the will which evidently shows the favorite daughter, reading, "My daughter, Dorothea, shall have a yearling heifer," so many pounds of flax, beef, etc. The will contains as witnesses the names of Philip Arnold and Benedict Kohler, who will be recognized as early pioneers of the county.

Andraes Bolich, son of the ancestor, lived in Greenwich township, with his wife Margaretha, and among their children, whose names do not appear, were Johan and Michael. The latter settled in the vicinity of Ashland, Schuylkill county, where he owned a large estate, and where his descendants now reside,—Michael Bolich of Mount Carmel, being one of them.

The Federal Census Report of 1790 recorded Andraes Bolich a resident of Greenwich township, and the head of a family consisting of his wife, one son under sixteen, and four daughters.

One Peter Bolich was a private in the Revolution; was for fourteen days in Captain John Robinson's Company, of Berks county, in October, 1781.

John Bolich, the grandfather was born in Greenwich township Feb. 4, 1784, son of Andreas (2). He passed his life in East Brunswick township, Schuylkill county, where he died 1867. He also was of the agricultural class, clearing away the forest for his large farm of 200 acres, this property having since been divided in two. He was a man who took an active interest in the public affairs of the district. He is buried at Friedens Church, near New Ringgold. His wife was Catharine Fisher, born in Greenwich township, Sept. 27, 1789, "at eight o'clock in the morning," her sponsors being Heinrich and Catharine Fisher, and she was the daughter of Frederick and Anna Maria (Leidy) Fisher, of Greenwich township. Their marriage occurred Oct. 13, 1807, and they had children born to them as follows: Susanna, born 1809, m. Joseph Allsbach; Johannes, 1811, m. Hannah Sechler; Catharine, 1813; Daniel, 1814; George, 1816; Samuel, 1817; Maria, 1819; William, 1820; Hannah, 1822; Christina, 1823, died 1841; Sarah, 1825; Benjamin, 1826; Joseph, 1831.

George Bolich was born in East Brunswick, Schuylkill county, Oct. 11, 1816. He died Jan. 29, 1902, and he is buried with his wife at Bolich's churchyard in Eckville, Albany township. This church was named after George Bolich, he having donated the land on which it was built. George Bolich was one of the industrious and prosperous farmers of his day. He was one of the stalwart Republicans of the county, and though he never sought office he was ever ready to stand for the principles he had espoused. He was devoutly pious, having been the leading spirit in the establishment of Bolich's church, contributing $1,000 toward its erection, in addition to the ground on which it is built. His whole religious life was wrapped up in his church, and he served it with devotion. Mr. Bolich came to Albany township about 1849 from East Penn township, Schuylkill county, where for five years he had operated a grist-mill. He purchased the farm now cultivated by his son Reuben, where he continued to reside until his demise. The wife and mother was Priscilla Wanamaker, of Lynnport, Lehigh county, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Kistler) Wanamaker. They reared the following family; Samuel, the eldest son, died aged forty-seven; Caroline m. Jacob Seidel; William resides at Drehersville; John, Amandus, Priscilla and Sarah died young; George is living at Drehersville; Alice m. Daniel Bailey; Jacob died aged seventeen; Reuben W. is the youngest.

Reuben W. Bolich has spent his life in Albany township, where he was born March 4, 1865. He was reared under the parental roof. His education was such as could be secured in the district schools of his day, but he has supplemented it with that education which comes from careful reading and an observant mind; and he is one of the substantial men of his community. He began farming for himself in the spring of 1891, on the old homestead, and has met with merited success. The old homestead contains now 220 acres. It was originally a "Gerhard" farm, and has somewhat of a romantic history, dating from the French and Indian war. The Gerhards lived on it at that time, and as this was on the frontier, the Indians made it the scene of one of their murderous, predatory raids. The house was burned, together with Jacob Gerhard and two of his daughters. It is of interest to note that the site of this house was where the present pig-sty now stands. This part of the Gerhard farm was later known as the Michael Hendrick estate, from which it was purchased in 1849 by George Bolich, it then consisting of 243 acres. It came into the possession of its present owner in 1899 by purchase. It is fertile, and has good buildings. Mr. Bolich plants from fifteen to twenty acres of potatoes, the specialty in his section. The present residence was built in 1875 by his father.

It occupies the site of a log house which is said to have been built as early as 1756, and which stood until 1875. The present barn was built in 1886, by George Bolich.

Reuben W. Bolich married at Albany, Oct. 31, 1891, Miss Emma Yenser, daughter of Moses and Fietta (Trexler) Yenser, and a granddaughter of George and Mary (Heilman) Yenser, residents of Lenhartsville. One daughter was born to this union,—Amelia Alice Bolich.

The Yensers are a German family of the county, who have lived for many years in the vicinity of Wessnersville. Besides Mrs. Bolich, there were in the family: Sarah (m. Albert D. Levan); William died at the age of twenty-six and had one son, George.

Mrs. Bolich is a lady of education and refinement. Her early education was secured in the common schools. Later she attended the Keystone State Normal at Kutztown. She then taught school successfully for some five years. Since her marriage she has interested herself in the intellectual life of the community. Mr. Bolich is a member of the Evangelical Association, at what is known as "Bolich" or "Eckville" church, of which he is a class-leader and official. Mrs. Bolich is a Lutheran member of New Bethel Church.

The annual reunions of the Bolich family are largely attended, the last one, the fifth, being held at Drehersville.

SAMUEL W. SLATER, one of the popular young business men of North Reading, Pa., who is proprietor of the "Riverside Hotel," was born in 1876, in Terre Hill, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Maberry and Margaret (Matz) Slater, the former of whom died in 1891, and the latter in 1882.

Samuel W. Slater was educated in the schools of Terre Hill, and as a boy learned the cigar making business, which he followed for three years. He then located in Reading, and entered the employ of Sternbergh, with whom he continued for one year, then serving a six months' apprenticeship with the Reading Scale and Machine works. Mr. Slater's next employment was as clerk in George Kenyon's hotel on Penn street, and later he was engaged for one year in the restaurant business for a Mr. Eberly, from whose employ he went to the Reading Market, being engaged with George N. Albright one year. Mr. Slater then became clerk of the "Riverside Hotel," under Harry Fidler, now deceased, and continued in this capacity until Mr. Fidler's death, when he was prevailed upon by the Brewing Company to accept the proprietorship of this hotel, which is one of the finest stands in this section of Reading. Mr. Slater has been very successful since taking charge of this well-known hostelry, and makes a very efficient hotel proprietor, being genial and courteous, and popular with all who know him. Fraternally he is connected with Reading Aerie, F. O. E., Knights of the Golden Eagle, Quakers, Neversink Fire Company, and Hotel and Restaurant Employers' National Alliance.

In 1902 Mr. Slater was married to Lillie Tomkins, of Trenton, N. J., and to them there has been born one child: Margaret. They are members of the Lutheran Church, and in political matters Mr. Slater is a Republican.

HARRY H. SHARTLE, a well-known citizen of Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, who is engaged in practical blacksmithing at Wernersville, was born at Womelsdorf, Berks county, Aug. 19, 1865, son of George and Mary Ann (Cox) Shartle.

Bernhard Shartle (sometimes "Schartle," "Scherdel," and "Sherdle") was born in Switzerland in 1708 or 1709, and when twenty-three years old crossed the ocean on the ship "Adventure" with many of his other countrymen, and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 23, 1732. Soon thereafter he settled in Berks county, in that section of Bern township now embraced in Upper Bern township, where he was a taxable in 1759, paying a tax of three pounds. The original place of settlement was on what is now State road, one mile east of the village of Shartlesville, the farm being now owned by O. F. Berger. The ancestor had sons named William; Jacob, who died in 1803, was a witness to the will of Catherine, the widow of his brother John Sherdel; John; and George, the great-grandfather of Harry H. Two daughters were married to Adam Kauffman and Jacob Albright. Although the offspring of Bernhard Shartle were numerous in Bern township, scarcely any descendants remain.

John Sherdel, son of Bernhard, died in middle life. His widow, Catherine (Riegel) Sherdel, made a will Oct. 8, 1803, which was probated Dec. 5, 1803, and in it she mentioned their children: Catherine; John; Bernhard; Philip; Daniel, to whom was willed the grandfather's clock, old Bible and religious books; and Jonas.

The village of Shartlesville is situated near the Blue Mountain in Upper Bern township, and derives its name from the Shartle family, who lived at this place and did much towards developing it. The Shartles were farmers, and after the custom of those days kept inns, one of which was opened as early as 1765, and which in 1801 was spoken of as "an old log tavern." In 1819, George Shartle built a large brick house, which with other property suddenly passed into the possession of Benjamin Nunnemacher. In the lower inn George Shartle sold the first goods, and his nephew, John Albright, had one of the first stores in the old tavern.

George Shartle, the great-grandfather of Harry H., was born in the vicinity of Shartlesville, and died between Robesonia and Womelsdorf, being buried at the latter place in the graveyard back of the church. He was a farmer, owning land at Heidelberg township, being at one time in very comfortable circumstances. Mr. Shartle married Esther Kershner, and they had these children: Jacob; Daniel, of Pottsville, who had five children,—William, Harry, Alvin, Sallie and Hattie; and Benneville, of Reading, who had four children,—Alexander, Emma, Tillie, and Laura.

Jacob Shartle, grandfather of Harry H., was born in the vicinity of Shartlesville, Upper Bern township, Sept. 22, 1804, and died at Womelsdorf, July 21, 1894, aged nearly ninety years. He was a blacksmith by trade, an occupation which he followed at Womelsdorf, whither he had come as a young man. Mr. Shartle was married to Eliza Moyer, born April 3, 1810, in Heidelberg, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Witman) Moyer. They were married March 7, 1833, and Mrs. Shartle died May 1, 1893. Their children were: Franklin, born Feb. 10, 1834, who died March 5, 1884; George, born Nov. 14, 1835, died Jan. 2, 1898; Sarah, born Feb. 18, 1838; Helen, born Nov. 26, 1842; Jacob, born July 28, 1845; Adaline, born March 7, 1853; and Mary Ann, born May 21, 1840, died Dec. 28, 1848.

George Shartle, father of Harry M., was born Nov. 14, 1835, and died Jan. 2, 1898, aged sixty-two years, one month and seventeen days, being buried at Womelsdorf. He was a brewer, and burned many barrels of apple-jack. He was the owner of the residence at Newmanstown, where his widow now resides. He was twice married, his first union being April 11, 1858, with Mary Ann Cox, who was born Jan. 31, 1840, daughter of Charles Cox, of Womelsdorf. Ten children were born to this union: Charles J., born July 18, 1863, a shoemaker of Reading; Harry H; Katie, born in 1863, who died in 1864; Adeline, who died at the age of fourteen years; William, born June 28, 1873, a blacksmith of Reading; Lizzie, who married George Wells, of Philadelphia; John Franklin, who died single, Sept. 8, 1888; Lillie May, born in 1881, died in 1884; George W., born in 1871, died in 1872; and Mary Annie, who died April 13, 1886.

Harry H. Shartle obtained a public school education, and at the age of sixteen years learned the blacksmith trade from his grandfather, at Womelsdorf, an occupation which he has followed ever since. He came to Wernersville, July 19, 1886, and for eight years worked for Henry Fiant. He then engaged in the business on his own account, purchasing the business and shop of Henry Barthol in 1884. Mr. Shartle is an excellent mechanic, and he is considered the leading blacksmith and horse-shoer of his district, also having the agency for the New Burch plows. He is a stockholder, and was formerly a director, in the Wernersville Water Company. He erected a fine brick residence on Main street, 65 x 75 feet in dimensions in which are installed all of the latest modern improvements, including electricity for lighting. In politics he is a Democrat, but although he was very active in the incorporation of the borough, he has never cared for public office, preferring to give his time and attention to his business. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church, and he was a member of the building committee, his name appearing with the others on the front of the First Reformed Chapel, which was erected in 1900. He is a trustee of the church, and an active member of the Sunday school, in which he was formerly an official member. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp, No. 99, P. O. S. of A., of Wernersville.

On Oct. 24, 1889, Mr. Shartle was married to Katie Van Reed, daughter of Levi and Catherine (Werner) Van Reed, and granddaughter of Thomas and Eliza (Ruth) Van Reed.

JOHN J. McNURNEY was a native of Wisconsin, where he received his education, and learned the blacksmith's trade. After finishing his trade, at the age of nineteen, he started in business in Chicago, Ill., where he was burned out during the big Chicago fire, after which time he came East and located in Reading. He had an exceptionally fine professional and business reputation, being an industrious and skilled mechanic, in his line of business. The success that came to this well-known and popular man was deserved, and was the fitting reward of a lifelong determination to excel in all that he undertook. He was a progressive man, of a positive type, having perfect confidence in his ability, and took great interest and pride in his business.

He retired Jan. 1, 1907, and left Reading the following July on a tour of the Pacific coast, for pleasure and enjoyment. He was accompanied on this trip by his niece, Miss May Fallon, who resides at No. 46 North Eighth street, and is the only living relative in Pennsylvania. On returning home he met with an accident which caused his death in Chicago, Sept. 1, 1907. His remains were taken to Reading and buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

JOSEPH F. FLAIG, a well-to-do resident of Reading, Pa., whose home is located at No. 226 South Twelfth street, in the Tenth ward of the city, was born Oct. 6, 1843, in Schramberg, Obendorf am Neckar, Wurtemberg, Germany, son of Christian and Theresa (Haas) Flaig.

Andraes Flaig, the grandfather of Joseph F., was a native of Maria Zel, Wurtemberg, and was a farmer by occupation. He married a Miss Clara King, and to them were born children as follows: Christian, Fidel, Stephen and Andraes. Christian Flaig was born Sept. 8, 1801, and his entire life was spent in the Fatherland, where he died Sept. 28, 1868. He started in the freight hauling business when a young man, and, becoming prosperous later engaged as a grain and wine merchant. He married Theresa Haas, born Sept. 25, 1807, who died Oct. 25, 1869, and they had four children: Francisco, who married Charles Summer, a machinist of Germany; Christian, who was a clock maker; John, also a machinist; and Joseph F.

Joseph F. Flaig was educated in the schools of the Fatherland, and after leaving school, at the age of fourteen years, learned the brewer's business with Johann Haas, with whom he continued for three years. Mr. Flaig then followed his trade at different places for nine years, when he enlisted in the German army, in September, 1864, but after six weeks received his discharge, and the war of 1866 then being imminent, he came to America, and landed at Castle Garden, N. Y., in the latter part of October. Soon thereafter he came to Reading, where he has since remained. Mr. Flaig at once found employment with a brewer named Floto, and later was employed by Lauer, Barbey and other leading brewers of the city. In 1884 he formed a partnership with Abraham Peltzer, under the firm name of Peltzer & Flaig, and this firm continued successfully for a period of ten years, they being reputed to have the best beer in Reading. Mr. Flaig is now in the employ of the Deppen brewery, and resides with his family at No. 226 South Twelfth street. In political matters Mr. Flaig is a Democrat. He is a member of the Holy Cross Society, and he and his family attend St. Paul's Catholic Church.

On May 5, 1867, Mr. Flaig was married to Agnes Link, born Sept. 21, 1843, who came to this country in June, 1864, daughter of Frederick Link, a carpenter of Germany, and to this union there were born children as follows: Agnes, who married Francis Fogel, of Reading; Annie, who married John Blankenbiller, of Reading; Fred, a machinist in the Government service; John, single at home; Joseph, born Feb. 16, 1882, was educated in the Reading public schools, learned the boiler making trade at the Scott foundry, and is now in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company; George, who died aged eighteen years; and Francis, who died in childhood.

JOSEPH D. FOX, a conductor in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, living at No. 118 North Fourth street, Reading, was born in that city, at No. 116 North Fourth street, May 4, 1851, son of Daniel S. and Maria (Ditlow) Fox, the former a native of Berks and the latter of Lancaster county.

John Fox, grandfather of Joseph D., was twice married. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He had but one son, Daniel.

Daniel Fox followed the dual trades of cabinet-making and painting in Reading, where he died in 1858, aged thirty-two years. His remains rest in the Charles Evans cemetery. He and his wife were the parents of two sons: John, who died Jan. 1, 1859; and Joseph D. Mrs. Fox married for her second husband, John H. Fix, by whom she had four children: John H.; Mahala, who married Thomas Rambo; Rose, who married George Eisenbrown; and Maria, deceased. In religious belief the family are members of Trinity Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Fox was a Republican.

Joseph D. Fox received his education in the common schools of his native city, and was about eight years of age when his father's death occurred. He learned the painting trade, which he followed for about fifteen years, when he accepted a position as brakeman on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, continuing in that capacity until promoted to the position of conductor, which he has held for twenty-five years. Mr. Fox was married August, 1870, to Kate Maderia, daughter of David and Sabilla (Scheetz) Maderia, and one child was born to this union, Anna, who died at the age of two and one-half years. Mr. Fox is a member of the P. O. S. of A., and the Brotherhood of America. In religious belief he is connected with the Lutheran faith. He is a member of the Reading Relief Association, and in 1868 joined the Neversink Fire Company, retaining membership in that organization until the present time, serving as assistant chief for two years, and being a delegate to numerous firemen's conventions. A very interesting collection belonging to Mr. Fox, and one which he prizes highly is one of about 150 badges, which he has framed. He is well known in and about Reading, his genial, friendly manner making for him many warm friends.

JOHN W. RINGLER, of Reading, has carried on his confectionery and tobacco store at No. 205 Bingaman street since 1874. He has passed most of his life in that city, where he was born Dec. 30, 1844, son of Israel W. Ringler, and grandson of Reuben Ringler. The family has long been located in Berks county.

Reuben Ringler was a tailor, but followed his trade only a short time, in 1833 going to work at Robesonia Furnace. He married Sarah Wilson, a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and to their union were born the following named children: Sarah, who married Joseph Brandshett; Anthony, who was a blacksmith in Scranton, Pa., where he died in about 1887; Israel W.; Isabel, who married James Gold, and went to live in Philadelphia, where she still has her home, at No. 3209 Dauphin street (she is the last survivor of this family); Jerome, a boatbuilder on the Schuylkill canal, an expert in his line, who died in March, 1863, during the smallpox epidemic, shortly before his son, Mark, was killed at Chancellorsville; Harriet, wife of Robert Baker, and Sarah, deceased, who married Frank Kelley. The mother of this family was a member of the Methodist Church, but the father's religious connection is not known. He was a Democrat in political opinion. He was a private soldier during the war of 1812, and drew a pension for the services he rendered. His death occurred in February, 1870, at the age of eighty-two years.

Israel W. Ringler attended school in Reading, and during his young manhood clerked in a general store there. Later he embarked in merchandising on his own account in that city, continuing in that line until 1865, when he sold out and engaged in the music business at the location now occupied by Potteiger's drug store, at Fourth and Spruce streets. He had purchased that property in 1848, and lived there over sixty years. In 1842 Israel W. Ringler married Mary A. Moers, who was born in 1822 and now lives at No. 347 Spruce street. Her grandfather, John F. Moers, established himself in the marble and tombstone business at No. 314 Penn street in 1793. To Mr. and Mrs. Ringler were born children as follows: John W., who is mentioned further on; Franklin, who died in 1851, when three years old; Heber, who died in 1866; Charles A., an employee of the Reading Iron Company; Robert B., born Sept. 16, 1862, now a jeweler of Reading; and Mary E., who married John Hampden, a manufacturer of artificial teeth. This family were Methodists in religious belief. The father passed away June 22, 1892.

John W. Ringler was reared and educated in his native city, attending the old Chestnut street school until he reached the age of sixteen. At that time he entered his father's general store, where he remained until his enlistment, Feb. 1, 1864, in Durell's Independent Battery D, Pennsylvania Light Artillery. He served until June 13, 1865, when the battery was discharged following Lee's surrender. Mr. Ringler saw considerable active service, taking part in Grant's campaign from the Wilderness to Appomattox. His military service completed, he returned to Reading, and within a short time became engaged in boating on the canal. In 1870 he went to Norfolk, Va., coming back to Reading in 1873, and carrying on the manufacture of brick until 1874, when he sold out that business and purchased the property at No. 205 Bingaman street, where he has since been located. He has a thriving confectionery and tobacco stand, which he has carried on since 1874, and is well-known in the neighborhood as an honest, industrious business man. Mr. Ringler has prospered, and owns a piece of residence property in Oakbrook (in Cumru township) and also one in Millmont. His wife owns the home and store property at No. 205 Bingaman street, as well as another piece in the First Ward, at No. 474 South Third street. Mr. Ringler has been quite active in local public affairs, and from 1884 to 1889 served as alderman of his ward, the First, having been elected as the candidate of the Republican party, of which he is an enthusiastic adherent. He is also prominent in Grand Army circles, being a member and past commander of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., Department of Pennsylvania.

On Sept. 21, 1869, Mr. Ringler was married to Catherine E. Seiders, daughter of Benjamin and Esther (Engle) Seiders. To this union came one child, born May 10, 1876 (the opening day of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia), who died in infancy.

JOHN KISSINGER. There have been three John Kissingers in Berks county in direct line, father, son and grandson, and the early home of the family was in Alsace township.

John Kissinger, the first of the name, was a farmer in Alsace township, where he owned a valuable farm. This he lost through the machinations of the husband of his sister Betzy, a Hessian soldier with whom she became acquainted while the Hessians were in camp at Mount Penn, Reading, during the Revolutionary war. John Kissinger was born about 1761, and he died in 1837, in Alsace township, at the home of his son, Jacob. He married Elizabeth Tobias, daughter of Jonathan Tobias, of Bern township, and they had nine sons and one daughter, namely: Jacob, John, Samuel, Andrew, Christian, Abraham, Solomon, William, David and Lydia (married (first) David Gehret, and (second) John Leader).

John Kissinger, son of John and second of the name, was born in Alsace, now Muhlenberg, township July 4, 1794, and he died on Pine street, Reading, in 1859, at the age of sixty-five years. By occupation he was a carpenter. He married Catharine Spengler, daughter of Christian Spengler, of Heidelberg township, and they had three sons and five daughters, as follows: Elizabeth died unmarried aged twenty-one years; John, born March 11, 1816; Mary m. Daniel Roberts; Reuben m. Kate Jones; Susan m. Samuel Zerr, and is still living; Sarah m. James Eckert; and Adam, a cripple, who died unmarried; and another daughter.

John Kissinger, the third of the name and the subject proper of this sketch, was born in Alsace (now Muhlenberg) township, March 11, 1816. He attended pay schools, where only the German language was taught, and at the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to learn the carpenter's trade under Jacob Ahrens, then a prominent builder. In 1836 he came to Reading, seeing in this then rapidly growing town great opportunity for success, and he located at Front and Washington streets, at the canal locks—long since removed. He secured work with Adam Wright, a manufacturer of threshing machines, and at the end of a year entered the employ of Benjamin Fink, a builder with whom he remained many years. In 1852 he went to Philadelphia, but at the end of eight months returned to Reading, and engaged in carpentering. He built a number of the homes on the north side of Chestnut street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, and on the east side of Court street, between Church and Sixth streets. He himself built his own home in 1897, when past four score years, and it was nearly a decade later before he retired from active work. To the last he worked in his little shop in the rear of his home, making chests and household articles on a small scale. His death, April 24, 1908, in his ninety-third year, was due to a fractured hip, sustained in a fall down stairs.

At the age of nineteen Mr. Kissinger married Catherine Lewis, daughter of William Lewis, and she died about half a century ago; she had eight children, of whom is living (1908) Reuben C. L., whose golden wedding anniversary was attended by his father, four generations being present. Two years after the death of his first wife, Mr. Kissinger married (second) Hannah Dunnegan, daughter of James Dunnegan. She died in 1907. Five of the eleven children of this union survive: Susan, wife of Charles Spangler; Miss Clara;

Morris; Lucy, wife of Earl Schaeffer, of Reading; and Anna, wife of Joseph Bascone, of Philadelphia

In politics he had been a Democrat all his life casting his first vote in 1836. He recalled the administration of Reading's first mayor, Peter Filbert, a time when a great part of the present city was farm land. He was very intelligent and could tell in a most interesting manner the tales of those early days. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and fraternally he belonged to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M. and Seminole Council, No. 88, O. U. A. M. Mr. Kissinger attributed his long life to nothing more than temporate habits. He never used tobacco and very little liquor; his hearing was excellent, as was also his eyesight, and his health was perfect.

WILLIAM F. MARKS, M. D., born April 6, 1846, at West Leesport, Berks county, son of Elias and Catharine (Fink) Marks, has been a successful practitioner for forty years, thirty-eight of which—since 1871—he has spent in his adopted city of Reading.

Elias Marks, the father, was employed by the Schuylkill Canal Company until the great freshet of 1850, which destroyed the home at West Leesport, and in which his wife, one son, and three daughters lost their lives. Utterly distracted by this tragedy and the total loss of his property, he resolved to start life anew. With this purpose in view he made provision for the care of the remnant of his family, who were saved from the flood—consisting of two daughters and the subject of this sketch, the latter being adopted by Jacob Rieser—and removed to Illinois, and, on the outbreak of the Civil war, enlisted in defense of his country; he saw active service the first year, when he contracted pneumonia and died at Memphis, Tennessee.

Under the care of his foster-father, to whom he was indentured to the age of eighteen years, William F. Marks was granted four months' schooling a year, the limit of the term in the district schools in those days, in conjunction with his labor on the farm, until he reached the age of seventeen. Then he made his first attempt at teaching in the township school, thus continuing for three years. At the close of each term during these three years he attended Freeland Seminary, now Ursinus College, in Montgomery county, Pa., and thereafter two terms at the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, Pa. While at the latter institution and in delicate health he became the patient of Dr. Helfrich, a prominent homeopathic physician of the town, and through the acquaintance thus established resolved to read medicine under the preceptorship of the latter. He then attended a course of lectures at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, and, during vacation, was a student in the office of Prof. Richard Koch, one of the faculty of the institution, under whose influence and tutelage he gained a practical knowledge of his chosen profession, as the Professor appreciated the diligence and close application of his student. Yielding to the trend of his inclinations, he took a special course in obstetrics at the Philadelphia School of Practical Obstetrics and Diseases of Women.

After graduating from Hahnemann Medical College, March 3, 1869, Dr. Marks purchased (through the assistance of his adopted father) the property of Dr. A. J. Dundore, at West Leesport, and assumed the latter's practice, and there continued successfully for two years, when ambition for a greater latitude in the practice of his profession induced him to locate in Reading. That the change was one exhibiting rare judgment and self-confidence is confirmed by the extensive clientele that followed his scrupulous and untiring efforts, contemporaneous with which he was a close student and observer of all the important advances made in the science of medicine. In addition to his personal or self-attained acquirements through his office study, he made his vacations consist of special courses in prominent medical institutions of the country, which included the clinical lectures of Profs. Ludlam and Pratt, of Chicago; Profs. Emmet, Newman and Snow, of New York; Prof. Howard Kelly, of Baltimore; and Prof. Massey, of Philadelphia, all of whom were specialists and instructors of national reputation. All these lectures constituted what is known as post-graduate courses, and physicians pursuing them are regarded as having qualified themselves to an exceptional degree. Dr. Marks's flattering success in his practice is properly attributed not only to conscientious devotion to his work, but to his skillful diagnosis and prognosis in the treatment of disease.

Notwithstanding the incessant demand made upon his time in his practice, Dr. Marks has not been unmindful of his duties as a citizen, and, while interesting himself in other directions of a civic nature, his most conspicuous service to the public may be said to have been in connection with his labors associated with the board of health, of which body he has been an active member for twenty-eight years, six years of which he was honored with the presidency. His annual reports are illumined with sanitary and preventive measures generally against disease, pestilence and contagion. In his persistent warfare against the smoke evil he attracted attention not only at home, but among municipal, State and national governments as well, a number of his suggestions finding adoption in various communities, or by the authorities communicating with him on the subject.

Dr. Marks is the gynecologist of the Homeopathic Hospital of Reading, and is connected with the following medical associations: The Practitioners Society; Hospital and Dispensary Association; State Medical Society; American Institute of Homeopathy; International Medical Congress; American Association of Orificial Surgeons, and American Electro-Therapeutic Association.

Dr. Marks married Rebecca S. Althouse, daughter of Henry Althouse, of Reading, and to this union was born one daughter, Minnie. Mrs. Marks died Nov. 10, 1879, and later Dr. Marks was wedded to Clara B. Regar, of Reading. To the second union were born two children, Edith C. and Bessie.

In political matters the Doctor is not biased by partisanship, although technically a Democrat, but of the Jeffersonian persuasion. In religion he is broad-minded, and the denomination with which he is identified is the Reformed faith.

The Doctor is prominent in fraternal organizations, being a popular member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M.; Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F.; Mt. Penn Castle, K. G. E.; Fidelia Chamber, No. 5, K. of F.; Washington Camp No. 505, P. O. S. of A.; and Mt. Penn Council, R. A.

NATHAN G. KACHEL, one of the prominent and highly respected truck farmers of Brecknock, where he is also efficiently serving as school director, was born on his present property, May 23, 1857, son of Aaron Kachel, and a descendant of one of the early Swiss pioneers of the county.

In 1732 there came to America a little band of emigrants from Switzerland, among whom was Andrew Kachel. He settled in Cumru township, Berks county, where he became the owner of 200 acres of land. His will, which is on record in the Berks county court house, was probated July 16, 1777, and is signed in good clear German. He made ample provision for his beloved wife Ursula, and specially mentions his son Simon. His wife Ursula and son Andrew were the executors. Other sons were Leonard and John.

John Kachel, son of the emigrant Andrew, was a farmer in Brecknock township. He married Catherine Eitzer, and became the father of the following children: Jacob, born March 9, 1786, died Oct. 19, 1865, the father of two sons—Henry and Jacob; Andrew died unmarried; John lived near the Green Tree, in Cumru township; William died young; Elizabeth married Michael Bittner; Samuel; Daniel, a farmer and miller, died in January, 1904; Michael was a noted marksman and figured at the olden time shooting matches; Susan married Elijah Spencer; and Polly and David died unmarried.

Wm. F. Marks

Samuel Kachel, son of John, was born in Cumru township, Jan. 15, 1796, and there passed his entire life. He was the owner of a large farm, which he kept in a high state of cultivation, and became one of the substantial men of the place. He learned the shoemaker's trade in his youth, and followed it to some extent as long as he lived. He died April 6, 1861. He married Elizabeth Rieser, born Jan. 15, 1800, and died Dec. 21, 1883. They were the parents of seven children, as follows: Reuben, born 1820, died in 1852; Aaron; Mary m. Elijah Remp, and is deceased; Sarah m. Jacob Mamer, and is deceased; Catherine m. Jesse Hartz, and is deceased; Benjamin, born June 3, 1836, lives on the homestead; and Samuel is a farmer in Brecknock township.

Aaron Kachel, son of Samuel, was born on his father's farm May 29, 1824. He was the owner of a fine farm, and this is now the property of his son, Nathan G. In his political belief he was a staunch Democrat, and in the early sixties was a member of the school board. He was a Lutheran member of the Allegheny church, and was a member of the building committee when that church was erected in 1878. His death occurred June 30, 1891, and he was laid to rest in the cemetery at Allegheny. His wife, Betzy Griffith, born Dec. 18, 1824, died an accidental death Dec. 24, 1889. She was a daughter of Isaac Griffith. By her marriage with Mr. Kachel she became the mother of four sons, as follows: John, born Oct. 1, 1851, was a farmer on the homestead, and died Dec. 2, 1892; he married Elizabeth Blankenbiller. Charles S. married Ellen E. Kramer, and he resides at Knauers. Albert G. and Nathan G. are twins, and Albert G. married Maggie Griffith.

Nathan G. Kachel, son of Aaron, was born as above stated. His entire life has been devoted to farm work. He obtained his education in the district school, and assisted his father at home until he attained his majority. In 1878 he went to Davis county, Iowa, where for six months he worked on a farm, and then returned to his native county. After his marriage in 1888 he tenanted on the Isaac Kramer farm in Brecknock township for four years, at the end of that time returning to the homestead, where he has since lived. He cultivates the fifty-seven acre farm which belonged to his father, and this he purchased in 1893. He raises all kinds of vegetables and fruit, and these he sells at the Reading market, having stand No. 210 at the Bingaman street market. In his farm work he is very progressive, and is quick to adopt new methods as soon as he sees their practical value. He has all the standard up-to-date farm implements, and keeps them in perfect condition all the time.

Mr. Kachel and his family attend the Allegheny church, in which they are Lutheran members. For four years he was president of the church organization. In politics he is a Democrat, and in 1904 he was elected school director; and he has also served as delegate to the county conventions.

On Aug. 28, 1888, Mr. Kachel was married to Cassie Kramer, who was born June 6, 1875, daughter of Isaac Kramer, and his wife, Betzy Hoschaur. To this union were born six children: Annie; Calvin; Nora, who died Aug. 26, 1894, aged one year, six months, three days; Pierce; Steward; and Isaac.

JOHN PETER KOCH, of Reading, was born in Bechteim, Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, Jan. 13, 1842. He came to America in 1864 and for a number of years resided in New Jersey, but in 1876 moved to Reading, Pa., and has been settled there since that date. He was a baker by trade, but from 1888 to 1902 he was engaged in that line of business, and at the end of that time retired. He was elected, in 1902, a member of the city board of assessors, for a one year term, but was re-elected for a term of three years.

Mr. Koch has been twice married. His first wife, to whom he was united in 1870, was Catherine Kuhlman, a native of the same town as himself. After twenty-one years of married life, she died, and in March, 1894, Mr. Koch married again. His second wife was Lillie Findeisen, who died July 21, 1908, aged forty-nine years. Three sons were born of this union, John, William and John (2), all deceased. The children by the first marriage were: George P.; Mary Elizabeth; Annie; and Kate, wife of Lewis Heeter, a hotel proprietor in Reading. John P. Koch is a Democrat in politics, and belongs to the Jackson Democratic Club, of which he was treasurer. He is also connected with the Reading Leiderkranz, of which he was a trustee. His religious affiliation is with St. John's Lutheran Church. He has been an essentially good citizen, and is highly esteemed.

George P. Koch was born in New Egypt, N. J., Aug. 14, 1871, before his parents moved to Reading. He received a good education and was graduated from the Inter-State College, after which he secured a position with the Norwich Electric Railway and worked there eight years. He was appointed to his present position of water inspector Aug. 15, 1898, and has proved himself a most capable official; he is a Democrat in his political affiliations. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle and in religion he is a member of the Grace Lutheran Church. George P. Koch was married Jan. 13, 1895, to Emma Elizabeth, daughter of Jacob and Emma Gussman, of Boyertown, Berks county, and they are the parents of six children, John Jacob, Howard George, Margaret Marie, Blanche Elizabeth, George Peter, and Daniel. The two oldest boys are in school.

CHARLES E. SCHRADER, engaged in the furniture business at Reading since 1865, was born Dec. 2, 1833, in the township of North Whitehall, Lehigh county, Pa., and when a small boy his parents removed to Trexlertown. He received a limited education, and at an early age began to work on different farms in the neighborhood, and continued this work until he became twenty years of age, when he entered the employ of William Hains as an apprentice to the trade of cabinet maker. He served his apprenticeship of two and a half years and then followed the trade at Trexlertown, Allentown and Philadelphia for several years, when he went to Reading. There he worked for a short time for Josiah Hearing, a prominent furniture dealer (prothonotary of Berks county from 1854 to 1857) and then went to Hollidaysburg where he followed his trade for nearly a year, when he returned to Reading and resumed his employment with Mr. Hearing. After working at his trade until 1865, under Mr. Hearing, Jacob R. Ritter and Joseph Schmucker, he formed a partnership with Anthony Felix and they carried on the business as dealers in furniture until 1872, when they purchased the stock of Joseph Schmucker and added Jerome T. Kline (an experienced salesman in the business) to the firm. They traded as Schrader, Felix & Kline until 1882, when Mr. Felix sold his interest to his partners and the firm name became Schrader & Kline, and under this name they have continued to trade until the present time. Mr. Schrader has been in the furniture business on Penn street, between 6th and 7th streets for upward of forty years. Though entirely self-taught, he designed and executed superior wood work, more especially parlor mirror mantels in costly mansions at Reading and elsewhere.

In 1858, Mr. Schrader was married to Elizabeth Maltzberger, a daughter of Jacob Maltzberger (bricklayer of Reading) and Elizabeth Gensemer (also of Reading), by whom he had seven children, three having died in infancy: Harry, Katie (m. Arthur Wittich), William, and Annie (m. Daniel Y. Klapp). His wife died in 1906, aged sixty-five years.

Mr. Schrader's father was Benjamin Schrader, who was brought up and lived in Montgomery county until he died in 1852, aged forty-five years. He was married to Sarah Koch, of Lehigh county, who died in 1874, aged sixty-two years; they had six children: Charles, Benjamin, Benneville, James, Angeline (m. Peter Hout), and Mary (m. John Bridegroom).

His grandfather was John Schrader, farmer of Montgomery county, who located in Snyder county in 1840, and there died in 1855, aged seventy years. He was married and had six children: Jacob, John, Benjamin, Charles, Isaac and Catharine.

EMANUEL M. WELLER, a farmer near Hill Church, in Pike township, Berks county, was born in that township, Jan. 24, 1865, son of Emanuel and Sallie (Moyer) Weller.

Philip Weller, grandfather of Emanuel M., was a resident in District township, where he was engaged in burning charcoal and in cultivating a small tract of land. He married Rebecca Heydt, a sister of Jacob Heydt. Both Philip Weller and his wife are buried in the graveyard at Hill Church. Their children were: Julia, who died unmarried; Emanuel; Henry, m. to Mary Houck; Rebecca, who is unmarried and is in her eighty-third year; Adam, unmarried; Jonathan, m. to Sallie Johnson; Ishmael, m. to Catharine Herb; and Polly, m. to George Benfield.

Emanuel Weller, son of Philip and Rebecca, was born in the vicinity of Landis Store in District township March 25, 1821, and he died Feb. 20, 1897, on his seventy-six-acre farm Feb. 20, 1897. He was a life-long farmer. He was a Reformed member of Hill Church and was regular in his attendance at divine service. In middle life he cut his left foot with an ax, necessitating the amputation of the foot above the ankle. He wore a wooden leg. About 1851 Emanuel Weller married Sallie Moyer, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Muthart) Moyer. She was born Sept. 9, 1831, and lives near Hill Church. They had ten children, namely: Jonathan, m. to Hannah Moyer; Rebecca, m. to John Eschbach; Malinda, m. to Peter Geschwindt, who died 1900; Mary, m. to William Eschbach; Sarah, m. to Willoughby Herb; Nathan N., m. to Ellen Lesher; Adam, an invalid; Emanuel M.; Joel, m. to Rosa Berkey; and Hettie, m. to Mahlon Swavely.

Emanuel M. Weller was educated in the township schools, and early became familiar with farm work. He began farming for himself in the spring of 1889, in Colebrookdale township and lived there on a thirty-eight-acre farm two years. He then moved to the homestead in Pike township, where he was born, and farmed there one year, then moved to Montgomery county on a 110-acre farm and farmed it for two years. From the late place he went to Oley, where he lived but one year, when he bought one of the old Moyer farms in Pike township near Hill Church. This consists of 220 acres, and belonged to Jacob Moyer, his grandfather. Mr. Weller bought it from the estate of Isaac Moyer, and he has since made a number of improvements to the buildings, and now has an up-to-date and valuable farm. He is one of the successful farmers in the township and is one of the largest milk shippers in the district. He is also an agent for fertilizer and sells annually several car loads.

In his political faith Mr. Weller is a Democrat, and was a school director for six years, serving the board as treasurer. He is a member of Knights of Golden Eagle, of Manatawny, and of Council No. 1007, Order American Mechanics. He and his family attend Hill Church, belonging to the Reformed congregation. He is a member of the Church choir.

On Feb. 13, 1886, Mr. Weller was married to Sallie Greis, daughter of John and Eliza (Lesher) Greis, of Longswamp township. She was born Feb. 11, 1867, and died April 26, 1907, and is buried in Hill Church cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Weller had thirteen children, as follows: Warren W. G., Clyde S., Ralph W., Verna G., Vergie V., Earl P., Emanuel G., Norman N., Herbert H. and four died young.

NATHAN N. WELLER, son of Emanuel and Sallie (Moyer) and brother of Emanuel M., was born Sept. 20, 1860. He is a farmer in Pike township, near Hill Church, where he has a ninety-four-acre farm, which was a Moser tract. On Dec. 13, 1885, he married Ellen Lesher, and they have had seven children: Mame, who died in 1908, aged twenty-one years, was the wife of Elmer Bechtel; Herbert is deceased; Robert; Elsie; Lloyd; Leon and Russell.

C. H. SEMBOWER, president of the well-known firm of Orr & Sembower, boiler manufacturers, at Reading, Pa., is one of the city's prominent men, and is identified with a number of its important enterprises. Mr. Sembower was born at Altoona, Pa., Jan. 18, 1863, son of Rev. A. H. and Helena (Knowlton) Sembower.

The Rev. A. H. Sembower is a minister in the Baptist Church, now retired from active service, and hence the son, C. H., was educated in the schools at the points where the father was in charge. In 1872 the family was located at Reading, and our subject then entered the high school for which he was abundantly prepared, graduating in 1876 at the age of seventeen years. Prior to going out on the road in the interests of a shoe firm, he had served a short apprenticeship with B. W. Griest. In 1884 Mr. Sembower, in association with Harry Orr, started the present boiler manufacturing business, with C. H. Sembower as president, Harry Orr as treasurer, Jesse Orr as secretary and James O'Reilly, Esq., as solicitor.

When the business was started the plant was located at Pine and Mifflin street, where the first boiler was built in 1884. The plant consisted at that time of a building 60 x 80 feet in dimensions, and gave employment to five men. The full capacity of the plant was three engines a week. The company owned no foundry then, purchasing its castings at Myerstown, Lebanon county. No change was made in the location of the plant until 1890, when removal was made to Millmont where four and a half acres of land were secured from the Reading Land & Improvement Company. The company at once set to work breaking ground for its new machine and boiler shops. By 1892 these shops were completed and in 1894 the foundry was completed. At the date of this writing engines are built at this plant in seventy-five different styles and their line includes vertical, horizontal, marine and hoisting, and the boilers are vertical, horizontal and locomotive. The company gives constant employment to 250 skilled workmen and have a corps of seven office people. The pay roll is one of the largest in any of the city's industries of a like nature.

This plant in its equipment is one of the finest and most complete in the United States. It is operated by a battery of 750-horse power boilers. The drawings are kept in a fire-proof vault, and the pattern storage room is equipped with a system of water works, so that, in case of fire, there is not a point in the apartment but that can be reached by a stream of water. The trade territory extends all over the world where the excellence of the goods serve as their own advertisement.

On Jan. 29, 1884, Mr. Sembower was married to E. Lou Orr, daughter of Jesse Orr, and three children have been born to this union, viz: Cora L., Anna O. and Guy K. The family is prominent in the city's social life. They are members of the Baptist Church. Mr. Sembower is prominent in Masonry, being a member of Chandler Lodge No. 227 F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter; Commandery at Philadelphia; Consistory, 32nd degree and Rajah Temple. He belongs also to the B. P. O. E., of Reading, and to Vigilance Lodge, I. O. O. F. He is a stockholder in the First National Bank of Reading, and also in the American Casualty Company.

MILTON J. H. SCHITLER, former huckster, sawmill operator, in Pricetown, Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, was born Oct. 1, 1839, in Montgomery county, Pa., son of Daniel H. and Alamanda (Heebner) Schitler.

Ludwig Schitler, the ancestor of the family of this name, is said to have been a redemptioner. He had an only son Hezekiah, whose son Hezekiah was the grandfather of Milton J. H. In the Federal census of 1790 Ludwig Schiller is recorded as the head of a family made up of himself and wife, one son Hezekiah over sixteen years of age, and two daughters.

Hezekiah Schitler, the grandfather, was born in Frederick township, Montgomery county, Pa., and was almost ninety years old when he died. He is buried at Keeler's Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He was a foremost man of his district, and owned much land. His wife, Barbara Heilig, is buried at Swamp Church. Their children were: Jacob, unmarried who lived at home; John, who m. and lived at Perkasie, Pa.; Lewis, who lived in Reading; George, of Reading; Barbara, m. to George Moore; Elizabeth, m. to Harry Houck; Sarah, m. to Mr. Boyer; and Daniel H., who was three years of age when his mother died.

Daniel H. Schitler, son of Hezekiah and father of Milton J. H. was born in Frederick township, Montgomery county, in 1812, and died at Pricetown, in 1882, in the seventieth year of his age. In 1840 or 1841 he and his family came to Reading where they lived until 1857, when he moved to Ruscombmanor township, and operated a farm and grist mill. In his earlier life Mr. Schitler had been one of the first employes of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, and was on the road as an engineer twenty-seven years, first running a coal and later a freight train between Pottsville and Philadelphia. He married Alamanda Heebner, and both are buried at Keeler's Church in Montgomery county. They had eight children, four of whom are deceased. The living are: Milton J. H.; Nathaniel, of Holton, Kans.; Barbara Anna, m. to Rev. Daniel Stettler, of Trevortown, Pa.; Daniel A., of Missouri, having his home but sixty miles from his brother Nathaniel.

Milton J. H. Schitler was educated in the public schools of Reading, to which city his parents came when he was little over one year old. He began clerking in his father's feed, grocery and queensware store, located at Ninth and Franklin streets, and he continued clerking in different stores in Reading until he was nearly seventeen years old, when he became a salesman in Philadelphia for Birch & Weldy—wholesale notion dealers, remaining a short time. Later he was salesman for Philip Ford, in his boot and shoe store, remaining in Philadelphia a little over one year. Returning to Reading, he learned the blacksmith's trade, and in 1857, when his father moved to Wanner's Mill, in Ruscombmanor township, he accompanied him and by assisting his father learned the milling trade. He was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. William Good, and taught six years in Ruscombmanor and two years in Pike township.

On May 22, 1860, Mr. Schitler was married to Sarah M. Heebner, daughter of William Heebner, of Friedensburg, Berks county, and they began house-keeping at the homestead of William D. Haines, where they have lived ever since. Mr. Schitler is one of the foremost men of his township, and is a large real estate owner. He operates a saw mill and cidermill on what was the old Buck estate. An old glue factory, once operated by Michael Buck, a native of Germany, was located on this tract; and the old stone building, a land mark of the district was erected about 1830, and is located along the Pricetown Road, east of Pricetown. Mr. Schitler is also engaged in huckstering, attending the wholesale and retail street markets in Reading. In 1862 he enlisted for service in the Civil war, becoming a member of Company C, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, under Col. Knoderer, and came home under Colonel Davis, the former colonel having died on the field of battle. Mr. Schitler was in the army nine months, and participated among others, in the fight at Deserted Farm. He is active in Church life, and has been interested in Sunday-school work from his youth up. He is connected with both Pricetown Zion and Pricetown Salem Sunday-schools, being honorary Sunday-school superintendent of Zion, and Bible Class teacher of adult scholars in both schools. He was Sunday-school superintendent of both schools for many years, and he is a leader in all religious and moral movements.

The following children were born to Mr. Schitler's marriage with Sarah M. Heebner. William H., deceased; Miss Eva, of Philadelphia; Charles, of Pricetown; Mary, m. to William Diehl, of Pricetown; and Harry H., of Ruscombmanor. Mr. Schitler was m. (second) to Emma K. Bertolet, daughter of John K. Bertolett, of Friedensburg, and their son, John Bertolett Schitler lives in Pricetown. He m. (third) Sarah Keller, widow of Levi Fry, son of Charles. No children have been born of this union.

HARRY BECHTEL WEAND, of Reading, is at present engaged as Secretary and Treasurer for the Reading (Fire) Underwriters Association. He is a son of Edward D. and Valeria Coller (nee Bechtel) Weand, the former of whom, a native of Reading, where he was a salesman for a leading house for twenty-five years, died Sept. 9, 1905, aged fifty-four years. Mrs. Weand was a daughter of Francis K. Bechtel, who for many years served the County of Berks in various capacities. Our subject has one sister, Alice Nordwald, the wife of John Yocum, of the Consolidated Knitting & Spinning Mills.

Harry Bechtel Weand was born in Reading, December 27, 1885, and received his education in the public schools. Graduating from the high school in 1903, he began his business career as a reporter for the Reading Herald, from which paper he went to the Reading Telegram. In November, 1903, he gave up newspaper work, and became identified with the Reading Underwriters Association, as assistant to the Secretary. He remained in this position until September, 1905, when he was appointed Secretary to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of his superior. He was also made District Secretary and Inspector for the Underwriters Association of the Middle Department (Philadelphia), with offices in the Baer Building, Reading.

Mr. Weand, since his graduation, has taken an active part in the affairs of the Alumni Association of the Reading High Schools, having served as its President for one term. He has also served on various committees, and is at this writing fulfilling the office of Treasurer. He is a member of the National Fire Protection Association, the Kappa Sigma Society of the Class of 1903, R. H. S., Trinity Lutheran Church, and the Luther League. In politics he is a Republican.

REV. ELI E. HIESTER, a retired minister of Strausstown, Berks county, Pa., was born near Belleman's Church, in Centre township, January 14, 1830. He is a son of Thomas and a grandson of Daniel Hiester. The latter, who was born November 5, 1761, died April 16, 1827, at the age of sixty-five years, and is buried at Zion's Blue Mountain Church. His occupation was that of farming, and for many years he resided in Upper Tulpehocken township, where the name is well known and highly respected. Three times he was married, his last wife being Susanne Ammon, whose birth occurred May 4, 1782. She died October 17, 1862, at the advanced age of eighty.

Thomas Hiester, the father of Eli, was born July 10, 1803. He grew to manhood on his father's farm and besides acquiring the usual knowledge of farm work, he learned the trade of wheelwright, which he followed during his long residence near Strausstown, in Upper Tulpehocken township. He married Christiana Ebling, the daughter of Jacob Ebling. She was born at Upper Tulpehocken township, July 5, 1802, and died January 13, 1878, at the age of seventy-five years, five months, and eight days. On June 19, 1882, the husband, having lived to the advanced age of seventy-eight, was laid to rest beside his wife in the old cemetery at Zion's Blue Mountain Church. Their children were: Jonathan, who became a minister of the Reformed Church, and whose death occurred in Lebanon county, Pa., in 1900; Jacob, born in 1827, died in 1874 (he married Susanne Snyder, who was born in 1823, and died in 1875); Sarah, born in 1828, married Michael Klahr, her death occurring in 1861; and Eli E.

Eli E. Hiester, being the youngest son, was privileged to receive greater educational advantages than his older brothers, in the pay schools of Upper Tulpehocken township, and the Boyertown Mount Pleasant Seminary, both of which he attended. After that he studied with his brother Rev. Jonathan to prepare for Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster which he entered in 1855, graduating in 1859. After graduating he went to the Theological Seminary, at Mercersburg, Pa., to study Theology. He was ordained in 1865 at Pine Grove, Schuylkill county. He began his work in the ministry at Grantville, afterwards taking charge of a church at Friedensburg, Schuylkill county, where he remained six years. Later he came to Strausstown, Pa., where he has since resided. His ministerial career covered a period of fifteen years and though retired from active work, he occasionally fills the pulpit of the local church.

A trade acquired in his younger days, that of watch and clock repairing, supplies occupation for many, otherwise unemployed, hours. This, together with a half interest held in a fine farm of seventy-three acres, near Strausstown, brings a good income, which, at his age, is something unusual for one who has given his best efforts in the service of the church.

Rev. Hiester never married, finding the religious life all-sufficient for his happiness. He is one of the oldest residents of Strausstown, and held in the highest regards, not only by his fellow-citizens, but by all who have the privilege of knowing him.

G. FRED MERTZ, a builder and prominent business man of Reading, Pa., was born in Rommelshausen, Wurtemberg, Germany and came to America in 1868 settling in Philadelphia for a short time, after which he located in Reading.

On locating in this city, Mr. Mertz found employment at baking in a bakery owned and conducted by Catharine Gretzinger, and he remained in her employ for four years and six months, when he purchased the establishment and operated it on his own account for about twenty-five years. After being in business at 619 Chestnut for twelve years, he found his bakery too small, and erected a modern bakery at 623-625 Chestnut Street. He installed the first continuous bake-oven in Reading. Wishing to direct his attentions in other channels, Mr. Mertz sold his bakery to his son, Albert, who still conducts it, and engaged in the ice and cold storage business at Eleventh and Bern streets, but after one year here, he found that the demands were so great that he had to have a larger plant, and he founded the Keystone Ice and Cold Storage Co., of which he became president. He remained at the head of this company for five years, after which he retired and spent one year traveling in Europe, and on returning to this country, engaged in building operations, becoming very successful in that line. In company with his son-in-law J. F. Christman, in 1905, Mr. Mertz built fifty houses, with all modern conveniences, ranging in price from $2,000 up.

Mr. Mertz is deeply interested in the growth and development of Reading, and any movement that tends to elevate its moral and social tone is stanchly supported by him. In politics he is independent. He is connected with Teutonia Lodge, F. & A. M., Reading Chapter, Reading Commandery and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

Mr. Mertz married in 1873, Miss Joanna H. Fischer, a native of Pennsylvania, and three children have been born to this union: Caroline, who married J. F. Christman; Elizabeth, who married P. H. Fisher; and Albert, a baker. In religious belief, Mr. Mertz is a Lutheran, as are all the members of his family.

WILLIAM MOYER, of Reading, Pa., engaged in the baking business at Nos. 530-532 Spruce street, was born in Bernville, Berks county, April 6, 1875, son of John L. and Mary (Gossert) Moyer, natives of Berks county. John L. Moyer, who was a contractor and builder, died Jan. 25, 1906, aged seventy-six years, and his wife passed away in 1888, aged fifty-four years. Ten children were born to them: John, Levi, Michael; Mary A.; Susan; Emma; Isabella; Rebecca; William and Anna.

William Moyer received his education in the schools of Bernville, Pa. and until seventeen years of age was employed upon the farm. He was then apprenticed to the baker's trade, which he completed March 29, 1896, and at this time succeeded George W. Bollman at Fifth and Laurel streets, where he remained about one year. In 1897 Mr. Moyer moved to his present place of business. He employs fourteen bakers, and operates four delivery wagons. His plant, which is 44½x117½, is equipped with the latest machinery.

In 1893 Mr. Moyer was married to Mary Spatz, daughter of Peter Spatz of Shartlesville, and four children have been born to this union: Ruth, Esther, Josephine and Forrest. The family are members of the First Reformed Church. Mr. Moyer votes independently in political matters.

NATHAN R. YODER, of Pike township, Berks county, is a representative of a family long prominent in this part of Pennsylvania. He was born in the township in which he now lives May 3, 1848, son of Nathan Y. and Esther (Rohrbach) Yoder.

George Yoder, great-grandfather of Nathan B., was a native of Oley, where he died on his farm, which is now owned by Catharine Schaeffer. He was buried in a private burial ground on what is now the Schaeffer farm, and later was re-interred at the Oley Churches. He was a farmer all his life. He had sons: William and Abraham, and several daughters.

Abraham Yoder, son of George, was born in Oley township, Oct. 12, 1785, and died in the same township April 5, 1860, and was buried beside his wife at Hill Church. In early life he went to Mahantango Valley, in Schuylkill county, Pa., where he bought a tract of 500 acres of land (of which but three acres had been cleared), for $500. On this tract there was a log house, a log barn, and a log gristmill. In time these buildings were all replaced by Mr. Yoder, who operated the gristmill in addition to clearing enough land for a large farm. Here he lived for a time, and here some of his children were born. However, his father-in-law, Solomon Yerger, of Pike township, asked him to move upon his farm in Pike township. This Mr. Yoder did, and later became the owner of this 181-acre farm, a tract which is still in the Yoder name, and is now owned by Nathan R. Yoder, and is cultivated by his son-in-law, Morris R. Moyer. The stone house was built by Mr. Yerger in 1803.

On May 21, 1809, Mr. Yoder married Elizabeth Yerger, born April 27, 1790, died Sept. 8, 1875, daughter of Solomon and Susanna Yerger. To Mr. and Mrs. Yoder were born: Susanna m. Charles Renninger; Maricha m. Benjamin Rohrbach; Nathan Y.; Solomon, who lived in Pike township, m. Elizabeth Keim, and had children: Franklin, Manias, William, Augustus, Irwin and Elmira; Benneville, who lived in Pike township, m. Fianna Bower, and they had one child who died young; George, who also lived in Pike township, m. (first) Miss Weller, had two children—Adam and Eve—m. (second) Emeline Frain, and had children—James, George, Emma, and Amos; Abraham (1827-1895) m. Mary Yorkey, and is mentioned further on; Eliza m. Jacob Reider, and lived in Pike township; Sophia m. Nathan Landis, a merchant in Pike township; Catharine was a dwarf; and a daughter died young.

Abraham Yoder, son of Abraham and Elizabeth, was a prominent farmer of Pike township. The latter years of his life he lived retired at Pikeville. He was active in local and county politics, and was school director and auditor of his township many years, and treasurer of Berks county from 1871-73. In 1883 he became one of the organizers of the Farmers National Bank, Boyertown, and served it as a director until his death, being succeeded on the board by his only son Ellis Y. By his wife Mary Yorgey he had children: Fietta who died young; and Ellis Y., born 1858, a miller in Pike, who m. Kate Griesemer in 1883, and has children—Amandus, Jacob, Charles, Deborah, and John.

Nathan Y. Yoder, son of Abraham and Elizabeth, was born, it is supposed, in Mahantango township, Schuylkill county, where his father owned and operated a grist mill, Jan. 1, 1816, and died Oct. 2, 1892, and both he and his wife are buried at St. Paul's Church, known locally as Lobachsville Church. Nathan Yoder was a life long farmer and owned the 181-acre farm acquired from his maternal grandfather. He retired to the tract of twenty-five acres where his son Nathan R. now lives, and there he died. He was a prominent man of Pike township and was influential in public affairs. He married Esther Rohrbach, born June 10, 1815, daughter of Daniel Rohrbach. She died July 21, 1901. Their children were: Hannah, m. to Samuel Weidner; Emeline, m. to William Harner; Mathias, who died young; Catharine, who died unmarried; Esther, m. to Edwin Brown; Nathan R.; Rachel, who died young; Amelia, m. to Jeremiah Guldin; and Ida, m. to Henry Yerger.

Nathan R. Yoder obtained his education in the common schools and in Fairview Academy, at Boyertown. He was licensed to teach by Prof. James N. Ermentrout, who was an assistant to his brother then the county superintendent. He taught his first term in 1868, in Pike township, then one term in Washington township. He began farming in the spring of 1870, in Pike township on the farm now operated by Morris R. Moyer, a son-in-law. After living there thirty-one years, he came in 1901 to his present place, a farm of twenty-five acres.

Mr. Yoder is a Democrat, and was a school director and auditor for a number of years, and also served as delegate to a number of county conventions. He and his family are Lutherans, and belong to St. Paul's Union Church of Pike township. He was deacon at Hill Church before he became identified with St. Paul's.

On Feb. 1, 1867, Mr. Yoder married Emma A. Guldin, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Althouse) Guldin, of Maiden-creek township, but later of Oley. Their children were: (1) Kate m. Milton Stauffer, and lives at Topton. (2) Guldin, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, Class of 1898, taught school seventeen terms, and now lives at Uwchland, Chester Co., Pa. He m. Mary, daughter of James Bechtel, and has children—Webster, Edna, Roger, and Lloyd. (3) Sallie m. Morris R. Moyer, the farmer on the homestead in Pike township, and they have —Ivy, Norman, Winnie, Minerva and Wayne. (4) Curvous G. m. Lizzie Drumheller, has a son, Chauncey, and they live at Reading. (5) Rachel is single and at home. (6) Daniel G. attended the township schools, graduated from the Perkiomen Seminary the Class of 1902, and continued his studies at Princeton University, later taking a business course at Schissler's Business College, Norristown, graduating in 1905. He taught at Mercersburg Academy one term, when he was elected the head of the Commercial Department in the Irvington high school, which position he has held since 1907. He began teaching in the local schools when he was but seventeen years old, teaching there successfully four terms. He is a member of Franklin Lodge No. 10, F. & A. M.

PROFESSOR ROBERT SMITH BIRCH was born in Reading, Pa., July 17, 1877. His father, for a quarter of a century proprietor of the "American House," the well-known hostelry situated at the corner of Fourth and Penn streets, is of Scotch descent, and his mother, whose maiden name was Sarah Kissinger, of German birth.

Robert S. Birch attended the public schools of Reading until the age of seventeen years, when he graduated from the Boys' High School with highest distinction, and at the commencement exercises of that year delivered the class oration. In September of the same year he entered Princeton College, where for four consecutive years he pursued the academic course, and in June, 1898, received the degree of A. B., graduating magna cum laude, with high honors in classics. He was a member of the Cliosophic Literary Society and at graduation was elected into the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity. In June, 1898, he accepted a position in the Boys' High School of his native city, to teach classics and history, which position he filled with a great measure of success until June, 1902, when he was elected principal of this school to succeed Charles S. Foos, the latter gentleman having been elected superintendent of schools of the city of Reading. Since that time Professor Birch has been in charge of the school, which has an enrollment of nearly 500 pupils, and a teaching force of twelve. The school has progressed favorably under his administration. Many of its graduates go to college, being admitted on certificate. In September, 1906, the school was removed to the new building recently erected by the Board of Education at a cost of nearly $400,000. Here, with better facilities and more modern equipment, the school should reach a very high standard of efficiency and compare favorably with other and even larger high schools of the country.

In August, 1904, Professor Robert Smith Birch and Miss Edith A. White were united in marriage, and to this union has been born one child, Robert White Birch. Mr. and Mrs. Birch make their home at No. 318 Windsor street, Reading.

BENJAMIN F. HOLLENBACH, senior member of the firm of Hollenbach, Dietrich & Company, wholesale dealers in wines and liquors, No. 805 Penn street, Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 31, 1871, at Slatington, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hollenbach received his education in the public schools of the place of his nativity, and on Oct. 23, 1888, came to Reading, being employed as a driver by George W. Hughes, then proprietor of the business now owned by our subject and partners, it having been established in 1869 by Hughes & Rhode. Mr. Hughes took charge of it in May, 1877, and continued until his death in 1890, when his son-in-law R. H. Jones took over the business. Mr. Jones died shortly afterward and his widow continued it, with Mr. Hollenbach in charge of affairs, from April 1, 1896, to June 10, 1900, when the present owners bought her out. The firm of Hollenbach, Dietrich & Co. do a large business, handling nothing but the finest of wines and whiskies, and they are the sole proprietors of the well known "Social Rye" handled by the trade all over the country.

Mr. Hollenbach married Carrie Sieger, of Shoemakersville, Berks county, and one daughter, Florence M., has been born to them. Mr. Hollenbach has a comfortable residence at No. 125 South Eighth street. He and his family attend the Lutheran Church. Fraternally he is a member of Reading Lodge No. 115, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Royal Arcanum, the Sons of Veterans, the Eagles (F. O. E.), the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of Malta. He is well known in business and social circles.

SAMUEL J. HILL, of Pricetown, Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, is a native son of that township, born Aug. 6, 1850, son of Abraham D. and Margaret (Strunk) Hill.

Samuel K. Hill, his grandfather, was born in Oley township, Berks county, Dec. 27, 1798, and died June 5, 1831, and is buried in a private-burial ground on his farm in Ruscombmanor township. He came early to Ruscombmanor, and became the owner of several tracts of land, the one on which he lived being near the Dunkard Meeting-house. He was very successful in his undertakings. He married Hannah DeTurck, daughter of Abraham DeTurck. She was born March 31, 1796, and died Feb. 25, 1839. Their children were: Abraham D.; Mary, m. to D. C. Westen; Elizabeth, m. to J. Lehman Heebner, of Reading; and Hannah, m. to H. H. Bernhard.

Samuel K. Hill had a brother Jacob, who lived in or about Oley, and who had sons—Jacob, David, and Benjamin. Tradition states that Samuel K. and Jacob Hill were grandsons of Jacob Hill, who died in 1770, advanced in years, in the Western District of Berks. He made his will in 1767, and in it mentions children: John, Jacob, Catharine, Mary, Elizabeth, Hannah, and Susanna.

Abraham D. Hill, son of Samuel K. and father of Samuel J., was born in Ruscombmanor township Feb. 14, 1828. He lived there until he was seven years old, when his father died, and he went to live with his uncle Jacob Hill, at Birdsboro, remaining there until he was twenty-three years old. He then returned to Ruscombmanor where he owned a farm of 133 acres, formerly belonging to his father. This he cultivated until he was sixty-four years old, when he retired and moved to Reading, and there he died April 16, 1903. He is buried at Pricetown, of which church he was a Reformed member. He was one of the founders and organizers of this church in 1842, and was an elder many years. He married Margaret Strunk, daughter of Jacob Strunk, of Amity township. She was born Feb. 11, 1828, and died June 6, 1866. Their children were: Samuel J.; Annie, m. to Peter L. Glase, of Oley; Mary m. and living at Phoenixville; Louisa, m. to Jacob Hoch, deceased; Charles S., of Philadelphia; John C., who farms the homestead; Lizzie, m. to Oscar Bush, of Reading; Clara, m. and living in Philadelphia; and George, of Reading.

Samuel J. Hill was educated in the township schools, and in the Oley Academy. He was licensed to teach in the public schools when seventeen years old by the late James N. Ermentrout, who was deputy county superintendent under his brother, Prof. John S. Ermentrout. He taught his first term in Ludwig's school, and taught fourteen consecutive terms in his native township. When he was twenty-one years old, he was elected in 1872 justice of the peace of Ruscombmanor township, and efficiently served in that office for thirty-five years, or seven successive terms, at the end of that time refusing re-election. Mr. Hill is a Democrat, and is a man of influence in his district. He was auditor of the district nine years, and was school director six years after he abandoned the teaching profession. In the spring of 1909 he was again elected to the school board. He has also clerked at a number of sales. He has resided at Pricetown since 1904, prior to this time he had lived on the Hill homestead in Ruscombmanor for twenty-five years, actively following farming. He is an interested member of the Berks County Agricultural Society, and is well posted on the latest and most scientific methods of farming. Mr. Hill and his family are members of the Reformed congregation of St. John's Church at Pricetown, of which he was deacon, treasurer, and trustee for many years. He became connected with the Pricetown Sunday-school in his youth, and held the various offices of the Sunday-school—was secretary many years, and for twenty-three years was its superintendent.

Mr. Hill has been twice married. In 1872 he m. Caroline Heffner, daughter of Peter and Catharine (Buskirk) Heffner, of Rockland. To this union were born six children, three of whom died young. Those surviving childhood were: Clarence A.; Lewis H.; and John P., who was killed in a railroad wreck near Harrisburg, Pa., in 1905, while fireman on pay train. Mrs. Hill died March 24, 1897, aged fifty-four years, two months and eleven days. On Feb. 26, 1899, he m. (second) Catharine Weidner, the widow of the late Almond C. Westen. No children have been born of this marriage.

S. Y. REIGNER, the treasurer of the Reading Hardware Company, is a native of the State of Pennsylvania, born Aug. 11, 1859, in Boyertown. He obtained a good, practical education, and chose bookkeeping as his occupation. He was engaged in Philadelphia and Reading until 1894, in which year he first entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, in the capacity of bookkeeper. As such he continued till 1901, when he was promoted to the position of assistant treasurer. Three years later he was made treasurer and has proved himself a most efficient one, his services being highly appreciated by the Company.

On Oct. 3, 1888, Mr. Reigner married Miss Etta Nunnemaker, a native of Pottsville, Pa., and two children have been born to them, Blanche and Herbert. Both Mr. Reigner and his wife are members of Calvary Reformed Church and in both church circles and the city generally they have many friends. Politically Mr. Reigner is ranked among the Republicans.

JOHN C. ANTHONY, who for a number of years was employed at railroading with the Philadelphia & Reading Co., was born in Reading, in December, 1830, and died Feb. 9, 1881, son of John Anthony, who was for a long time employed in the warehouse of the same company. John Anthony and his wife, Henrietta (Schwartz) had these children: George; William; Charles; Luther; Cyrus; Emma; John C.; Daniel; Thomas; James, and Henry.

John C. Anthony attended the public schools of Reading, where he learned the brush-making trade, a business which he followed for a few years in that city. He then went to Pottsville, where he was employed in the Philadelphia & Reading warehouse, and then returned to Reading, becoming a brakeman for the company on the Lebanon Valley branch. In this capacity he served on the first train to run over the Lebanon Valley bridge from Reading to Lebanon. He served in the company's employ for a period of thirty-one years, later running to Harrisburg, and met his death in an accident at the Reading yards, by being caught between two cars. He died seven weeks after the accident, Feb. 9, 1881, aged fifty-one years.

Mr. Anthony was married Jan. 13, 1856, to Miss Mary Ann Britton, daughter of John and Esther (Leitzel) Britton of Pottsville, Pa., and to this union there were born children as follows: Emma J., deceased, who was the wife of Michael K. Boyer, had one son, Frank, who is a skilled sign-painter, and resides with his grandmother at No. 232 North Ninth street Reading, and who married Lydia Heckman; Albert, who married Mary Swearer; and William, connected with the U. S. Army.

John Britton, the father of Mrs. Anthony, was a stonemason by trade, and later engaged in stone quarrying near Pottsville. He died at the age of sixty-nine years, while his wife attained the advanced age of ninety-three years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Britton were: Elizabeth, deceased, who was the wife of Jacob Burkhart; William, of New York City; Mary Ann, widow of John C. Anthony; Susan, deceased, wife of Charles Van Horn, of Philadelphia; John, deceased; Emma, wife of Lewis Smith, of Reading; and George, of New York City.

JOHN WILGEROTH, who for twenty-four years until 1907 held the contract for the hauling of the mail from the Reading station to the post office, is a native of Germany, born in 1836. He was son of Conrad Wilgeroth, who was engaged in hauling and draying in the old country, where his death occurred.

John Wilgeroth came to America when a lad of fourteen years and landed in New York City, where, however, he remained but two days. Making his way to Hackensack, N. J., he was there employed for a period of seven months, and at the end of that time came to Reading. His first employment in this city was with George Gretzinger, selling pretzels, and this occupation he followed for one year. Mr. Wilgeroth was then appointed to carry the mail on horse-back from Reading to the Blue Mountains, a distance of thirty miles, making one trip each day for a period of four years. He then went to make his home with Dr. Tyson of Reading, and while there learned the hatting trade with William A. Arnold, following that business for fifteen years. He was then elected constable of the Ninth ward of Reading, an office which he ably filled for three years, at the end of which time he made application for his present position. In 1883 he was granted the contract to do all of the hauling of mail between the Reading Railroad Company and the post-office, and he has held the position till May, 1907, utilizing three horses and as many wagons.

Mr. Wilgeroth was twice married, first to Mary Hillegass, and they had two children: Amanda, who married Nicholas Baisch, and Katie who married David Runk. Ellen Loewen, to whom he was married forty-three years ago, was the daughter of Doctor and Kidelia Loewen of Pricetown. This union was blessed with four children: Emma, wife of Edward Muntz, of Philadelphia; Ida, wife of Frank Walks, Reading; Charles, who married Sarah Boyer, of Birdsboro and has three children: John, Louis W. and Ellen; and Minnie, who married Javan Reber, son of Joel and Catherine Reber.

In June, 1906 Mr. Wilgeroth returned to his old home in Germany, where a joyful meeting took place with his brother whom he had not seen for fifty-seven years. During his absence of five weeks his son and son-in-law attended to his affairs. Two years ago ill health forced him to retire, and he sold out to Will Hains, who is now hauling the mail. Last summer and autumn up to October, Mr. Wilgeroth was able to be about, and he hauled the Reading Eagle twice a day with his old horse "Barney," an animal of which he is very fond. He is the owner of considerable real estate including six houses and a farm.

Mr. Wilgeroth is the owner of considerable real estate including six houses and a farm, and he is a warm friend of the National Union Bank of Reading.

ISAAC F. HEYDT, who is engaged in the cultivation of a small tract of land in Pike township, Berks county, was born in Greenwich township, Oct. 12, 1848, son of David and Betzy (Fry) Heydt.

Mr. Heydt attended the old pay schools until he was about twenty years old. The teacher received two cents a day per head, and the school term was one and two months per year. Mr. Heydt spent his youth under the parental roof, and for three years he lived out among farmers. He learned the shoemaker's trade, and this he followed twenty years, in Washington township, Berks county, two years in Macungie township, Lehigh county, and in 1876 he came to Pike township, Berks county, where he has lived ever since. He has thirty acres of land, which he has brought to a high state of cultivation. Since 1876 he has lived here continuously with the exception of six years when he lived on his farm of 100 acres in District township. He owns a tract of nineteen acres of pasture land near Hill Church, besides another small tract of six acres on which are good buildings. This latter tract belonged to our subject's father, and there his son Horace now lives. Mr. Heydt is one of the heaviest tax payers of the township.

Politically Mr. Heydt is a Democrat. He and his family are Lutherans, and belong to Hill Church. He is regular in his church worship, and is very liberal in his contributions to all worthy causes.

On June 1, 1878, Mr. Heydt was married to Mary Grassley, born Sept. 2, 1860, daughter of Lenius and Mary (Hoffner) Grassley, of Rockland township. She died April 18, 1909, and was buried at Hill Church, where a monument marks the Heydt family lot. Four sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Heydt: Horace, living in Washington township, m. Emma Conrath, and has children—Mary and Lydia; William, of Reading, m. Alice Weller, and has had children—Clyde, Hettie, Olivia, Pearl (deceased), and two others died small; Harvey was born May 12, 1895; Henry was born March 13, 1898.

David Heydt, father of Isaac F., was born Oct. 8, 1820, in Washington township, Berks county, and died June 1, 1906, in District township near Landis Store. He was a forge man earlier in life, beginning when fifteen years old, and following that occupation twenty-three years in Lower Berks, in Richmond township and at Spring Forge, in Earl township. He was a member of Hill Church, where he is buried. His wife was Betzy Fry, daughter of John and Sally (Derr) Fry, who died in District township. Mrs. Heydt died April 25, 1888, aged sixty-six years, seven months. David and Betzy (Fry) Heydt had seventeen children: John, Sarah, Jacob, David, Percivil, Isaac, Priscilla, Hiram, Joseph, Elizabeth, Henry, Peter, Helena, Oliver, Maria and two died small.

Jacob Heydt was the father of David and grandfather of Isaac F.

JOHN HEISLER, whose death occurred at his home in Reading, Aug. 25, 1878, aged sixty-five years, was for many years engaged in shoemaking in this city. Mr. Heisler was born in Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 11, 1812.

When a young man Mr. Heisler came to America, about 1836, and settling in Reading, first located at "Cross Key Hotel" with Samuel Mengel then engaged in the shoemaking business, which trade he had learned in his native country, in Strassburg. He was enterprising and capable and soon made a success of his business. Mr. Heisler married Elizabeth Felix, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Smith) Felix, of Reading, and to this union there were born children as follows: Mary; Caspar, born Sept. 20, 1848, who married Mary Greth, and has these children,—John, Helen, Mary, Bernard, Cecelia, Annie, Amelia, Elizabeth and Laura; John; Francis; Annie; Alice; Hilda; Joseph, of Pottstown, Pa., who married Susan Ganter, of Reading, and has these children,—Gertrude, Edward, Eugene, Joseph and Marie (twins), Helen, Paul and Alice; Charles, who resides in Philadelphia, and Elizabeth, deceased. Mr. Heisler's daughters, Mary, Alice and Hilda live together in a comfortable home at No. 912 Washington street.

Mr. Heisler was a faithful member of the St. Paul's Catholic Church, and took an active part in church and charitable work. He was considered one of Reading's good, reliable citizens, and his death was a loss, not only to his family and intimate friends, but to the community at large.

HOWARD E. AHRENS. Among the native sons of Berks county, who have risen to prominence in connection with industrial affairs, and who stand exemplar of the best order of citizenship, is numbered Mr. Howard E. Ahrens, who is president of the Allentown & Reading Electric Railway Company, and who is also one of the representative contractors of this section of the State. Mr. Ahrens was born in Muhlenberg township, this county, May 13, 1853, son of Bennewell K. and Susanna (Gearhard) Ahrens, and grandson of Jacob Ahrens.

Heinrich Ahrens, the ancestor in America of the Ahrens family in question, had a very interesting career. He was born about 1759, in Bremerhaven, Germany, of parents in good social standing in that city. When but twelve years of age he played truant from school for a week. A neighbor, seeing him about the streets of the town asked his father the next Sunday in Church, why the boy had not been attending school instead of roaming the streets. The father shaking his finger at Heinrich frightened him so, that, securing money from his mother, he left home, intending to return in a few days when his father's anger would have subsided. He wandered down to the wharf, where he was noticed by the captain of a Dutch vessel, who was much impressed by his appearance. The Captain talked with Heinrich, and, taking a fancy to the boy, asked him to go with him to Holland, promising to return him to his parents in a short time. Heinrich sailed with him, but the good captain died off the shores of Holland, and Heinrich was left alone in a strange land. As the lad was wandering about the shore another captain bound for America, kidnapped him and forced him to go with him. Landing on the New England coast, probably at Boston, the boy was turned over to a rich man, who manifested a liking for him, but before letting him go, the captain cut all the bright buttons from his coat saying he wished to have them as a memento. He had been sold as a redemptioner to the rich man, who became so fond of the lad that he decided to educate him. At the time he was building a mill in his place, and noting the boy's liking for the tools of the wheelwrights and his keen interest in everything the men did, he offered to let young Heinrich learn the trade. This he did and followed it for nine years in New England. At the end of that time he started for Pennsylvania on foot and walked all the way to Berks county. He was then aged twenty-two years. He followed his trade in Bern township for a time and there he met Catharine Leppert, who afterward became his wife. He was considered an excellent mechanic. He erected many of the mills along the Tulpehocken and at Wernersville, as well as in different districts in the lower end of Berks county. He and his wife moved to Friedensburg, in Oley township, where she had relatives living, and there he built a home and passed the remainder of his life, dying at the age of eighty-one years. He was buried in the graveyard at Spies's Church. He and his wife had four children as follows: Henry, who was a wheelwright and carpenter by trade, owned and conducted a farm at the "Half Way House" in Maiden-creek township; Jacob is mentioned below; Hannah married Jacob Miller; John, born in 1794, died in 1883. John learned the carpenter and wheelwright's trade, commencing when but twelve years of age, and this he followed all his life. He served in the war of 1812 in the Berks county militia and in 1814 went with it to Baltimore. He married Christiana Reber, daughter of Johannes Reber, and they had the following children: Louisa; Anna; Catharine; Maria and Henry. All were members of the Bern Church.

Jacob Ahrens, son of Heinrich, was a successful carpenter and builder of Berks county, and devoted special attention to the building of bridges. After the memorable flood of 1850 he erected some of the best bridges in this section, including those at Kissingers, Leesport, Shoemakersville, Mohnsville and Hamburg. The maiden name of his wife was Barbara Koenig, and concerning their children we have the following data: William married Miss Kate Potteiger; Jacob died when a young man; Henry married Rebecca Gring, and they reside at No. 913 Franklin street, Reading; Rebecca became the wife of George F. Wummer, and both are deceased; Sarah, deceased, was the wife of Jacob Potteiger; Johanna, wife of Reuben Wanner, is deceased; Adeline is the wife of Tiras Gerhard; Caroline is the wife of Levi Rickenbach; Bennewell K., was the father of Howard E.

Bennewell K. Ahrens was reared to maturity in Berks county, and learned the blacksmith's and carpenter's trades, to which he devoted his attention throughout his active business career. He manufactured farming implements, and for some time was identified with agricultural pursuits. He died in 1870, at the age of forty-four years, and his wife is still living. She is a zealous member of the Lutheran Church, to which Mr. Ahrens also belonged. Of their five children the subject of this sketch is the eldest; James S. married Rosa Leinbach and is a resident of Reading; John married Mary Reis, and they reside in Reading; Clara was the wife of Solomon A. Althouse, of Reading, now deceased; Annie is the wife of William Gearhard, of Reading.

Howard E. Ahrens is indebted to the public schools of Muhlenberg township and the city of Reading for his early educational training, but he soon assumed practical responsibilities in connection with his school work. At the age of thirteen years he secured employment as tool and water boy for Harry Hawman, contractor and builder at the Reading round house, and later he became clerk in a hotel which his father was conducting in Reading. Finally he initiated his independent business career by engaging in the coal and feed business in Reading, later becoming operator of a stone quarry. In 1884 he engaged in general contracting and building, putting up nineteen buildings, and thereafter giving his attention more largely to other lines of contract work. His initial contract in the installation of water works was at Kutztown, Pa., and afterward he had similar contracts at Hamburg, Mifflin, Bridgeport, Patterson, Steelton, Newville, Newport, West Conshohocken, Northumberland, Reedsville, Pa., Delaware City and Harrington, Del., Pleasantville, N. J., as well as the electric light and water plants at Newcastle, Del. The firm of H. E. Ahrens & Bro., in which he associated with himself his brother, James S. Ahrens, has constructed a number of trolley lines in eastern Pennsylvania—notably the lines from Reading to Boyertown and from Reading to Allentown—and also an interurban line in Texas. They have had contracts with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for grading, masonry and stations and passenger tunnels all over the State of Pennsylvania. Mr. Ahrens still continues his contracting business which has become one of wide scope. The firm name is now H. E. Ahrens Company, and his partner is a son instead of his brother, as formerly. He has been identified with the Allentown & Reading Traction Company almost from the time of its organization, and was formerly its treasurer, having retained this office until March 1, 1903, when he was elected president of the company, of which position he has since continued incumbent.

Mr. Ahrens is distinctively the artificer of his own fortune, having worked forward from small beginnings and having turned the tide of success through his own well directed efforts. His reputation as a business man and as a citizen is unassailable, and his standing in the community is indicated by the unqualified esteem and confidence accorded him by the people of his native county. He is essentially public spirited in his attitude and all that touches the well being of his home city is a matter of definite interest to him. In politics he pays allegiance to the Republican party, and he has attained to the Thirty-second degree in Scottish Rite Masonry. He is past-master of Chandler Lodge, Free & Accepted Masons, of Reading; a past high priest, Excelsior Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; a member of Reading Commandery, Knights Templar; and the Harrisburg Consistory of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons at Harrisburg. He is also identified with Rajah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Reading, and takes a deep interest in all departments of the time honored fraternity, in which he has gained such exalted rank. He has been a member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, since 1870. He and his wife hold membership in the Lutheran and Reformed Churches respectively.

In 1878 Mr. Ahrens was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Snyder, daughter of the late William H. Snyder, of Reading, who served for many years as justice of the peace and who was an honored and influential citizen. Mr. and Mrs. Ahrens have six children, namely: Gertrude, William, Elizabeth, Hannah, Helen and Eva.

WILLIAM BROUGHALL, who since 1890 has been living retired in Reading, was for many years a coal operator in various sections of Pennsylvania, and is an honored survivor of the Civil war, was born Feb. 29, 1836, in Lancashire, England, son of Thomas and Mary (Adams) Broughall, both of whom died in the old country.

William Broughall left his native country when sixteen years of age, making the trip to America in the ship "Edinburgh," and landed at Castle Garden, N. Y., from whence he went to Columbiana, Ohio, and remained there for a short time. He then located in Minersville, Pa., and worked in the coal mines for some time, then going to St. Clair, from which place he enlisted in 1861 in Company H, 129th Pa. V. I. for nine months, after which he enlisted in the State Militia becoming second lieutenant. After receiving his honorable discharge Mr. Broughall returned to St. Clair, where he remained several years, then went to Tuscarora and later to Mahanoy City, working at Lanigan's Patch. He was superintendent of the Reading Company's mines in the Ellengowan district for thirty years and in all was engaged in the business for about forty years. Since 1896 Mr. Broughall has lived in Reading, retired. He is a member of Keim's Post, G. A. R., of Mahanoy City Lodge No. 357, F. & A. M.; Mahanoy City Chapter, Ashland Commandery and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., being also connected with the Knights of Pythias.

On Dec. 9, 1864, Mr. Broughall married Gueny Templin, and to them were born two children: Thomas J. and G. Elizabeth (who married William Edmunds). Mr. and Mrs. Broughall are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

During the Molly Maguire troubles Mr. Broughall had many exciting experiences, and at one time his life was threatened and his house broken into, but he escaped serious injury by being well armed. The Molly Maguires were formed in Ireland in 1843, comprising a secret organization to intimidate bailiffs, or process servers, distraining for rent. The members of the association were young men dressed up in female attire, with their faces blackened. This society was revived in 1877 in the coal regions of Pennsylvania, and the members sought to effect their purpose by intimidation, carried in some cases to murder. Several were arrested, tried and executed.

Thomas J. Broughall, son of William, is now located at Wilmington, Del., where he is employed as a bookkeeper. He married Adella Sheaffer, and has two children, John P. and William T. He is past master of Shenandoah Lodge, F. & A. M.

HARVEY H. SHOMO, secretary and treasurer of the American Casualty Co., was born at Hamburg, October 17, 1862, and when a youth moved with his parents to Reading, where he attended the local schools and took a business course. He then entered the jewelry store of Jonathan P. Mengel and learned the business, serving a regular apprenticeship. After Mr. Mengel's death, Mr. Shomo formed a co-partnership with Mr. Mengel's father, Matthias Mengel Esq., to continue the well-established business and as such they continued until 1892, when he sold his interest. Shortly afterward he became interested in the National Brass & Iron Works and being elected secretary and treasurer of the company he filled these positions until 1899 when he resigned. In 1903, he assisted in organizing the American Casualty Company at Reading, and became its treasurer, which position he has filled until the present time. Since January, 1909, he has also served as secretary. When he became of age, he identified himself with the Patriotic Order Sons of America, and since 1886, has served as treasurer of the Washington Camp No. 89. He has also taken much interest in the First Reformed Church of Reading, serving as a trustee since 1888.

In 1885, Mr. Shomo was married to Mary L. Fueller, and they have a daughter Katharine. Mrs. Shomo's father was Randolph Fueller, who followed a seafaring life for eighteen years, and was on one of the American ships when trading relations were first opened with Japan. Upon his return home, he enlisted in the Civil War on the battle-ship "Niagara," and served until its close, when he returned to Reading. Some time afterward, his health failed owing to the severe trials of the naval service, and he died in 1867. He was in the United States Navy six years.

Mr. Shomo's father was William D. Shomo, of Hamburg, where he was born in 1823, and where he successfully carried on a general mercantile business until 1869, when he removed to Reading, and there lived practically a retired life. While at Hamburg he was interested in various local industries, and served as a trustee of the Union Church for many years. He was accidentally killed September 19, 1881, in the Shoemakersville wreck on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. He was married to Catharine Deisher, daughter of David Deisher, of Maxatawny township, and they had two children: Evan L. and Harvey H. Mr. Shomo's grandfather was Joseph Shomo also of Hamburg, where he carried on a hotel and general store business for many years. [For antecedents, see sketch of Joseph N. Shomo, in this publication.]

JEROME IMBODY KLINE, junior partner of Schrader & Kline, dealers in furniture and carpets at Reading since 1871, was born December 21, 1843, in Amity township, Berks county, near Monocacy Station, and when five years old his parents moved to Oley township on a farm, near the Manatawny creek, about two miles north of the Yellow House. He attended the common schools and worked on his father's farm until 1861, when he went to Pottstown and learned the cabinet-making and furniture business under his uncle Samuel Kline, and he remained there two years. He then went to Reading and after working several months at his trade in the shop of Benjamin Bertolet on North Fifth street, entered the furniture ware-room of Joseph Schmucker at Nos. 648-650 Penn street, and continued with him ten years, when Mr. Schmucker retired. Mr. Kline then formed a co-partnership with Charles E. Schrader and Anthony A. Felix, trading under the name of Schrader, Felix & Kline. In 1882, Mr. Felix sold his interest in the business to his co-partners and they then began to trade under the name of Schrader & Kline, and they have continued to do so until the present time in the same place, a period covering altogether over thirty years. They erected their fine establishment which is well stocked with all kinds of furniture and carpets, and they have in this time manufactured extensively special designs of furniture and large parlor mantels. Having been especially devoted to his business, he did not care to fill any public offices though always manifesting an active interest in municipal affairs and public improvements. He served as a deacon and elder of Trinity Lutheran Church for upwards of thirty years.

Mr. Kline was married to Louisa S. Mease, daughter of Levi Mease, of Womelsdorf, and they have four children; Charles M. (married to Emily Wagner); Anna M. (married to George Creager); Gertrude S. (married to James Wolfersberger); and J. Clarence (married to Anna Heilig).

Mr. Kline's father was Daniel Kline, who was born at Baumstown, Exeter township, in 1808, and learning the trade of making spinning-wheels and grain cradles carried on the business extensively, together with farming, for fifty years. He died in 1883. He was married to Mary Imbody, a representative of an old family in Montgomery county, and by her he had twelve children: Jerome I.; Debora (married to Hiram Mathias, who died in 1883); Emma (married to Daniel Herbine); Hannah (married to Zenas Savage); Rosetta (married to Elhanan Bertolet); Irvin (married to Rosell Cleaver); Daniel (married to Mary Nein); Aaron (married to Sallie Fies); and four, Sarah, Hiram, Mary and Rebecca, who died young. The mother died in 1899, aged eighty-one years.

Mr. Kline's grandfather was David Kline, farmer of Amity township, and also manufacturer of spinning-wheels and grain cradles. He died in 1846, at the age of seventy-two years. He was married to Sarah Byler, of Exeter township, and by her he had nine children: John; David; Jacob; Daniel; Catharine; Elizabeth; Sarah; Samuel; and Enoch.

Mr. Kline is a lineal descendant of the Elder Georg Klein, who was the first ancestor of the family in America, having been born at Zweibrucken, in Rhenish Bavaria, South Germany, October 9, 1715, and emigrated to America in 1738 with 384 other passengers. After landing at Philadelphia, he proceeded to New Jersey, and settled at a place called Amwell, where he soon became acquainted with members of the Dunkard denomination, commonly known as the German Baptist Church. He was baptized in the faith in the year 1739, and having been a man of more than ordinary literary attainments, he was chosen by the brethren as assistant minister.

In 1750, Elder Kline moved to the North-kill on a farm situated within two miles north-west of Bernville, Berks county, where he took charge of a congregation which was called "The Little North-kill Meeting House." After preaching seven years in this meeting-house, he was ordained as a full minister by two prominent Elders, Michael Pfautz and Martin Werner. He continued to preach here for twenty years until the congregation became too weak to support him as a minister. He was regarded by this particular denomination as a very influential minister. He was married to Dorothy Rebman, and by her had seven children; and several of the grandsons became worthy elders of the denomination. "After a long and useful career in the ministry, he was gathered home into the garner of the Lord. On a little hillside on his farm, on a family plot, now owned by Percival Troutman, lie buried the remains of our first ancestor, Elder Georg Klein, together with his faithful wife, Dorothy, and many of his descendants—pioneers, evangelists and missionary workers."

The descendants of Elder Kline comprise a large family. A number of them assembled at the residence of Mr. Jerome I. Kline, No. 435 Woodward street, Reading, on May 2, 1904, and organized an association which they named the "Elder Georg Kline Association." Since then a special committee has been tabulating the names of the descendants for the purpose of publishing them in book form for private distribution.

HOYER. The early home of the Hoyer (or as the name was then spelled—Hyer and Heyer) family was in Germany, whence in Revolutionary times there emigrated to this country three brothers, (I) Adam, (Ia) John and one whose name was probably George, who in 1780, owned land in York county, Pennsylvania.

(I) Adam Hoyer early became a man of some property, and in 1780 was assessed two pounds, and is of record as owning a cow. His location is given as Maiden-creek township, Berks county. In 1808 he purchased land, and the record of the deed may be found in Deed Book, No. 22, page 485. He was a tailor by trade. His children were: Elizabeth McNeal; Daniel; and Jacob, who died in 1834, leaving three sons, Jacob, John and Daniel, the latter one of the executors of his father's will.

(II) Daniel Hoyer, son of Adam, was born March 23, 1775, and he died May 3, 1848, and was buried at Allegheny Church, in Brecknock township. The greater part of his life was passed in Birdsboro, Pa., where he followed his trade of shoemaker and cobbler. At one time he served as constable in Reading, of which city he was a resident for some years. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. By his wife, Katharine Bridenstein, he became the father of the following children: Charles, whose children were—Aaron, Harrison, Leah, Hannah, Harriet, Mary, Susan, Daniel, Charles and William; Daniel (1802-1839), who had a daughter—Mary Ann (m. to a Haws); Adam, of Birdsboro, who had two children—Adam and Isaiah W.; Isaac, of Birdsboro, who had children—Elhannon, Joshua, Isaac, Sarah (Stanley), Tamson and Hannah Comver; Benjamin; Samuel, who died single; Hannah, who m. Aaron Houck; Mary, who m. a Snyder, and had a daughter, Kathrine (m. to a Scull); Annie, who m. a Lloyd, and had two children, Sarah and Isaac; and Kathrine, who m. an Adams, and had two children, Alva and Ferdinando.

(III) Benjamin Hoyer, son of Daniel, was born in Robeson township, Berks county, and he died March 4, 1848, and was buried in St. John's cemetery, below Gibraltar, in the vicinity of which town the years of his life had been passed. In his early days he worked upon the farm, but later became a boatman on the Union canal. When he became twenty he entered the ranks of the teacher's profession, and for many terms was successfully engaged as a teacher in the public schools. He was a good singer, and was a singing master, holding singing schools in school-houses or private homes in the evenings, and was a very popular and highly respected man. He married Susanna Ruffner, of Brecknock township, who was born in 1802, and who died March 29, 1883, and was laid to rest beside her husband in St. John's cemetery. They were the parents of eleven children, of whom two daughters died young, the others being: Edward, Amos, Hannah, Reuben (1833-1904), Henry, Samuel, Harriet, Sarah and Rebecca.

(IV) Henry Hoyer, son of Benjamin, and now a venerable esteemed citizen of Reading, was born in Cumru township, near Yocum's Forge, Dec. 27, 1836. He obtained a limited education in the public school, known as Westley school in the Morgantown road in Robeson township, but the early death of his father necessitated his devoting his time to the farm. He worked on the home farm, and as a hired man to the neighboring farmers until he was eighteen, and then became a mule driver on the Schuylkill tow-path, this engrossing his attention for four summers. Later he became a boatman, and followed that calling for twenty-seven seasons, running a boat for many years for the Schuylkill Navigation Company, and later for the Reading Railroad Company. During the earlier years that he followed boating he lived at Gibraltar, but in 1862 he moved to Reading, and there he has since made home. When he gave up his work on the canal he worked at the blast furnace for eleven years, and then for three years was employed at the pipe mill. On Aug. 20, 1892, he entered the service of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, at Reading, as an agent, and he has since worked for this company. During the first twelve years he did not lose by sickness or other cause over one week's time, but in the fall of 1906 he fell upon the pavement, and this disabled him for several weeks. Three times he has been offered the assistant superintendency, but he has steadfastly refused to accept it. When he entered the company's service in 1892, they had twenty-seven agents, and four assistants. At the present time they employ forty-six agents and six assistants. Mr. Hoyer built up a $300 debit in industrial business, besides writing a large amount of ordinary insurance. He has had the honor of leading the agents in Reading for six consecutive years, and for three years was second best, while as late as 1905 he was third best man in the office. He won a number of medals and pins, as well as service badges and other mementoes from the company for efficient and faithful service.

Mr. Hoyer is a member of the First Christian Church, while Mrs. Hoyer belongs to the Evangelical faith. He owns a residence at No. 630 Birch street, and for many years lived in the Tenth ward, but since 1893 he has lived north of Penn street.

Mr. Hoyer has been married three times. His first wife, Mary Killian, died in 1869, the mother of two sons: John Lincoln, of Seyfert, Pa.; and Millard, who was accidentally shot while out hunting, when he was but sixteen years of age; Mr. Hoyer m. (second)

Emily Winings, who died in 1889, the age of forty-four years. No children were born of this union. In 1891 Mr. Hoyer m. (third) Mrs. Annie E. (Holloway) Wilkinson, widow of John H. Wilkinson, and they have one daughter, Elsie K. Mrs. Hoyer's parents are William A. and Mary (Womsher) Holloway, of Amityville, the former a tailor by trade. Their three children are: Douglass, Annie E., and Clara.

(Ia) John Hoyer, one of the three emigrant brothers, died near Reading, and was buried at the First Reformed Church burying ground on North Sixth street, his remains afterward being removed with others from the same cemetery, to the Charles Evans cemetery. His children were: John, a resident of Reading, where he died the father of two sons—Mahlon and Aaron, the latter of Iowa; Peter, who lived in Spring township; Daniel, who died at Poplar Neck Bridge, where he was toll-keeper, leaving no children; Samuel; Jacob; Hannah; and Mrs. Henry Miller.

(IIa) Samuel Hoyer, son of John the emigrant and father of the Hon. Joseph S. and John, was born in Berks county, April 2, 1796, and he died in Robeson township, May 15, 1849, at the age of fifty-three years, one month, thirteen days. He was a stone mason by trade, and followed this calling until he began farming. He owned 100 acres of land in Robeson township, near the White Bear, at the old Quaker Meeting House—one of the old landmarks. He continued work at his trade at times until within fifteen years of his death. He married Susanna, daughter of Jacob Seyfrit, who died at the age of sixty-three years, and was buried beside her husband in the churchyard of the Robeson, generally known as Plough, Church. Samuel Hoyer in politics was a Democrat. His children were: Joseph S.; Elizabeth m. James Geiger; Susanna m. Henry Miller; John; Hannah m. Elisha Wells; Samuel died aged sixteen years; Sarah m. George Schaeffer; Isaac S., of Robeson township, m. Mary Fry, and had two sons and two daughters—Sallie (m. to Jacob Kurtz), Hannah (m. to John Spatz), John F. (m. to Katie Kramer) and one son died in infancy; and Isaiah.

(IIIa) Joseph S. Hoyer, son of Samuel and Susanna, was born in Robeson township, Sept. 10, 1817, and was educated at Myerstown, Lebanon county, and then taught school for a number of years in addition to his duties as a farmer. Removing to Reading in 1857 or 1858 he there conducted a general store for some time, and was a very active and public-spirited citizen, holding a number of offices of public trust, and discharging his duties with a fidelity that won for him the esteem of all men. From 1863 to 1865 he was mayor of Reading, and afterward for a number of years served as clerk in the prothonotary's office of this county. He died in Reading June 16, 1880. He married Sarah Longenecker, of Myerstown, and they had seven children, of whom two sons and one daughter died in childhood, those surviving to mature years being: Thaddeus A., George, Edward and Clara, the latter dying in 1876, at the age of sixteen years.

(IVa) Thaddeus A. Hoyer, son of Joseph S., was born in Reading Oct. 11, 1850. As a young man he clerked in his father's grocery store, which was located at the corner of Eighth and Washington streets. For several years then he was a clerk in various attorney's offices, and in 1866 he learned the barber's trade from Amos Gable, of Reading, who then conducted a shop at the corner of Sixth and Penn streets. He was also a painter of portraits, and his brush gained him no little fame. Since 1868 Mr. Hoyer has had his place of business at No. 5 North Seventh street. In politics he is a Democrat, and for four years he represented the Eighth ward on the school board. He is a member of Mystic Star Commandery, No. 47, and for a number of years served as its recorder; and of Mt. Penn Castle, No. 51, K. G. E. He and his family are members of the First Reformed Church. In October, 1876, Mr. Hoyer was married to Emma Koch, daughter of Samuel Koch, of Reading, and they have had five children: Catharine, wife of Charles E. Matz; Anna, who married Jay Kutz; Florence; and William and Joseph, who both died in childhood.

(IIIa) John Hoyer, son of Samuel and Susanna, born in Robeson township, in 1824, died at his home in Reading, No. 140 North Eighth street, July 9, 1896, in the seventy-third year of his age. In his early life he learned the blacksmith's trade as well as the carpenter's trade, and these he followed for some years in Reading. He was a tipstaff at the courthouse for many years, and he was well and favorably known to the judges and officials. For a long time he was tax collector in his ward, and he was an active worker in the Democratic party. He and his family were active members of the First Reformed Church, of Reading, and he was long an official in both church and Sunday-school. The children all called him "Uncle John." He sang in the choir of the First Reformed Church until the time of his death, and he retained the sweetness of tone that had marked the singing of his earlier years to the very last. He is buried in Aulenbach cemetery. His wife, Mary A. Dunkle, died Oct. 30, 1896, when she was aged sixty-five years, three deaths having occurred in this family within the one year, the first being the daughter, Geneva L., who passed away Jan. 3, 1896, aged thirty years; she had been a school teacher in Reading for about twelve years. The only living member of the family is Miss Helen A., a refined and respected lady, interested in church, Sunday-school and philanthropic work, who resides at No. 140 North Eighth street. Mrs. Mary A. (Dunkle) Hoyer was a daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth (Althouse) Dunkle, farming people of Maiden-creek township, and an early settled family in that section.

(IIIa) Isaiah Hoyer, son of Samuel and Susanna, was born Sept. 16, 1839, in Robeson township. The public schools afforded him a good common-school education, and on leaving school he learned the carpenter's trade. In the spring of 1866 he came to Reading, and worked continuously at his trade until 1884, and then embarked in a grocery business which he carried on for over eleven years, the first five being located at the corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, and the remainder of the time at Ninth and Elm streets. After closing out his grocery interests he resumed work at his trade, until he was appointed tax collector of the Ninth and Eleventh wards, and he served as such during 1904-05-06. He represented the Tenth ward in the common council in 1879-80. He is at present living retired.

Mr. Hoyer was married (first) to Elizabeth Westley, who died in 1868, leaving three children: William W., deceased, m. Mary A. Lewis, and had one son, Howard Ellsworth (m. Mrs. Hoyer is active in the work of the Evangelical Association. Mr. Hoyer is a Democrat, and is a well known and highly respected citizen.

HERBEIN. The Herbein (or Harbein) family is one of the old and honored families of Berks county, and has its seat in Oley township. The first of this name here was (I) Peter Harbyn (also spelled Harpine), whose wife's name was Margaret. They emigrated on the ship "Pink," landing at Philadelphia Oct. 17, 1732. It is probable that soon after coming to America they settled in Oley township, which was the first settled district of Berks county. In 1754 the Harbine women appear as communicants of the Hill Church. When the county was organized in 1752 Peter Harbine was a taxable in Oley township, where he owned a large tract of land. He had a brother in Berks county by the name of Jacob Harbein, who witnessed his (Peter's) will, made March 15, 1795, and probated April 4, 1795. The other witnesses were Samuel High and Benjamin Spyker. When Peter died he was a yeoman of Oley township. His first wife, Margaret, who had accompanied him across the ocean, had apparently died, as his will mentions his wife, Elizabeth, probably his second wife. His children were: Peter, who obtained the homestead; Samuel; David; Maria; Esther, who married Benjamin Schneider; Sabra, who married Christian Kinsey; and Susanna, who married Peter Knabb. Of these, Peter and Samuel were the executors of their father's will. Elizabeth Harbein, widow of Peter, Sr., died in 1802. Her will is on record in Will Book A, page 461. Her sons Peter and Samuel were the executors.

(II) David Herbein, son of Peter the emigrant, died in the spring of 1790, leaving a large estate. His will, which was witnessed by one Johannes Herbein, who it is believed was a grandson, is one of the grandest documents on record in Berks county, and would serve as a model for fathers of later days. He was survived by his wife Catharine, and three sons: Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

(III) Abraham Herbein, son of David, obtained the Oley plantation of 140 acres. He died in 1826. His wife's name was Susan, and the children who survived him were: Daniel, Abraham, Lydia and Levi.

(III) Isaac Herbein, son of David, was given another plantation in Oley, this one containing 101 acres.

(III) Jacob Herbein, son of David, was less than twenty-one when his father died. He received his father's personal estate. He settled in Exeter township. His children were: Mrs. Susan Rothermel; Mrs. Gideon Snyder; Mrs. Daniel Snyder; and John (1804-1868), who married Sarah Gernand, and had children, Jacob, Mary Ann, George, Charles and Abner (who had Mary, Effinger and Ella).

(IV) Johannes Herbein, supposed to be a grandson of David, settled in Richmond township about 1798, in which year he purchased land there. In 1790 he built upon it a house which is still standing. Near it is a never failing spring of pure, clear water. He devoted his life to agriculture, and attained advanced years. His remains are buried in a private ground on the old Herbein property in Richmond township. He married Barbara Fies, and they had three children: John; Jonathan, who married Kate Schlegel, and had one son, William; and Sallie, who became the wife of Samuel L. Hoch.

Abraham Herbein, grandfather of James B. was a native of Oley township. He died in 1842, and is buried on the Herbein homestead in a private burying ground near the Oley Line, in Oley township. He was the owner of a large farm, and was a man of influence. He married Susanna Hoch, and their children were: Daniel, Lydia, Levi (of Oley) and Abraham, all now deceased.

Abraham Herbein, son of Abraham and Susanna, was born on the Herbein homestead Jan. 25, 1810, and he died Aug. 9, 1863. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned a farm of 102 acres besides other tracts. He was a man of great intelligence and possessed a remarkable memory. In appearance he was tall and commanding. He married Eliza Brumbach, who was born Nov. 6, 1825, daughter of David and Deborah (De Turk) Brumbach, and she died Oct. 6, 1879, aged fifty-three years, eleven months. Both she and her husband are buried at Oley Church. They had children as follows: Deborah, born March 6, 1850, married Solomon Schollenberger, of Pleasantville, Pa.; Hetty Ann, born Nov. 25, 1851, married Jacob Holder, of No. 28 South Eleventh street, Reading; Eliza A., born May 1, 1853, died young; Emma R., born July 13, 1854, married Ezra Holder, of Greenlane, Pa.; Amanda, born Feb. 14, 1856, died young; Mary A. G. and James B., twins, were born April 14, 1857, Mary A. G. dying young; Henrietta E., born May 9, 1859, died young; Olivia, born Oct. 26, 1861, married D. D. Fisher, of Oley, Pa.; and to his duties as a farmer. Removing to Reading in Oley.

James B. Herbein, son of Abraham and Eliza, born April 14, 1857, obtained his education in the public schools and in Oley Academy, under the instruction of Prof. S. A. Baer, Ph. D., later county superintendent of schools. He was licensed to teach in 1876, Centennial year, by Prof. Baer, and taught his first term at Reiff's school, in his native district. He taught two terms at this school and then for a like period was engaged at the Guldin school. In 1880 he began farming on the place that has since been his home. He has a valuable farm of 105 acres, and has good pasture land, making a specialty of dairying, and having a regular trade for his butter. He has a great deal of fruit on his place, and he attends the Reading market three times a week. His buildings are fine and up-to-date, and with the neat lawn and cement walks his home presents a most attractive appearance. In his yard is a never failing spring.

In politics Mr. Herbein is a stanch Democrat, and he has served his township as constable and school director, serving in the latter office six years, four of which he was secretary and one president. He and his family are members of Frieden's Reformed Church, which for a number of years he served as deacon, and is now elder. For twenty years he was superintendent of the Sunday-school. During the first ten years of his administration the Sunday-school was Union, but the growth of both congregations necessitated a change and they were obliged to hold their Sunday-schools separately. He was president of the Ninth District Sunday-school Association of Berks county for eight years, this district comprising Oley, Earl and Alsace. He was obliged to resign these positions, however, on account of defective hearing. Mr. Herbein belongs to Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E., of which he is a charter member.

Mr. Herbein was married, Sept. 30, 1879, to Sallie Reider, daughter of Stephen and Mary (Melot) Reider, of Oley, and they have two sons and two daughters: Grace, who married Moses Enoch, of Reading; Lloyd, who married Amelia Bower, and lives at Friedensburg; Florence, at home; and Elliott, a school teacher in Oley township, who graduated from a business college in 1908. In 1888 Mr. Herbein built a fine brick residence on his farm which has since been the family home.

John Herbein, grandfather of Daniel M., was born on the old homestead in Richmond township, about one-half mile east of Fleetwood, Pa., in 1803, and died in 1859, after a life spent in agricultural pursuits. His wife was Susan Heffner, daughter of John Heffner, and they had issue: Benneville, Samuel and John.

Samuel Herbein, son of John, was born Feb. 8, 1829, on the Herbein homestead, which, on coming of age, he purchased, tilling its soil for many years. He was a lifelong resident of Richmond township, and died in 1907. He was an active Democrat, and well and favorably known, and for many years was supervisor of Richmond township. In religious faith he was a Lutheran, belonging to Mertz's Church in Rockland township. In 1849 he married (first) Rachel Dry, who bore him two daughters, Susan and Mary. He married (second) Sarah Ann Minker, daughter of Jacob and Judith (Adolph) Minker, in November, 1855, and this union was blessed with the following children: Amanda, who married John Hoch; Daniel M.; Oscar, who died in youth; Samuel, of Bowers, Pa.; Albert, at home; and Katie, also at home.

Daniel M. Herbein, son of Samuel, was born March 17, 1858, in Richmond township. He acquired his education in the public schools and the Keystone State Normal School, which he attended one term. His boyhood days were passed on his father's farm, on which he worked for sixteen years. In the spring of 1902 he sold his farm stock and removed to Reading, where he lived until the spring of 1904, then removing to Fleetwood to become the proprietor of the "Fleetwood House," which he has conducted with much success to the present time. He has the faculty of making friends and keeping them, and his good table has won for him and his wife a reputation far and wide. The traveling public especially patronize his house. In politics Mr. Herbein is a strong Democrat, and has been a delegate to many county conventions. In November, 1897, he was elected poor director for Berks county, a position in which he served with credit until 1900.

On Oct. 5, 1878, Mr. Herbein was married to Mary A. Conrath, daughter of Israel and Catherine (Angstadt) Conrath, of Rockland, and to them have been born these children: Susan, who married William Kline, of Fleetwood, and has one daughter, Minerva; Howard J.; Walter J.; and Warren D.

Daniel Herbein, born Feb. 12, 1780, died May 20, 1842, was probably a son of Abraham Herbein, of Oley township. He married Elizabeth Reber (1783-1857), and they lived at Clear Spring, Md., for some years before they died there. They had six children: John (1804-1873), of Alpha, Greene Co., Ohio, married Hetty Herr; Catharine (1809-1866) married (first) David Ridenour and (second) Samuel Boyd; Susan (1811-1890) married Dr. W. H. Grimes, of Atchison, Kans.; Mary (1817-1880) married Joseph E. Gest, of Greene county, Ohio; Col. Thomas (Dec. 15, 1820), of Tacoma, Wash., married Catharine A. Smith, who died in 1864, the mother of six children; and Eliza Jane (1824-1895) married Rev. S. N. Calender, D. D. (Reformed), of Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania.

John Herbein (or Herbine), born in Oley township, later moved to Bern, where he owned land on which he died. He married (first) Maria Shearer, and they had four children: Dr. Jonathan S., born March 29, 1833, who married, in 1854, Elizabeth Winters, and died possessed of considerable wealth Sept. 14, 1900, the father of Wellington, Dr. Milton, Clara, Howard, Isaac, George, Mary and John; David and Dr. Isaac, twins, born Dec. 24, 1835, of whom the latter has a son, Oscar B.; and Gideon. Mr. Herbein married (second) a Miss Rhein, and had four children by this union, namely; William, Daniel, Adam and Henry.

S. S. SCHWERINER. Among the enterprising business men of Reading, Pa., who have built up a large and thriving industry from the humble walks of life, may be mentioned S. S. Schweriner, one of Reading's leading shoe dealers, who is a native of the northern part of Germany.

Mr. Schweriner received his educational training in the schools of his native country, where he remained until 1870, there learning his trade. In the year mentioned he arrived in New York and traveled throughout the United States, finally choosing Reading as his place of residence, establishing himself in business at No. 432 Penn Square, where he has continued to the present time. Mr. Schweriner's start in business life was in a small way, but his natural executive ability, in connection with his energy and enterprise, soon caused his venture to prosper, and the business has gradually increased in size, until he now employs thirty-seven skilled salespeople and custom workers. His footwear is of the finest quality and workmanship, and finds a ready market all over the surrounding country, and Mr. Schweriner has built up a reputation for honest representation and fair dealing.

Mr. Schweriner is very fond of travel and has made two trips to Europe, the first one in 1890 and the second in 1906, when he visited his old home in Germany, and many points of interest in the old country. He is a public-spirited citizen, recognized in the different charitable and other institutions, and he has won the esteem of all who know him well.

WILLIAM HENRY NOLL, a teacher residing in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, was born July 18, 1874, son of David K. and Elizabeth (Keller) Noll.

Peter Noll, Sr., the great-great-grandfather of W. Henry, was, according to the Federal census of 1790, a resident of Exeter township, where he is recorded as having a son at home above sixteen years of age, and two daughters. Tradition states he had a large family, some of the children having been previously married and having families of their own. Another son of Peter Noll, Sr., besides Peter, was Valentine, who in 1790 lived in Alsace township.

Peter Noll, son of Peter, Sr., and also mentioned in the Federal census of 1790, was a farmer, and lived in Alsace township. He married Magdalena Keller, and they had children as follows: John, Peter, Henry, Samuel, Jacob, Molly (m. John Heckman), and Hettie (m. Daniel Heckman). Peter Noll is buried at Spies's Church.

Henry Noll, son of Peter and Magdalena, was born in Alsace township, May 3, 1798, and died Nov. 25, 1883, in Ruscombmanor township, on the farm now owned by the estate of his son, David K., and operated by his grandson Gideon. He was a farmer, and built the present set of buildings on his farm, the barn in 1840 and the house in 1842. He m. Catharine Keller, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Specht) Keller, of Rockland township. She was born June 5, 1803, and died aged eighty-three years. Both are buried at Shalters Church. They became the parents of ten children, namely: Sarah m. John Steihl; Nicodemus lived in Richmond township; Jacob lived in Union county, Pa.; Henry K. lived in Ruscombmanor township; Catharine m. Simon Kline, of Reading; Elizabeth m. (first) Reuben Gring, and (second) John Weitzel; Hannah m. Daniel Merkel; David K.; Mary m. William Merkel; Magdalena m. Reuben Delp; and Martha m. (first) Martin Haas, and (second) Cleophas Dreibelbis.

David K. Noll, son of Henry and Catharine, and father of W. Henry, born in Ruscombmanor township, Oct. 13, 1813, and died on his farm, Oct. 26, 1907. He had lived all his life in Ruscombmanor township, with the exception of four years when he farmed in Alsace township. He owned a farm of eighty-four acres in Ruscombmanor, which he cultivated, and on which he lived and died. He also owned the Noll homestead in Ruscombmanor township, which has been in the family name for over 100 years. That tract consists of sixty-two acres, and is now rented to Mr. Noll's son, Gideon. Mr. Noll built the present house in 1893, and there his widow now lives, superintending the cultivation of the farm. He was a Democrat, and served as school director for a number of years, and was a delegate to a number of county conventions. Mr. Noll was a self made man. In his early life he learned the blacksmith's trade from Jonas Rothermel, at Fleetwood, after which was hired on the farm in Muhlenberg two years. He then from there came to Reading, where he assisted his brother-in-law, Simon Kline, in the manufacturing of brick for about four years. He then returned home and helped his father upon the farm two years, next returning to Reading and working for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as a blacksmith, becoming the foreman of the blacksmith department.

In 1874 he began farming in Ruscombmanor township, on his father's farm as a tenant, remaining there four years, when he moved to the farm of his father-in-law, Gideon Keller, who died in 1878. The Keller farm became the property of Mrs. Noll by inheritance. After ten years on the Keller farm they returned to the old Noll homestead and lived there six years. On March 24, 1894, they came to the present place.

Mr. Noll and his family were Reformed members of Shalter's Union Church, while Mrs. Noll worships in the Lutheran faith at the same church. David K. Noll was married Nov. 24, 1868, to Elizabeth, daughter of Gideon and Sarah (Schmeck) Keller. Their children were: Gideon, born 1869, and now a farmer and justice of the peace in Ruscombmanor township, m. Sarah E. Welder, and has children—Katie E., Annie M., Maria S., and David J.; Maria Catharine, born 1871, died 1872; William Henry; Peter Nic., born 1879, is single and lives with his mother; and John Jacob, born 1883, died 1884.

William Henry Noll was reared upon the farm, and obtained his early education in the public schools of the township, and later attending the Keystone State Normal school, at Kutztown. He was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. W. M. Zechman, in the fall of 1894, and taught his first term and the ten succeeding terms at Sand Hill school in Ruscombmanor. In the fall of 1906 he began teaching Frey's school in the same township. He also owns and cultivates a tract of thirteen acres, where he lives, in Ruscombmanor, on the road leading from Pricetown to Fleetwood, known as the Friedensburg Road.

Mr. Noll is a good musician, at an early age showing considerable talent. When a boy of eight years he could play difficult music, and at fifteen began playing the Sunday-school organ for the St. John's Sunday-school at Pricetown. In 1895 he was elected organist of the St. John's Union Church at Pricetown, and has been the organist and choirmaster ever since. He was also the organist at Shalters Church, in Alsace township for a period of five years. For some years he taught music.

Mr. Noll is an influential Democrat, and for seven years was a member of the County Standing Committee. He was active in the welfare of his party before he was of age. In the spring of 1905 he was elected the assessor of the township, and after serving one term of three years was re-elected by a unanimous vote. He was delegate to the State Convention in 1903, and has rendered valuable services to his party in various capacities. He and his family are members of Shalters Reformed Church.

On March 26, 1898, Mr. Noll married Mary, daughter of Franklin and Susan (Weidner) Hafer, of Oley township. To this union have been born three children, viz.: Elda Erma, David Walter and Elmer Franklin.

GEORGE A. WEIDNER, now living retired from active life at his comfortable home in Pike township, Berks county, was born in Oley township, Oct. 17, 1871, son of John and Sarah (Angstadt) Weidner.

Mr. Weidner is a direct descendant of Adam Weidner, who emigrated from the Old World home of the family and settled in Pennsylvania. His children were: Lazarus, Tichicus, David, Jacob, and several daughters.

Tichicus Weidner, son of Adam, was born in April, 1721, and died July 9, 1799. His wife Anna Maria was born Feb. 24, 1732, and died April 30, 1791.

Johannes Weidner, son of Tichicus and Anna Maria, was born Jan. 17, 1756, and died Aug. 2, 1836. On Jan. 30, 1793, he married Catharine Borgert, born April 15, 1753, died Aug. 8, 1826. They were married thirty-three years, and were the parents of two sons and one daughter.

Jacob Weidner, son of Johannes and Catharine, was born Nov. 20, 1793, and died Nov. 14, 1860, and is buried in the Weidner private burial ground. He was a farmer and owned a large tract of land which later belonged to his son John. On July 30, 1820, he married Veronica Barto, born June 8, 1793, died May 8, 1865. Their married life covered forty years. Their children were: Catharine, widow of Isaac Reiff, lives in Friedensburg; Caroline m. Jacob Keim; and John B.

John B. Weidner, son of Jacob and father of George A., was born in Oley township, Oct. 19, 1825, and died May 13, 1892, and is buried in the family burial ground near Pleasantville. He was a lifelong farmer and owned the farm near Lobachsville now the property of Jacob Moyer. He was a school director and was deacon of Lobachsville Church a number of years. His wife, Sarah Angstadt, was a daughter of Gideon Angstadt, who is buried at New Jerusalem Church. She was born July 4, 1833, and died Nov. 7, 1891, and is buried in the Weidner family cemetery. Their children were: Albert; Samuel, who has his home with his brother George A.; Ellen and George A.

George A. Weidner received his education in the public schools of Oley township, and grew to manhood on the home farm. He began farming in the spring of 1896 at Lobachsville, to which place he moved at that time. Here he continued until the spring of 1903, when he retired, and rented the farm. Mr. Weidner's land at Lobachsville consists of 104 acres, and he also owns the hotel and store. In addition he owns the creamery at Lobachsville. He is a substantial citizen, and is favorably known in his district. In politics he is a Democrat. The family attend St. Paul's Union Church, Mrs. Weidner being a Lutheran, and Mr. Weidner is a Reformed member.

On June 2, 1894, Mr. Weidner married Maggie Rohrbach, daughter of Augustus and Mary (Grim) Rohrbach. Three children came to bless this union, but one, Ellen, died aged two years. The two surviving children are: Minnie R. and George R.

HARRY E. LEVAN (deceased), who for a number of years was employed as a machinist at the Reading Hardware Company, and in which capacity he was serving at the time of his death, July 18, 1899, was born Aug 1, 1866, in Reading.

Mr. Levan received his educational training in the schools of his native city, after leaving which he learned the trade of machinist. He soon secured a position with the Reading Hardware Company, and remained with this firm all of his active period. His services were highly valued by the officers of the company, who knew him to be a skilled mechanic and faithful workman, and among his fellow employees he was very popular. In religious belief he was a member of the Second Reformed Church, while his widow attends the church of the Lutheran denomination. In political belief he was a Republican, and his fraternal connections were with the Rainbow Fire Company.

In 1886 Mr. Levan was married to Mary E. Ruth, the estimable daughter of Daniel H. Ruth, and to them were born five children, as follows: John Y.; Florence E.; Daniel H.; Ruth M. and Harry E., Jr. In April, 1904, Mrs. Levan removed from her home in Oakbrook, to her present residence in Reading, that she might better care for her interests in this city. She owns her residence at No. 505 Oley street, as well as six residence properties at Thirteenth and Kenney streets.

HENRY ACHENBACH, who was for a half century employed as an engineer by the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad., and who died at his home in Reading, March 31, 1909, was born Aug. 1, 1831, in Hesse Cassel, Germany, son of John and Catherine (Herner) Achenbach, farming people of Germany who never came to this country.

Henry Achenbach received his education in the schools of Germany, and in 1851 came to America, locating at once in Reading, where he engaged at the old Eckert furnace remaining three years. On April 1, 1854, he accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, in whose employ he continued until he was retired on a pension, having been connected with this road for fifty years. In 1856 Mr. Achenbach was married to Catherine Miller, also of Germany, and two children were born to this union: Christina, who married David Faust; and Mary, who married Francis Homan. In 1878 Mr. Achenbach was married (second) to Louisa C. Gass, born in the Fatherland, and there were four children born to this union: Harry C., who married Carrie Shaffer; Charles A.; Theresa L., and one child deceased. Since 1888 Mr. Achenbach had lived, where his widow still resides, at No. 634 North Eleventh street.

In religious belief Mr. Achenbach was a Lutheran, and in political matters a Democrat. He was a member of Germania Lodge, No. 158, I. O. O. F., of the Philadelphia & Reading Relief Association, and of several other societies. He is buried in Charles Evans cemetery.

H. F. GEISEWITE, engaged in the grocery business in Reading, Pa., for some years, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Jan. 27, 1850, son of Daniel and Rebecca (Faust) Geisewite.

H. F. Geisewite remained on the home farm until twenty-five years of age, receiving for his first year's work $1.50 per month, $3.00 for the second year, and $5.00 per month for the third year, then hiring out at $10.00 per month for one year. Mr. Geisewite then spent three years with Henry R. Tobias at $10.00 per month, leaving to engage in work on the Union Canal, and later on the Schuylkill Canal, his boating operations including in all two years. He then spent one year at the Henry Van Reed paper mill, was for five years with John C. Hepler in his greenhouse, was one year at Bushong's furnace, a like period in the Reading paper mills, and then operated the Bushong farm for three years. He then commenced work in his brother's grocery store on Canal street, but later engaged at Sternbergh's rolling mill, where he continued one year. After spending one year in the wholesale grocery of Daniel S. Esterly, he engaged with George Gehman, No. 34 North Eighth street, a wholesale produce merchant. In 1889 he entered the grocery business on his own account at Tenth and Washington streets, where he remained three years. In 1891 Mr. Geisewite came to his present store, where he has since continued with much success.

Mr. Geisewite married Emma Moyer, daughter of Israel Moyer, a native of Spring township. They have no children. They attend Epler's Reformed Church. He is a member of several fraternal organizations, and in political matters is a Democrat.

HENRY R. HOCH, an enterprising business man of Reading, Pa., where he has been engaged in slate cutting since January, 1905, was born March 19, 1872, in Richmond township, Berks county, Pa., son of Bennewell and Susan (Rothermel) Hoch, and grandson of Samuel Hoch.

Mr. Hoch received his education in the schools of his native township, after leaving which he spent nine years at harness making at Fleetwood, Pa. He then engaged in slate cutting with his brother, M. R. Hoch, a sketch of whom will be found elsewhere in this volume, and the brothers have continued together to the present time.

The marriage of Mr. Hoch occurred Feb. 18, 1905, to Clara Schlegel, daughter of Reuben and Katie (Kutz) Schlegel, and they reside at No. 626 Moss street, being well known in their community. They have two children, Ida and Anna. Mr. Hoch is a member of Fleetwood Camp, No. 103, P. O. S. of A., and the Knights of Malta, No. 277, Reading. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Hoch are Reformed. In their pleasant home is an interesting curio which belonged to Mr. Hoch's grandfather, a "grandfather's clock," bearing the name of Jacob Diehl as maker, and showing the moon's phases and date. This old and valued time-piece is greatly prized by Mr. Hoch, and would make a valued addition to any historical collection.

GEORGE A. MARKERT, proprietor of Markert's café, which is located at Nos. 645-647 Walnut street, Reading, was born in this city, April 12, 1873, a son of George Adam and Mary (Peiffer) Markert.

Great-grandfather Markert, who was a native of Glostenhaus, Bavaria, Germany, never came to America, and he lost his life by accidentally falling into a stream of water. Four of his sons, however, came to the United States, George Adam settling in Elk county, Pa., and Nicholas settling at Reading.

George Adam Markert, the grandfather of George A. Markert, was born May 24, 1811, at Glostenhaus, Bavaria, and came to America about 1839 or 1840. He was married at Gettysburg, in Adams county, Pa., in the latter year, to Susan Baugner, daughter of Michael Baugner. She was born Jan. 19, 1819, and died in Wisconsin, in 1887. They had four sons and three daughters, as follows: Joseph, who is an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Hampton Roads, served in the Civil war; Grace, who married Jacob Snyder, who was a soldier in the Civil war; George Adam; John, who was accidentally killed at St. Paul, Minn.; Francis, who died at Lancaster, Grant county, Wis.; and Mary, who is the wife of John Bucher, of Lancaster county, Pa.; and Susan, married, who resides at Lancaster, Wis.

George Adam Markert, father of George A., was born Dec. 9, 1847, at Reading. When twenty years old he accepted employment on the Reading Railroad and is still identified with that corporation, on March 24, 1908, completing a period of forty years with the road, the most cordial relations between employers and employe having existed all these years. He is a member of the Junior Fire Company, of Reading, with which he became connected in 1869, and belongs to the Veteran Fire Association. Mr. Markert resides in his own home, a very comfortable one, at No. 640 Walnut street. On Jan. 23, 1870, he married Mary Peiffer, a daughter of Jacob Peiffer of Reading, and they had two children: George A. and Mame. The latter died June 1, 1905, aged twenty-six years. She is survived by her husband, Scott Brocher, and their children: Catherine, Dorothy and Viola.

George A. Markert obtained his education in the public schools of Reading and when fifteen years old he commenced to learn the molding trade. On Dec. 9, 1889, he met with a serious accident by which he lost his left eye. He was thus forced to give up the lucrative trade which he had learned and turn his attention to something else, which proved to be the machinist's trade, serving his apprenticeship with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, at which work he continued until he was twenty-five years of age. Mr. Markert then learned the barber trade and followed that occupation for about five years. On Sept. 12, 1904, he embarked in a hotel and restaurant business at his present address, and through his close attention to its details, his uniform courtesy to guests and the excellence of his cuisine, he has met with deserved success. His place is favorably known all over the city.

With his family, Mr. Markert attends Christ Cathedral, on North Fifth street, where he was married on Sunday morning, Jan. 22, 1898, to Miss Bertha Reasner, a daughter of Jacob and Mary Reasner, of Bellefonte, Center county, Pa.

Mr. Markert is a member of Emblematic Lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F.; Fraternal order of Eagles, No. 66; Twentieth Century Quakers, No. 2; Junior Fire Company; Humane Association; a contributing member of the Philharmonic Band; Electric Wheelmen; East Penn Social Club; and the Harmonie Maennerchor.

JOHN B. KURTZ, proprietor of the "Kurtz House" in Cumru township, Berks county, was born on the Kurtz homestead July 15, 1875, son of Henry and Amanda (Swartz) Kurtz.

Abraham Kurtz, his great-grandfather, was born July 5, 1753, and died Sept. 21, 1831, aged seventy-eight years, two months, sixteen days. He owned the old Kurtz homestead in Cumru township, on which he was buried, as was his wife, Barbara, born in 1750, who died Oct.

11, 1823, aged seventy-three years, nine months. Their children were: Mary, born Jan. 9, 1775; Abraham, born Dec. 4, 1779, who removed to Centerville, Cumberland county, Pa., where he reared a large family; Susan, born Feb. 19, 1782; John, born July 14, 1784; Elizabeth, born Feb. 13, 1788; and Catherine, born April 30, 1791. Two of the daughters married cousins, both of whose names were Jacob Yoder, and both of whom settled in Holmes county, Ohio.

John Kurtz, born July 14, 1784, died May 5, 1849. He was a farmer, and owned 190 acres of fine land in Cumru township, in 1847 building the house thereon, and later the barn; these buildings stand near the Kurtz House, and are still excellent in condition. He was well to do, owning in addition to this property three fine farms in Lancaster county, giving one each to his sons, Abraham, Jacob and John. John Kurtz married Anna Kurtz, born Aug. 9, 1782, who died Aug. 5, 1852, the mother of these children: Samuel, born in 1814, lived on the old home; Abraham, born in 1815, Jacob in 1817, and John in 1820, all settled in Lancaster county; Joseph, born Oct. 2, 1822, died Sept. 21, 1827; Barbara, born June 19, 1824, died March 30, 1857; Henry; Annie, born in 1831, married Joshua Huyett; and Amos, born March 21, 1834, on the homestead in Cumru township, married Catherine Eberly, daughter of David and Cassandra (Ream) Eberly. He was a farmer until 1873 when he came to Shillington, and in 1878 built a double brick house on Lancaster avenue, in 1879 building the brick house in which he has lived retired ever since. In 1877-78 he was elected supervisor of Cumru township by the Republican party, was an elder of Emanuel Reformed Church of Shillington, and a prominent and substantial citizen.

Henry Kurtz was born on the old homestead, July 15, 1828, and died April 18, 1901. He owned the Kurtz farm, which then consisted of about 100 acres of the best land in Berks county, and in 1871 erected the "Kurtz House," a large three-story brick building which has twenty-five large rooms. Although an agriculturist up to that time, the next six years were given entirely to the hotel business, and in 1885 he retired altogether from active life. In 1884 he erected the fine large brick residence across the meadow from the "Kurtz House," an elevated wooden bridge connecting this residence with the Lancaster turnpike. Here the remainder of his life was spent in retirement. He was a well to do man, and at his death left a large estate to his children. Mr. Kurtz was married to Amanda Swartz, born Jan. 7, 1834, who died Oct. 5, 1889, and they had these children: Mary, who married William Shalter; Ellen, who married John Hain, deceased; Amanda, who married William High; Annie, who married George Hoffman; James, who married Laura Schaeffer; and John B., who married Deborah Yerger.

John B. Kurtz obtained his education in the Kurtz school, so named after his grandfather, and was reared on his father's farm. In the spring of 1902 he became the proprietor of the "Kurtz House," which he has successfully conducted to the present time. He is a genial courteous gentleman, a pleasing conversationalist, and has the faculty of making friends. He does an extensive business, the "Kurtz House" now being one of the largest hostelries in Berks county, outside of Reading; it is equipped with every modern convenience. He is also the owner of the "Green Tree," which celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1906, having been a hotel for all of this period, and which property he acquired in 1901 by purchase. Seventy-four acres of good land belong to this famous hostelry, and a spring of the purest water in Berks county flows through a large trough in front of the place. Mr. Kurtz is a great lover of horses, and owns the famous thoroughbred, "Dolcy M.," which was foaled June 15, 1903, and which has made a great record, and he also owns the famous stallion, "Simeon Larabie." He is connected with the Eagles of Reading, and is a member and treasurer of the Oakbrook Gunning Club. In political matters he is a Republican. He and his family are members of Yocom's Union Church, and adhere to the Reformed faith.

On Feb. 11, 1902, Mr. Kurtz was married to Deborah Yerger, daughter of John and Ellen (Wanner) Yerger, and granddaughter of John and Rebecca (Medler) Yerger, and to this union have been born: Mary; John H. and James Y., the latter two of whom were twins, and died in infancy, and Helen Elizabeth, born April 10, 1909.

Windsor

FRANKLIN SEIDEL, one of the leading residents of Maiden-creek township, Berks county, who has been prominent in agricultural and public matters all his life, was born July 11, 1833, in that township, son of Henry and Lydia (Guldin) Seidel.

Henry Seidel, the great-grandfather of Franklin, was born in 1732 in Strasburg, Germany, whence he emigrated to the United States when nineteen years of age, being sold to pay his passage, a custom which was quite common in those days. On obtaining his freedom in 1752, he came to Reading, Berks county, and later participated in the Indian war under Captain Hiester. He also took part in the war of the Revolution, his wife and children conducting the farm during the period of his service. About 1760 he married Elizabeth Rathmacher. He purchased land in Bern township. In 1786 he returned to Germany, and, being engaged in the mercantile business, he brought back merchandise which he sold. He became the owner of 400 acres of land in Maiden-creek township, and there for many years he was a prosperous farmer and merchant. He died in 1801, and is buried at Perry Church, in Windsor township, Berks county, Pa. The following were his children: Michael, Henry, Daniel, John, Philip, Jacob, Mary and Margaret.

Henry Seidel, son of the emigrant, born Nov. 12, 1765, died Aug. 7, 1847. In 1791 he settled on the homestead, and he married Elizabeth Reber, of Windsor township, Berks county. They became the parents of fourteen children, of whom the following reached mature years: Daniel, Henry, Jacob, Elizabeth, Sarah, Catharine, Mary, Hannah, Susannah and Rebecca.

Henry Seidel, father of Franklin, and eleventh in order of birth in the above family, was born in Maiden-creek township June 9, 1809, and died Nov. 6, 1892. He engaged in farming until his retirement in 1857, at which time he removed to Reading. Mr. Seidel married Nov. 4, 1832, Lydia Weaver Guldin, daughter of Frederick Guldin, of the same township, and they had two children, Franklin and Sarah A. The latter, born Feb. 13, 1836, married Henry Throm, of Reading, Pennsylvania.

Franklin Seidel was educated in the common schools of his native locality, and later attended a boarding school in Amity township conducted by Samuel L. Rhoads. Returning to the farm, he assisted his father in various ways until his marriage, June 3, 1856, to Susannah, daughter of George Weidenhammer, of the same township. They have had children as follows: George Henry, born Jan. 3, 1858, died July 8, 1877; Sarah Amanda, born May 19, 1866, died Aug. 26, 1868; Lydia Cora, born April 5, 1870, married Dec. 4, 1894, Charles H. Dunkel and has two children, S. Franklin Seidel and Sarah Susannah. Mrs. Seidel's great-grandfather came from Germany, and her grandparents were John Adam and Elizabeth (Dunkel) Weidenhammer.

Mr. Seidel has spent all of his life in Berks county except eleven years—1857 to 1868—during which time he lived in East Nantmeal township, Chester Co., Pa. He has devoted his life to farming. He is a member of the Berks County Agricultural Society, in which he manifests an active interest, and is known as one of the good, practical farmers of Maiden-creek township. Since 1887 Mr. Seidel has taken an interest in political matters, and in 1890, during the Pattison campaign, he was nominated by the Democratic party for the office of county commissioner, being subsequently elected. He served in this office from 1891 to 1894, and in this short time the Cross Keys bridge was built; general repairs were made on the court-house, it being made fire-proof, during the second year of his term, in spite of great opposition; the Kissinger bridge, having fallen into the Schuylkill river and canal, was rebuilt by the county commissioners at a cost of $58,000; an emergency hospital for the care of contagious diseases was erected at the poor-house at a cost of $3,300; and the Exeter township bridge at a cost of $29,000. Mr. Seidel always tried to work for the welfare of his constituents and the benefit of the county taxpayers. He is a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church at Blandon. Mr. Seidel is one of the largest landowners in Berks county. He has seven farms in Maiden-creek township, which contain about 850 acres, and owns other lands in Ruscombmanor and Muhlenberg townships, having in all about eleven hundred acres. He is one of the most prominent men in Berks county, Pennsylvania.

HENRY RHOADS, a member of one of the early families of Pennsylvania, was born in Amity township, Berks county, June 2, 1802, son of Daniel Rhoads, registrar of wills for Berks county, from 1818 to 1820, and from 1824 to 1829. He was but a young man when he came to Reading, and for several years served as a clerk in the office of the prothonotary, where he acquired a taste for the legal profession. He began the study of law in the office of Samuel Baird, and was admitted to the Bar April 3, 1832. From 1836 to 1838 he served as clerk of the Orphans' court, under appointment from Governor Ritner. During the administration of President Taylor he was the very efficient postmaster of Reading, but the profession for which he was so ably fitted called him, and he resumed practice. From Aug. 3, 1870, to Dec. 4, 1871, he was associate judge of Berks county, having been appointed by Governor Geary, to fill the unexpired term of the Hon. David Kutz, deceased. While at the Bar his Orphans' court practice was exceptionally large. In politics he was an old-line Whig, and became an ardent adherent of Republican principles from the very formation of that party. In 1838 he was a partner of John S. Richards in the publication of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal. The public schools found in him a warm friend, and he was one of the first directors of Reading under the common-school system. He was a member of Christ Episcopal Church, and from 1833 to 1838 superintendent of its Sunday-school, and for a long period he was a vestryman. He died Feb. 15, 1881, when nearly four-score years of age. He married Sarah Bouchat, daughter of Charles and Esther (Merckel) Bouchat (or Bouchart), the latter a daughter of Peter Merckel, of Richmond township. The Bouchart or Bouchat family had its origin in Samuel Bochart (1599-1667), pastor of Caen, and a profound scholar, whose historical works are of enduring merit. They were French Huguenots, as were also the Merkels or Merckels, whose earliest known ancestor was John Christian Merklen, who died in 1766, leaving children: Peter; George; Christian; Casper; Catharine Stover; Frankina Rough; Mary Hill; Anna Maria Kramer and Anna Lena. To Henry and Sarah (Bouchat) Rhoads were born six children, namely: Charles B., deceased; John H.; George B.; Louisa B.; Charles B.; and Daniel P.

Capt. George B. Rhoads, son of Henry and Sarah, was born in Reading in 1840. He received his education in the city schools, but left high school to join the army. He was, however, rejected, as he was under-size. Through the intercession of Col. Charles McKnight, he was finally accepted as a private, and at Washington was promoted to corporal in the Ringgold Light Artillery, in which he had enlisted in April, 1861, for three months. At the expiration of his first term, he re-enlisted in the three years' service in the 88 Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was commissioned second lieutenant of Company B. For good conduct and for marked bravery in the field he was appointed captain of Company F, of the same regiment, and while at White Oak Swamp, Va., was killed by the explosion of a shell, June 13, 1864, at the age of twenty-four years.

WILLIAM H. ROMICH. The gentleman who bears the name with which this sketch is introduced is possibly the best known man in Berks county, his business as professional auctioneer having carried him throughout its entire bounds. He is a successful auctioneer and farmer. The family to which he belongs was an early one in the county, some of its representatives spelling the name as above, others changing the "ch" to "g," making it "Romig."

John Romich, the ancestor of this branch of the family, came to Berks county in the latter part of the 18th century from Conestoga township, Lancaster county. He settled in Earl township, where he was the owner of much land and a man of influence in his community until his demise in 1804. Part of the estate reached over into Douglass township, but the portion on which he lived and died was situated in Earl township, near Worman. The will distributing his estate is on record in Will Book IV, page 244, his son John, and his friend Jacob Keely, Sr., being the executors. His wife's first name was Anna Maria, and they had children: John, who obtained a farm of 180 acres, partly in Earl and partly in Douglass townships; George; Christian; Jacob, and Henry.

John (2), eldest of the family was the next in descent. He passed his entire life in Earl township, and was a man of large influence and property. He died in 1835, bequesting a farm of 160 acres, located in Ohio, to his son Andrew. He and his wife, Mary, had other children besides Andrew and Jacob, the latter being the grandfather of William H., but said children do not appear in the will. Jacob Romich and Jacob Weisner signed the will as witnesses.

George Romig, second son of the ancestor, was born Jan. 9, 1765, and died April 2, 1850, his age being eighty-five years, two months and twenty-three days. He married Sophia Fritz (1773-1828), and to her were born seven sons and four daughters.

Christian Romig, third son of John, the ancestor, was born January 13, 1766, and living seventy-eight years, one month and twenty-two days, died on the 5th of March, 1844. Catharine Seitel, his wife, was born in 1767, and died in 1844, after a married life of fifty-six years. There were four sons and one daughter. He and his wife, together with George and his wife, are buried in the Fritz burial ground, Douglass township.

Jacob Romich, fourth son of the ancestor, and grandfather of William H., was a farmer in Conestoga township, Lancaster county, for a few years, thence coming to Worman, in Douglass townhsip. He cultivated a farm of 128 acres at that place for nearly a half-century, and this property is at present owned by William H.

The house which is now used by our subject was partly built by Jacob Romich, who was born there January 10, 1793, and died February 3, 1879, aged eighty-six years and twenty-three days. He married his cousin, Elizabeth Romich, who was a daughter of John Romich of Montgomery county, the latter coming to Amity township later in life. The wife was born February 27, 1800, and lived to be seventy-eight years, eleven months and four days old, her death occurring February 1, 1879. Jacob and his wife lie at rest in Boyertown cemetery. Their children were as follows: John; George; Sophia, who married John Davidheiser; Ephraim (1826-1901); Zephaniah; Henry; Jacob; Harriet Fisher; Mary M., who married, first, Jeremiah Reifsnyder, and, second, John Berg.

George Romich, of the above family, was born near Worman in Douglass township in 1827, and died in 1900, aged seventy-three years. His occupation was that of shoemaker. His home was above Gabelsville, where he owned a small tract of land, now in the possession of his son, Llewellyn Romich. In religious matters he was a member of the Lutheran Church. He was twice married, his first wife being Sarah Rohrbach. Their children were: Elizabeth, who died at the age of three years, and Jacob R., born in Earl, near the "Yellow House," June 16, 1856. The children by the second wife were: Calvin, Llewellyn, Katie and Frank.

When twenty-one, Jacob R., learned the shoemaking trade, which he has since followed. In 1888 he engaged in the shoe business in Boyertown at what is called the old "J. S. Case shoe-store." In 1878 he was married to Miss Sophia Nester, and they had one child, George A., born March 10, 1879, who is now organist of St. John's Lutheran Church, and teaches music to a number of pupils in Boyertown. His wife perished in the Boyertown Fire, January 13, 1908, when only thirty-one years of age.

John R. Romich, father of William H., was the son of Jacob and Elizabeth Romich, and brother to George, mentioned above. He was born on the old homestead in Douglass township January 11, 1823, and died December 28, 1885, aged sixty-two years, eleven months and seventeen days. Boyertown cemetery holds his remains. During his lifetime he cultivated the homestead where he lived and died. He was a man of fine instincts and strong characteristics, and wielded an exemplary influence during life. He was a member of the Lutheran Church at Boyertown, which he served for many years as Deacon.

Catharine, daughter of Abraham Hoffman, became his wife. She was born April 12, 1831, and died July 2, 1901, having lived seventy years, two months and twenty days. Their children were: Jonathan, William, Emma, John, Ellen, George, Annie, who married William Levan; Katie, deceased; Ida, who married Joseph Helfrick.

William H. Romich, son of the above, was born August 7, 1853, on the old homestead, near Worman, where he now resides. He began farming for himself in the Centennial Year, in Colebrookdale township, where he lived but one year, when he moved to Upper Hanover township. Here he remained another year, when, in the spring of 1879, he returned to the old homestead in Douglass township, where he has since resided.

This old homestead of 128 acres, with its associated memories of father, grandfather and great-grandfather, came into the possession of the present owner after his father's death. The present dwelling was built by the grandfather, Jacob Romich, the older part having been erected by Jacob Romich's father. The barn is also a very old building, and has been standing more than a century. The farm originally comprised 500 acres, when it was homesteaded by the first Romich, and included what is now the "Israel Weisner" farm, the "Henry Romich" tracts, and other property.

William H. Romich was married June 26, 1875, to Amanda Wise, daughter of William and Rebecca (Levengood) Wise. They had children: Albert (deceased); Rebecca, married Samuel Moyer; Warren; Sallie, who married Oscar Gift; Dora, now the wife of Irwin Waid; Irwin; Wayne, who perished in the Boyertown Fire; Walter; Mabel; and Harry.

Mr. Romich and family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church of Boyertown, of which he has been a deacon and elder.

EDWIN FRITZ, of Reading, Pa., was born in Reading in 1872, son of Henry and Louisa (Mohler) Fritz.

Henry Fritz, grandfather of Edwin, was a native of Lancaster county, where he was engaged throughout his active life in farming and shoemaking. He married Ellen Keffer, who bore him these children: Michael, Elias, Henry and Sarah. The family are also connected, through great-grandmother Fritz, with the Spangs of Germany, the estate of whom, consisting of millions of dollars, is under litigation in the Fatherland.

Henry Fritz, the father of Edwin, was born in 1836, in Adamstown, Pa., and was educated in the schools of Reading, in which city he learned the machinist's trade. This he followed for two years, and then engaged as a locomotive engineer, and later as a stationary engineer, being employed with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad for a period of forty-nine years, one month and seventeen days. In March, 1903, he retired, and since that time he has been living with his son, Edwin. Among the engines driven by Mr. Fritz during his long service with the road may be mentioned: the "California," "Tuscarora," manufactured by Gowan and Marks, Reading, "Vera Cruz," "Buena Vista," "Elmira," "Auburn," the last two of which were confiscated by the United States Government, "Blue Bird," and many others. In 1858 Mr. Fritz was married to Louisa Mohler, and to their marriage were born six children: Charles H.; Laura, deceased; George A.; Walter I.; Bessie, deceased; and Edwin. Mr. Fritz is a member of the Sr. O. U. A. M. In political matters he is a Democrat.

Edwin Fritz was educated in the schools of Reading, and as a young man entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, with which he remained nine years, learning the trade of pattern making. He then resigned to accept a position with the Smith Exhaust Pipe Co., was later employed by the E. & G. Brooke Company, of Birdsboro, and then engaged with the Chambersburg Engineering Company, of Chambersburg, Pa. Shortly afterward he returned to the employ of the E. & G. Brooke Company, but later associated himself with the Snell & Meharg Engine Company. Returning to Reading, Mr. Fritz engaged with Davis, Printz & Company, but in 1904 resigned his position to engage in the hotel business, opening in that year the "Third Ward Hotel," which he supplied with all modern conveniences, but sold out in 1908 and retired. He has, since that date, resided at No. 44 Maple street.

Mr. Fritz has always taken a keen interest in municipal affairs, supporting the principles of the Democratic party, and for a number of years filled the position of Ward assessor. In the spring of 1907 he was elected alderman from the Third ward to the common council, and took his seat in that body in April of that year. He is fraternally connected with the Mt. Penn Association, Friendship Fire Company, Combine Association, F. O. E. No. 66, 1900 Beneficial Association, Twentieth Century Quakers, P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 61, Red Men, Flaming Arrow, and Trinity Brotherhood Association, the latter being connected with Trinity Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Fritz is a member.

JERRY M. WESSNER is descended from Johannes Wessner, the emigrant of the Wessner family in Albany township, where he settled between 1760 and 1775. He was a native of Germany, arriving in Pennsylvania about 1752. Acquiring land he became a tiller of the soil, the Federal Census of 1790 recording him as a resident of Albany township, "having one son above sixteen years of age, a wife and one daughter." He was a man of religious temperament and convictions, being mentioned in the organization and government of Jerusalem Church in that township. The records show that he was born May 8, 1723, and died Aug. 23, 1794. He is buried near the old school-house in the graveyard at Wessnersville. Nothing is stated concerning his family except that his son was named Mathias or Mathes.

Mathias Wessner (according to the tombstone inscription, "Mathes Wessner") was born August 1, 1757, and died Dec. 26, 1821, aged sixty-four years, four months, twenty-five days. His occupation was farming, cultivating the farm owned by his descendant, Jacob D. Wessner. He married Catharine Schollenberger, who was born in 1773, and died in 1838, leaving, among other children whose names do not appear, a son Johannes.

Johannes Wessner also passed his life in Albany township. The dates of his birth and death do not appear to be on record. He was evidently a man of thrift and enterprise, for his farm was later divided into three properties, each considerably over 100 acres. Neither does the date of his marriage nor his wife's name appear, though his children are given as: Johannes, Adam, Jacob, Jonathan (who was a mute) and William. He lies buried at Friedens Church, Wessnersville.

Samuel Wessner, son of Adam of the above family, built the first house and hotel stand in what is now Wessnersville, which town perpetuates the family name. One of the landmarks of that time is an old church, two squares to the east of the village, still used for church services, known as Friedens Church. It is a union church, both Lutheran and Reformed congregations using it for worship.

William, youngest son of Johannes, was born June 25, 1805, and died Oct. 29, 1873, aged sixty-eight years, four months, four days. He was a laborer of Albany township. He married Lydia Kunkel, and their children were: Judith, married David Jandwork; Catharine, m. Lewis Muntz; Caroline, m. William Herber; Polly, m. Willoughby Modd; Lydia, m. Francis Hein; William is deceased; Peter is mentioned below; Matthias, a farmer of Stony Run, had a family of fourteen children.

Peter Wessner, son of William (son of Johannes), was born July 4, 1836. In 1858 he began farming for himself, after having worked over eight years in Albany. Since 1894 he has lived at Fetherolfsville. He there owns a small farm of fourteen acres, with a fifty-acre property in another locality. In 1856 he married (first) Maria Grassly, who died March 3, 1872, aged forty years, leaving Ellen, James H., Ida A., Sarah F., and Emma. He married (second) in 1879, Mary Ann Henry, who has borne two children—Victor and Herbert.

Jacob Wessner, son of Johannes and grandfather of Jerry M., passed his life as a farmer on the old homestead. Born June 27, 1803, he died at the age of eighty-nine years, eleven months, twenty-one days, June 18, 1893. He was an upright, prosperous citizen and left a large estate. He married Mary (Polly) Dietrich, born July 3, 1803, died Dec. 31, 1883, aged eighty years, five months, twenty-eight days. Their children were: John born 1831, died 1883; Reuben, 1832-1847; Amos, 1834-1907; Jacob D., father of Jerry; and Malinda, unmarried.

Jacob D. Wessner, retired farmer of Wessnersville, and father of Jerry M., was born in Albany on the Wessner homestead, Oct. 27, 1839. He followed the vocation of his fathers until 1899, when he built his present residence in Wessnersville, and retired to enjoy the fruits of his labor. He is the present owner of the old Wessner homestead of 104 acres, this farm having been in the Wessner family over one hundred years. It was originally a large plantation, covering the tracts now owned by Jacob D. Wessner, Stephen Kistler and Jacob Krause. Mr. Wessner takes pride in voting the Democratic ticket on election day, and though he has never sought office, he has had sufficient public spirit to serve on the school board of Albany township and in other minor offices. He is a deacon and elder in the Lutheran congregation of the Wessnersville Union Church, his family also being members.

Mr. Wessner's marriage to Sarah Trexler, daughter of Nathan and Lydia (Bautsch) Trexler, of Albany, occurred in 1858. Mrs. Wessner died March 22, 1903, aged fifty-nine years, eight months, twenty-seven days. She was the mother of the following children: Rosa m. Francis Faust; Edwin is deceased; Susan m. Frank Snyder; Jerry M.; Alice m. Henry Weida; Minnie m. William Konig; Assie m. William Kistler.

Jerry M. Wessner is one of the progressive farmers of the township, and an experienced driller of artesian wells, living on the road from Kempton to Wessnersville. He was born Feb. 1, 1868, on the old homestead, remaining on the farm until after his majority. In the spring of 1892 he began farming on his own account on his father's farm, where he continued with success for eleven years. In the fall of 1905, he purchased the David Kunkel farm, and moving to it the following year has since made it his home. In the short period during which he has had it under his control he has made many improvements, remodeling the house, beautifying the yard, and in 1907, erecting the commodious 62 x 65 foot barn. The farm contains 100 acres, upon which is also a good fruit orchard. There still remains on the farm a landmark of Colonial times in the shape of a log house that was the home of some of the earliest pioneers of the district.

Mr. Wessner is a Democrat in politics. The religious affiliations of himself and family are with the Lutheran congregation of the Wessnersville Union Church, of which he has been a deacon. Socially, he is a charter member of Lodge No. 544, Independent Order of Americans, of Kempton, Pennsylvania.

On May 25, 1890, Mr. Wessner married Emma M., daughter of Noah and Mary (Fenstermacher) Zimmerman, of Albany, farming people on Stony Run Hill. Children were born to them as follows: Osville M., a student of the Normal School at Kutztown; Debbie H.; Florence D.; Edna B.; Clarence D.; Elwood C.; and Elton E.

LEWIS B. STOUDT, proprietor of the "Half-Way House," near Blandon, in Maiden-creek township, was born July 24, 1854, at Molltown, Pa., son of Benneville and Hettie (Bernt) Stoudt.

Jacob Stoudt, grandfather of Lewis B., who was a farmer near Calcium, in Maiden-creek township, married a Miss Reeser, and they had these children: Jacob m. a Miss Hill; Benneville; Daniel m. Elizabeth Forney; Joel m. Eliza Rickenbach; and Rebecca m. Isaac Huy.

Benneville Stoudt, who was also a farmer, carried on operations near Molltown, in Maiden-creek township. He married Hettie Bernt, and they had nine children, as follows: John, a resident of Alburtis, m. Emma Hawkins, and they have six children—Stanley, Benneville, John, Wilson, Victoria and Lizzie; William m. Emma Brown and has had seven childern—Alvin, David, Benneville, Oneida (deceased), Laura, Jennie and Carrie; Lewis B.; Edwin B.; George B.; Racy m. Abraham Heffner and has four children—Samuel, Mary, Sallie and Susan; Mary m. John Adams and has three children—John, Edgar and Hettie; Sallie m. Ezra High and has two children—Hettie and Lena; and Wilson died when nearly twenty-one years old.

Lewis B. Stoudt was reared and educated in his native township, and assisted his father upon the home farm until attaining his majority, at which time he engaged in farming on his own account. Subsequently, in 1890, he went to Fresno, Cal., where he remained for three years, and after his return he engaged in the hotel business at Molltown, later becoming proprietor of the "Black Horse Hotel," at Kutztown, and still later of the "Fair Ground Hotel," at Reading. For the past nine years he has been conducting the well Known "Half-Way House," near Blandon, where he enjoys a large patronage.

Mr. Stoudt was married to Amanda Smith, daughter of Peter Adam Smith, and to this union there were born four children: Irvin, a farmer, m. Cora Frederick and has one child; Robert, unmarried, resides at home; Harvey, unmarried, is engaged in farming in Heidelberg township; and Lydema, also unmarried, is employed in a Reading store.

Mr. Stoudt and his family are members of the Reformed Church. In his political belief he is a Democrat, but he has never aspired to public office. He is fraternally connected with the Knights of the Mystic Chain, and he was formerly a member of the K. G. E., the P. O. S. of A. and the Berks County Liquor Dealers' Association.

EDWIN B. STOUDT, brother of Lewis B., and son of Benneville Stoudt, was born Jan. 18, 1860, on the old homestead in Maiden-creek township, which he now owns and operates. He received his education in the local schools, and spent one term at Reading. Most of his life has been spent in agricultural pursuits, although for seven years he kept a hotel in Blandon. He now resides on a valuable farm in Maiden-creek township, and is known as one of the section's good, practical agriculturists and substantial men.

In 1880 Mr. Stoudt was married to Lucetta D. Koller, daughter of John and Kate (Dubson) Koller, and to this union four children have been born: Stella E., Howard W., Harry A. and John K. The children are all well educated, Howard and John being graduates of the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. Mr. Stoudt and his family belong to Becker's St. Peter's Reformed Church, in which he has served as deacon and elder. In politics a Democrat, Mr. Stoudt has held various township offices, but has never aspired to higher positions. He is fraternally connected with Huguenot Lodge No. 377, F. & A. M., Kutztown; Camp No. 250, P. O. S. of A.; Rock Castle No. 80, K. G. E., and Blandon Lodge, I. O. O. F.

George B. Stoudt, brother of Lewis B. and Edwin B., and son of Benneville Stoudt, was born on the old homestead, June 27, 1864, and received his education in the common schools of his native locality. He first engaged in farming; and later became the owner of the "Six-Mile House," which he conducted for eight years, subsequently purchasing a farm in Maiden-creek township, where he is now successfully engaged in cultivating the soil.

Mr. Stoudt was married March 22, 1884, to Josephine M. Oswaldt, daughter of John and Sarah (Snyder) Oswaldt. Four children have been born to this union: Lottie M., born Dec. 15, 1884, m. Willington Lerch, a painter, and has one child, Josephine Caroline; Warren O., born Dec. 18, 1887; George B., Nov. 20, 1897; and Sallie Ella, Feb. 25, 1900. The family are members of Becker's St. Peter's Reformed Church. Mr. Stoudt is a member of Blandon Lodge No. 1087, I. O. O. F., and the I. O. R. M., Fleetwood. In politics Mr. Stoudt is a Democrat, and has served as school director.

EPHRAIM VAN BUSKIRK, in his lifetime a prosperous farmer and shoemaker in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, was born July 29, 1840, and died at Pricetown, Feb. 22, 1907.

The Van Buskirks were of Holland ancestry. Marmaduke Van Buskirk, great-grandfather of Ephraim, lived in New York. He served as a soldier in the war of the Revolution. His three sons were: John, Jacob and Joseph.

Jacob Van Buskirk, son of Marmaduke, was born in New York City July 4, 1783, and came to Berks county in his young manhood. He died at Pricetown, Berks county, Aug. 17, 1876, aged ninety-three years, one month, thirteen days. He was a farmer, and owned the farm later the property of his grandson Ephraim. He also owned the farm in Ruscombmanor, now owned by Benneville Young, and there he lived some years. He married Catharine Koch, who was born Nov. 27, 1780, died Oct. 15, 1862, and they are both buried in the graveyard at Pricetown. Catharine (Koch) Van Buskirk was a daughter of Sebastian Koch (a Revolutionary soldier) and his wife Elizabeth. To Jacob and Catharine Van Buskirk were born children as follows: John, Jacob, Judge Daniel, Mary (m. to Peter Heffner) and Catharine (m. to Joseph Scheidt).

Daniel Van Buskirk, son of Jacob, was an Associate Judge of Berks county. He was born Jan. 13, 1816, in Colebrookdale township, and the greater part of his life was passed at Pricetown. He learned the molding trade at the Oley Furnace in his youth, following it for seven years. In 1841 he was elected a justice of the peace of Ruscombmanor township, and served until 1855, in which year he was elected Register of Wills of Berks county. In 1858 he was again elected justice of the peace of Ruscombmanor, and served until 1871, when he was elected an Associate Judge of the Courts of this county. In this office he served with honor and fame for five years. In 1877 he was again elected a justice of the peace, which office he filled until his death. In all the many years that Judge Van Buskirk was justice of the peace he never drew $75 in fees or costs from the county. He was a stanch Democrat, and a man of the highest honor and standing. He was a member of the Lutheran congregation of Pricetown Church, in which he was at different times trustee, deacon and elder. In 1838 he married Rebecca Keller, daughter of Jacob S. Keller, of Ruscombmanor township. She was born Oct. 24, 1808, and died Aug. 28, 1881. The children born of this union were: William, Hiram, Daniel, Ephraim, Jacob (died young), James and Rebecca (died young). Judge Van Buskirk m. (second), in 1887, Catharine Hartman, widow of Peter Hill. She died about five years after her distinguished husband. Judge Van Buskirk died Dec. 17, 1894, aged seventy-eight years, eleven months, four days.

Ephraim Van Buskirk was a shoemaker, and followed that trade some years. In 1863 he began farming, an occupation that occupied his time and attention 39 years. He owned a farm which had belonged to his father, consisting of forty-nine acres. Upon his retirement he went to Pricetown, where he lived until his death. Here he did some work repairing shoes.

In politics Mr. Van Buskirk was a Democrat, and always interested in public affairs. He was a school director for twenty-one years, and was delegate to many county conventions. He and his children were Lutheran members of Pricetown Union Church, of which he was deacon many years, and was an elder at the time of his death. His wife was a Reformed member of the same church.

Mr. Van Buskirk was married Jan. 24, 1863, to Elmira Schlottman, born Sept. 3, 1842, daughter of George and Susanna (Bernhart) Schlottman, of Alsace township. Mrs. Van Buskirk resides at Pricetown. To Mr. and Mrs. Van Buskirk were born ten children: Susan I., m. to Frank Weiss, of Philadelphia; Charles, who died young; George, of Reading; Henry, who died young; Samuel, of Reading; Emma, m. to Charles Houck, of Reading; Annie, m. to Charles Cronrath, of Ruscombmanor township; Daniel, of Pricetown; and Marks and Alexander, of Reading.

CHARLES HAMM. One of the many citizens of Albany township who have successfully developed but one or two sides of the farming business, is Charles Hamm, poultryman and potato-raiser. He is the owner of over one thousand fine specimens of Plymouth Rocks, White Leghorns, Black Minorcas, and Blue Andalusians.

The ancestry of the Hamm family is Swiss, the first American immigrant being Daniel Hamm, great-great-grandfather of our subject. Said Daniel was landed at Philadelphia, September 7, 1748, from the good ship "Hampshire." He was but twenty years of age at that time, having been born about 1727 or 1728, and lived to a ripe old age in Lynn township, Lehigh county. His full name as given in the Hampshire's list of passengers and a deed of gift executed about 1761, was John Daniel Hamm. John Daniel Hamm and good wife Maria Hamm, reared a large family, among their sons being Andrew (or Andraes) and Daniel (2). The latter is known to have resided, and raised a large family, in Lynn township, about 1790.

Among the many good deeds done by this member of the family was the gift of a location to his church. The deed reads as follows: "d. des Evangelische Reformirten Kirche (gannant als Jacobs Kirche) soll zwei Acker sein, und solche zwei Acker verschreib ich Frank und Frei, ohne einigen austand," etc. . . . "Auch gebe ich das Recht an die Spring zu gehen um zu trinken. Dieses land das ich Geschenkt habe ist gelegen an der Konigstrasze, eine halben meile von des Abraham Laugen Haus. . . ." This last phrase translated reads: "This land which I have presented lies on the King street, a half mile from the Abraham Laugen House."

The next member to be taken up is Andrew, or Andraes Hamm, son of John Daniel, and great-grandfather of Charles. Not much can be secured concerning this generation outside of the Pennsylvania Archives and the First Federal Census (1790). It is known, however, that he resided in the vicinity of Lynnport, and was a land owner. The Archives mention him as a "Ranger of the Frontier," from Northampton county, (now Lehigh), serving during the five years of the Revolution between 1778-83. The First Federal Census (1790), records him as a resident of Lynn township and head of a family consisting of himself and wife, three sons under sixteen, and one daughter. It is evident however, that there was a larger family, for Johannes, grandfather of Charles, was born in 1796.

Johannes Hamm, shoemaker and farmer, the grandfather of Charles, was born July 17, 1796. He owned the tract of land in Albany township now in the possession of Monroe Snyder. These acres he cultivated, and also followed the shoemaking trade. He and his family were members of the Reformed Congregation of New Bethel Church. His wife was Esther Wanamaker. She was born June 19, 1800, and died April 10, 1863, aged sixty-two years, nine months, and twenty-one days. Johannes and Esther Hamm had the following children: Leah married Daniel Snyder; John, referred to later; Jacob married and lived at Pine Dale, Schuylkill county—no children; Benjamin died in young manhood; Catharine married Charles Mengel; Emeline, second wife of Charles Mengel; Lucy became the wife of Griffith Bachman; and Eliza, who is unmarried. After a long and useful life, Johannes Hamm died December 11, 1871, aged seventy-five years, four months and twenty-four days, and was laid to rest with his wife in the cemetery of New Bethel Church, and the name of the family was spelled on the tombstone "Ham."

John M. Hamm, father of our subject, was born in Albany township November 28, 1826. He was a shoemaker by trade, and a farmer by inclination, the shoemaking preceding the farming in date. His son Samuel now owns the homestead whereon he resided. John M. also owned a small tract of some twenty acres, now in the possession of William Schroeder, and located near New Bethel Church. The homestead consists of 160 acres, some of which is woodland. Here he resided until twenty years before his death, which occurred on the smaller property April 5, 1903, at the age of seventy-six years, four months, and seventeen days. He was a Democrat in politics, and sufficiently interested in public affairs to become Supervisor. He and his family were members of New Bethel Church, Reformed Congregation, of which he was Deacon and Elder. John Hamm married Kate, daughter of Christian and Mary (Lutz) Knepper. She was born November 28, 1827, and died December 25, 1887, aged sixty years and twenty-seven days, and is buried with her husband in New Bethel graveyard. John and Kate Hamm were the parents of eight children, all living and named as follows: Benjamin, of Allentown, Pa.; James, in Carbon county; John, also of Carbon county; Charles, our subject; Samuel, of Albany township; Mary, the wife of Walter Keller; Sarah, married Allen Lutz; and Kate, unmarried.

Charles Hamm, of this family, was born in Albany township April 7, 1861. He received his education in the schools of the township, and worked on the farm where he was reared until he was of age. He began farming for himself on his father's property in 1888. He remained there as tenant four years, adding another year on the "Sarah Braucher" farm. Then he bought his present property, the "Moses Yeaser" farm, in 1894, located along Pine Creek, two miles west of Albany. The land owned by Mr. Hamm comprises 133 acres, the house being built by Moses Yenser, and the barn by a Hoch. Twelve acres of potatoes a year is the average of the present owner, besides his large poultry business.

Mr. Hamm is well-known in Democratic circles, and, being active in public affairs, was elected a member of the township school board in 1907, at present being treasurer. He has also held office as district supervisor. He and his children are members of New Bethel Church, Reformed Congregation, and Mrs. Hamm of the Lutheran division.

Mr. Hamm has been twice married, the first to become his wife being Emma L., daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Reinhart) Braucher, of Albany. She was born May 1, 1869, and died April 6, 1902, aged thirty-three years, eleven months and four days, and is buried in New Bethel Cemetery. Seven children came of this first marriage; Mattie F., Minnie T., Hattie L., George D., Libbie G., Elsie K., Clarence R. On December 5, 1902, Mrs. Amanda (Frey) Graff, widow of Edward Graff, became his second wife. Mrs. Hamm had a family of four children, Llewellyn S.; Salena F.; Warren F.; and Mabel S. (deceased). Mr. Graff died January 28, 1897, at the age of thirty-one years, seven months, and fourteen days, and is buried at Wessnersville. Mr. and Mrs. Hamm have had five children: Herman C. (deceased), Annie M., Anson M., Abner H., and Esther A.

HARVEY H. WELLER, who succeeded his father-in-law, John Dotterrer, as proprietor of the store and hotel stand at Hill Church, in Pike township, was born in District township, Berks county, April 26, 1881, son of Israel and Mary (Heydt) Weller. His education was acquired in the common schools of District township, and his practical training for life's responsibilities was gained on the home farm.

In 1902 he came to Hill Church, where he worked one year for John Dotterrer in the store, hotel and on the farm. He began farming in the spring of 1904 for himself, on his father-in-law's farm east of Hill Church. This was a ninety-acre tract and he cultivated it for three years. Mr. Dotterrer died at the end of that time, and Mr. Weller became the proprietor of the store and the hotel the following year, 1908. He carries a full line of general merchandise and is also the postmaster of Hill Church post-office. He operates the farm of fifty-three acres, connected with the store and hotel property. The Hill Church store and hotel building is an old landmark. The house is over 100 years old, but it was remodeled by Mr. Weller in the summer of 1909.

In political principle, Mr. Weller is a Republican. He has served as treasurer of the supervisors of the township. He and his wife are Reformed members of Hill Church.

Mr. Weller was married Feb. 22, 1902, to Hettie Dotterrer, daughter of John Dotterrer (See sketch elsewhere). To Mr. and Mrs. Weller have been born two children: Edna and Herbert.

Israel Weller, father of Harvey H., was born in District township, where he still lives. He is a farmer, in partnership with his brother Isaac owning three farms, comprising 283 acres. He is connected with Hill Church, being a member of the Reformed congregation. He married Mary Heydt, daughter of Benjamin Heydt, of Washington township, and they have two children: Ammon, who lives on one of Israel Weller's farms, married Minerva Hoffman, and has three children, Allen, Cora and Leroy; and Harvey H.

George Weller, father of Israel and grandfather of Harvey H., was born Jan. 2, 1791, and died May 19, 1867, and is buried at Hill Church. He was a resident of District township, where he lived on the Weller homestead, and carried on farming. His first wife was Elizabeth Johnson, who was born March 20, 1798, and died Jan. 12, 1875, and is buried in the graveyard at Hill Church. He m. (second) a Houck. His children were: Israel, Joseph, Isaac, Adam, David, George and Caroline m. Reuben Snyder and lived in District township.

ELI B. GRIESEMER, manager of the Pleasantville Creamery, was born in Oley township, Berks county, Aug. 24, 1874, son of Peter K. Griesemer, hospital steward of the Berks County Almshouse.

Casper Griesemer, who died in 1794, lived in Oley township. His will, to which John Pott, Jr., and Joshua Boone were witnesses, was made June 23, 1791. In this he gives to his wife, Rebecca, the household and kitchen furniture, bedding, linens, all ready money, bonds, notes, book debts, etc. To each of his five daughters was given 500 pounds in gold and silver. These daughters were: Elizabeth Guldin, Anna Maria Graeff, Anna Margaret Reiter, Susanna Griesemer and Eva Ludwig. His sons living at that time were: John, Peter and Jacob. Other items in the will were: To "My grandson Abraham (son of my deceased son Valentine), 250 pounds." To "My granddaughter Catharine (daughter of my deceased son Abraham) 250 pounds."

Peter Griesemer, son of Casper, was married to a Hoch, and they had a son, Abraham, who died in 1847. Abraham m. Catharine Ritter, and their children were: David died 1847; Samuel; Sarah m. David Kline; Esther m. David Kline; Joseph died in California; Reuben, born Jan. 2, 1826, m. Polly Nein, Nov. 18, 1847, had one child still-born 1849, and both are living in Amity township since their retirement from farming.

Jacob Griesemer, great-grandfather of Eli B., was a lifelong resident of Oley township, also owning the old home farm and also the old Griesemer mill. The original mill was destroyed by fire prior to 1850. Jacob Griesemer was tall, weighed over 300 pounds, and was exceedingly strong. He married Elizabeth Lorah and they had three sons and four daughters, namely: Daniel, who lived on a part of the homestead; Sally, m. to John Deysher; Elizabeth, m. to John Deysher; Susan, m. to William Carragan; Jacob L.; Mary, m. to Jacob Hertzog; and a son who was drowned in boyhood.

Jacob L. Griesemer, son of Jacob, was born in 1812, and lived all his life in Oley township, where he owned the Griesemer homestead of about 200 acres. He was a useful and respected man in his district. He died in March, 1885. His wife, Cordelia Knabb, was a daughter of John D. and Hannah (Schaeffer) Knabb. Their children were: John and Jacob died young; a son died in infancy; Cordelia died young; Deborah K. m. Milt. Althouse; Peter K.; Ammon K.; Mary Ann died unmarried; William K.; Hannah K. m. Darius Y. Hill, and both are deceased; Kate K. m. Ellis Yoder.

Peter K. Griesemer, son of Jacob L. and father of Eli B., was born at Griesemer's Mill, in Oley township, March 30, 1844. He was reared on his father's farm on which he lived, engaged in farming, until his sixty-third year, when he became hospital steward of the almshouse. He owns the old homestead, which belonged to the emigrant ancestor of the name.

Politically Mr. Griesemer is a Democrat, and takes an active interest in the success of his party. He was township auditor and supervisor for nine years. On New Year's day, 1907, he was appointed to his present position at the Almshouse. He has been a director of the Oley Turnpike Company since 1887, and one of the influential men of Oley township. He is a member of Council No. 18, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Oley; Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E., of Oley; and Lodge No. 1109, I. O. O. F., of Griesemersville.

He and his family are Reformed members of Oley Church, of which he was deacon for five years and trustee for many years. His children were: Ida, m. to George A. Kieffer; Eli B.; Elmer; John; George; Charles; Oscar, who died when one year old; Howard; Mary; Chester, and Peter.

Eli B. Griesemer was educated in the township schools, Oley Academy, and the Normal School at Kutztown. He was licensed to teach in the public schools of Berks county by Prof. William M. Zechman, and taught his first term in the fall of 1893, in his native township, after which he taught at Brumbach's school four terms. In the spring of 1898 he became the manager of the Pleasantville creamery for Frank F. Cleaver, and operated it for him two years, when Mr. Cleaver died and was succeeded by his son, its present owner. This creamery averages 9,000 pounds of milk daily, and has been a very successful enterprise. Mr. Griesemer thoroughly understands the business, and his efficient work has been an important factor in its success.

Fraternally he is a member of Oley Castle No. 119, K. G. E.; Camp No. 121, P. O. S. of A., of Oley Line; and Griesemersville Lodge No. 1109, I. O. O. F. Politically he is a Democrat, and was school director of the only independent school district in Berks county, called Pleasantville Independent District. He and his wife belong to the Oley Church.

Mr. Griesemer married Annie P. Stapleton, daughter of Samuel and Cassie (Pyle) Stapleton, late of Oley. They have had six children, namely: Florence E. (died in infancy), Lottie M., Ida C., Eva A., Amy O. and Annie L.

WILLIAM B. STAUDT, implement and cattle dealer at Pricetown, was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, Nov. 16, 1847, son of Benneville and Hettie (Berndt) Staudt.

Jacob Staudt, his grandfather, was a farmer in Maiden-creek township, where he owned a large farm, now the property of Mrs. John K. Rothermel. He was a life-long farmer and died advanced in years, and is buried at Becker's St. Peter's Church. His wife died quite young. Their children were: Joel, who had Cyrus, Ira, Daniel, Mrs. George and Mrs. Amos Weidenhammer and Mrs. Frank Rothermel; George, who had Simarias and Solomon; Daniel, who had a son, Silas; Benneville; and Peggy Huey.

Benneville Staudt, son of Jacob, was a native of Maiden-creek township. He died in 1897, aged seventy-six years, and is buried at Becker's St. Peter's Church. He was a life-long farmer, owning a farm in Maiden-creek township of nearly 100 acres. This farm is now owned by his son Edwin Staudt. His wife, Hettie Berndt, born Aug. 11, 1822, was a daughter of John Berndt, and lives at Evansville. Their children were: John, of Alburtis, Pa.; Racy, m. to Abraham Heffner; William B.; Mary, m. to John Adams; Louis, of Maiden-creek township; Edwin, on the homestead; George, of Kirbyville; and Sallie, m. to Ezra Hoch.

William B. Staudt was reared to farm life, and in the spring of 1871 he began farming at Evansville, in Maiden-creek township, where he remained three years. He then conducted the hotel stand at Kirbyville, where he lived twenty-six years. In the spring of 1904 he moved from Kirbyville to Blandon, and after a year there located, in 1905, at Pricetown, where he has a comfortable home. Here Mr. Staudt lives a semi-retired life and deals in farm implements and cattle. He is a director of the Pricetown Rural Telephone Company. He is a Democrat in politics, and was school director and auditor and delegate to various county conventions from Richmond township.

He and his family are members of Becker's St. Peter's Church of Richmond township, in which he was a deacon and an elder many years.

On May 28, 1870, Mr. Staudt married Emma Brown, daughter of David and Susanna (Wahl) Brown; the former was a farmer of Ruscombmanor township. To Mr. and Mrs. Staudt have been born children as follows: Laura, m. to George Dieffenbach, of Reading; Alvin, a merchant in Reading; David, a letter carrier in Philadelphia; Elmer, a clerk for a railway company at Hummelstown, Pa.; Carrie, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1909, now a dressmaker and living at home; Jennie, a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1909, now a teacher in Ruscombmanor township; and Benneville, a graduate of Stoner's Business College, now engaged as a bookkeeper.

JOHN F. ROHRBACH, of Reading, Pa., is a native of Pike township, Berks county, born Nov. 5, 1881, the youngest in a family of ten children. He worked upon the home farm until he was nineteen years old. His early intellectual training was obtained in the public schools of his native township, which he attended until he left the farm. In the fall of 1900 he came to Reading and entered the Inter-State Commercial College. In order that he might pursue his studies, he employed a man to take his place upon his mother's farm, his father having died when our subject had just passed his sixteenth birthday. The money to pay this man who worked on the farm and his own tuition as well, Mr. Rohrbach borrowed from his good mother, and paid it back on the installment plan of five and ten dollars at a time, after he had finished school and gone to work. He squared his account in 1905. On April 8, 1901, he completed his business course with an average of 93 per cent. He returned home and remained until the fall of that year when he entered the Reading College of Shorthand and Typewriting, Elmer W. Deck, principal. Here he completed his course in May, 1902. He secured a position with Attorney A. K. Stauffer, as stenographer and typewriter, but in a short time he was offered a more remunerative position at Riddlesburg, Bedford county, Pa. This was in a soft coal region and as he did not like the locality, he left for Philadelphia, where he secured a position with the Frankford Iron Foundry Company, as bookkeeper. This corporation closed its business in June, 1903, and Mr. Rohrbach found employment with Alexander, Mitchell & Co., iron manufacturers. They suspended business in August, 1904. After attending the St. Louis Exposition, Mr. Rohrbach returned to the home farm in Pike township, where he remained until April, 1905, when he took a position as stenographer with Charles F. Felin & Co., the largest retail lumber dealers in Philadelphia. After being in the employ of this company a few months, he was given charge of the shipping department, where he continued nearly two years, resigning to accept a position as traveling salesman with Robert G. Kay, wholesale lumber merchant. His territory includes Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey. He has established a most lucrative business among retailers in these states and is said to be one of the most successful men in his line in the East.

Mr. Rohrbach was married Oct. 1, 1908, to Sallie H. Brown, daughter of Seth and Savannah (Haas) Brown, of Reading, but formerly of Pike township. Mr. Rohrbach is a member of the Commercial Travelers Mutual Accident Association of Utica, N. Y. He and his wife are Lutheran members of Hill Church, in Pike township. In politics he is a Democrat.

Mr. Rohrbach owns the old home farm of 135 acres, in Pike township, which belonged to his grandfather, Benjamin Rohrbach, then to his father, Lewis Y. Rohrbach, and he himself is of the third generation to own it. He has the farm rented. On this land is found a high grade of magnetic ore, which is analyzed as follows:

Silica	0.30
Phosphorous pentoxid	0.03
Sulphur trioxide	0.85
Iron reposit	78.65
Iron metallic	55.10
Titanium oxide	13.80

This mine will be put in operation in the fall of 1909.

YODER. The Yoder family, so well known throughout Berks county, is represented in Ruscombmanor township by Amos S. and John S. Yoder, brothers, both engaged successfully in farming.

John Yoder, the great-grandfather of the brothers, is said to have come from Oley township, the original American home of the family, who were French Huguenots.

John Yoder, grandfather of Amos S. and John S., was a farmer in Richmond township, where he died. He married Magdalena Breyfogel, who, when one week old, was so small that she was placed in a quart measure, and a saucer placed over the top. She lived to be sixty-two years old, and at her death weighed about 155 pounds. To John and Magdalena (Breyfogel) Yoder were born ten children, as follows: John B.; Solomon; George; Seneca; Obediah; Catharine, who died young; Elizabeth, m. to David Sitler; Charlotte, m. to James Gass; Hannah, m. to John Swope; and Hettie, m. to Amos Weidenhammer. All are deceased except Charlotte, who is nearly eighty years old.

John B. Yoder, son of John, was born in Richmond township Feb. 8, 1833, and died at Lyons, Pa., Oct. 14, 1905, aged seventy-two years, and is buried at St. Peter's Church in Richmond township, of which he was a Reformed member. He was a farmer and owned a farm of twenty-five acres in Richmond township, on which he lived. He also had a farm in Maiden-creek township of fifty-one acres. For twelve years before his death he lived retired. He served three years as a school director in Maiden-creek township. His wife, Sarah Ann Sitler, was a daughter of Conrad and Catharine (Mertz) Sitler. Their children were: William, who died young; Amos S., of Ruscombmanor township; Jacob, who died young; John S.; Solomon, who died aged fourteen years; and Sallie, m. to Franklin Keyser of Topton, Pennsylvania.

Amos S. Yoder, son of John, is a farmer in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county. He was born Nov. 19, 1857, and was educated in the common schools of Maiden-creek township. When nineteen years old he was licensed to teach by Prof. S. A. Baer, and taught his first term at Leitheiser's School in Muhlenberg township. He taught in all nine terms in that township; three terms in Maiden-creek, and three terms in Richmond township, and was one of the successful teachers of the county. He worked on the farm during the summer months. In 1891 he became an employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as trackman, which position he filled three years, and then for nine years he worked in the freight station, and for a number of years had charge of the track scales. He was in the continuous service of the company twelve years, and was one of the efficient and trusted employes. From 1903 to 1906 he was in the employ of the United Traction Company as conductor on the Womelsdorf Division. In 1906 he came to Ruscombmanor township, where he owns a farm of fifty-eight acres in the southeastern section of the township, near the Oley township line. Mr. Yoder is a truck farmer, and is very successful. He attends the Reading street market once a week.

Mr. Yoder is a Democrat and takes an active interest in his party's welfare. He was registry assessor in Muhlenberg for six years and he is the secretary of the road commissioners of Ruscombmanor township. He and his family are members of the Reformed congregation at Friedensburg Church. His daughter Joyce (Mrs. Daniel R. Hoch), is the leading soprano in the Friedens Reformed Church choir and has an excellent voice.

On Jan. 29, 1891, Mr. Yoder was married to Sallie H. Dubson, daughter of Martin and Hettie (Haines) Dubson, of Maiden-creek township. They have had four children: Gertrude Esther, a musician of talent, m. Robert Ganter, of Oley, Pa.; S. Joyce m. Daniel R. Hoch, and lives in Ruscombmanor township; Miss Florence I., is at home; and John M.

John S. Yoder, son of John and brother of Amos S., is the most extensive farmer in Ruscombmanor township. He was born in Richmond township, March 20, 1861, son of John B. and Sarah A. (Sitler) Yoder. He received his education in the common schools, and when seventeen years old was licensed to teach in the public schools of Berks county, by Prof. S. A. Baer, then county superintendent, in 1878, and taught his first term at Kirbyville. He taught four terms in Richmond township; nine terms in Maiden-creek township; two terms in Muhlenberg township; one term in Ontelaunee township and three terms in Ruscombmanor township, a total of nineteen terms. He was reared to farm life, and during the summer months worked on the farm, with the exception of several summers, when he attended the subscription schools.

He began farming in the spring of 1892, in Maidencreek township, where he continued four years, and in 1896 he came to Ruscombmanor to what is known as the Snyder homestead. The farm is located near Snyder's Hotel, in the western part of the township, and consists of some sixty acres. In 1903 he purchased the farm on which he now lives. This tract is the old Schmehl homestead, and consists of 130 acres of land. The house on this property is one of the landmarks of this section, having been built during the Revolutionary War. Mr. Yoder is a successful farmer, and is modern in his methods. He does trucking and attends the Reading markets once a week.

Mr. Yoder is an influential citizen, and is a Democrat in politics. He is one of the school directors of the township, and has served the board as its secretary since 1905, in which year he became a member of the board. He has also been delegate to county conventions. He is a member of the Reformed denomination, while his wife is a Lutheran, belonging to the church at Blandon, in which he has been a deacon.

On Dec. 24, 1883, Mr. Yoder married Andore L. R. Schmeck, daughter of Valentine and Louisa (Rothermel) Schmeck. They have four children: Irene L., Ira, Nelson and Wayne J. V.

ALBERT C. BRAUCHER. Christian Braucher, the ancestor of the Brauchers in Berks and Lehigh counties, settled in Berks about the time of the founding of the county, in 1752. The records have it that he was assessed as "a poor man," which meant that he paid but three shillings tax. Information concerning the filing of his will indicates that by thrift and economy he changed conditions somewhat during his life. On the date of making his will, June 13, 1792, he disposed of a large estate, among other items bequeathing to his wife Margaret, bonds and a hotel, "as long as she remains a widow." The will was signed in legible German, "Stoffel Braucher," and was witnessed by George Poh and George Braucher, the latter a brother of the testator. He and his wife are buried in the New Bethel churchyard, two sandstones, with almost illegible inscriptions, marking their graves. It appears he was born in 1729 and died in 1793, while his wife's birth is noted as December 22, 1732, and her death 1797, aged sixty-five years. Their children numbered thirteen, as follows: Christian; Jacob; John; Peter; Conrad; Michael; Anna Maria, who married Michael Albright; Barbara, who married George Kessler; Catherine (left an heir Jacob Ditzius); Anna Elizabeth; Anna Magdalena, who married Jacob Zimmerman; Christina; and Frederick.

Christian Braucher, next in line, date of birth not given, died in 1804, his will being on record in Book A, page 486. He bequeathed to his wife the plantation on which they lived. Peter Braucher and Frederick Leiby were the executors, and the witnesses were Conrad Braucher and Conrad Spohn. The children were named as follows: Catharine, married Peter Zimmerman; Johannes; Christine, married Jacob Wildtraut; Jacob; Magdalene; Peter; Daniel; and Conrad.

Peter Braucher, grandson of the pioneer, and great-grandfather of Albert C. Braucher, was born and died in Albany, buying in 1815, and through life cultivating, the farm on which his great-grandson now resides. This farm passed from Peter to his son Christian in 1838, then to his son Daniel in 1864. In 1886 Albert C. bought it from his father. Peter Braucher's wife's first name was Maria, and their issue was as follows: Mary, married Wm. Seaman, and lived at Milton, Pa.; Annie Bartholomew; Christian; Abraham (1796-1828), died in Albany from small-pox. (His children were—Jacob, of Philadelphia, Michael, of Lockport, N. Y., and William, of Philadelphia); Reuben, settled near Moselem, Pa., where his descendants and those of his son, Peter, still reside.

Christian Braucher's Bible record reads: "Born November 27, 1800, died October 31, 1874, aged seventy-three years, eleven months, and four days." He tilled the old homestead, and was a man of parts in his time, was a Democrat, and held local township and school offices. He and his family were Lutherans, with membership at New Bethel Church. His wife was Catherine Kremer, daughter of Henry, her record showing that she was born April 15, 1804, and died March 5, 1875, aged seventy years, ten months, and twenty days. There were but three children: Matilda, who married Benneville Dietrich; Priscilla, married Benneville Smith; and Daniel.

Daniel Braucher, father of Albert C., passed his life of seventy-nine years on the old homestead, having been born April 7, 1829, and died January 24, 1909. He was twice married. His widow, who was Mrs. Sarah (Reinhart) Schwoyer, now resides near New Bethel Church. Mr. Braucher's first wife was Maria Magdalena Lutz. She was born October 26, 1828, and died November 7, 1871, and to her were born nine children: Cordelia married Charles Ernst; Mary married William Greenawald; James, of Wanamaker, Pa.; Sarah married Daniel Schlenker; Amanda married William Baer; William, of Kutztown; Albert C.; Kate married George Zettelmoyer; Emma (deceased) married Chas. Hamm.

Albert C. Braucher, the representative of the family holding the old homestead, was born July 7, 1862. He was reared on the farm of his father, and came into its possession in 1886, since which time he has continued its cultivation. The old homestead, familiarly referred to as "Braucher's Dale," consists of 111 acres of land near New Bethel Church in Albany township. The present house was built in 1808 by Peter Braucher. It was of the substantial "loghouse" variety, built to withstand the elements, and did service without change until Daniel's time. That member of the family remodeled it, making it a two-story house. Since Albert C.'s incumbency it has been again remodeled. A large Swiss barn was built in 1877, and other improvements have been made until the old place presents an appearance of thrift and neatness.

Mrs. Braucher, prior to their marriage, April 22, 1882, was Miss Jane L., daughter of Joel and Maria Magdalena (Lutz) Sechler. To her were born five children, four of whom died in infancy.

Harvey M. Braucher, the son, born August 27, 1883, graduated from the township schools at thirteen years of age. Entering the Keystone State Normal School some time later, he was graduated at nineteen, having won class and society honors during that period. He then taught the home school acceptably for two years, studying meantime, and in 1904, was awarded "Master's Diploma." In the fall of 1904 he entered Pennsylvania State College, where for four years he pursued the course in electrical engineering, taking his degree of B. S. in E. E. in 1908. Here especially distinguishing himself in public speaking and debate, he there became a Phi Kappa Phi man, a great honor in itself. In 1905 he married Miss Gertrude Hattie Faust. They have a daughter, Pela Fay. Harvey M. Braucher is now assistant principal of the Boyertown, Pa., schools and lives in Boyertown.

DAVID M. REINERT, a miller on Pine Creek, in Pike township, Berks county, was born in District township, Aug. 25, 1853, son of Samuel and Caroline (Meck) Reinert.

Peter Reinert, grandfather of David M., lived in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, where he was engaged in farming. He married Maria Bortz, and they had twelve children, namely: Elizabeth, born 1800; George, 1802; Johannes, 1804; Jacob, 1806; Peter, 1807; Sarah, 1810; Charles, 1811; Andraes, 1814; Daniel, 1816; Henry, 1818; Samuel, 1821; and Esther, 1827.

Samuel Reinert, father of David M., was born March 11, 1821, in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county, Pa. He came in his young manhood to Berks county, where he followed the trade of a stone mason in connection with farming. He died in District township, aged seventy-six years, and is buried at Huff's Church. His first wife, Caroline Meck, was a daughter of Samuel Meck, a native of Ireland. She died in her thirty-eighth year, the mother of three daughters and three sons, namely: David M.; Amanda, m. to William Youse; Ananias, who lived in Rockland township; Simon, who lived in Pike township; Catharine, m. to E. Y. Shade; and Sarah, m. to Oliver Frederick. All except Catharine are living.

David M. Reinert received his education in the township schools. At first he attended the pay schools in District township, the last township in the county to adopt the public school system. He was reared to farming, and when seventeen years old learned the milling trade from William D. Lesher, who then conducted the Adam Mensch mill in Hereford township. He has ever since followed the milling business. In 1875 he came to his present place, and two years later bought the mill and the twenty-four acres of land at sheriff's sale. This has been a mill property for many years, being the first mill in this locality. It is said to have been originally the mill of Peter Lobach (who had two sons, Peter and Charles). The present mill was built by David M. Reinert in 1887, replacing a large, 85-foot long, stone building which served both as a dwelling and mill. On a post in the mill was the date 1765, and a letter "P," which is said to have stood for "Patt," the name of the man who owned it after the Lobachs. Mr. Reinert does a general milling business. He abandoned the making of flour in 1903, and now only makes chops, etc. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religious faith he and his family are Lutherans. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle and the Knights of Friendship.

Mr. Reinert has been married twice. On Jan. 31, 1875, he m. Miss Dianah Geisinger, of Douglass township, Montgomery county, born Feb. 15, 1853, daughter of William Geisinger. She was burned to death Jan. 11, 1906, and is buried at Niantic, Montgomery county. On May 8, 1906, Mr. Reinert m. (second) Lillie L. Rohrbach, daughter of Henry and Mary (Nein) Rohrbach, natives of Upper Milford township, Lehigh county. When Mr. Rohrbach was fourteen years old in 1848, he came to Reading, where he lived until his death. Mr. Reinert has a German Bible that bears date 1736, and was printed at Nuremberg, Germany. It is printed in two parts, has 1,300 pages, is illustrated, and is in good condition.

BROWN. The Brown family, now represented at Pricetown by George Webster Brown, is descended from Jacob Brown, who in 1759 was already a taxable of Ruscombmanor township. Jacob Brown is said to have had a large family—some of his sons locating in different localities. One of his sons, George, remained about Pricetown where he died and is buried. The inscription on his tombstone in the cemetery of the Pricetown Church, standing only a few feet from the northeast corner of the church, bears the following:

"GEORGE BRAUN
DEC. 14, 1764
MCH. 9, 1845
80-2-25
WIFE CATHARINE nee EISENHAUR
APR. 11, 1781
JULY 1, 1843
62-2-20."

Nearly all the Browns now living about Pricetown are descended from this pioneer. The names John, Daniel and David are common family names, and nearly every family had at least one of these names given to some one of its members, thus making it difficult accurately to trace the family genealogy. One Daniel Brown, born Sept. 20, 1785, died March 18, 1874. He always lived about Pricetown. His wife Hannah (1786-1867) bore him children as follows: Jacob (1811-1893); David; Lydia (m. Jeremiah Rothermel); Catharine (m. John Haas); and Mrs. Hiester. David Brown (son of Daniel), born 1826, died 1904, was a farmer and lived near Pricetown; his wife Susana Wahl (1822-1896), bore him these children: Solomon, Jacob, David, Daniel, Harrison, Frank, Emma and Mary.

Another Daniel Brown, who always lived about Pricetown where he died and was buried, was born July 23, 1803, died Dec. 8, 1881; his wife was Julian Busch (1806-1879).

Johannes Brown, Sr., grandfather of G. Webster, was born in Ruscombmanor township, April 28, 1801, and died Jan. 25, 1871, and is buried at the Evangelical Church, of which he was a member. He was a laborer. He married (first) Rebecca Busch, born April 26, 1801, died Nov. 30, 1850. His second wife was Susanna Spang who survived him some years. No children were born of the second marriage, but by his first wife he had: Amos, Elijah, Augustus, Benneville, James, Daniel, John, George and Mary (who is unmarried at Allentown).

John Brown, son of John, Sr., and father of George Webster, was born in Pricetown in 1837, and died in March, 1900. He was a shoemaker in early life, but later became a farmer and lived at Pricetown, where he owned a seventy-acre farm. He was a school-director and was delegate to some of the county conventions. He married Amelia Levan, daughter of Charles Levan, of Pricetown. She died in 1907, aged seventy-one years. Their children were: Rassels, who died small; Eve, who died aged twenty-three years, unmarried; Wellington, who died aged ten years; and George Webster.

GEORGE WEBSTER BROWN, of Pricetown, Pa., was born in Ruscombmanor township, Nov. 16, 1869, son of John and Amelia (Levan) Brown. He was educated in the township schools, which he attended until he was nineteen years old, and was reared to farm life. He began farming in the spring of 1893, on his father's farm, and has so continued, cultivating a tract of seventy acres. He lays stress upon dairying and has a fine herd of Jersey cattle. It is said that he has the best dairy in his district. In politics he is a Democrat, and has been a school director. At the present time he is the treasurer of the Road Board. He is also the treasurer of the Pricetown Telephone Company. Mr. Brown and his family are Reformed members of St. John's Church at Pricetown.

On July 14, 1892, Mr. Brown married Ida I. Hoch, daughter of Rudolph and Catharine (Merkel) Hoch, of Richmond township. They have had three children: Helen, who died aged two years; Nevin L., and Eva C.

SAMUEL H. FULMER, banker and manufacturer at Reading for twenty-six years, was born near Amityville, Berks county, Aug. 27, 1848. He was educated in the public schools of Amity township, Millersville State Normal School, and Bryant & Stratton's Business College at Philadelphia. After serving as a clerk in the Penn Iron Works at Danville, Pa., he engaged in the mercantile business for himself at Amityville, which he carried on successfully for ten years, from 1869 to 1879, after which he followed farming for four years.

On March 14, 1883, Mr. Fulmer assisted in establishing the Penn National Bank at Reading, and in the organization of the board of directors he was selected as the teller of the bank, which position he has filled in a most admirable manner until the present time. He also became interested in various enterprises and building operations with Daniel F. Printz, more especially the Reading Wood Pulley Company, the Reading Saddle Manufacturing Company, the Penn Shoe Manufacturing Company, at Reading, and the Prince Furniture Company at Allentown, serving all these companies as treasurer. In politics he is a Republican, and as such he has represented the Sixteenth ward as a school controller.

In 1871, Mr. Fulmer was married to Irene P. Ludwig, and by her he had three sons: William, engaged in the poultry business at Douglassville (m. Anna Cameron); Edgar, an accomplished musician now serving as the organist of St. Andrew's Church in New York City; and John J. The latter served in the Spanish-American War as a volunteer soldier, having been engaged in Porto Rico. Subsequently he became a graduate of the United States Infantry and Cavalry School at Fort Leavenworth and entered the regular service, serving now as first lieutenant of Company G, and assistant adjutant, in the 7th Regiment U. S. Infantry, which was ordered to the Philippine Islands in April, 1909. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Fulmer have been members of Grace Lutheran Church since they moved to Reading in 1883, and have taken great interest in the welfare of the congregation and the Sunday-school.

Mr. Fulmer's father was Joshua Fulmer, who was born in Lebanon county, Pa., in 1815. While but a boy of six years, upon the decease of his father, he accompanied his mother to Amity township, Berks county. After attending the local schools, he learned the trade of shoemaker, which he followed for forty years. During this time he purchased a farm in the vicinity of Amityville and carried on farming in connection with his trade. He married Harriet Holloway (daughter of Joseph Holloway, of the same township) and by her had four children: Margaret and Levi, who died in infancy, William, who died when a young man; and Samuel H. He died in 1882, aged sixty-seven years; and his wife died in 1887, aged seventy-three years. They had been members of the Lutheran Church at Amityville for many years. In the erection of the new church at Amityville in 1872, he was one of the building committee and he also served the congregation for many years as treasurer.

The grandfather of Mr. Fulmer was also named Joshua. He was a well-known farmer in Lebanon county, having cultivated a farm in the vicinity of Swatara. He was married to Mollie Moyer, and they had three children: Joshua, Hannah (m. to John Bridenbaugh), and Molly (m. to John Good).

Mrs. Fulmer's father was Augustus Ludwig, farmer of Amity township, born in 1818, and died in 1905. He was married to Carolina Pott, daughter of John Pott, of Amity township, Berks county, by whom he had five children: Nathaniel; Oliver; Amanda (m. Samuel L. Bowers); Irene (Mrs. Fulmer); and Jane, who died young. He retired in 1900 when he removed to Reading to reside with Mrs. Fulmer and he continued with her until his decease Sept. 1, 1905, aged eighty-seven years. His wife also resided with Mrs. Fulmer and died in Aug., 1891. And her grand-father was Abraham Ludwig, also a farmer of the same township. He died in 1863, aged seventy-four years. He was married to Sarah Miller, who died in 1878, aged ninety-two years. They had eight children: Sarah, Elizabeth, Harriet, Mary, Mahlon, Lewis, Elam and Augustus.

EUGENE S. REESER, portrait painter and landscape artist of Reading, Pa., whose studio and art store are located at No. 415 Schuylkill avenue, was born Jan. 23, 1862, in Leesport, Pa., son of William P. and Catherine (Keener) Reeser.

Mr. Reeser received his elementary education in the public schools of Leesport, and when a mere boy evidenced his artistic taste to a marked degree. At the early age of six years he finished pictures, which he still has. He has made the development of his talent his life work, and his productions are well liked and are fine specimens of art. Mr. Reeser's specialty is portrait work, and in this connection he combines the enlargement of photographs, working in oil, crayon, India ink, and water color. In his studio may be seen three or four hundred fine art specimens, among his masterpieces being "Washington In Prayer," "Feeding the Doves," "A Great Feeding," etc. Mr. Reeser's work finds a ready market in the surrounding country, and especially is his work in demand in the Southern states.

On June 14, 1886, Mr. Reeser was married to Miss Anna S. Mull, and they reside at No. 415 Schuylkill avenue, Reading. They are members of St. Mark's Reformed Church. Mr. Reeser is independent in politics, voting for the man best fitted for the office.

FREDERICK S. FOX, editor of the Reading Telegram, was born in Reading, Oct. 23, 1875, and has been associated with newspapers in this city and Philadelphia for fifteen years. He was married in 1898 to Alma C. Mingle, daughter of Dr. I. Leo Mingle, of Reading, deceased. Three daughters have been born to them.

SAMUEL LANDIS, a member of an old Mennonite family of Pennsylvania which located in upper Montgomery county about 1730, was the first by that name to settle in District township, Berks county. He owned a 200-acre farm (later owned by his son Martin, now the property of Daniel Haag), one mile north of Landis store. He is buried all alone on this farm. He was a Reformed member of Huff's Church, where his wife is buried. Among their children were: Martin; Samuel; Polly, m. to Jacob Weidner; a son who was accidentally killed by a wagon passing over him; and at least two others, whose names are not recorded.

Samuel Landis, son of Samuel, was a carpenter by trade, and later followed farming. He started the store business, at what is now known as Landis Store, named after him. This is the business center of the township. He built all the present set of buildings except the large stone farm house. He established Landis Store P. O., and his oldest son Nathan became the first postmaster, and John H. Landis became the second, serving thirty years, and being succeeded by Harvey W. Kemp, the present incumbent. Samuel Landis served as township assessor, auditor and school director. He was a Reformed member of Huff's Church, where he and his wife are buried. He married Kate Hertzog, and they had seven children, namely: Nathan, Elizabeth, Martin, Lydia, John H., Katie and Maria (died young).

JOHN H. LANDIS, son of Samuel and Kate, was born in District township, Feb. 28, 1842, and for many years, was the merchant and landlord at Landis Store, being succeeded after forty years of active business life by his son Henry B. who was in business four and one-half years. In 1903 Harvey W. Kemp became the proprietor, and in 1909 purchased the stand and farm from John H. Landis for $9,500. Mr. Landis is a Republican, and was the committeeman of his township for a number of years. In 1865 he married Emma Bittenbender, of Hereford township, and their children were: Henry B., of Reading; Frank B., a shoe merchant at Kutztown; and Oscar, who died in infancy.

EDWIN L. BRICKER, of Reading, Pa., proprietor of the "Excelsior Hotel," located at the corner of Tenth and Perry streets, was born in Muhlenberg township, Berks county, Nov. 18, 1860, son of Frederick S. and Hannah (Becker) Bricker.

Jacob Bricker, the grandfather, was a native of Pottsville, where he carried on carpentering until his death in young manhood. He married Harriet Seitzinger, and they had the following children: Albert, who lived at Fleetwood; Henry, who died at Reading; and Frederick S. After the death of her first husband, Mrs. Bricker m. (second) Henry Moll, of Berkley, and they had two children: John; and Sallie, who married Henry McKentley.

Frederick S. Bricker was born July 24, 1830, and died March 23, 1897. As a young man he removed from Pottsville to Alsace township, where for sixteen years he was engaged in railroading and assisted in the construction of the East Penn Railroad in 1857. He owned a tract of forty-seven acres in Alsace township, but this he sold in later years and came to Reading, where he worked in the car shops until his death. He was a Lutheran member of Alsace Church, and was buried at Shalters Church. Mr. Bricker was married to Hannah Becker, who was born Jan. 1, 1833, in Alsace township, daughter of Daniel and Magdalena (Schmehl) Becker. She now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Annie Kissinger, on North Ninth street, Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Bricker the following children were born: Emma, widow of Amos Kercheff; Rebecca, m. to Washing Shalter; William, of Reading; Edwin L.: Irvin, John and Charles of Reading; Alice, m. to Samuel Baker, deceased; Annie, m. to Amos Kissinger; Katie, m. to William Butz; Howard, a resident of Reading; and Laura, who died in infancy.

Edwin L. Bricker was reared in Alsace township, where he attended the public schools. After leaving school he commenced working for Clymer & Co., at the Mount Laurel furnace, following the iron business until 1898. He then became proprietor of the "Excelsior Hotel," which he has conducted to the present time. His house has seventeen large rooms, and he has made a success of the business, possessing his share of the patronage of the traveling public.

Mr. Bricker is a member of Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.; Muhlenberg Lodge, No. 1085, I. O. O. F.; Berks County Liquor Dealers Association, and the Eagles' Mountain Home Association. He is a Republican in politics. Mr. Bricker and his family are connected with Shalters Lutheran Church of Alsace township.

On Dec. 23, 1882, Mr. Bricker was married to Debora Homan, daughter of John and Lydia (Swavely) Homan, of Muhlenberg township, and granddaughter of Matthias Swavely. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bricker, as follows: Harry, born Oct. 14, 1883 (m. Herma Miller, and has one daughter, Pearl I.); Edwin Weston; Edna; Clayton, who died young; Elma; Eva, and Lida.

JOHN SCHEIFLEY, well known to the residents of Reading, Pa., as a faithful employe of the U. S. post-office, and an honored veteran of the great Civil war, was born in 1836, in Wurtemberg, Germany, son of Jacob and Mary (Seigel) Scheifley.

The parents of Mr. Scheifley emigrated to America in 1848, landing at New York, whence they came to Reading. In the Fatherland Jacob Scheifley had been a weaver, but in this country was engaged in work at the Reading Iron Company's plant until 1861. In 1862 he enlisted in the 59th Pa. V. I., with which regiment he was serving in an engagement before Petersburg, where he lost his left leg. He was taken to New York, but died at the military hospital at Davids Island, aged forty-five years. His wife survived him until 1890, when she died, aged seventy-three years, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Scheifley had also been a member. Two children were born to this good couple: John; and Mary, who married George Blessing, now deceased, and had five children—Mary, Annie, Dorothy, George and John.

John Scheifley received his education in the schools of Reading, and worked in Brumbach's woolen mill until the outbreak of the Civil war. The following is an account, written by Mr. Scheifley to a minister of Philadelphia at the latter's request, of Mr. Scheifley's war record.

"Dear Sir—Not knowing you personally, but seeing that we are one in the Lord, may God bless you and make you a blessing in saving souls. I see in your letter that you want to have an account of my past life and army record. I will give it to you cheerfully and briefly as far as I am able. When President Lincoln called for 300,000 men to enlist for three years or during the war, I enlisted in Co. D, 3rd Reg., Pa. Reserves, and left a family of wife and two children. One of these children is the pastor of an U. E. Church of your city.

"I was engaged in the following battles, viz: Drainsville, second battle of Bull Run, the Seven Days Fight in front of Richmond, Antietam and Fredericksburg. The battle of Fredericksburg occurred on the 13th day of December, 1862. It was in this battle that I received my wound which resulted in the loss of my right leg. And right here, four brave men out of my company took their muskets in one hand and their lives in the other and tried to carry me off the battle-field. They held on to me, and the Rebels commanded them to surrender. One of the men was captured and another wounded. I told them to drop me, and to write home what had become of me, and here is where my suffering commenced. I was lying on that field of battle for five days and five nights, with snow on the ground at the same time, and captured. By the aid of the Rebel friend of whom you have already heard and who interceded for me with Stonewall Jackson, I was taken back into a rifle-pit, out of the reach of the bullets, and from there I was taken to Libby Prison. I was there six weeks, and after being paroled I was brought back to Annapolis, Md., a skeleton. After seeing me, the doctors gave me but three days to live, but by the grace of God I am here to tell the tale of my sufferings.

"Up to Dec. 13, 1862, I saw thousands of men sacrificed on the altar of their country, but through all that, 'there was peace in my soul that passeth all understanding.' No wonder General Sherman expressed himself correctly when he said: 'War is Hell.' In the battle of Fredericksburg, forty-two men were shot down out of the three Reading companies, and only two survived, another Reading man and I.

"Before closing, I must tell you of an incident that happened while I was lying on the battle-field. A man from your city died right aside of me. He professed to be an infidel and lived like one, but the first night while lying on the battle-field, when he saw there was no hope for him, he commenced to pray until his tongue was stiff in death. From this you can plainly see what infidelity is. When I look back over my past life I must call out with the poet, 'Oh, what a wonder that Jesus loves me.'"

After the war Mr. Scheifley returned to Reading, and for some time was employed at various occupations, until 1863 when he was appointed clerk by Postmaster George Whitner, brother of C. K. Whitner, and he remained in that position for four years. A Democratic administration at this time compelled him to resign, but he was later appointed under Postmaster Casper Stetson, and he has continued faithfully in the service since that time, a period of twenty-one years, six months. Courteous and obliging, cheerful and affable, Mr. Scheifley is one of the most popular employes that the service has ever had. He has charge of the stamp department.

Mr. Scheifley was married, in 1859, to Miss Catherine Bobst, daughter of Charles Bobst, and to this union there were born the following named children: Rev. J. William, of Philadelphia, Pa., was educated in the Reading schools, and is a minister of the United Evangelical faith; Annie m. Fred Will, who is in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad; Catherine m. Charles Chubb, a resident of Reading; Carrie, deceased, m. Rev. George Knerr; one died in infancy; John; and Naomi. The mother of these children passed away Sept. 18, 1886, and Mr. Scheifley was married (second) March 7, 1889, to Mrs. Helena H. Thuderoh, the widow of Jacob Thuderoh, who was a well known artist of Reading. There have been no children born to this second union.

In his religious belief, Mr. Scheifley is identified with the Evangelical Church, of which he has ever been a consistent attendant. In his political views he is a stanch Republican. As a veteran of the Civil war, he is one of the popular members of McLean Post No. 16, Grand Army of the Republic.

ISAAC MATZ, for some years one of Reading's leading contractors and builders, was a native of Berks county, and died in Reading, in 1881.

Mr. Matz's educational advantages were secured in the common schools of his native county, and at an early age he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for a short time before engaging in contracting for himself. He was an able business man, and was connected with various enterprises. Mr. Matz was married to Sarah Snyder, daughter of John Snyder. She died Jan. 27, 1904. To this union were born the following children: Mary m. William Hinckel, and has two children; Frank died at the age of thirty years; Kate m. John Schaeffer, and had seven children; Maggie m. Mabury Slater, and had two children; Charles died at the age of two years; Rebecca m. William Albright, a cigar maker, and had two children, one now deceased; Lillian m. Thomas M. Curry, and had two children, Thomas Wilfred (deceased), and Angela; Thomas m. Ella Smith, and had two children, Mary (deceased), and Harold; Sally m. (first) Jefferson Staufer (by whom she had five children), (second) George Waltman, and (third) Daniel Kerling; Isabella died young; J. Jefferson m. Laura Clowry, and has two children, a daughter Arline, and a son.

In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church. Mr. Matz was a Democrat in politics, but never cared for public office.

MOTZ-MATZ. The first reunion of the Motz family (originally spelled Matz) was held at the old homestead, about one mile southeast of the Brice (now the cozy home of Mr. Solomon Motz, the youngest of the family of nine children), on Friday, Sept. 7th. It was an ideal fall day, and about one hundred and twenty-five persons, including neighbors who had been invited, were present.

"Family history is always interesting and the history of the Motz family in America dates from the year 1735. It was on the 29th of May of that year that Lorenz Matz, then a lad of only sixteen years, sailed, with 185 others, from Rotterdam, Holland, on the ship Mercury, bound for America. The voyage required thirty-seven days, and on his arrival in this country young Lorenz settled near Mohnsville, Berks county, Pa. Here he married and reared a family of ten children, nine boys and one daughter. One of these sons, whose name was Daniel, was the great-grandfather of the present generation, who, with their descendants, joined in the reunion last Friday. Unfortunately little is known of his history, or that of his son, Grandfather Motz, whose name also was Daniel. Grandfather Motz, however, was the father of seven children, six sons and one daughter.

"One of his sons, Daniel, married Henrietta Warner. To them were born eleven children, seven sons and four daughters. The family lived successively in Berks, Lancaster and Franklin counties, Pa., and in the spring of 1855 the father, mother and the ten children then living came to Ohio and located in Franklin county, on the farm now owned by the youngest son, Solomon, where the reunion was held. The names of the children, ten of whom came to Ohio with their parents, are as follows: Benville Motz, aged seventy-five, lives in Truro township, near Brice. He is the father of nine children, two sons and seven daughters; two of the daughters are deceased. Daniel Motz, who died at Akron, Ohio, in 1904, aged seventy-one, was the father of six children, four sons and two daughters. Hannah Motz (Mrs. Henry Will), of Canal Winchester, aged seventy-one, is the mother of seven children, three sons and four daughters; a son and daughter are deceased. Levi Motz, aged seventy, of Granite City, Ill., is the father of three children, two sons and one daughter; the mother and sons are deceased. Henrietta Motz died in Pennsylvania in 1851, at the age of twelve. Henry Motz, aged sixty-six, who resides in Madison township, Franklin county, Ohio, is the only bachelor in the family. Mary (Mrs. David Yost), of Shelby county, Ill., aged sixty-four, is the mother of eleven children, ten of whom are living. Reuben Motz, aged sixty-two, of Oakland, Cal., is the father of three children, two sons and a daughter. John Motz, aged fifty-nine, of Columbus, Ohio, is the father of eight children, four sons and four daughters. Susan (Mrs. Samuel Bowman) of Canal Winchester, aged fifty-seven, is the mother of four children, three sons and one daughter. Solomon Motz, aged fifty-four, and living on the home place near Brice, is the father of one son. The combined ages of the nine children living foot up 578 years, an average of over sixty-four years.

"Those present at the reunion representing the above families were: Benville Motz and wife, of Brice, and their children, as follows: John Motz, wife and four children, of Brice; Mrs. George Ford and four children, of Brice; W. B. Motz, of Truro township; Mrs. Sarah Powell and two children, of Vigo, Ross county; Mrs. Henry Fancher and one child, and Mrs. Rebecca Wright and one child, of Brice; Mrs. Maude Mason of Madison township.

"Sidney Motz of Wooster, Orlando Motz of Toledo, and Ella Lonsbury of Akron, children of Daniel Motz, deceased.

"Henry Will, of Canal Winchester, wife and children as follows: John Will and wife, of Canal Winchester; George Will, wife and four children, of Brice; William Huntwork, wife and two children, of Basil; William Codner, wife and two children, and Miss Jessie Will, of Canal Winchester.

"Levi Motz, of Granite City, Illinois.

"Henry Motz, of Brice.

"(None of the members of David Yost's family, of Shelby county, Ill., or of Reuben Motz's family, of Oakland, Cal., could be present, but they sent letters feelingly expressing their regrets and hoping for a pleasant reunion.)

"John Motz, wife and children, as follows: Rose C. Daniels and two children; Gertrude, Sarah and Henrietta Motz, all of Columbus, Ohio.

"Samuel Bowman, wife and children; John C. and wife, Howard and wife, and grandchildren, Catharine and Earl Smith, all of Canal Winchester.

"Solomon Motz and wife, and their son George, his wife and son, all of near Brice.

"On the Warner side of the house the only representatives present were Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Warner, of St. Paul, Ohio.

"Representatives of other branches of the Motz family (being cousins in various degrees) were the following:

"Misses Arda and Stella Matz, and Mrs. Dr. Good, of Bellevue, Ohio; Mrs. Mary A. Mowrer, of Catawba Island, Ohio.

"Mrs. A. W. Matz and daughter Miss Ida, Jacob Matz, daughter Hulda and two grandchildren, and Mr. Wellington Matz, all of Wooster, Ohio. The latter is connected with the Wooster Daily News and the Wayne County Democrat, and is one of those jolly good fellows who knows how to keep everything running in a pleasant vein at any kind of gathering.

"Louie Matz and wife, of Cleveland, Ohio.

"The following neighbors and friends were also present to enjoy the day: Mrs. Jonathan Ruse, daughter Myrtle and son Harry. James Wingert and wife. George Francisco, Albert Francisco, and Miss Jennie Francisco. George Vandemark, wife, daughter Grace and sons Homer and Clark. Perry Smith, wife and child. Berril Shride and wife. George Lee, wife and daughter Luda. Pierce McCracken. Tullie King and Miss Lou King. F. L. Allgire and wife. George Groves and wife. Wesley O'Roark. William Alspaugh, wife and daughter Gatha. Mrs. Thurman Tussing and daughter Mabel. Vernon Miller, who was the official photographer. Mrs. Noah Looker, Ralph Guisinger, Charley Ford. George Thomas and wife of Columbus. Joseph Milnor, wife and son Willie of Pickerington. Rev. Hughes and wife, of Canal Winchester, and B. F. Gayman representing The Times and The Buckeye News.

"The forenoon hours were spent by the members and friends of the Motz family in reviewing the family history and in social chat, and at noon dinner was announced. After the tables had been removed from the lawn and a group picture had been taken of all present, the meeting was called to order by Mr. John Motz, of Brice, who stated that is was the purpose to form a permanent organization of the Motz family, but before doing so he would call upon some of those present for short addresses. The following responded in the order named: Rev. G. F. Hughes and B. F. Gayman, of Canal Winchester; Wellington Matz, of Wooster; Elisha Warner, of St. Paul; Henry Will, of Canal Winchester.

On motion of Wellington Matz, John Motz, of Brice, was elected president, and Mrs. Alice Codner, of Canal Winchester, secretary-treasurer. A collection, amounting to $4.62, was lifted to defray the expense for postage and other incidentals attending the next reunion. The chair then appointed the secretary, Mr. Wellington Matz, of Wooster, and Mr. Henry Motz, of Brice, a committee to select the time and place for the next reunion. The secretary was requested to keep a record of the births and deaths on the different branches of the family, and then, following the adjournment, well-wishes were said and the first pleasant reunion of the Motz family was at an end."

A. G. CHRISTMAN, of Reading, who was engaged in dealing in laundry supplies at No. 347 Penn street, was born in 1836, in Richmond township, Berks county, son of Michael and Kate (Christ) Christman, and died July 3, 1908, aged seventy-one years and eleven months.

Michael Christman, father of A. G., was a tailor by trade, but in middle life engaged in farming in Jefferson township, where his death occurred in 1865, at the age of sixty-five years. His wife, Kate Christ, died in 1878, when sixty-seven years of age, the mother of ten children, all of whom grew to maturity, namely: Esther M., Elizabeth, B. Franklin, A. G., James M., Catherine, Daniel, Sarah, Charles and Aquilla. In religious belief Mr. Christman was Reformed, while his wife belonged to the Lutheran denomination. He was a Democrat in politics.

A. G. Christman was educated in the schools of Richmond and Jefferson townships, and the Millersville Normal school, after which he taught school for eight terms, and then spent some time on the home farm. He first engaged in the general merchandise business as a clerk, but later operated a store at New Shaefferstown, where he continued in business for four years. His next venture was in the lumber business at Powell's Creek, where he remained for four years, after which he removed to Sheridan, Lebanon county, and carried on the coal and lumber business for another four years. Subsequently Mr. Christman removed to Lititz, Lancaster county, and spent four years in superintending his inventions in an agricultural implement factory. In 1884 he located in Reading and entered upon the manufacture of agricultural implements, which he continued to engage in until 1892. In that year he invented the "Star" washing machine, which with others associated with him, he started to manufacture. Shortly thereafter he invented the "Daisy" washer, and in 1895, the "Royal" washing machine, the premier machine on the market today, all others being offshoots from the original "Star" and "Daisy" machines. Mr. Christman was very successful in the sale of his "Royal" and "Success" machines, and there are more than 25,000 of them in use at this time. In 1901 his son, H. Herbert Christman, became manager of this large business.

In 1867 Mr. Christman married Ellen R. Althouse, daughter of Adam Althouse, and three children have been born to this union: H. Herbert (who has a son, H. Stanley, by his first marriage, and by his marriage with Anna Eisenbise, has had two children—Irwin Adam, deceased at three months; and John Kenneth); one that died in infancy; and G. Linton, an electrician of Pittsburg (m. to Mary Bristol, and father of one child).

In religious belief Mr. Christman is Reformed. Politically he holds the views of the Democratic party.

HARRY R. GRING, cigar manufacturer of Fritztown, Berks county, belongs to one of the old families of the county, being a son of Franklin H. Gring and a descendant of Johannes Gring.

Johannes Gring, the founder of this family in America, crossed the ocean on the ship "Lydia," from Rotterdam, which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 20, 1743. His son Samuel, who was a lad when his parents emigrated, settled in Cumru, some time after 1760. Here he acquired land and prospered, dying a wealthy man, and occupies an unknown grave in the vicinity of Sinking Spring.

David Gring, the great-grandfather of Harry R. Gring, was born Feb. 9, 1760, in Cumru township, Berks county. In early life he located at Tulpehocken Creek, where he took up a tract of land, built several gristmills and, like his father, became prosperous. He died Feb. 1, 1848, aged eighty-eight years less eight days. David Gring was married (first) Dec. 7, 1790, to Martha Waldschmidt, of the Fatherland, whose parents came to America with Samuel Gring. Tradition has it that the Grings and Waldschmidts were neighbors before coming to this country. Martha (Waldschmidt) Gring was born Aug. 3, 1767, and passed to her reward April 20, 1818. She and her husband had the following children: John, a minister of the Reformed Church; William, a miller on Tulpehocken creek; David; Daniel, a minister of the Reformed Church, born July 9, 1798, died Sept. 5, 1862 (his wife, Esther, born March 8, 1799, died Dec. 3, 1861, aged sixty-two years, eight months, twenty-five days); Susan, who died unmarried; a daughter, who married a Mr. Lichty; and one who married a Mr. Troxel. Mr. Gring's second wife was Gertrude Stamm, born July 12, 1772, who died March 31, 1857, aged eighty-four years, eight months, nineteen days.

David Gring, grandfather of Harry R. Gring, was born March 9, 1806, and died Jan. 26, 1890, aged eighty-three years, ten months, seventeen days. He was married June 25, 1826, to Maria Hill, born Oct. 6, 1803, died May 18, 1885, aged eighty-one years, seven months, twelve days. Their union was blessed with these children: David, born Jan. 11, 1829, a miller; Daniel, born July 27, 1830, a farmer; Samuel, born Oct. 7, 1832, who is still living, a prominent lumber dealer of Reading; Ann, born Feb. 22, 1834, widow of George Zerr; Mary, born Nov. 22, 1836, who married Joshua Grill; John, born March 27, 1838, a miller and tanner; Charles H., born Feb. 18, 1840; Lewis, who died aged fifteen years, one day; Franklin H., born July 14, 1844; and Levi, born Nov. 30, 1847, died Dec. 1, 1862.

The father of this family followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, and at the time of his death was the owner of several farms and a good gristmill. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in politics, and was prominent in the public matters of his day and generation. Mr. Gring served as captain, and later as major, in the State militia, occupying the latter rank for eleven years.

Franklin H. Gring was born on the old stand across the line in Spring township July 15 (14), 1844, and was reared upon the farm. Until twenty-six years of age he worked for his parents, at which time he set out for himself, and in 1871 began farming the home property, where he lived for three years. The next location of Mr. Gring was Denver, Lancaster county, but subsequently, in 1876, he purchased the old Alexander Fisher farm, at Fritztown, a tract of thirty-two acres of fertile land, and here he has since lived. He has a fine little place, which he has greatly improved. It is located along the Lancaster road and the road running from Fritztown to Wernersville, at the foot of Cushion Hill, and is supplied with some of the finest water in the world. On the property are many fruit trees and it is in an excellent state of cultivation. Mr. Gring is a Republican in politics, and he and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring.

On Jan. 14, 1871, Franklin H. Gring married Mary Fisher, born Sept. 14, 1851, daughter of Alexander and Kate (Walters) Fisher, and granddaughter of John Fisher, who owned many acres of land around the Keener's mill. Mr. and Mrs. Gring have had eight children: Harry R. is mentioned further on; Katie V. died in infancy; Alva G. m. Charles Gaul, of Wernersville, and has two sons, Robert and Harvey; Edwin F., of Lancaster, Pa., m. Alice Gensemer, and has one son, Elwood; Millie E. m. H. C. Oberly, of Lancaster county; David A. was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun while hunting in Lebanon county, dying Nov. 12, 1902, aged eighteen years, six months, eighteen days; Mary A. m. Oscar Fleischer, born Oct. 7, 1885, an employe of the State Asylum at Wernersville; and William F. was born July 10, 1890.

Harry R. Gring, eldest of the family of Franklin H. Gring, was born in 1871 in the building at Fritztown where his cigar factory is now located. He attended the public schools of Lower Heidelberg township, and as well a summer school, and by the time he was seventeen was prepared to teach school, beginning at the Spohn school in Spring township. Before he began teaching he was in the lumber business in Bedford county, Pa., for a year. After teaching three terms he went into the service of the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad Company, remaining in that employ for two years. He was next engaged by the Montello Brick Company for two and a half years, after which he commenced in his present line, as foreman for his brother-in-law, P. K. Steffy, who was then in the cigar manufacturing business at Fritztown. In 1899 he embarked in the business on his own account. He had been foreman for his brother-in-law for two years, during which time he acquired a thorough knowledge of cigar manufacturing, in which he has made a decided success. His factory is No. 43. Mr. Gring employs as many as twenty-seven hands in his establishment, and the product is sold mainly in Philadelphia and the West.

On Nov. 23, 1889, Mr. Gring was married to Mary V. Steffy, daughter of Isaac L. and Margaret (Kline) Steffy. One child has been born to them, Stephen E. Mr. Gring is a member of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring. He is a member of the K. of P. lodge at that place, of I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 835, at Wernersville and of Reading Tent, K. O. T. M. He is a Republican in politics and interested in local public affairs, having served three years as school director of Lower Heidelberg township.

JAMES W. SPONAGLE, who has recently retired from active business cares and settled down in the borough of Birdsboro, has been for many years one of the best known citizens of Berks county. He was successfully engaged for a number of years in the contracting business, has filled several important public offices, and has in various other ways participated in local activities affecting the prosperity and good government of this region. He has always been regarded as a man of notable intelligence and honesty of purpose, and his influence has been used toward the most worthy ends.

Mr. Sponagle was born Feb. 12, 1843, in Chester county, Pa., whither his grandfather, John Sponagle, moved from Berks county (formerly from Huntingdon county), this State. John Sponagle was of German extraction. His family consisted of four children, George, John, Samuel and Mary, the latter marrying Albert Bell, of Robeson township. This family united with the Reformed Church.

George Sponagle was born near Gibraltar, in Berks county, but lived in Chester county for several years. In early manhood he learned the plasterer's trade, which he followed for about forty years. On returning to his native county he settled in Robeson township, where he made his home for fifty years, finally removing to Union township, where he died in 1895, at the advanced age of eighty-five. Mr. Sponagle was an industrious and respected man, was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was frequently honored by his fellow citizens with election to local offices. He cast his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson, and was always a stanch Democrat. He was an Odd Fellow, belonging to the lodge at Morgantown. George Sponagle married Margaret Wilson, daughter of Andrew and Ann Wilson, the former of whom was of Irish descent, and a miller by trade. Mr. Wilson passed most of his life in the southern part of Berks county, and the northern part of Chester county. To Mr. and Mrs. Sponagle were born nine children, six of whom survive, viz.: Susan Jane married Henry Umstead, and both are now deceased; Samuel, deceased, was a resident of Reading; Ann married Jacob Geiger, and lives at the old Geiger homestead in Union township; John, who formerly lived in Robeson township, is now engaged as a plasterer in Reading; James W. is mentioned below; Joseph, a plasterer, is a citizen of Geigertown; Mary Elizabeth is the widow of A. Jackson Westley, of Pottstown; George Howard died when about twenty-four years old; Harry B., a plasterer, is a resident of Birdsboro.

James W. Sponagle was only a small boy when his father removed from Chester to Berks county, and he received his early education in the public schools of Robeson township. His health was so poor, however, during his childhood, that he was not able to go to school until he was twelve years old, and he had not even been strong enough to indulge in boyish sports and pastimes, or to perform the work ordinarily expected of a boy at that time. But he made up for lost time by close application, and after attending school for six terms of four months each he was considered competent to teach—a fact which proves his aptitude and diligence. He was given his first position as a teacher when only nineteen years old, and continued to follow that profession for many years, teaching in all fifteen winter terms, in Robeson and Union townships. Meantime he had also learned the plasterer's trade, under his father, and was employed at such work during the summer season, finally engaging in that business with his father. They worked together until 1864, when Mr. George Sponagle retired, leaving the business to his sons, John, James W. and Joseph, who carried it on under the firm name of Sponagle Brothers. Their headquarters were at Geigers Mills. James W. Sponagle managed the business for several years, until 1895, when he withdrew from the firm to enter upon his duties as county recorder. On resuming business life (which he had given up while serving as recorder) he engaged in general contracting, and followed that line until his retirement in 1907. He settled in Birdsboro in 1903.

In spite of early handicaps Mr. Sponagle has led a most active and useful life. The greater part of his early training was eminently practical. He did not attend school long, but having entered upon his studies at an age when he could realize something of their value, he made the most of his advantages. Outside of his public school work he had a course in the People's Business College of Reading. The rest of his knowledge, both of books and of the world, was gained in the school of experience, which has proved a sufficient training ground for those who do not lack ambition. It fitted him for years of successful work as a teacher and in business, in which he displayed such sterling qualities that his fellow citizens have on several occasions chosen him for public honors. He has been prominent in politics as a member of the Democratic party, and has run on that ticket as a candidate for several offices. For eight years he served as justice of the peace in his township, resigning in 1882, when elected representative to the State legislature. He represented Berks county in that body from 1883 to 1887, after which he gave all of his time to the management of the business of Sponagle Brothers until elected recorder of deeds, in 1894. He held that office from January, 1895, to January, 1898, when his term expired, after which, as previously stated, he was in business again until his retirement. Mr. Sponagle was one of the founders of the First National Bank of Birdsboro, and is still a director in that institution.

Mr. Sponagle has a social disposition and is very companionable, and he has enjoyed membership in various fraternal orders, at present, however, belonging only to Neversink Lodge, No. 514, I. O. O. F., of Birdsboro. He was formerly affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Brotherhood of the Union. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was active in the congregation at Geigers Mills, where he lived for thirty-two years.

On Nov. 14, 1867, Mr. Sponagle married Harriet U. Geiger, and they have one child, John H., born April 6, 1870. John H. Sponagle married Joan Wagner, and they have had two children, Matilda and Alvin.

HARRY E. NEWKIRK, baggagemaster on the Pennsylvania Railroad, making a daily run between Reading and Philadelphia, was born at the family home in Reading, the eldest child of Samuel and Mary (Shaneman) Newkirk.

The Newkirk family originated in Scotland and from that land came Jacob Newkirk, the great-grandfather of Harry E., who settled in Berks county, where he died on his farm in Maxatawny township at the age of sixty-two. He married Mary Reinhart, who died aged about sixty-eight years. They had the following children: Jacob, Charles, John, Sarah (who married Jacob Disher, of Oley township) and Mrs. David Fry.

Jacob Newkirk, grandfather of Harry E., was born in Maxatawny township and in young manhood learned the carpenter trade and assisted in the building of the Lebanon Valley bridge. Later he worked as a wheelwright; he then came to Reading and for eight years was employed at the car shops of the Pennsylvania road. Still later he engaged in a contracting business which he followed for a number of years and then bought land in Cumru township, near Yocom's Church. He was a good business man and made a success of raising cattle and hogs. He also built canal boats while living in Berks county. He later moved to Schuylkill county, where the remainder of his life was spent in teaming and farming. He died at the age of eighty-four years. He married Mary Burkey, now deceased, and they had four children: Samuel, John, Almina, who married Henry Lesher, and Jacob.

Samuel Newkirk, father of Harry E., was born Sept. 21, 1840, in Upper Bern township, and his parents brought him to Reading when one year of age. He learned the blacksmith trade in boyhood and March 9, 1869, was engaged as a brakeman for the P. & R. R. R. Co., working in that capacity for three years; for four years was freight conductor, then went to the main line as traveling dispatcher, a position he filled for sixteen years, when he was appointed train-master for the main line of this company. After seven years of service in the above position, he was appointed yard-master. He owns a comfortable home at No. 609 N. Ninth street.

In 1861, Samuel Newkirk was married to Mary Shaneman, daughter of Isaac and Harriet (Miller) Shaneman, and they had the following children: Harry E.; Walter died young; A. Irene m. Dr. D. Z. Bowman, now deceased; Harriet S. m. Dr. J. C. Knauer, of Reading; Isaac died young; Elizabeth; John died young; George A., a postal railway clerk, m. Laura Wesley; Frank C., a clerk at the P. & R. freight depot, m. Sarah Amole; Maude died young; Marion is at home; Samuel Jr., is a machinist. Samuel Newkirk is independent as to politics. Formerly he was a member of the Reformed Church, but now belongs to the Washington street Mission.

Harry E. Newkirk was mainly educated in the schools of Reading and Mahanoy City; then went to Philadelphia and worked for his uncle, John B. Newkirk, of the firm of Eaton & Newkirk, manufacturers of sash and doors, but returned to Reading one year later and became a machinist apprentice with the P. & R. R. R. Co., and after serving his full term, served eight months as a journeyman. Before going to Philadelphia he had earned his first money as a newsboy for the old Reading Eagle, first under Reuben Huttensbein and later under Charles Frank.

On May 10, 1885, Mr. Newkirk engaged with the Pennsylvania R. R., first as fireman, later as car inspector and still later as fireman again, and then was freight brakeman for three months, and served as extra brakeman on a passenger train, following this until 1899, when he was appointed to his present position, which he is filling until a vacancy occurs as passenger conductor; his name heads the list of eligibles.

Mr. Newkirk married Lillie A. Porr, born at Shoemakersville, Berks county, a daughter of Jonathan Porr. They have had three children, namely: Ralph W., a stenographer, who fills a position as private secretary; Roy H., died aged four years; and H. Earl, at school.

Like his father, Mr. Newkirk votes independently, generally deciding for himself as to the merits of the various candidates seeking office. In religious belief, both Mr. and Mrs. Newkirk belong to the Lutheran Church. He is affiliated with a number of fraternal organizations in his line of work, being a member of Reading Council, P. O. S. of A., of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen (No. 511), of Philadelphia, and of the Pennsylvania R. R. Relief Association.

CHARLES F. GRAUL, who carries on a copper, tin and sheet metal working business, making a specialty of tin roofing, metal work, roof painting and roof repairing, with place of business at No. 905 North Ninth street, is one of Reading's enterprising young men. He was born April 20, 1879, at Reading, Pa., son of George Frank and Catherine (Stark) Graul.

Capt. Jacob Graul, the great-great-grandfather of Charles F. Graul, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, was a prisoner in 1776 and was exchanged in December of that year.

John Graul, the great-grandfather of Charles F., was born about 1783 and died at Reading, in 1858. He was buried in the Reformed cemetery but his remains were later transferred to the Charles Evans cemetery. His wife, Mary Byerle, was born in Europe and came with her parents to America, when twelve years of age. John and Mary Graul had the following children: John died unmarried; Henry m. Abigail Rush, and had one son, John, and one daughter, Joanna (m. William Behm, for many years was proprietor of the "Mineral Spring Hotel"); Samuel B.; and Elizabeth M. m. William Fricker, residing at Reading.

Samuel B. Graul, grandfather of Charles F., was born at Reading, Pa., June 27, 1801, and died in the same city, in 1880. He was a cabinet-maker by trade and for many years kept a hotel at Eighth and Washington streets, owning considerable property in that vicinity. He lived in what was called in those days the "Hounds Ward" and he kept many dogs himself and with them attended fox chases, a general sport of the time. He was very strict as to the morality of his public house and when the hour of nine came in the evening, it was his custom to say "Boys it is time to go home. I must close my place." He was a man of fine personal appearance and when but a boy served with General Keim, during the War of 1812, and later received a pension in acknowledgment of his services. He was a member of the Reformed Church. In political sentiment, he was a strong Democrat and his last vote was cast for Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, for President of the United States.

Samuel B. Graul married Sarah Maltzberger, born May 23, 1801, and died June 27, 1872. She was a daughter of John Maltzberger. They had nine children, as follows: William M., residing at Reading; Margaret, wife of Francis Melon; Peter, residing at Reading; Mary Ann, wife of William Sailor; Elizabeth, wife of Abraham V. R. Hill; Sarah, wife of Daniel S. Leeds; Emma, wife of John Hensel; Amanda, wife of John P. Dauth; and George F., who resided at Reading, until his death, Feb. 21, 1894.

George F. Graul was born at Reading, Nov. 21, 1845, and at the time of his death was aged forty-nine years, three months. After he left school he worked in the rolling mill until he was twenty-one years of age and then learned the tin and sheet metal trade and engaged in the same, employing eight or nine men in his shops. He married Catherine Stark, whose father and mother were born in Germany, and to them were born the following children: Samuel; Annie, who married John Nevin, of Reading; Catherine, residing in New York; Charles F. and Howard, both residents of Reading.

Charles F. Graul obtained his education in the public schools of Reading and was only eight years old when he became a newspaper boy and worked as such until he was ten years old, when he commenced to learn the tin and sheet metal trade with his father, whom he succeeded in business. Mr. Graul has successfully conducted a mechanical and mercantile business and assumed the care of his widowed mother and family from his fifteenth year to the present day. Mr. Graul now carries on a large business and keeps from five to seven men constantly employed. He carries a good line of stock including hot air furnaces. He has attained his success by hard work and attending strictly to business. He owns his own home and his place of business is one entirely adequate to his needs. He is a member of the Board of Trade.

For two and a half years Mr. Graul promoted physical culture work in the city of Reading. In the winter of 1905-06 he had a class of eighty men and boys to whom he gave army drill and gymnastic exercises. He has always been interested in the advancement of social and athletic teachings and a past master at waltzing, having captured first prize in all contests he entered from the year 1896.

Mr. Graul is married to Carrie, daughter of Joseph and Helen (Isele) Beil, of Germany. One daughter has been born to this union, Helen Marie, born Jan. 31, 1909. Mr. Graul is temperate in his habits and is of an aggressive disposition and has been so ever since he has attained his manhood. He has always been an active worker in the interests of the Democratic party. He is connected with the Fraternal Order of Eagles No. 66, Northeastern Democratic Association, the Reading Physical Culture Club of which he is president, Philharmonic Band Association and Excelsior Club.

SAMUEL M. GUSS, master mechanic of the Oley Street Mills of the Reading Iron Company, and an inventor of international reputation, is a well-known man in manufacturing circles in Berks county, Pa. He was born in 1840, in Chester county, Pa., son of Jacob and Sarah (Keiter) Guss.

Charles Guss, great-grandfather of Samuel M. Guss, and a celebrated mathematician of Germany, came to America in middle life, and settled near Phoenixville, Chester Co., Pa. He married Mary Shunk, a first cousin of Gov. Francis R. Shunk, of Pennsylvania, and both died in the faith of the Lutheran Church. Their sixth child, Simeon Guss, grandfather of Samuel M. Guss, married Barbara Knerr. The seventh child of this union, Jacob Guss, was the father of Samuel M. Guss.

Jacob Guss was a shoemaker and farmer all of his life, also serving as justice of the peace and surveyor. He died in 1883, at the age of seventy-one years, and his wife in 1893, when eighty-nine years of age. Ten children were born to Jacob and Sarah (Keiter) Guss, nine of whom lived to maturity: Mary A.; George W.; Catherine A.; Barbara A.; Frederick R.; Samuel M.; Henry F.; William E.; Jacob A.; and William, the first-born, who died in infancy.

Samuel M. Guss was educated in the schools of Chester county, and the Pughtown Academy, instituted by David Phillips, from which were graduated many prominent men. His first work was at farming, but later he learned the machinist's trade at Pottsville, and entered the employ of the Colliery Iron Works, of which George W. Snyder was at that time proprietor. He helped in the erection of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company's rolling-mills in October, 1868, and for seventeen years was in the employ of that company. He had charge of the P. & R. rolling-mill for fourteen years, and in 1895 was made general foreman in the erection of the Oley street rolling-mill, then took charge as master mechanic, and is at the present time foreman of the plate mill and master mechanic of the entire plant. Mr. Guss has the reputation of being a pioneer in the universal rolling-mill business, having erected several universal rolling-mills, including the Central Iron and Steel Company's mill at Harrisburg; and many of his inventions in this line are used extensively in America and Europe.

In 1869 Mr. Guss married Florence E. Grove, born in Franklin county, Pa., daughter of John and Rebecca (Hershberger) Grove. Nine children were born to this union: William E. C. C.; Laura R.; Charles S.; Florence E.; Carrie V. N. (m. Rev. William F. Klein); Lucretia M.; Herbert S.; Marion H.; and Samuel M., Jr. In religious belief, the family belongs to the Evangelical Association. Mr. Guss is a Republican in politics. He was a member of the International Centennial Association in 1876. In 1891 he erected his present comfortable home at No. 606 North Tenth street, Reading.

OSCAR L. WOERNER, of Reading, manufacturer of frames and dealer in art goods, has given about forty-two years of his life to Art, visiting the principal cities of Europe several times, and perfecting by education a natural taste that he might the more readily meet the requirements of the business founded by his father. He was born in New York City on Christie street, near Canal, at that time in the heart of the city, April 6, 1853, son of Francis and Louisa (Hofferberth) Woerner.

Francis Woerner was a native of Carlsruhe, Baden, Germany, where his early education was obtained, and where he learned the gilder's trade. He emigrated from Germany in 1848, and located in New York City, where he began the manufacture of gilt picture molding. He carried on the business there extensively until 1871, and traveled throughout all parts of the United States, making one trip to the Pacific coast via Cape Horn. He also did a considerable business in the City of Mexico. His factory was located on Williams street, where are now the abutments of the East River Bridge. He had three places of business—a factory at No. 98 Chatham street, and two retail stores at No. 277 Hudson street and No. 112 Duane street—at the same time. During the fifties and sixties he was one of the most extensive art dealers and manufacturers of molding in New York City. In 1871 he came to Reading, and he died Sept. 20, 1903.

Oscar L. Woerner was educated in the public schools of New York City and Jersey City, afterward taking a course in bookkeeping. He entered the employ of a large mercantile establishment in New York City, and there secured his first practical training in the business world. Entering his father's employ he learned every detail of frame manufacturing and gilding, and with him continued until 1871, when father and son came to Reading and began the making of frames and moldings at No. 637 Penn street, where George Graeff had formerly conducted a like business. They remained there until 1873, when Mr. Oscar L. Woerner went to Pittsburg, being one of the force of S. Boyd & Co., leading art dealers. This connection lasted seven months, when he went down the Ohio to Cincinnati, and accepted a position with the Exposition proprietors. After the close of the Exposition he spent a short time in Indianapolis. In 1874 he returned to Reading and formed a partnership with his father, and in 1875 he went to Easton, Pa., to open a branch, which was the first and only place of the kind there. Another branch was opened at Bethlehem, Pa., and these were all continued until 1881. In 1878 he met with the misfortune of having his factory burned (with no insurance), and after it had been completed only one month. On April 28, 1881, he sold out to A. A. Anthony, of Easton, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Woerner called upon Dr. Cattell, then president of Lafayette College, for a commission that he might be enabled to visit Europe. The Doctor had nothing, but told him to see Mr. John I. Blair. He did so and took his order for five three-quarter length paintings, at $1,000 each, to be painted by Angelo Woodward, of New York, in Paris. Sailing from New York April 28, 1880, on the steamship "England," with letters of introduction from Governor Hoffman, of New York, to various influential personages in Europe, he reached the other side, spent three weeks in London, afterward going to Paris, where he sojourned among artists for nine weeks, and then traveled on to Switzerland and Germany. At Geneva, in company with a member of a noble family, he purchased a knapsack and alpenstock and traveled by diligence and on foot over the Alps. In Germany he visited his father's old home in Carlsruhe. Returning to France, he made the trip down the picturesque and historic Rhine, and visited his mother's old home at Mayence. Upon reaching Paris he remained there but a short time, and then sailed for New York. He delivered the portraits to Mr. Blair, and made presentation speeches at Lafayette and Princeton Colleges, the guest of Dr. Cattell at Lafayette and of Dr. McCosh at Princeton.

Mr. Woerner went to Plattsburg, N. Y., and called upon Smith M. Weed, and received a commission to paint a portrait of the latter's daughter. He then went to Canada with letters to Sir John A. MacDonald and to Princess Louise, wife of the Marquis of Lorne. The latter was on the same vessel when Mr. Woerner left Kingston, as was also Prince George. The boat passed through the Lachine Rapids, at dusk, probably as late as any steamer has ever passed through. In Ottawa Mr. Woerner decorated the capitol library with reproductions of famous paintings, sculpture, etc. He also executed commissions for the Ottawa Conservatory. Going to Montreal he found patrons there. His letters to Sir John A. MacDonald brought about an introduction to many important persons. Among the places he visited may be mentioned Prince Edward Island, Halifax, Nova Scotia; and on crossing into this country he went to Boston, Mass., and thence to New York City, where he entered the employ of Herman Wunderlich & Co., where, in his own words, he "received his first and most profitable training in the art business." In 1884 he signed a contract with C. Klackner, one of the leading publishers of etchings and engravings, and for several years he traveled over the United States as "gentleman manager," giving exhibitions in San Francisco, Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles, and throughout the entire West. In 1888 he went to Europe and established the C. Klackner branch in London, England, traveling extensively through England, Scotland and Wales for about four months. While there he met personally many of the most noted painters of the world, and dined with Charles Sprague Pierce, Rosa Bonheur, Jules Breton and others; and met many distinguished in other walks of life, among them Levi P. Morton, then United States minister to France. Returning to New York he remained with Mr. Klackner until 1891. In that year, under contract with Mr. W. Scott Thurber, of Chicago, he made a third trip abroad, this time in the capacity of interpreter and professional assistant, with Paris as a prospective center, and they visited Belgium and Holland.

After his return Mr. Woerner came to Reading, and purchased his present property, remaining a year. He entered into a contract with Braun, Clement & Co., of Paris, known as Maison Braun & Co., and pioneered for them throughout the United States, and then performed a similar service for the Berlin Photographic Company. For two years he was employed by Franz Hanfstaengl, of Munich. In 1897 he again went to Europe, having been commissioned to open up the foreign market for the White, Potter, Paige Manufacturing Company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., the largest manufacturers of moldings and frames in the world. Before entering upon his duties he went to Spain, Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli, Sicily, spent two months in Rome, and visited Florence, Venice, Milan, Munich, Vienna, Berlin, Dresden, and in fact, all the large cities in Europe. In London he opened an office in the Masonic Temple, Farrington street, Ludgate Circus, Strand, and did an extensive business. A year later he was called home by the serious illness of his father.

Later Mr. Woerner formed a contract with Elson & Co., of Boston, and was the manager of their New York office for four years. During this time he decorated the high schools of St. Louis, Mo., Omaha, Nebr., St. Paul, Minn., and many others. He decorated three New York high schools at $1,000 each, the New York Teachers' Training School, the Horace Mann School of Columbia University and the Teachers' College. He also traveled with Prof. William G. Ward, of the Emerson School of Oratory, who lectured on Art for the schools under the regents of the State University of New York.

In 1901 Mr. Woerner settled in Reading and established his present business, which had really been opened up by his father, and he has shown himself worthy of being classed among the foremost citizens of Reading. He is a member of the Board of Trade. In his social relations he has made many friends. While in St. Louis he joined the Royal Arcanum, and has since transferred to Mt. Penn Lodge, Reading. He is a member of Teutonia Lodge, No. 367, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, R. A. M.; Lodge of Perfection, Reading; Reading Commandery, Knights Templar; Mystic Shrine; Reading Turn Verein; Philharmonic Band. He formerly belonged to the I. O. O. F and the K. of P. His religious connection is with St. James Lutheran Church.

In New York City, in Calvary Episcopal Church, Mr. Woerner was married to Miss Felicia Dypuis, a native of Ottawa, Canada. Mrs. Woerner is an artist of rare talent—a talent that was untrained and of which she was wholly unaware until her husband returned with her to Reading, and after regarding the works of others, especially amateurs, she determined to devote some time to art herself without any lessons. In a short time she produced very fine water colors and oil on canvas, and was offered good salaries by New York and Chicago parties. She has twice accompanied her husband to the Old World, visiting Algiers and Tunis, in Africa, Sicily, Naples, Rome, Florence, Venice, and many other art centers. At Munich they met the painter Lenbach, then executing a portrait of Emperor Wilhelm, and had commissions from Jules Breton, the famous genre painter, and Mrs. Woerner acted as interpreter in the sale of the latter's reproductions after having met him in Vichy, France. At St. Peter's Catholic Church bazaar in 1904 she received first honorable mention for the best original pen and ink sketch. She has colored some of the famous paintings of the day, and possesses a peculiar ability in reproducing delicate colors of landscape and natural flesh tints. She is a member of the Reading Art Society.

While abroad Mr. and Mrs. Woerner learned a secret method of cleaning old paintings and restoring them to their original appearance, and also of cleaning marble statuettes. Mrs. Woerner has proved of the greatest assistance to her husband in his Art Gallery. French is her mother tongue, but since her residence in Reading she has learned to speak English fluently.

From an article "True Merit Its Own Reward," prepared by Mr. Woerner, we quote the following facts concerning his most interesting career: "For thirty-three years I have devoted my time to Art here and elsewhere. Eleven years ago I conceived the idea of having an Art Exhibit in this city, to which amateur artists were invited to contribute their work, as exhibitors, offering prizes for the most meritorious specimens in various branches. The project found favor with many of our art lovers and was seconded by our local artists and others. . . . Several weeks ago one of our large churches concluded to have an International Bazaar for the purpose of liquidating the debt remaining on the church property. I suggested an Art Museum in connection with their various features of attraction. I shouldered the work, pushed ahead, and made it a success—for them. Prizes were awarded for best work exhibited, in deciding which Mr. Peter Moran, of Philadelphia, a well known artist and art critic of almost national reputation, kindly consented to visit us and act as one of the judges, in conjunction with artist Christopher Shearer and Mrs. Prizer. Mr. Moran was greatly pleased with the result of our work, and during his stay as my guest made many friends here. . . . .

"In 1888 I made my second trip to Europe on 'business bent.' By the way I had the honor of being the first man who dared to invade England and Scotland in company with an elephantine engraving trunk. . . . After visiting the principal cities of England, Scotland and Ireland, and while stopping in London, I received a telegram from San Francisco, 6,000 miles away, to establish an agency there. Surely that was the longest distance order I ever received. I carried out their design and saw it fairly started. In 1892 I joined the firm of the Berlin Photo Company, the pioneer company of the United States. In 1893 I returned to Reading and took possession of the place I now own and occupy. . . .

"In 1891 I made my third trip to Europe. I had then made an arrangement with W. Scott Thurber, the leading art dealer in the city of Chicago, in the capacity of interpreter and professional assistant with Paris as our prospective center. In our objective mission to see and, if possible, benefit by examining and studying the various styles of painting, we naturally drifted to Belgium and Holland, in order to become more familiar with the Dutch painters and their distinguishing features. During our perambulations we were naturally attracted to Larned, the noted rendezvous of Dutch painters. We . . . soon made the acquaintance of the then noted Offerman, Keever, Israels, Nuyhouse and others. . . .

"In 1897 I made my last trip to Europe, and my fourth. I wanted to become acquainted, not only with the topographical and historical features of the Continent, but to become more intimately familiar with the old, as well as with the modernized features of classical art, in what is generally considered its home. . . . . I extended my field of research and study into Africa. I tarried for a season at Algiers, Constantinople, Tunis, Tripoli and the Sicilian Island; gathered valuable information from all, and filled up my bouquet at Naples, Rome, Venice and Florence, which gave me many subjects of interest to write upon at some other time."

OLIVER L. NORTHEIMER, a contractor for stone work in Reading, is one of the well-known men in his line, and has done much important construction work in the city. He was born in Centre county, Pa., in 1866.

Jacob Northeimer, paternal grandfather, was in his earlier life a farmer in Chester county, but later moved to Lancaster county, and there died at the age of ninety-two years. By his wife, Barbara Garman, who died in Reading, aged seventy-nine, he had a family of whom are living, Andrew, of Lancaster county; and Nicholas J.

Nicholas J. Northeimer was born in Chester county, Aug. 17, 1830, and attended school both there and in Lancaster county. He then worked at farming a few years, and finally at the age of twenty-four, began to learn the stone mason's trade in Chester county. On Jan. 15, 1864, he located in Reading and was in business there till 1904, when he and his son Oliver L., worked for James W., another son. In 1870 he worked on the steeple of the church at Fifth and Court streets, the oldest and largest in the city. In the year mentioned he started for himself, and began his prosperous career of thirty-four years as a stone contractor. Among the many important structures on which he worked may be mentioned the tower on the Germantown M. E. church.

Mr. Northeimer was married in 1858 to Louise L., born March 9, 1833, daughter of William and Emma Jones, of Chester county. Their home is in Exeter township. Their children were: James W., in the stone contracting business, residing at No. 547 Weiser street; Mary L. S., the wife of Wilson Gehret; Annie M., deceased; John E.; Oliver L.; Clara A.; Emma B.; Mrs. Harry Wablin, of Mullins, S. C.; and Eva A., wife of James P. Althouse. Mr. Northeimer is a Democrat in politics, is a member of St. Paul's M. E. Church, and belongs to the Masons' Union.

Oliver L. Northeimer has lived in Reading from the age of two years, and was there educated. On leaving school he at first learned the barber's trade and followed it a few years, but at the age of nineteen he began working under his father, and continued so until he started to work for his brother, James W., in whose employ he still is.

On Oct. 17, 1900, Oliver L. Northeimer and Miss Emma B. Behm were united in marriage. Both are members of the M. E. Church. Mrs. Northeimer was a daughter of Jacob Behm, of Friedensburg, Pennsylvania.

JOHN E. NORTHEIMER, of the firm of Northeimer & Albrecht, practical plasterers, is a son of Nicholas J. Northeimer. He was born Jan. 15, 1865, at Bald Eagle, Centre county, and was only four years old when his father settled in Reading. He attended school in the Ninth and Laurel street school building and on leaving it took up the trade of plastering. He began in Reading but finished in Philadelphia, where he worked two years. Returning home he was employed as a journeyman for a time, and then in 1896 became one of the firm of G. H. Pearson & Co., a partnership which continued four years. For another four he worked again as a journeyman for Lambert & Rehr, after which, in 1901, he went into business for himself once more, with George Albrecht as a partner. They do a very large business, being among the leading men of the city in their line of work, and have handled such contracts as the large hotel, at Ninth and Penn streets, Clouser's Hotel, St. Paul's Memorial School, Grace Evangelical Church and St. Joseph's Hospital, besides doing all the work for the well-known builder, W. A. Sharp. In the last three years they have plastered 200 houses for him alone. The firm employs regularly from fifteen to twenty skilled men.

John E. Northeimer married Miss Mary Ann Krick, daughter of Henry and Matilda (Hetrick) Krick. Four children have been born to them, Charles Walter, James Clinton, Florence May, and Alva Frances. The family resides at No. 32 North Tenth street. Mr. Northeimer has been quite active in politics for the Democratic party, was assessor of the Eighth ward for three years and also served on the board. He is a member of the First Reformed Church. His name is on the membership roll of four fraternal orders, the Red Men, the Eagles, Sons of America and the Royal Arcanum. Mr. Northeimer is a fine business man and stands well among his associates and his many friends.

J. WALLACE R. McGOWAN, of the firm of John G. McGowan Company, who for a number of years was an officer in the Marine Service, was born in Reading, Pa., July 13, 1878, son of William G. and Catherine McGowan.

William G. McGowan, who died in 1887, aged fifty-four years, was for a long period one of Reading's well-known business men, being engaged in the hardware business both wholesale and retail. At one time he was a member of the Stichter Hardware Company, and later, with a Mr. Miltimore, founded the firm of Mc Gowan & Miltimore. Mr. McGowan and his wife, who died aged sixty-five years, were the parents of eight children, four of whom grew to maturity: Lizzie, a teacher in the public schools of Reading; Edwin, a clerk in the employ of the John G. McGowan Company; J. Wallace; and John G., deceased.

John G. McGowan was born in 1858 in Reading, and attended the public schools and later the high school, from which he was graduated. He was a member of the High School Alumni Association, and served on many committees. In 1885 he entered into a partnership with N. N. Sprecher at No. 537 Penn street, this being the nucleus of the present firm of John G. McGowan Company. A few years later he purchased his partner's interest and removed to No. 530 Penn street, and in 1899 into the Y. M. C. A. building. He was one of Reading's best known business men. He was a vocalist of more than local reputation and was a member of the Reading Choral Society, of which he was treasurer. He was elder and trustee of the First Presbyterian Church, also superintendent of the Sunday-school, to which latter position he had been re-elected just previous to his death. He was a member of the Reading Sabbath School Superintendents Association and the Berks County Sunday School Association; and for twenty-one years was a member of the board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. No man has ever been held in higher esteem by his fellow townsmen than he, and his death caused sorrow among a wide circle of friends.

J. Wallace R. McGowan graduated from the Reading high school in 1895, immediately after which he received an appointment to the Merchant Marine and United States Navy. He went aboard the Pennsylvania Nautical School Ship (manned by Naval officers) "Saratoga," discharging his duties for two years. Although Mr. McGowan did not graduate from the school-ship at this time, which was owing to the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, he received a discharge in lieu of a diploma, given each student of an equal rank. However, not satisfied with his diploma, he at the close of the war went back to the school-ship and took up a post-graduate course, completing his work second in the class.

While the Spanish-American war was in progress, Mr. McGowan served under Admiral Sigsbee, then captain of the "St. Paul." Later, Mr. McGowan entered the employ of the Red Star Line, between New York and Antwerp; was also with the Quebec Steamship Company and several other Trans-Atlantic liners. In January, 1904, he accepted the rank of second officer on the Pacific mail liner "Mongolia," then the largest ship under the American flag in the world. He joined at the Camden shipbuilding yards, N. J., taking her on her first voyage, via the West Indies and Strait of Magellan, to San Francisco. On his arrival at San Francisco he received a commission on the Pacific Mail steamer lines. Having discharged his duties successfully on the "Mongolia," he joined the "Manchuria." On this steamship he made numerous voyages along the Western coast, frequently anchoring at Mexican and Central American ports, among which were: Guatemala, Honduras, San Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Panama.

While the "Manchuria" was making her trips to China, Mr. McGowan, on one of these, became acquainted with the Taft party. Taking them aboard this vessel, he transported them to port at Honolulu and Japan, stopping at Yokahoma, Kobe, Nagasaki, thence to Manila. While in Panama at the time of the celebration of the Panama Liberty, Mr. McGowan again met Secretary Taft, Colonel Edwards, head of the Philippine commission, and Governor Shontz, who had then control over the canal zone.

The home port during his entire career on the Pacific Coast, was San Francisco. Had Mr. McGowan reported back for duty at the end of his furlough, he would have been in the midst of the great earthquake and conflagration there, being scarcely a month away from that city. On his return, via the Southern Pacific, he passed through many of the districts damaged by the earthquake, stopping at San Jose, Santa Barbara and Los Angeles. From these towns he traveled through the fruitful vineyards of southern California; thence across the desert-like sands of Arizona, arriving at Tucson. A few days later he reached El Paso, a town near the Mexican border noted for its variety of architecture, and then passing through San Antonio, Tex., he came to the lowlands of Louisiana, and then on to Reading.

Since locating in this city Mr. McGowan has been connected with the John G. McGowan Company. Mr. McGowan is a member of the Reading Board of Trade, the Washington Library Club, Brotherhood of the Union, the Alumni of the Pennsylvania Nautical School, and of the Masters and Pilots Association of San Francisco.

NATHANIEL HEILIG, for twenty-five years one of the trusted employes in the Philadelphia & Reading blacksmith shops, whose death occurred in Reading Jan. 16, 1906, was born in Berks county, Pa., Oct. 30, 1838, son of Francis Heilig, a native of Pike township. Francis Heilig had a forge in his native township, where he lived for many years, but late in life came to Reading, where he died. He was the father of eight children,—three girls and five boys.

Nathaniel Heilig received his education in the public schools, and at an early age worked for his father at the forge. In 1870 he came to Reading, engaging at the blacksmith trade in the P. & R. shops, where he was employed for twenty-five years, being at the time of his retirement one of the oldest employes of his department. After retiring Mr. Heilig spent his remaining years in quiet at his home. He was buried at Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Heilig married Caroline Rohrbach, daughter of George Rohrbach of Berks county, and she survives him and resides in Reading. Their children were: Priscilla, wife of Frank J. Boyer, the well-known publisher of Reading, who is also extensively interested in mining ventures, resides in Reading, and has had children—Ellen P., Howard, James H., Irvin, Florence, Harry, William, Edward and Charles (who died in infancy); Francis, a machinist employed by the P. & R. Co., resides at No. 1049 North Eleventh street, and married Katie Angstadt; and Elmer, who is also a machinist at the P. & R. shops, (married) resides at No. 1036 North Eleventh street, Reading.

Mr. Nathaniel Heilig was very well known in his community, and his death was a severe loss not only to his family, but to a large circle of warm friends. He was a member of the Ebenezer Evangelical Church.

REUBEN DREXEL (deceased), for many years an esteemed resident of Reading, Pa., and an honored veteran of the Civil war, was born at Boyertown, Berks county. His parents were natives of Germany, and for a time resided in England. Reuben's father was a brick-layer by trade, and on coming to Reading located at Ninth and Chestnut streets, where his death occurred. His mother also died in this city, and both were buried in the Lutheran cemetery. Five children were born to this couple, the only daughter dying in England, while the others, who all died in this country, were: John, William, Jacob and Reuben.

Reuben Drexel attended the public schools of Reading, having come to that city when a boy. After leaving school he became an apprentice to the bricklayer's trade, which he followed throughout life, dying in Reading in 1890; he is buried in the Lutheran cemetery. Mr. Drexel married Anna A. Swartz, daughter of Owen S. and Julian Collins Swartz, the former a well-known contractor in brick in Reading, where he died. Mrs.

Swartz died in Churchville, Berks county. To Mr. and Mrs. Drexel were born these children: George W., a hatter by trade, married (first) Lulu Brubaker, and (second) Stella Herr, resides in Reading; and Julian, single, resides at home.

Mr. Drexel was a veteran of the Civil war. Enlisting first in the three months' service, he was honorably discharged and veteranized in Co. H, 88th P. V. I., serving in every engagement in which that company participated. He was a gallant soldier, was wounded in the neck (from which he always bore a scar), served his country faithfully, and had a war record of which any man might feel proud. His death was a distinct loss to the community in which he resided.

GEORGE K. SHOUP, of Reading, engaged in conducting a grocery and notion store, was born in Lebanon Co., Pa., Jan. 28, 1852, son of Samuel and Anna (Krick) Shoup, and a grandson of John Shoup.

John Shoup settled in Spring township, Berks county, where he followed farming all of his life. He married Elizabeth Huyett, also a member of one of Berks county's old families, and they became the parents of Daniel; John; Abraham; Richard; Mary, who married Samuel Graul; and Samuel. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Shoup were connected with the Reformed denomination. He was a Democrat. Mr. Shoup died at the age of ninety years; he and his wife are interred at the old Sinking Spring cemetery.

Samuel Shoup was reared upon his father's farm, and received his education in the common schools of Berks county. After marriage he removed to Lebanon county, where he purchased a farm, and there continued all of his active life, locating in Sheridan after his retirement, twenty years prior to his death in 1880 in his sixty-seventh year. His wife died July 3, 1893, aged seventy years, in the faith of the Reformed Church, of which he was also a member. Prior to the Civil war Mr. Shoup was a Democrat, but after that struggle became a Republican. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Frank, retired, of Reading; John, deceased, was a farmer and general merchant at Sheridan; and George K.

George K. Shoup was educated in the common schools and until he was eighteen years of age worked on a farm. In 1877 he came to Reading, and engaged with E. W. Landis on Sixth street, with whom he remained about four and one-half years, at the end of which time he returned home. The following spring he opened a grocery at the corner of Fifth and Laurel streets, and since that time has been located here. His long residence in this locality, and his straightforward manner of doing business, as well as his well known honesty and integrity, have served to gain for him the confidence of the community, and to insure him a good, steady trade. Mr. Shoup was married (first) in 1882, to Miss Alice Seltzer, who died in 1883. Mr. Shoup's second marriage was in 1893 to Clementine Geiger, and one son, George Stanley, was born to this union.

Mr. Shoup is a member of the First Reformed Church, while his wife attends St. Peter's M. E. Church. Politically he is a Republican.

HUGO EICHLER, brewmaster for the well-known brewing house of P. Barbey & Son, Reading, Pa. is a native of Dresden, Germany, born Sept. 29, 1853, son of August and Mary (Lenhart) Eichler, the former of whom, a prosperous tanner and currier of the old country, died there in 1894, aged sixty-six years. Of the nine children of August and Mary Eichler, three came to America, Hugo, Richard and Helen. The family are Lutherans.

Hugo Eichler received his education in Germany, and in 1869 was employed in a brewery in that country as an apprentice to the brewmaster, remaining there until he had mastered the art of brewing. In 1881 he came to America, and from New York City, where he had landed, he proceeded at once to Cincinnati, O., accepting a position with one of the largest breweries of that section, remaining there six years. On his return to New York City he was employed as brewmaster by a large house there until 1900, in which year he came to this city, accepting his present position with the above named firm. Mr. Eichler is an expert in his line of business, and he has few superiors in the brewing of ales, lager and porter.

Mr. Eichler was married in Germany to Bertha Werdorf, and two children have been born to this union: Freda and Elizabeth.

Mr. Eichler and his family are connected with the Lutheran Church. In political matters he is a Democrat. He is very popular in fraternal circles, and is connected with Teutonia Lodge, F. & A. M.

CHARLES A. HARBACH, jeweler, of Reading, was born in this city, March 8, 1869, a son of Reuben M. and Lydia R. (Kantner) Harbach, a grandson of Jacob and a great-grandson of George Harbach, who came from Germany to America and settled in Berks county at a very early day. Since that time the Harbach family has been closely identified with Berks county affairs. He married Margaret Weinbigler, and they had four sons, namely: Jacob, John, Peter and another whose name is not known.

Jacob Harbach, the grandfather of Charles A., was one of the extensive farmers in the vicinity of Leisz' Bridge, Berks county. He married Sarah Moyer, of Myerstown, by whom he had the following children: Matilda; Daniel; Florian, now living in Virginia, a soldier in the Civil war; Frank; and Reuben, father of our subject, Wellington being the youngest member of a family which has all passed away with the exception of Florian.

Reuben M. Harbach was born Jan. 6, 1843, at Reading and was educated in the best schools of the city at that day. When he was deemed old enough he was sent to live with a Mr. Madeira, a farmer in Tulpehocken township, where he remained until eighteen years old. Then he returned to Reading and apprenticed himself to the painting and paper-hanging trade, with John Hollenbach, whose establishment stood on the present site of the "Farmers Hotel." After completing his trade he was anxious to enter into business for himself although he had but little capital. Finally he associated with H. K. Gittelman and they opened a shop in the basement of the Reading Trust Co. building, on the corner of 5th and Court streets, where they remained five years. By that time the business had outgrown the quarters and they removed to No. 32 North 5th street, where they operated the largest store in that line in Reading. Mr. Harbach was in the business up to the time of death. From an almost humble beginning he had built up a large and important business house and had acquired a substantial fortune. The firm of Gittelman & Harbach became widely known.

The death of Reuben M. Harbach took place Feb. 1, 1902. His wife died Feb. 23, 1901, aged fifty-four years, ten months and twenty-eight days. They had issue as follows: William H., deceased, m. Maggie Stieff and they had one son, Robert; Darius died in infancy; Charles A., of this sketch; Edward J., a druggist doing business at Schuylkill avenue and Oley street, m. Lillie Strauss and they have two children, Marguerite and Adelaide; Sarah, deceased; Carrie G., deceased, m. Paul McKnight and they had one daughter, Grace; Irvin, in the employ of the D., P. & L. Ry.; and Sadie m. Bayard Dunckel, has one child, May.

Reuben M. Harbach was a prominent member of the various branches of Masonry, belonging to Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 52; De Molay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; and the A. A. O. N. M. S. of Reading. He belonged also to Emblematic Lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F., and Reading Encampment No. 43, I. O. O. F. and to the Reading Hose Fire Co. Politically Mr. Harbach was a stanch Republican. He belonged to the First Reformed Church at Reading.

Charles A. Harbach was educated entirely in the schools of his native city and after his education was completed and he was ready to begin his business life, he entered the woolen mill of J. G. Leinbach, going then to the Harbster Hardware Works, and then entered the employ of J. C. Luden, jeweler. He was then located on North 5th street and with him Mr. Harbach served out the usual apprenticeship, deciding to make this his line of work. He then went to Philadelphia where he remained for three years and on returning to Reading, was connected for a year and a half with E. B. Schlecter and subsequently with J. M. Burkhart. Since Mr. Burkhart sold his jewelry business to I. A. Deisher, he has continued with the latter. He is a careful, experienced workman and has ample patronage.

In November, 1892, Mr. Harbach was united in marriage with Ida M. Kepner, who is a daughter of David and Emma Kepner, old residents likewise of Reading. To this union one child has been born, Paul E., a student in the Reading schools.

Like all the members of his family, far back, Mr. Harbach is a consistent member and liberal supporter of the Reformed Church, his attendance being with the congregation of the First Reformed Church at Reading. He is a member of Emblematic Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Reading.

JOHN WEIDNER, a retired citizen of Reading, Pa., living at No. 114 Walnut street, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Nov. 30, 1838, son of John and Sarah (Mowrey) Weidner.

John Weidner, the father, was a farmer in Exeter township, and was a well-known and much respected citizen. He married Mrs. Sarah Kline, a widow, who had had by her first marriage three children: Mary, who married Solomon Stoudt; Amanda, m. to Dr. John Marshall, and Al., who lost his life in an accident in Iowa, having been a locomotive engineer. To Mr. and Mrs. Weidner were born three children: John; Sarah, second wife of Solomon Stoudt; and Elizabeth m. Frederick Fritz. In religious belief the family were Lutherans, while Mr. Weidner was politically a stanch Democrat. Mr. and Mrs. Weidner are both deceased.

John Weidner received a common school education, and left the home farm to work for William Brumbach, in his woolen mill. Later he came to Reading and engaged in work at the J. G. Leinbach woolen mill, where he learned weaving, carding and spinning. He was there over twenty-five years, and earned the respect and confidence of his employer, having a clean, honest record.

Mr. Weidner was married to Mrs. Angeline Everet, the widow of William Everet, who had one child, Nora, residing at home.

In 1861 Mr. Weidner enlisted in Captain Schraeder's Company C, 7th P. V. I., for three months service and served faithfully. He has been a member of the Rainbow Fire Company for many years, and is also connected with the Veteran Firemen's Association and Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R.

JOHN P. GERHART, of Reading, assistant engineer of the Reading Paper Mills, was born Nov. 18, 1857, in North Heidelberg township, Berks county. He is a grandson of John Gerhart, also a native of North Heidelberg township, who lived and died there, and is buried at Hain's Church. He married Catharine Brossman, and they had these children: John, Daniel, Peter, Elogius, and Mrs. Adam Lerch. John Gerhart made his will Dec. 3, 1872.

Elogius Gerhart, father of John P. Gerhart, was born at the old homestead in North Heidelberg township, and in time became the owner of that place, which comprised eighty-six acres of good land. He followed farming all his life. He died in 1872, aged fifty-three years, and is buried at Hain's Church, with which he had been identified as a Reformed member, serving as deacon and elder of the congregation. He married Annie Heck, daughter of John Heck, and she died in 1862, at the age of forty years. They were the parents of two children, Sarah (widow of Francis Ruth, living near Robesonia) and John P.

John P. Gerhart attended the Lengel school during his boyhood and early began to do farm work, which he followed until his removal to Reading. For a period of twenty years he was thus engaged in North Heidelberg township, where he still owns the farm which was formerly the property of his grandfather and father, in turn, the tract of eighty-six acres previously mentioned. In his possession are some very old and valuable deeds relating to the ownership of this farm, one of which, dated March 18, 1737, conveyed a certain tract of land in the county of Lancaster, Heidelberg township (now Berks county), from Thomas and Richard Penn to Thomas Davis. Another, dated April 28, 1770, records its transfer in the township of Lebanon and county of Lancaster from Henry Stohr and his wife Rebecca to John Brossman; and one of March 13, 1822, from Joseph Obold and wife to John Gerhart. John P. Gerhart came into possession of the place in 1880.

In 1903 Mr. Gerhart moved to Reading, and he has since rented out his farm. During his residence in the city he has been employed at the Reading Paper Mills.

Mr. Gerhart married Arabella Deisher, daughter of William and Sarah (Stoyer) Deisher, and four children have been born to this union: Esther married Mathias Deck and lives in Reading; Florence is unmarried; Leon is attending school; a son died in infancy. The family reside at No. 123½ South Sixth street, where Mr. Gerhart owns his own home. He is a member of the Hains Church with which so many of his family have been identified, and in politics is a Democrat.

G. WILSON MILLER, the proprietor of the "Hotel Miller," located at the corner of Seventeenth and Cotton streets, Reading, Pa., was born Sept. 11, 1871, near Trexlertown, Lehigh county, Pa., son of John and Elizabeth (Moyer) Miller, the former a native of Lehigh county, and the latter of Reading and a daughter of the late Philip Moyer of Berks county.

G. Wilson Miller attended the public schools of his native county, and later came to Berks county, locating at Reading, where he completed his education. He commenced working when but nine years of age, driving a horse and cart at an ore mine in Lehigh county during the summer months, and after leaving school he worked for a few months at printing. At the age of eighteen years he learned the stove moulding trade at the Mt. Penn Stove Works, Reading, in the employ of which company he continued until 1902, as a journeyman. In September, 1904, Mr. Miller became the proprietor of the "Hotel Miller," which he has conducted to the present time, with much success. Since coming to Reading from Lehigh county, Mr. Miller has been a resident of Cotton street, and he is very well known and exceedingly popular. He is a member of Union Fire Company No. 13, of Reading, of the Association, and of the Uniform Bank, and is also identified with Friendship Commandery No. 247, Knights of Malta. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church.

On April 15, 1893, Mr. Miller was married to Emma Spatz, and they have these three children: Edna E. and Sarah S., twins, and Helen M. Mrs. Spatz is a daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Tobias) Spatz, of Exeter township, and granddaughter of Abraham and Catherine (Lorah) Spatz, who lived above Jacksonwald, in Exeter township. There the grandfather died in 1879, aged eighty-four years less one day. He and his wife had three children, namely: Sarah, who is single; Ephraim (died in 1908) and Jacob, both of Exeter township.

The Spatz ancestors were Revolutionary war patriots and performed noble service for the freedom of their country. John and DeWatt Spatz, brothers, were both captured by the British in the Revolutionary war, and family tradition has it that one of them gave the silver buckles on his shoes for bread, when he was nearly starving as a prisoner.

HOWARD F. BALTHASER, a butcher at Reading, was born in Upper Bern township, Aug. 3, 1860, son of Jacob Balthaser (3), grandson of Jacob (2), and great-grandson of Jacob Balthaser (1).

Jacob Balthaser (1) was an extensive farmer in Upper Bern township, owning some four hundred acres of fine land, and he was very well known throughout that section both for his handsome appearance and for his habit of driving in a very high wheeled, high-seated buggy, often taking his wife to church in that vehicle. He is buried at St. Michael's Church in Tilden township. He married Molly Greth, daughter of Nicholas Greth, of Windsor, and they had children as follows: Sarah, who married Jacob Boyer; Hannah, who married Jacob Renno; Jacob; John, born in 1814, who died in Windsor township; Mary, who married Benjamin Sunday; George, born in 1824, who died in 1899; William, who settled in Ontelaunee township; Isaac, who was drowned in boyhood; Elizabeth, who married John Baer; Susanna, who married Edwin Kauffman; Jeremiah, who remained in Upper Bern township; Samuel; and Benjamin, who lived on the homestead.

Jacob Balthaser (2), son of Jacob, was born in Upper Bern township, and died in Lower Heidelberg, being buried at Bern church, of which he was a member (Lutheran). He removed from Upper Bern to Penn, thence to Lower Heidelberg in 1858, and there at the time of his death he owned a farm of 112 acres. He married Sarah Kauffman, who bore him thirteen children, as follows: Cornelius, of Bern township; Caroline, who died aged fifty-six years; Jacob, of Bern township; Sarah, who died unmarried aged twenty-one years; Henry, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township; Charles, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Bern township; Lovina, who died aged fourteen years; George, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg; Emanuel, who resides in Reading; Moses K., now living retired in Reading; Louisa, who married Adam Heck; and Elizabeth and Rosabella, twins, the latter of whom died in infancy.

Jacob Balthaser (3), son of Jacob (2), and father of Howard F., was born in Upper Tulpehocken in 1843, and he died Nov. 4, 1905, at the age of sixty-two years. His interment took place in Bern township cemetery. He owned a farm of sixty-eight acres in Bern township, to which he devoted his active years, until his removal to Reading to engage in the butchering business; this latter he carried on some fifteen years. He returned to his farm in Bern township before his death. He married Lena Faust, who now resides in West Reading. Their children were: Howard F.; John; Thomas; Sallie, who married Alvin Becker; Jacob; Emma, who married Howard Noecker; Franklin, deceased; William; and one that died in infancy.

Howard F. Balthaser was educated in the public schools of Reading. At the age of nine he began driving for the United Traction Company, remaining with them two years. He then when twelve years old began to learn the butcher business with Henry Hoover (now deceased), and is still in the employ of Hoover & Son, a brother-in-law of the original head of the firm conducting the business. Mr. Balthaser resides at No. 1150 Chestnut street, in his own home. He married Miss Norma Rambo, daughter of Joseph and Mary A. (Young) Rambo. They have no children. Both Mr. Balthaser and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church. He is connected, fraternally, with the P. O. S. of A., No. 89, and K. G. E., No. 51, both of Reading.

JOHN A. BEHNEY, foreman of the gas furnaces and gas processes of the Carpenter Steel Company at Reading, was born Oct. 15, 1858, at Monroe, Lebanon Co., Pa., a son of John and grandson of Michael.

(I) Michael Behney was a cooper by trade and owned a fine farm which he cultivated. On it were two houses. His death occurred about 1868, and was occasioned by his falling from the barn, when he was nearly eighty years old. He is buried at Fredericksburg, in Lebanon county. His wife was Sarah Bashore, who died after the Civil war, an old lady. Their children were: John; Lydia who married John Hoch; Sallie who married Augustus Belleman; Ephraim of Lebanon; Emanuel of Elwood; Lewis of Johnstown; Jeremiah who was a soldier in the Civil war, and met his death through starvation in Libby prison three days before the wretched prisoners were released.

(II) John Behney, son of Michael and father of John A., died Aug. 13, 1894, aged sixty-five years, his birth having occurred in Lebanon county about 1829. He was an iron worker and was employed in a forge owned by the Weidman family for about forty years. He resided in the neighborhood of Orion, now Lickdale, in Lebanon county. Religiously he was a Lutheran and is buried at Pottstown, where he spent the last dozen years of his life, and where he died. His wife was Kate Anspach, born June 7, 1835, daughter of the late Henry and Sallie (Leininger) Anspach of Monroe, and granddaughter of Leonard Anspach. Mrs. John Behney has a family picture of herself surrounded by her nine grown sons, which is prized very highly by them all. She now resides at No. 332 Hollenbach street, Reading, and is much beloved.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. John Behney were: Henry, an iron worker of Reading; Mary, who married Samuel Simon Hoch of Jonestown; Sallie married Dr. Harry Miley of Mount Nebo; John A.; George of Pottstown; Richard of Reading, an iron heater; Charles of Reading who lives with his mother; William of No. 335 Hollenbach street, Reading; Harper L. of Norristown; Joseph at Norristown; and James A. G. at Pottstown.

(III) John A. Behney was reared at Lickdale and Monroe and learned iron working. When he was sixteen he commenced working in the iron works, and has never changed his occupation. In 1895 he came to Reading from Harrisburg and after working at the Carpenter Steel Plant for five years he was made superintendent of the department. At Harrisburg he was in the employ of Charles L. Bailey as a heater in his iron industry. In April, 1903, Mr. Behney purchased his present cozy and pleasant home at No. 636 Schuylkill avenue, where he resides. In politics he is a Republican; fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen and P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 212 of Reading. He and his family are members of St. Mark's Reformed church of Reading.

In 1879 Mr. Behney married Mary Ellen Gonder, of Dauphin county, a daughter of John and Mary Gonder, also of Dauphin county. Mr. and Mrs. Behney had one daughter, Minnie, who died at the age of sixteen years.

WILLIAM KAUCHER, of Reading, Pa., who has been in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for more than a quarter of a century, was born in 1847, in Centre township, Berks county, son of Leonard and Mary (Freeman) Kaucher.

John Kaucher, the grandfather of William, was born in Germany, and on coming to this country settled in Bern township, where the rest of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He and his wife, whose name is not known, were the parents of these children: William, Mrs. Sarah Stump, Mrs. Mary Spatz, Mrs. Betzy Steele, and Leonard. Leonard Kaucher was born in Bern township and in early life learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed all of his active period, his death occurring in 1864, in his fortieth year. He was a member of the National Guards at one time. John Kaucher married Mary Freeman, and to them there were born ten children: William; Eliza, who married Daniel C. Tobias; Sarah, who married John Bowman; Charles, who married Emma Keller; Samuel, of Reading, who married Amanda Lutz; Leonard, and four who died in infancy. In religious belief the family were Reformed.

Tobias Keller

William Kaucher was reared in Bern and Centre townships, where his education was obtained, and until 1880 worked in the ore mines of his community. In 1881 he came to Reading and accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, which position he has held to the present time. Mr. Kaucher is a faithful workman and has earned the esteem and respect of his employers as well as his fellow-workmen.

In 1871 Mr. Kaucher was married to Sarah Ann Clay, a native of Centre township, and to them there have been born ten children: John A., Franklin W., George W., Jacob H., James L., Elmer M., Calvin M., Debbie A., Mary S. and Nora A. In religious belief the family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Kaucher is a member of the P. & R. Relief Association, and a Democrat in politics.

S. EDWARD LANDIS, whose plumbing establishment and place of residence are located at No. 605 North Ninth street, Reading, is a well-known business man of this city, where he was born June 14, 1877. His parents were Samuel W. and Maggie V. (Ramsay) Landis. The father was also born in Reading and he resides at No. 625 North Eleventh street.

S. Edward Landis obtained his education in the public schools of his native city, and then entered upon an apprenticeship with Frank Miller, at the plumbing trade, working for him for four years. In 1898, Mr. Landis opened a shop of his own, utilizing a part of the cellar of his father's residence. He easily proved to customers that he was a quick and reliable workman which resulted in an increase of trade that necessitated larger quarters. He first moved to No. 608 North Ninth street but later removed to his present place of business. Here he has a fine location and a well equipped shop, where he carries a large line of gas fixtures and plumbers' supplies. He is enjoying a large amount of profitable business.

In 1902 Mr. Landis was married to Emma M. Bell, daughter of Samuel Bell, a prominent citizen, and they have one child, Ruth B. Both he and his wife are members of the First United Evangelical Church.

Politically Mr. Landis is a Republican. Fraternally, he is a member of the Knights of Malta and is a past commander of the Knights of the Mystic Chain, and belongs also to the order of Maccabees. Along business lines he is united with the Master Plumbers' Association.

WILLIAM M. HIGH (HOCH), one of the highly respected citizens of the Eleventh ward, Reading, is a veteran of the Civil war, and for thirty-nine years has been in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, as carpenter. Mr. High was born April 4, 1837, in Richmond township, Berks county, son of Daniel Hoch.

Philip Hoch, grandfather of William M., was born in Oley township, son of Casper Hoch, and followed farming in Richmond township, where he had 400 acres of land. He married (first) a Miss Luckenbill, by whom he had two children: Samuel and Daniel. To Mr. Hoch and his second wife there were born children as follows: Joel; Hannah, who married Tyson Stitzel, brother of the late Judge Stitzel; Mrs. Samuel Barnt; Mrs. Samuel Merkel, whose husband was at one time county treasurer of Berks; and Mrs. Daniel Kaufman.

Daniel Hoch was born in Richmond township, and there spent his entire life engaged in agricultural pursuits, his death occurring in his fifty-ninth year. He married Miss Catherine Merkel, who died when fifty-two years old, and to them were born seven children as follows: John M., Hettie, Catherine, William M., Susan, Solomon, who died at the age of twenty-seven years, and an infant daughter.

William M. High (Hoch) attended school in Richmond township, and until sixteen years of age worked on a farm, then learning the carpenter trade, which he followed at Fleetwood for three years as an apprentice. He traveled for two years in the Eastern States and then went West, returning home, however, in December, 1860, and remaining until the following spring, when he enlisted in Company D, 12th Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves, remaining with this company three years. He then went to Washington, D. C., and was employed in the Navy yards for nine months, then re-enlisting in Company K, 2d Regiment, Hancock's Reserve Corps, in which he served one year. He had many experiences while in the service of his country, being wounded Sept. 17, 1862, at the battle of Antietam. He was also at Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Gettysburg and many other big battles of the war, being in thirty-two engagements, and his record is that of a faithful, cheerful and gallant soldier.

In 1871 Mr. High returned to Reading, Pa., and engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, being for seventeen years foreman of bridge-building for that company, a concern with which he has since been connected. In 1880 Mr. High built his comfortable residence in the Eleventh ward, where he is well known and highly esteemed. He is a member of G. A. R. Post No. 16 and the P. & R. Relief Association, and in his political views is a Democrat. He is a member of St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at Tenth and Windsor streets, where for six years he served as vestryman.

Mr. High was married (first) to Mary Catherine Beard, daughter of Henry Beard, and she died Oct. 31, 1901, aged sixty-nine years, without issue. Mr. High's second marriage was to Maggie Wickline, daughter of Samuel and Mary E. (Fry), whose death occurred June 17, 1906, also without issue.

SOLOMON R. YODER, of No. 1352 North Tenth street, Reading, Pa., who has been an employee of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for over twenty years, was born in 1865, in Muhlenberg township, Berks county, son of Solomon and Mary (Rothermel) Yoder.

Solomon Yoder, father of Solomon R., was a farmer all of his active life in Muhlenberg township, and his death occurred in 1891, in his sixty-third year, his wife passing away in September, 1871, when in the forty-second year of her age. They were the parents of seven children; Sarah, who married Adam Schmeck; Mary, who married Samuel Heist; Hannah; John, m. to Hannah Medler, daughter of Edward Medler; Daniel m. Susan Borrel, daughter of Daniel Borrel; Solomon R.; William m. Emma Ruth, daughter of Henry Ruth.

Solomon R. Yoder was educated in the schools of Muhlenberg township, and until twenty-two years of age worked on his father's farm. In 1887 he came to Reading and accepted a position as boilermaker with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, in whose employ he has continued to the present time. Mr. Yoder is a Democrat in politics, and fraternally he is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and the P. & R. Relief Association. On July 31, 1887, Mr. Yoder was united in marriage with Miss Ida V. Wertz, daughter of Franklin and Magdalena (Becker) Wertz, and to this union there have been born two children; Ella, who died in July, 1906, at the age of eighteen years; and Carrie, at home. Mr. Yoder is a member of the Reformed faith, while his wife is a Lutheran.

AUGUST ABRAHAM, who has lived retired from active business life since 1904, was for many years employed with large business concerns of Reading. Mr. Abraham was born Sept. 20, 1840, in the Province of Preussen, Belyard, Germany, son of Christoph Abraham.

Christoph Abraham was born in 1803, in Grünawald, Preussen, Germany, and died in 1870, at Warnen. He had two daughters who died young, and five sons, namely: Carl, Herman and Heinrich of Germany; August of Reading; and Ludwig of Milwaukee, Wis.

August Abraham attended the schools of his native locality from six to fourteen years of age, when he commenced working on farms at various points. He left Hamburg May 1, 1872, for America, locating at New York June 5th of that year. He then came to Reading and found employment in the pipe mill, where he worked for thirty-two and one-half years, but since 1904 has lived retired. In political matters Mr. Abraham is a Democrat. He and his family are members of St. John's German Lutheran Church of Reading, and the children were educated in the parochial school. Since 1875 Mr. and Mrs. Abraham have resided in their own home, No. 622 Maple street, and they also own the residence at No. 569 South Eleventh street, where their son, Augustus, lives.

On Nov. 18, 1865, Mr. Abraham was married to Wilhelmina Zick, born Oct. 28, 1839, daughter of Johan and Louisa (Klabunda) Zick, farming people of Preussen, Germany, and to this union there were born seven children: Amelia m. John Einsel, of Reading; Bertha m. John Lutz, of Reading; Joanna m. Frank Collins, of Reading; Augustus m. Helen Ehrnst; Wilhelm died at the age of fourteen years; Johan died young; Albert died when three years of age.

PHILIP DEHART, of Reading, Pa., who for a number of years has been closely identified with the rolling mill business in this section, has been living retired since 1902. Mr. Dehart was born Dec. 28, 1843, in Alsace township, Berks county, Pa., son of Gilbert and Lydia Ann (Borgert) Dehart.

Jacob Dehart, the great-grandfather of Philip, married Susanna Knabb, daughter of Nicholas and Susannah. He was a farmer and land-owner in Oley, Alsace and Exeter townships, these farms having been originally owned by his father-in-law. He was at one time considered very wealthy and owned much real estate. His son, John, grandfather of Philip, married Polly Harner. John Dehart was a weaver and farmer, spending the latter years of his life in agricultural pursuits on a property now owned by his son, Amos, in Alsace township. Here he died in 1869, aged about 100 years, his wife passing away in 1860, when eighty-six years of age. They had the following children: William; Rachel; Jacob Briner; Abraham; Gilbert; David; Jeremiah; Jacob; Amos, living at the age of ninety-four years; Lydia, who married Joel Bechtel and lives in Birdsboro; Mary, who married John Babb; Annie, who married Samuel Trout, and John, all being deceased except Amos and Lydia. Mr. Dehart was a Whig in politics.

Gilbert Dehart was the proprietor of a paper mill at Stony Creek, and was also a millwright, following the latter occupation the greater part of his life. His last work was done on Dunkle's mill, and his death occurred in 1881, in his seventy-second year, his wife surviving until 1898, when she died, aged eighty-five. They had five children: John, Frederick, Philip; Susan, who married Frank Stautler, and Barbara, who married Samuel Jones. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Dehart was a Republican.

Philip Dehart received his education in the schools of Berks county, and for a time worked at distilling. He then secured employment in the Reading rolling mill, where he remained several years, then going to Hamburg, where the next two and one-half years were spent. Mr. Dehart's work was then continued at Sternbergh's mill, where he remained for a period of twenty-nine years, he retiring in 1902, since which time he has been engaged in looking after his real estate interests. Mr. Dehart owns seven houses, a good deal of city property, and a seventy-six acre farm.

In 1864 Mr. Dehart was married to Matilda Bridegam, daughter of William Bridegam, and they had three children, all of whom died in infancy. In politics Mr. Dehart is a Republican.

WILLIAM H. HENDRICKS, who has been engaged in the coal business in Reading, Pa., at Nos. 332-334 Canal street, since the spring of 1906, was born Sept. 30, 1853, in the city of Reading, son of Joseph and Sally (Kistner) Hendricks.

William H. Hendricks was educated in the schools of Reading, and as a boy was employed as a mule driver on the old Schuylkill Canal. From time to time he was promoted, finally becoming a captain of a canal boat, and later leased boats, doing a freighting business for several years from the coal mines to Reading. In the spring of 1906 Mr. Hendricks purchased his present coal yard, which is one of the finest in the city, and the capacity of which is 3,000 tons. Mr. Hendricks continues to lease canal boats, which bring his coal direct to his yards, he being the only dealer in the city who gets his coal direct from the anthracite fields.

On February 15, 1879, Mr. Hendricks was united in marriage with Miss Lillie A. Long, daughter of Charles Long, and to this union there have been born four children: Joseph and William, deceased; Harry, who is his father's assistant; and Sally, who became the wife of Samuel Loose. Mr. Hendricks has become well known in Reading where he bears a reputation for honesty and integrity. He is independent in his political views.

IRVIN E. HEPLER, of Reading, Pa., who conducts a grocery at the corner of Pear and Walnut streets, was born May 20, 1870, at Hepler, Schuylkill county, son of John K. and Harriet (Keller) Hepler.

John K. Hepler was born in Upper Mahantango township, Schuylkill county, Pa., and there received his education in the common schools. When a young man he engaged as a farm hand, and continued at that occupation until seventeen years of age, when he became clerk in a store. At the age of twenty-three years he engaged in a general merchandise business, continuing therein for two years, when he embarked in the cattle business, shipping from Chicago, and later from Buffalo. For four years he was extensively engaged in this line, and from that time on he was variously engaged. He died June 2, 1906, aged fifty-eight years, nine months. Mr. Hepler was married in 1869 to a daughter of Peter Keller, and eight children were born to this union, as follows: Irvin E.; Laura, deceased; Curtin H.; Winfield, deceased; Charles H.; Katy May, deceased, Martha, and one who died in infancy. In religion Mr. Hepler was a member of the Reformed Church. He was a Democrat politically, and a member of the Order of American Mechanics.

Irvin E. Hepler was educated in the schools of Ashland, Pa., and when a boy was employed in the coal mines, being engaged ten years as a breaker. He was then employed in W. H. Bright's lumber yard at Ashland for two years, when he went to Frackville and engaged with Seaman & Co. in a general store as clerk for eight years. In 1897 Mr. Hepler went to Ashland and engaged in the baking business, continuing therein for five and one-half years, and in 1903 removed to Reading, purchasing the D. K. Hoch store and stock at his present location. Mr. Hepler's business has been constantly on the increase. He carries a full line of meats and staple and fancy groceries, is agent for several leading bakeries and also engages in the buying and shipping of produce. He is possessed of much business ability, and has won the confidence and patronage of the community.

Mr. Hepler was married in 1895 to Bertha Beard of Frackville, and to this union there have been born five children: Blanche A., Marian E., Laura B., Ruth E. and Bertha E. In religious belief, Mr. Hepler is a member of the Reformed Church. Politically he is a Democrat.

Charles Beard, Mrs. Hepler's father, was a native of Hamburg, Berks county, and a blacksmith by trade, and at the time of his death was living at Frackville. He married Emma Adams, also a native of Hamburg, and they became the parents of seven children: Elizabeth, who married Charles Maurer, has four children, Marian, Lillian, Walter and Douglas; Bertha, Mrs. Hep-ler; Lillian G.; Estella; Emma, who married Elwood Gunther, who was killed in a railroad accident June 1, 1906, leaving her with three children, Gladys, Allen and Dorothy; Laura, who married Samuel Wingert, has one child, Ruth; and Lydia. In religious belief the family are members of the Evangelical Church.

ALBERT KEPPELMAN, a well-known resident of Reading, Pa., who is serving as assistant superintendent of P. Barbey & Son's Brewery, was born in this city Feb. 19, 1865, son of John and Christiana (Meyer) Keppelman.

Albert Keppelman received his education in the common schools of Reading, and when a young man entered his father's employ, the elder Keppelman operating a foundry and machine shop at that time. Learning the machinist's trade, young Keppelman followed it for some years, but in 1886 accepted a position with the firm by which he is now employed, as shipping clerk, a position which he held for some years, then being advanced to his present capacity. Besides attending to his regular business duties, Mr. Keppelman has found time to devote to music, of which he is a great lover, he being an exceptionally talented violin player. He assisted in the organization of the Germania Band and Orchestra, of which he is still a member, and when a boy he traveled for two years as musical director of Col. Hall's Pavilion Show. Mr. Keppelman is very fond of, and takes a great interest in, the children, and was the founder of the Juvenile Parade for the amusement of children on the Fourth of July. The older people as well as the children attend this parade largely, the former seeming to find as much amusement in the proceedings as the little ones. The children are all served ice cream and pretzels after the ceremonies are over, and cash prizes are given those who make a special effort at costuming.

Mr. Keppelman was married in 1889, to Miss Catherine F. Schrader, of Reading, daughter of Henry O. Schrader, and three children have been born to this union: Henry S., with the P. & R. Co.'s drafting department; Margaret H.; and Catherine C. Mr. Keppelman and his family are members of St. James Lutheran Church. In political matters he is a Democrat, and he is connected fraternally with the Royal Arcanum and the American Order of Steam Engineers.

A. B. MOORE, of Reading, engaged in the contracting business, was born in May, 1838, in Chester county, son of James and Mary (Knowles) Moore, and is a descendant of a long line of Scotch-Irish ancestors.

David Moore, grandfather of A. B., was an early settler of Chester county, where he engaged in farming and milling, accumulating considerable property. He married a Miss Kay, and they became the parents of three children: Caroline, Elizabeth and James. In religious matters the family were connected with the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Moore was a Whig in politics, but is not known to have taken more than a good citizen's interest in public matters. James Moore, his son, was born in Chester county, and early in life took to agricultural pursuits, an occupation which he followed all of his active career. Very enterprising and progressive he became more than ordinarily successful, and at the time of his death, in 1864, was the owner of 1,100 acres of valuable land. James Moore and his wife were buried at the Presbyterian Church (of Fairview) cemetery, in Chester county, they having been members of that congregation.

After receiving his education in the schools of Chester county, and at West Chester Academy, A. B. Moore engaged in farming, and at this occupation he continued until 1869, in which year he located in Reading and was appointed to the position of officer on the city police force. He continued in this position for eight years, and at the end of this time engaged in contracting on public works and for corporations in the city, and has proven very successful in this line, at which he is at present engaged. Mr. Moore is politically an unswerving Republican, and is considered a strong man in his community by the party leaders. For four years he has served as a member of the Common Council from the First Ward. He is fraternally connected with the I. O. O. F. and K. G. E. Lodges, the I. O. R. M., Patriotic Sons of America, and the Reading Iron Company Beneficial Association. He is a member of the First Baptist Church of Reading.

Mr. Moore was married in February, 1861, to Miss Priscilla Benner, a native of Chester Co., Pa., and three children have been born to them: Elmer E., engaged in the retail coal business in Reading; Edwin A., president of the United Coal, Coke and Gas Construction Co.; and May K., a saleslady at Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart's establishment in Reading.

JOSEPH I. McCULLOUGH, of Reading, was born in that city Aug. 23, 1876, a son of Michael McCullough.

Michael McCullough, born in 1834, was a welder by trade and was employed for a number of years in the Seyfert & McManus foundry. Later in life he went into the hotel business, locating at Nos. 542-544 South Seventh street, and was thus engaged till his death in 1899. He married Miss Margaret Clingaman, who died seven years before him, at the age of fifty-five. Of their nine children four died in infancy, and the others were as follows: Daniel F., deceased; Anna C.; Mary, deceased; Joseph I.; and John, deceased. The family belonged to St. Peter's Catholic Church. The elder Mr. McCullough was a prominent politician, of more than local importance. An active worker for the Democratic party, he had many warm friends in his ward and was sent as representative to both branches of the city council, serving at one time as its president. From 1872 to 1874 he sat in the State legislature, and made a good record there. Mr. McCullough was one who saw service during the Civil war, having enlisted in the Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, for three months.

As a member of a devout Catholic family, it was natural that Joseph I. McCullough should have received his education in the parochial school of St. Peter's parish. After his student days were over he went to work for the Reading Iron Company and was employed by that concern for three years. At that time his father had opened his hotel and the son became his clerk, working in that capacity till the death of his father. Thereafter he conducted the place himself for a few years, but May 1, 1902, sold out. He then filled a clerical position till 1905, when he went into business for himself once more. He carried on a cigar store and pool room, with two tables, located at No. 644 Bingaman street, and during the two years in which he managed it did a very good business.

In addition to the demands of his daily occupation Mr. McCullough has found time for considerable political work and is prominent in the Democratic ranks in Reading. In 1902 his services were recognized by election to the select branch of the city council, in which he was the youngest member ever sent to that body. He continued in that position four years, giving his constituents efficient service. Mr. McCullough is a member of the Liberty Fire Company, having joined that organization in 1898.

The union of Mr. McCullough in 1900 to Miss Rosa T. Albert, the daughter of George F. Albert, has been blessed with seven children, Paul M., Mildred R., Margaret E., Leonard J. and Gertrude A., surviving, and Gerald A. and Joseph I., Jr., deceased. Mr. McCullough has ever adhered to the faith in which he was brought up and he and his family are connected with St. Peter's Church.

AARON S. STUPP, of Reading, who has lived on Front street since 1901, was born Nov. 28, 1861, in Marion township, Berks county, son of William and Elizabeth (Lechner) Stupp.

Martin Stupp (Stup), the ancestor of this family, was one of the early Tulpehocken settlers, coming thither from the Schoharie, in New York. He died in the early part of 1755, and his will was probated March 18th of that year by Peter Stein and Samuel Weiser, on the oath of Conrad Weiser the great patriot and Indian interpreter. The executors of this will, which was a German document, were his wife Susanna Stupp, Abraham Laucks and Martin Battorff. A daughter, Magdalena Stup, was married according to the records of Christ's Church at Stouchsburg, Pa., Nov. 13, 1748, to Abraham Schneider, who was a son of George Daniel Schneider, the ancestor of that numerous family.

Leonard Stupp, the great-grandfather of Aaron S., died at his farm, and is buried at the Corner Church. He owned 300 acres of valuable land in Heidelberg township, where he spent all of his life engaged in agricultural pursuits. His children were: Eva, who married Benjamin Hain; and Johannes.

John (Johannes) Stupp, the grandfather of Aaron S., died at the old farm, on which he had spent all his life in farming. He was buried at the Corner Church, of which he was a member. He married Sarah, daughter of John Eckert, and they had these children: John died single, aged eighty-three years; Ezra, of Myerstown, is eighty-two years old; Beckie m. Jacob Keller, and is eighty; William; James m. Hannah Hibshman; Mary m. Jesse Reinhold; Eliza m. Joseph Leiss; Susan m. Lewis Miller; and two children died young.

William Stupp, father of Aaron S., was born in 1834, and died Nov. 9, 1906, being buried at Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church, beside his wife. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned the old homestead of ninety-three acres in Marion township. In earlier life Mr. Stupp was an official of the Corner Church, but later became a member of the Tulpehocken Church. He married Elizabeth Lechner, and they had two children: Morris J. and Aaron S.

Aaron S. Stupp was reared to agricultural pursuits, and worked for his parents until reaching his majority, when for three years he engaged in farming on his own account on the homestead in Marion township, and in 1887 went to Stouchsburg, where he engaged in the restaurant business and also conducted a saloon for one year. For three years he lived with his father in Marion township, and in 1901 he came to Reading, where he has since been employed in a cigar factory. He now resides in his own residence at No. 267 North Front street, which he purchased in the spring of 1907. Mr. Stupp is a Republican in politics. He and his family are members of Christ Evangelical Lutheran Church of Marion township, where the family have a nice burial lot and large monument. Fraternally he is connected with the Ancient Order of Good Fellows No. 42, and the P. O. S. of A. No. 237, both of Stouchsburg, and the Order of Progressive Americans No. 1, of Reading.

In 1881 Mr. Stupp married Sallie Peiffer, daughter of Edward and Caroline (Behney) Peiffer. Their children are: Carrie L. m. Albert B. Pleis, a painter of Reading; Howard F., a salesman of Reading; and Grant U., a barber of Reading.

ALBERT ROTH, school director and farmer of Bern township, Berks Co., Pa., was born Dec. 2, 1867. He attended the township schools, was reared to agricultural pursuits, and has made that vocation his lifework. He owns a good farm of fifty acres in Bern township, and this is kept in a fine state of cultivation. Mr. Roth attends the Reading market once a week. For several years he was employed in the car shops at Reading. A Democrat in politics, Mr. Roth was elected a school director of Bern township on that ticket in 1908. In religion he is a member of Epler's Reformed Church, in which he has served as deacon; and fraternally he is a member of Castle No. 503, Knights of the Golden Eagle, of Leesport.

In 1887 Mr. Roth married Kate Reeser, daughter of Levi Reeser (mentioned elsewhere), and they had one daughter, Edna, who m. Peter Spayd and is the mother of one son, Norman.

EDWIN G. RUTH, county treasurer of Berks from 1903 to 1906, and a leading and representative citizen of Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 3, 1858, in East Cocalico township, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Francis and Magdalena (Gehret) Ruth.

Peter Ruth, the great-great-grandfather of Edwin G., was a farmer by occupation, and operated along the Cacoosing creek, in Heidelberg township. To him and his wife, Catherine, were born fourteen children: Michael, Jacob, Christian, Peter (1764-1819), George, John, Henry (Sept. 6, 1799-1855), Francis, Catherine, Mary, Barbara, Eve, Magdalena and Margaret. The father of these children died in September, 1771. His son Francis Ruth, who died in 1809, married a lady whose first name was Elizabeth, and they had eleven children: Elizabeth; John; Henry; Christian; Catherine; Magdalena; Isaac; Mary; Jacob; Peter; Elizabeth and Rebecca. Of this family, Christian was born April 20, 1781, in Berks county, and when a young man removed to Lancaster county, in the vicinity of Denver, where he carried on farming. His first wife was a Kurtz, and by her he had six children: Peter; Mary; Henry; Elizabeth; Francis and Caroline. He married (second) Susanna Ludwig, and to them were born four children: Nathan; John; Jacob and Catherine. Christian Ruth died in 1847.

Francis Ruth, father of Edwin G., was born in East Cocalico township, Lancaster county, in 1815, and was there reared to farming. About 1860 he removed to Berks county, where he died in 1899, his wife also being eighty-four years old at the time of her death in 1903. He married Magdalena Gehret, and to them were born children as follows: Isaac, who married Mary Holl; Elizabeth, who married John Dundore; Harriet, who married John Baer; Susanna, who mar- Adam Emich; Magdalena, who married Aaron Gaul; Peter, who married Annie Ebling; John, who married Anna Zerr; Amanda, who married John E. Moyer; Francis, who married Sarah Gehret; Jacob, who married Hannah Hain; Sarah, who married Lewis E. Spohn; Edwin G.; Carolina, who married James Shoup; and three who died young.

During Edwin G. Ruth's infancy his parents removed to Berks county, locating in the eastern section of Heidelberg township, near Hain's Hill. He was educated in the local schools and in the Womelsdorf Academy, and was reared to farming on his father's place, where he remained until he became of age in 1879. He then engaged at farming for himself and continued until his election to the office of county treasurer, when he gave his entire attention to his official duties from 1903 to 1906. Previously he officiated as a school director of Lower Heidelberg township for nine years, in which time he assisted in erecting nine township school buildings. He has taken an active interest in Hain's Church for many years, serving as deacon and as elder. He assisted in organizing the Wernersville National Bank and became one of the directors on the board.

Mr. Ruth was married to Emma Moyer, daughter of John and Mary (Degler) Moyer of Heidelberg township, and to this union there have been born five children: Tillie Emma, who married Dr. Conrad S. Reber; Edna; Katie; Laura, and one child which died young. Tillie and Edna were graduated from the Keystone State Normal school, the latter being a teacher of the public school in Spring township; and Katie took a special course in the Parisian school of tailoring and designing at Philadelphia, from which she was graduated with the highest honors.

JOHN WOOTTEN was a native of England, born Feb. 24, 1842, at Willenhall, Staffordshire. He was the son of Enoch Wootten, who was born in 1814, and emigrated to America in 1847, making the voyage in a sailing vessel, and located at Reading, where for many years he was an employee of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, in their shops, and later was on the road between Reading and Pottsville. He died at Reading Oct. 7, 1898, aged eighty-four years. He was a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M. His wife was Elizabeth Appleby, daughter of John Appleby, of England. Of their children there are still living: Ann, of Willenhall, England; and Mrs. Samuel Russel, of Reading.

John Wootten was but a boy when the family came to this country, and he early learned his father's trade, that of a locksmith. Shortly after the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted in Company A, 88th Pa. V. I., and served until September, 1864. His regiment was assigned to the 2d Brigade, 2d Division, 5th Corps, Army of the Potomac. Among the engagements participated in by him may be mentioned: Cedar Mountain, Thoroughfare Gap, Second Bull Run, Chantilly, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Wilderness, Laurel Hill, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Bethesda, White Oak Swamp, Ream's Station and Petersburg. During one of the battles he was captured by the enemy, but he escaped and rejoined his regiment; and toward the close of his term of enlistment he was wounded in the left hand. When Mr. Wootten returned home, upon his honorable discharge, he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and for thirteen years worked on the East Penn branch as brakeman and fireman. He was of an industrious and economical disposition. In his religious belief he was of the Evangelical denomination. He was an active and highly respected member of McLean post, No. 16, G. A. R., and of the Union Veteran Legion, No. 43.

On Jan. 9, 1866, Mr. Wootten was married to Margaret A. Spotts, by whom he had twelve children: Annie, m. to Samuel Kalbach, of Reading; Elizabeth; Harriet, widow of James Binns; Mary, m. to Henry Palm; Helen at home; Margaret, m. to Harrison Koch; Harry E., at home; and five, who died young.

Michael Spotts, grandfather of Mrs. Wootten, was born near Leesport, Berks Co., Pa., and later in life went to Union county, where he died at the age of ninety years. His wife was Magdalena Robinson.

Reuben Spotts, son of Michael and the father of Mrs. Wootten, was born near Leesport, and accompanied his parents to Union county. He later moved to South Dakota, where he died. He married Amelia Hassenplug, daughter of Henry Hassenplug, of Mifflinsburg Union County, and his children were: Margaret A., Mrs. Wootten; Michael, who died in the army; Harriet, m. to Franklin Lusk, of South Dakota; and Charles, who died in Iowa.

WILLIAM M. SNYDER, of No. 151 West Oley street, Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the insurance business, was born in 1860, in Perry township, Berks county, son of Joel C. and Maria (Mervine) Snyder.

Isaac Snyder, grandfather of William M., was a representative agriculturist of Perry township, where his whole life was spent. He married Kate Graeff, and to them were born the following children: James G., William; Joel G.; Sophia, m. to Charles Steffy; and Katie, m. to Daniel Wiest. In religious belief he was a Lutheran.

Joel G. Snyder was born in Perry township, and there was engaged in farming until 1894, when he engaged in the huckstering business, his present residence being in Shoemakersville, Pa. Mr. Snyder was united in marriage with Maria Mervine, and to them there were born children as follows: Irvin P.; Charles E.; William M.; Mabel A., deceased; and May. Mr. Snyder is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Knights of Malta. He is independent in politics, and in his religious belief is identified with the United Brethren Church, attending Christ Church of that denomination.

William M. Snyder was educated in the schools of Perry township, after leaving which he engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, for two years. Mr. Snyder then learned cigar making, at which he was engaged for four years, when he sold out and purchased a pool room and cigar store at the corner of Schuylkill avenue and Oley street, which he successfully conducted until 1906, when he sold out to engage in the insurance business, which he has carried on to the present time.

On Oct. 28, 1899, Mr. Snyder was married to Sallie M. Baer, daughter of David and Sarah (Miller) Baer. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder attend the Reformed Church. In political matters he is a Democrat.

HARVEY D. KISSINGER, proprietor of the "Krick House," situated at No. 670 Schuylkill avenue, Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 13, 1868, in Bern township, Berks county, son of Adam and Sarah (Lengel) Kissinger.

Johan Kissinger, great-great-grandfather of Harvey D., was a native of Germany. He owned a farm in Alsace township, Berks county, Pa., above what was known as "Close's Hotel," the property now being owned by the Ebling estate. His two children were: John and Betsy. The latter did not like her adopted country, and suddenly disappeared, nothing being heard from her until after the death of her father, when she returned, after the estate had already been settled. Her share was paid her, however, although it almost caused the financial embarrassment of her only brother, John. Johan Kissinger was buried in the private burial ground in what is now Muhlenberg township, near Brooks Locks, or the Carpenter Steel Works.

John Kissinger, great-grandfather of Harvey D., lived in Alsace township, where he carried on agricultural pursuits, owning a tract of thirty acres of land. He was buried in the family burial ground. His children were: Abraham, Lydia, John, Jacob, Samuel, Solomon and David.

Abraham Kissinger, grandfather of Harvey D., was born in 1800, in Alsace township (now Muhlenberg), and died aged thirty-seven years, being buried in the private burial ground on his farm. He married Hannah Schmaltz, daughter of Christopher Schmaltz, and they had four children, as follows: Daniel and Henry, who both died aged one year; Hannah, m. to Amos Gaul; and Adam.

Adam Kissinger, father of Harvey D., was born July 31, 1833, in Alsace township, and was reared to farming, an occupation which he followed until twenty-one years of age, at which time he went to work in the brick yards and there continued for three years. For twelve summers he was employed in work on the Schuylkill canal, and from 1870 until 1904 tended the Kissinger Locks on the canal, coming to Reading in the latter year, since which time he has been living at No. 800 Schuylkill avenue, with his nephew, Morris Ruth, whom he reared from infancy. In 1854 Mr. Kissinger was married to Sarah Lengel, who died June 21, 1890, aged fifty-seven years. They had the following children: Emma, Rebecca, Henry, Harvey D., Jacob and Hannah (m. to William Hinnershitz).

Harvey D. Kissinger accompanied his parents to the Kissinger Locks when two years of age, and lived at home until his marriage in September, 1887. For seven years he was employed at the American Iron & Steel Company's plant, then known as Sternbergh's, and for five years he was in the employ of the Keystone Rolling Mills, after which he worked at brick-making until being engaged as bar clerk with P. Monroe Krick, his brother-in-law. In the spring of 1905, Mr. Kissinger succeeded Mr. Krick, who retired, and he has continued to conduct the "Krick House" to the present time with much success. In addition to his hotel, Mr. Kissinger owns several houses in the Fifteenth ward. He is a popular member of the Schuylkill Fire Company and the Bar Tenders' Association.

Mr. Kissinger was married to Mary A. H. Krick, born Dec. 18, 1870, daughter of Levi J. R. and Mary (Hinnershitz) Krick, and she died April 27, 1904, aged thirty-three years, four months, nine days. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kissinger, namely: Arthur L., born April 1, 1888; William H., July 28, 1901; and Mamie Catharine, May 3, 1898.

MORRIS P. BROWN, one of the successful manufacturers in the special line of artificial limbs, in particular the ventilated skeleton limbs, has been in business in Reading since 1904, at No. 412 Schuylkill avenue. He was born Feb. 29, 1856, in Hamlin, Lebanon county, son of William and Priscilla (Price) Brown.

William Brown was an extensive shoemaker and manufacturer in Lebanon county in his day, and was prominent in political matters, holding a number of township offices, to which he was elected on the Democratic ticket. He and his wife were Lutherans in their religious belief. They had six children: John; Amanda, m. to Aaron Steiner, of Jacksonville, Lebanon county; Emma, m. to William M. Etris; Susan, m. to John Henninger, of Reading; Elizabeth, m. to Harry Miller, of Reading, and Morris P. William Brown died in 1899, aged seventy-one years, and his wife the same year, being aged seventy-two.

Morris P. Brown was educated in Lebanon county, and at the age of twelve years started to learn the shoemaker's trade with his father, completing his first pair of custom shoes at the age of thirteen years. He continued this work until 1886, when he turned his attention to railroading, becoming baggage agent at Phoenixville, Pa., continuing in the employ of the company for four years, when he entered the Phoenixville Machine shops, where he worked for several years. At the end of this time he removed to New York, where he worked in Mark's artificial limb factory for two years, then going to Philadelphia. At this city he continued in the same line for several years, but in 1892 came to Reading to engage in the manufacture of shoes. In 1902 Mr. Brown engaged in selling flour and feed, and continued at that line until 1904, when he began his present business—the manufacture of ventilated skeleton limbs. Mr. Brown is now considered one of the leaders in his line of work, his product comparing favorably with any on the market.

In 1876 Mr. Brown was married to Amanda J. Newcommet, and to this union there have been born six children: Paul N., Miles N., Esther N., Luther N., Harry N. and Hattie N. Mr. Brown is a member of the Foresters of America and the K. O. T. M. Politically he is a Democrat.

LEVI A. BROSSMAN, employed at the outer depot in the baggage department of the Reading Railway, has been a resident of Reading since 1886, and has occupied his present home, No. 517 Gordon street, Reading, since 1893. He was born in Lower Heidelberg township Oct. 14, 1855, and was brought up on his father's farm, where he continued until he was twenty-eight years of age. He was educated in the township schools and at Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy, Reading, and was licensed to teach in the public schools of Berks county by Prof. S. A. Baer. He taught his first school at Wernersville, in the Frey school. He then taught one term at Brownsville, in Lower Heidelberg township. In 1881 Mr. Brossman moved to Breiner's farm on the pike above Wernersville, where he lived one year, and then moved farther down to Levi Gaul's farm, where he lived two years. In 1884 he moved to the Blue Marsh where he conducted an eighteen-acre truck farm for two years. In 1886 he came to Reading, and he is now employed, as above stated, at the outer depot in the baggage department of the Reading railway. He is a member of Washington Camp, No. 560, P. O. S. of A. He is a member of St. Daniel's Lutheran Church near Robesonia.

Mr. Brossman married Mary Dengler, daughter of John and Rebecca (Spangler) Dengler, and granddaughter of John Spangler, of Strausstown. They have had five children, of whom two, Ross Calvin and Winebert M., died in childhood. The survivors are: Jennie, Lem and Ralph. They are highly respected.

ELI FRITZ (deceased) was, for fifty years one of the best known residents of lower Berks county, having for that period operated what is known as "Fritz's Mill" in Douglass township, located on the Ironstone creek.

John Fritz (also spelled Fritts) is on record in Douglass township as being a taxable in 1759. He was the first ancestor of the family in this country.

John Fritz, Jr., died in 1843, leaving a wife and some children, the will mentioning only a son Ephraim, who was given the plantation in Douglass township.

John Fritz, grandfather of Eli, was a farmer of Douglass township during his lifetime. He owned and lived on the farm now owned by James Fisher. In his will, which is on record in Will Book 10, page 448, his wife Sarah was bequested the farm of 106 acres. Their family consisted of the following children: Samuel, David, Joseph, John, Catharine (m. Frederick Hallman) and Sally (m. Isaac Keiser). The father of this family lived to a very ripe old age, dying in 1858.

David Fritz, the next in line, was also a farmer in Douglass township owning and cultivating the old homestead now belonging to James Fisher. During his lifetime he erected "Fritz's Mill," which remained in the family until 1908, at which time it was sold to Jacob Yorgey, who now continues to operate it. David Fritz married Nellie E., daughter of Jacob Kaiser, and their children were as follow: Eli; Matilda, m. to Christian Yorgey; and Mahlon, residing on Fox Hill, Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

Eli Fritz was born about Pottstown, Pa., Feb. 1, 1831. He was reared to farm life, and learned milling in his father's mill, over the operations of which he continued to preside for a full half-century, from about 1857 until his death, July 29, 1907. In this position he became known all over this section, and he was quite active in the public affairs of his locality serving in different township offices. He was a stanch Democrat in politics. He and his family were Lutheran members of Emanuel Church, otherwise known as Kutz's Church, of Pottsgrove township. The family burial plot is in the cemetery at Pottstown.

Mr. Fritz married (first) Catharine Riegner, who died young. In 1867 he married Lovina Y., daughter of Peter and Anna (Yoder) Levengood, of New Hanover township. Mrs. Fritz was born in the year 1839, and received her education in the old "pay" school, German only being taught. Since the death of her husband she has passed most of her time in Reading, with her daughter Ida T., Mrs. Henry B. Nuss. Mr. and Mrs. Eli Fritz had also a son James L., who now resides in Reading.

Henry B. Nuss, son-in-law of Eli Fritz, was born Nov. 14, 1867, in Lower Macungie township, Lehigh county, son of William and Emeline (Bortz) Nuss. William Nuss (son of John) came about 1877 to Longswamp township, Berks county, where he continues to reside. His wife died in 1908. They had children as follows: Hiram, Henry B., Ella, Mary, James, William, Charles (who perished in the Boyertown fire Jan. 13, 1908), Minnie and Elmer.

On Sept. 7, 1889, Henry B. Nuss married Ida T. Fritz, and they have had children: Henry W., Emma Z., George L. and Marion L.

CHARLES R. HARTMAN, of Perry township, Berks county, whose fine dairy farm is situated near Shoemakersville, was born across the township border in Windsor township, April 15, 1866, son of Jacob and Rufena (Reber) Hartman, and a descendant of John Hartman, for whom Hartman's Spring was named.

John Hartman was born in 1713, in an ancient farmhouse near the beautiful and historic city of Reutlingen, Wurtemberg. When a young man he married Magdalena Swartz, and they lived happily together on the old homestead for several years. Mr. Hartman had a maternal uncle, Frederick Schoener, who had gone to America and settled in Pennsylvania, and from whom the Hartmans had received letters. One of these letters, addressed to the young man's father, was as follows, and was read and re-read by the young married man: "Heidelberg, Berks Co., Pa., June 17, 1753. —To George Hartman, near Reutlinger, Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany. Dear brother-in-law: This is to inform you that we are all well and well pleased with America. We live in a good land, where everything is plenty, and we have schools and churches. I hope you will come to this promised land. We live about four German miles from Reading. If you write, address as above. Yours in brotherly love, Frederick Schoener."

This letter made a lasting impression on John Hartman's mind, and he decided to go to America. After sixty-four days of tedious voyage, he and his family arrived at Philadelphia, June 20, 1754. Seeking for some weeks an advantageous location he decided to go to Reading, and thence to some point near the Blue mountains. He had four children, all born in Germany: George, Barbara, Regina and Christian. They left Philadelphia about the last of June, with a farmer who was to take them in his four-horse wagon to Heidelberg, Berks county, near where Conrad Weiser lived. On reaching their destination they learned that the persons whom they sought had crossed the Blue mountains, and Mr. Hartman was advised to do so also by an old soldier, and this he and his family accordingly did. For about twenty-seven pounds he purchased an old wagon and two horses, and in this they journeyed until they arrived at the spring where the crystal water poured in profusion, the site of Orwigsburg. Here in the solitude of the forest, which was at that time included in the county of Berks, this much forgotten pioneer family lived religiously happy. The only books that constituted their library were a Lutheran Catechism, a Bible and a German hymn book. An almost daily scene was the happy family seated by the hearthstone, reading the Bible and singing the old German hymn: "Allein, und doch nicht allein, bin ich," etc. In English:

"Alone, and not alone am I,
Though in this solitude so drear;
I feel my Savior always nigh;
He comes the weary hours to cheer;
I am with Him and He with me,
E'en here alone I cannot be."

This section of Pennsylvania was frequently overrun by the Indians, who had been incited to bloody deeds by the French after the loss of the Canadian territory. Hence, during the French and Indian war, the few scattering inhabitants contiguous to the Blue Mountains were often alarmed. At breakfast on the morning of Oct. 16, 1755, Mr. Hartman's wife said: "Well, John, you know the flour is all gone, and some one must go to the mill. You are seeding the last field, and suppose you let Christian go, I will go with him, for I have long since promised to go over and see Mrs. Swartz." She was permitted to go and George and his father finished seeding that day. Mrs. Hartman and her son started through the dense forest to the mill, the present site of Schuylkill Haven. Barbara, aged ten years, and Regina, aged nine, were left to take care of the household. While they were seated around the table their faithful dog, "Wasser," came running in. Hartman seized his rifle, but fifteen Indians entered the home, killed Hartman and his son George, while Barbara and Regina were made captives, and the house was laid in ashes.

It was never known what became of Barbara, but Regina was given to an old Indian woman, who sent her into the woods to hunt roots and herbs, and when she did not get enough she was beaten. In 1764, Col. Boquet conquered the Indians, and peace to them was granted on the condition that all the white prisoners should be given to him. More than 400 were brought to him, and among them was Regina, now about nineteen years old. The colonel took the children to Carlisle and had it printed in the newspapers that the parents of children who had been taken captive by the Indians, should come and see whether they were among them. Several thousand husbands and parents went hundreds of miles in hope of meeting lost wives or children. When Regina's sorrowing mother got to Carlisle she did not recognize her daughter, as she had grown up, looked, dressed and spoke like the Indians. The woman went up and down among the captives weeping and could not find her child. Col. Boquet asked her whether she recollected nothing by which her daughter might be discovered. She said she recollected nothing but a hymn she used to sing to her children, "Alone, Yet Not Alone Am I," etc. The colonel asked her to sing the hymn. Scarcely had she sung two lines of it, when poor Regina rushed from the crowd, began to sing it also and threw herself into her mother's arms. They both wept for joy, and Col. Boquet gave up the daughter to the mother. Tradition says that Regina is buried by the side of her mother in Christ Lutheran cemetery, near Stouchsburg.

Jacob Hartman, the great-grandfather of Charles R., tradition says was a son of Henry Hartman, a younger brother of John Hartman. The greater part of his life was passed in Windsor township, but he was buried at Zion's Union cemetery in Perry township. His wife was a Hoffman, and they had several children.

Benjamin Hartman, son of Jacob, spent his life in Windsor township, where he owned a small farm, and where he also engaged as a stone mason. His wife was Racey Bausher, of Albany township, and they had these children: Jacob; Daniel, who lived at Myerstown, Pa.; Benjamin, who lived and died in Philadelphia; and Katie, deceased, who in early life went to Michigan, with her uncle, Jacob Bausher, and was there married to a Mr. Sloate, by whom she had one daughter, Katie.

Jacob Hartman, father of Charles R., was born Dec. 14, 1842, in Windsor township, and at the age of twenty-five years began farming near Hamburg, on the railroad farm, on which he continued to reside until 1885. In this year he removed to Perry township, settling on the old Unger homestead, which he cultivated for fourteen years. Mr. Hartman, who is still carrying on operations in Perry township, is a good citizen, being active in educational and church work. He and his family are Lutheran members of Zion's Union Church, of which he was a deacon for a number of years.

On Aug. 15, 1865, Mr. Hartman was united in marriage with Rufena Reber, born July 4, 1845, daughter of Jacob and Mary (Heinly) Reber, both of Windsor township. To this union were born children as follows: Charles R.; George R., who resides at home; Margarite m. J. J. Motes, of Reading; Katie m. Peter E. Naftzinger of Berne, Pa., who died in 1906; Lillie, who is unmarried at home; Mary m. J. L. Gundy, of Calcium; Emma m. Samuel L. Stetzler, of Shoemakersville; Louis M., also of Shoemakersville; and Thomas W., Adam D. and Eva J., who are all at home.

Charles R. Hartman spent his boyhood days with his parents, and his education was secured in the district schools of Hamburg and Perry township. He began farming for himself in 1881, purchasing his present farm of forty-four acres in 1889. This tract is in an excellent state of cultivation, Mr. Hartman being a progressive and enterprising man. He greatly improved his home by beautifying its surroundings. In politics he supports the Democratic party, in whose behalf he is quite active, and he is popular in his township. He and his family are Lutheran members of Zion's Union Church of Perry township, where since 1900 he has been a deacon.

On Aug. 25, 1888, Mr. Hartman was married to Mary Ehrens, born in Richmond township, daughter of Henry Ehrens. Among their children are: Elva M., Clara I., Nevin D., Clarence J. and Earl J.

HOWARD MILTON DIETRICH, proprietor of the "American House," at Bernville, who was born June 4, 1859, in Centre township, is a son of Levi F. and Louisa (Moser) Dietrich and grandson of Daniel and Salome (Fisher) Dietrich.

Levi F. and Louisa (Moser) Dietrich were the parents of the following children: Henrietta, m. to George B. Miller, of Hamburg; Salome, m. to William E. Gruber, of Mt. Pleasant; Howard Milton; Valeria, deceased in 1903, m. to James H. Hollenbach; Emma, m. to Jeremiah Heckman, of Shoemakersville; Levi H., of Centre township, m. to Ida Yoder; Nelson C., who is single and lives on the old homestead farm in Centre township; Wilson P., a farmer of Centre township, m. to Jennie Reeser; Irwin R., of Philadelphia, m. to Annie Smith; and Horace D., also of Philadelphia, m. to Laura Kalbach.

Howard Milton Dietrich attended the public schools of Centre township and worked for his father until twenty-five years of age when he began farming on his own account and for a period of twenty years carried on agricultural operations in Ontelaunee and Maidencreek townships. He then moved to Maiden Creek station, where he lived retired for a short time, and in 1904 engaged in the hotel business at Shoemakersville. Two years later he came to Bernville and became the proprietor of the "American House," which is well and favorably known to the traveling public.

Mr. Dietrich was married (first) Aug. 20, 1883, to Mary N. Bagenstose, daughter of William and Rebecca (Snyder) Bagenstose. She died Dec. 13, 1888, the mother of three sons: Warren, of the class of 1909, Lehigh University; Charles W., of the class of 1904, Perkiomen Seminary; and Paul B., who died when three months old. Mr. Dietrich was married (second) to Savannah Iowa Burkey, daughter of Sydehan Burkey. To this second union there were born seven children: Carrie, Lucy L., Mamie S. and Amy S. (twins), John H., Walter S. and Mary A.

In political matters Mr. Dietrich is a Democrat, and in 1903 he was appointed bridge inspector of Berks county. While a resident of Centre township he served for six years as school director, and in 1908 was elected a school director of Bernville. His religious connection is with the Lutheran Church.

JACOB S. ADAM, of Perry township, was born in Windsor (now Perry) township, July 25, 1844, son of Jacob and Lovina (Smith) Adam.

Anthony Adam was the ancestor of the Adam family of upper Berks county. He was a French Huguenot and came to America on the ship "Snow Molly," which landed at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1741, Mr. Adam being at this time twenty-five years of age. On this same ship came to the New World progenitors of other old families of Albany and Greenwich townships, whose descendants in many instances still reside on the land cleared from the wild bush by their forefathers. It is not known to whom Anthony Adam was married, but we have record of these sons; Abraham, Anthony and Bernhard, who settled in Schuylkill county; and Peter, who settled on a farm in Windsor township, now owned by Herman Adam, one of his descendants. In 1752, when the county was established, Anthony Adam was a taxable resident of Albany township. Without doubt he suffered during the French and Indian wars, and it is supposed that he witnessed such terrible depredations as the awful massacre of Jacob Gerhart's family, the killing of the wife of Balsar Neyfong and the shooting of David Howell. These must have been trying times. Surely this pioneer settler was often in communion with his God, praying for protection for himself and family from the cruel scalping knife and tomahawk.

Peter Adam, the great-grandfather of Jacob S., was born Oct. 1, 1765, and died July 1, 1849, aged eighty-three years, nine months. He was married March 11, 1788, to Catherine Hauseknecht, and to them were born ten children: Jacob; Anthony m. Miss Schappell; Peter; Abraham; John; William; George; Betsy m. Abraham Snyder; Hannah m. Benjamin Merkel; and Polly m. Daniel Schappell.

Jacob Adam, son of Peter, was born in Windsor township, Oct. 18, 1789, and died Dec. 22, 1866, aged seventy-seven years. His wife, Anna Maria Gordner, was born July 16, 1793, and died Aug. 7, 1874, aged eighty-one years. To them were born the following children: Hannah m. Daniel Bausher; William m. Betz Kramer; Heinrich m. Harriet Focht; Jacob, father of Jacob S.; Peter died single, aged twenty-one years; Benjamin m. (first) Esther Smith, and (second) Catherine Lengel; Isaac, born Nov. 12, 1820 (who in spite of his years is still hale and hearty and able to dance a lively hoe-down, which he does occasionally, to the great delight of his friends) m. (first) Louisa Hottenstein, and (second) Esther Adam, who also survives; Betsy m. John Gerhart; Polly m. Reuben Strasser; Lazarus died at the age of fifty-nine years; Simon died in 1867, when thirty-two years old; Catherine m. Samuel Schappell; and Lydia m. Jacob Kershner.

Jacob Adam, father of Jacob S., was born in Windsor township, Jan. 21, 1816, and died Aug. 10, 1894, in his seventy-ninth year. He obtained a good education in the pay schools of his day, and when a young man learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed the greater part of his life. In 1852 he removed to Perry township, locating upon his farm of 137 acres, which he conducted with his children while still working at his trade. He was a school director, official of Zion's Union Church, of Perry township, and was a highly esteemed citizen. He married Lovina Smith, daughter of Michael Smith. She was born Sept. 29, 1822, and died Dec. 27, 1905. Their children were: Alfred S., a successful farmer of Perryville, whose land adjoins that of our subject; Jacob S.; Samuel, who died aged twenty-seven years; Michael, who died Jan. 24, 1905, aged fifty-five years, four months, nine days; and Mary S., deceased, m. to John Boyer.

Jacob S. Adam has spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits with the exception of five years when he was engaged at his trade of carpentering. He now owns a fine farm of 108 acres in the southern end of the township, near the Ontelaunee line, which is in the very best possible condition and one of the most valuable in Perry township. Excellent buildings adorn the property, a large well-kept lawn surrounds the house, good, fresh water is easily obtained from the troughs at the house and barn, and modern improvements are noticed throughout. Adjacent to this Mr. Adam owns a valuable little tract of fifteen acres, of very fertile land and with good buildings upon it, and this he has tenanted. He is also the owner of a store building at Molltown and has large industrial interests in the county. Mr. Adam is a prominent man. He is a stanch Democrat and a leader in the ranks of his party in this section, having been a delegate to many county conventions. He was auditor of his district and has likewise served for nine years as school director. He is a prominent member of the St. Peter's Reformed Church of Richmond township, in which he has held every office, is president of the building committee, and has recently been again elected elder, a position he has held for many years. He gives to the church with a liberal hand, helping members of the congregation in many ways as well, and when any movement whether for charitable, religious or educational purposes, is started, he is invariably chosen to be the one to lead the project.

He is known as a man of honor and integrity in the community in which he has lived for so many years, and many positions of honor and trust have been given him by his fellow-citizens who recognize and appreciate his sterling worth of character.

On Oct. 31, 1868, Mr. Jacob S. Adam was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth K. Rothermel, daughter of Daniel and Hettie (Kohler) Rothermel, and to this union there were born the following children: Lillie, who died in infancy; Mamie, m. to William Dreibelbis, Maurice R., the well known dentist at No. 639 Penn street, Reading, who is a graduate of the Keystone State Normal school of Kutztown, class of 1898, taught school, clerked in a prothonotary's office, court house, graduated from the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania in the class of 1903, and now has a large and lucrative practice; Laura, m. to Wilson Mengel; Edith, who died in her second year; Robert R., who is a student at the Keystone State Normal School; and Jacob D., who died aged thirteen days.

JOHN G. STOCKER, a worthy and honored citizen and prominent business man of Reading, died at Carlsbad, Bohemia, July 19, 1903. Like many another of the representative citizens of the Keystone State, Mr. Stocker came of stanch German lineage, and was born in Baden, Germany, Aug. 5, 1850, son of John and Catherine (Werren) Stocker, both of whom were natives of the same section of the German empire.

John Stocker, the father, was a substantial farmer and a citizen. He and his wife came to America in October, 1873, and took up their residence in the home of their son John G. Mr. Stocker lived retired until his death, which occurred in the following year. The devoted mother remained with her son John G. also until she was summoned to the life eternal, Nov. 17, 1879. Both were zealous members of the Lutheran church, and exemplified their faith in their daily lives. They were the parents of six children, namely: George, a resident of Reading; Christian, who remains in Germany; Frederick, who came to America and who died in Danville, Pa.; Caroline, m. to Henry Daum; John G.; and Adam, deceased.

John G. Stocker was reared to manhood in his native land, and was afforded the advantages of the excellent schools there. In 1869, at the age of nineteen years, he emigrated to America and took up his residence in Reading, Pa., where he secured employment in the brewery of Peter Barbey. Later he identified himself with the operation of the brewery of Frederick Lauer, and after continuing in the employ of others for seventeen years he removed to Tremont, Schuylkill county, where he and his brother-in-law, John Roerich, rented a brewery, which they operated for the ensuing six years. Mr. Stocker then disposed of his interest in the enterprise and returned to Reading, where he built up a large and profitable business in the ownership and operation of what is known as the Stocker Brewery. He was thoroughly familiar with all details of the business, gave to his plant careful personal supervision and gained for the output a high standard of excellence. Mr. Stocker continued the executive head of the brewery until his death. His health became impaired, and in the hope of recuperating the same he went to Carlsbad, in Bohemia, where he died. His remains were brought back to Reading by his wife and daughter, who had accompanied him.

Mr. Stocker was survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Catherine Roerich, and by five children: Henry, J. George, Catherine (wife of Charles Deale), Adam (who was killed by the explosion of a beer vat, Oct. 20, 1905, at the age of twenty-six years, two months, eighteen days), and Caroline.

Mr. Stocker was a member of the Lutheran Church and contributed liberally to its support. In politics he was a Democrat and in a fraternal way he was identified with the Knights of the Golden Eagle. As a citizen he was progressive, loyal and public-spirited.

J. George Stocker, who was made executor of the estate by the terms of his father's will, and who was identified with the operation of the brewery from his youthful days until it was sold April 8, 1907, to August Schneider, was born in Reading, March 19, 1875. After completing the curriculum of the public schools he rounded out his discipline by a course in the Inter-State Business College, at Reading, where he graduated. He then became associated with the work of his father's brewery in Tremont, and later with the Stocker Brewery in Reading. In January, 1903, he was graduated in the American Brewery Academy in Chicago, Ill. In 1893 he was made brewmaster in his father's brewery, and in 1897 became general manager of the business. He is one of the representative and popular young business men of his native city, where his circle of friends is limited only by that of his acquaintances. He is a Democrat in politics, a member of the Lutheran Church, and is identified with the Free & Accepted Masons, the Quakers, the Reading Liederkranz, and the Keystone Fire Company. On Sept. 1, 1904, Mr. Stocker married Miss Anna P. Watkins, who was born and reared in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

DAVID Y. SCHAEFFER, now engaged in the cultivation of his fifty-acre tract in Engelsville, Colebrookdale township, Berks county, was born on his grandfather Yoder's homestead near Pleasantville, in Oley township, June 10, 1870, son of Nathan and Catherine (Yoder) Schaeffer. He was but a lad of ten years when his father died, and he grew to manhood on the farm, assisting his mother until he was twenty-one years of age. He attended the public schools of Oley township, and later Friedensburg Seminary. For eight years after his marriage he farmed for his mother, and in the spring of 1901 he located at his present place, where he has made many improvements, including a fine addition to the house in 1905. Besides farming, Mr. Schaeffer goes out threshing in his district.

On Nov. 15, 1893, Mr. Schaeffer was married to Katie Dotterer, daughter of William Dotterer, and they have seven children, namely: Mabel, Ella, William, Edna, Minnie, Oscar and Florence.

JOHN H. LEWIS, of Reading, who is proprietor of the "Clinton House," at the corner of Front and Washington streets, was born Feb. 18, 1875, in Chester county, son of John P. and Mary E. (James) Lewis.

John P. Lewis was educated in the schools of Chester county, where he followed agricultural pursuits until 1877, at this time removing to Reading and becoming employed as a teamster for Orr, Painter & Co. He later became shipping clerk and was holding this position at the time of his death, June 6, 1891. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Frank J., deceased, m. Pauline Albert; Lizzie m. Samuel Price, and had one child, Mary; Samuel P., deceased, m. Emma Gnau, and had three children, Florence, John and Russell; Charles M. m. Clara Miller, and had four children, Robert, Edmund, Grace and an infant, deceased; John H. m. Martha M. Yeager, and had two children, J. Frank and Marie; George O. m. Laura Gibbs. In religious belief Mr. Lewis was a Methodist. Politically his views were those of the Democratic party.

John H. Lewis was educated in the schools of Reading and learned the blacksmith's trade at the Keystone wagon works, where he worked for five years. He then clerked for five years in the hotel at Wood and Franklin streets, and in 1903 came to the "Clinton House," of which he has been proprietor to the present time. His house contains twenty rooms, being furnished with all modern conveniences, and he himself is well thought of in his community. He is a member of the Eagles, the P. O. S. of A. No. 678, Neversink Fire Co., a contributing member of the Schuylkill Fire Co., and member of the Independent Gunning Club, West End Social Club, Harmony Social Club, Northwestern Beneficial Association, Wayside Club, Elm Leaf Gun Club, and the Eagle's Mountain Home. In political matters he is a Republican, and belongs to the Sixth Ward Republican Club. Mr. Lewis owns a comfortable residence at No. 118 West Greenwich street.

JOHN A. FAHRBACH, whose death occurred April 15, 1908, at his home, No. 32 South Eighth street, Reading, was a man well known, having been dancing-master in the city for many years.

John M. Fahrbach, father of John A. Fahrbach, was born in Germany in the year 1810. There he studied music and learned the trade of upholstering and coach trimming. He came to America in 1837, landing at New York City. He then became connected with a traveling show as leader of the orchestra, and finally settled in Reading, which at that time was a small town or borough. He was the organizer and leader of the first band in the city and also instructed bands in different parts of the country. Few men were better known in musical circles. At this time he also worked at his trade at the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company's shops, where he was employed for a period of fifteen years; then engaged in the hotel business, first on North Eighth street, afterward at Seventh and Franklin streets, in which business he continued until 1880, at which time he died at the age of seventy years.

Mr. Fahrbach married Mary E. Gerber, born in Germany, and they were the parents of ten children, four of whom lived to maturity as follows: Mary A. Block died June 2, 1908, at Orange, N. J.; John A. died April 15, 1908; Francis J. died Aug. 18, 1903; Amelia died Aug. 26, 1893.

John A. Fahrbach was born in the city of Reading Nov. 15, 1844, and lived there all his life. He became interested in music at the age of six years, and after a course of study at the Reading common and high schools took up the study of music under the capable instruction of his father. He learned the boiler-making trade and followed this for some six years, but gave it up to give his entire attention to music. The violin was his chief instrument, and he was a master performer on it. He played in orchestras for over forty years, gave instructions to many people, and at the time of his death was a member of the Philharmonic Band. He organized the Fahrbach orchestra in 1861. In the year 1871 he began giving instructions in dancing, having studied the art under Philadelphia instructors. He never kept an account of his pupils, but it is estimated that he taught upward of fifteen thousand people. Mr. Fahrbach was known far and wide as an excellent dancing-master, having taught men and women years ago who are now grandfathers and grandmothers, and whose children and grandchildren have also been his pupils. His public class was held at Academy Hall, and his private class at Sixth and Walnut streets, in the East Pennsylvania Railroad building.

Mr. Fahrbach had an enviable reputation for his strict honesty and genial nature. He was a private in the State militia and was one of the few members of that body who saw active service. Mr. Fahrbach was a member of the Second Reformed Church. Fraternally he was connected with the National American Association of Dancing Masters; American Federation of Musicians, Local No. 135; Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R.; Mt. Penn Castle, No. 51, Knights of the Golden Eagle; Camp No. 89, P. O. S. of A.; Lexington Commandery, No. 2, and the Junior Fire Company.

Mr. Fahrbach married Emma Hummel, who died March 16, 1905. The following children survive: Harry E. is mentioned below; Annie E. is a fine musician, both vocal and instrumental; Christian E. has traveled very extensively, and is now located in Reading, being trap drummer in the Academy Orchestra; he is a member of Washington Camp, No. 89, P. O. S. of A.; Local No. 135, A. F. of M.; Reading Hose Fire Company, and Reading Hose Volunteer Association.

Prof. Harry E. Fahrbach, son of John A., was born June 8, 1871, and at the age of five years commenced the study of music under his grandfather, John M. Fahrbach, and finished his violin studies under Henry Lambert, at the New York College of Music; pipe-organ under Dr. Austin Pearce; theory of music under Dr. Austin Pearce and Theodore Kolb; piano under Albert Ritter; trombone under John W. Row. He is now director of the Academy of Music Orchestra. He is a member of the examining board of local No. 135, A. F. of M., and has served for the past six years as director of the Philharmonic Band. Mr Harry E. Fahrbach conducted the Opera House Orchestra for seventeen years, Temple Orchestra for one year, and was organist of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church for fourteen years. He is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; Reading Hose Fire Company, and Reading Hose Volunteer Association.

GEORGE J. SCHULER, of Reading, who is proprietor of the meat market at the corner of Sixteenth street and Perkiomen avenue, was born Oct. 22, 1862, in this city, son of John and Catherine (Tilger) Schuler.

The parents of George J. Schuler, who were natives of Wurtemberg, Germany, came to America as young people and located in Reading, where Mr. Schuler engaged in butchering until his death in 1866, in his thirty-eighth year. He and his wife, who is still living, aged about seventy years, were the parents of four children, two of whom are now living: William A., and George J. In religious belief the family were Lutherans.

George J. Schuler received his education in the schools of Reading, and when a young man learned the butchering business, at which he was employed for others until 1882. In this year he established himself in business on Seventh street, below Bingaman, but in 1893 erected his present property and has been located at this place to the present time with much success. Mr. Schuler's trade, which is constantly increasing, is of the best in the city, his fair dealing and excellent goods winning the confidence and patronage of his customers, while personally he is genial and courteous. He manufactures all his own sausages, smoked meats, etc., and guarantees them to be of the finest quality.

Mr. Schuler was married to Emma Frentzal, daughter of Frederick Frentzal, and to this union there have been born two children: George H., who is in business with his father, married Mabel Cressman; and Gertrude, who died at the age of fourteen and one-half years. The family attend the Lutheran Church. In political matters Mr. Schuler is a Democrat, although he takes no active part in public matters. He is considered one of the representative citizens of his community, in which he is very popular.

WILLIAM K. BRIDEGAM, of Reading, Pa., whose plumbing establishment is situated at No. 552 North Front street, corner of Greenwich, was born Sept. 23, 1875, in Temple, Berks county, son of James and Isabella (Kerling) Bridegam, the former of whom, a retired locomotive engineer, has been living in Reading since 1881.

William K. Bridegam was educated in the grammar schools of Reading, from which he received his diploma in 1891. After leaving school he drove a bakery wagon for a few months for Charles Auer, and during this time learned telegraphy in the evenings. After eighteen months with Mr. Auer, Mr. Bridegam resigned and apprenticed himself to the plumber's trade with G. A. Hagy, with whom he continued for about five years, then engaging with S. E. Fritz and H. A. Lewis until 1901. In this year Mr. Bridegam engaged in business on his own account at No. 129 West Oley street, continuing there until October, 1905, since which time he has been at his present place of business, where he employes sixteen men, as well as office help. He carries the most complete line of samples in the city and does a large and profitable business, giving special attention to gas, steam and hot water fitting.

In October, 1898, Mr. Bridegam was married to Gertrude Schaeffer, daughter of the late William D. and Rebecca Schaeffer, and to this union have been born one child,—Warren J. In religious belief Mr. Bridegam is connected with the Reformed Church, and is financial secretary of the Sunday school. He is a member of the K. G. E., the K. of F., and the A. O. U. W. He votes independently.

ALBERT J. STROHECKER, of Reading, who is proprietor of the Pennsylvania Rubber Tire Company, with office and factory located at Nos. 42-43 Moss street, was born in Reading April 27, 1880, son of J. A. and Emma (Brumbach) Strohecker.

J. A. Strohecker, whose death occurred in Reading Feb. 27, 1909, was born in Spring township, Berks county, seventy-two years ago. When a young man he learned the butchering business, which he followed in Reading until his retirement in 1896. He was a Lutheran in religious belief; and was a Democrat politically being prominent in the ranks of that party, having served as councilman from the Eighth ward, where he was very well and favorably known. He was a member of the park board for ten years. He is survived by these children: Mary, wife of Robert Wetherhold, of Reading; Edward, an employe of the city engineer's office in Reading; Emma, wife of Dr. Schlegel, a dentist of the city; and Albert J.

Albert J. Strohecker attended the public schools of Reading, after leaving which he engaged in learning the carriage building business. Acquainting himself thoroughly in all the branches of this trade, in 1897 he opened up the first rubber tire works in Reading, or, in fact, in Berks county, and in this line he has continued very successfully to the present time. He builds both heavy and light express wagons, and the excellent quality of the work has won him the confidence and patronage of the community.

Mr. Strohecker was married in 1903 to Miss Millie Hoskins, daughter of the late George H. Hoskins, and to this union there has been born one son, Albert J., Jr. In political matters Mr. Strohecker is a Democrat, like his father, but so far has given all of his time and attention to his growing business. He and his wife are members of the Lutheran Church. He is connected with the Junior Fire Company.

GEORGE MILLER, who since April, 1908, has made his home in Maiden-creek, comes of Swiss stock. His great-grandfather, Christian Miller, came from Switzerland, bringing with him his family. There is record of his three sons, Jacob, George and Henry.

George Miller, son of Christian, was a farmer and landowner, and was born March 17, 1786. He died on his own farm Jan. 4, 1872. The handling of tools always afforded him great enjoyment, and he learned cabinet making, and became a carpenter and undertaker, making and finishing the coffins for his trade. He married Elizabeth Reisch, born Sept. 22, 1799, and died April 15, 1867. They had three children: Charles, mentioned below; Samuel, who married Miss Stoyer, and kept and owned the old Miller hostlery in Adamstown, Lancaster Co., Pa.; and Mary, who married (first) Charles Place, and (second) Charles Faust, who survives her and resides at Blandon.

Charles Miller, son of George, was born near Wily's mill. He, too, became a cabinet maker and undertaker, following those callings all his active life. He married Maria Schrack, and they had four children: Josiah, who died unmarried in Tucson, Ariz.; George; Mary E., who married Owen Fox, of Blandon, and has had children—Charles L. (deceased), Laura, Robert, Mayme, Warren, Mabel and Owen; and Charles Jacob, who married Adalina Hoffman, and has had children—Lloyd and Ralph, the latter dying young.

George Miller was born near Calcium, in Maidencreek township, Aug. 20, 1854, and was educated in the common schools of his district. He makes his home with his sister, Mrs. Owen Fox. He is prominent in fraternal organizations, being a member of Lodge No. 1084, I. O. O. F.; the I. O. R. M., of Fleetwood; Knights of the Mystic Chain, at Fleetwood; and the Sick and Accident Insurance Company of Philadelphia. He is a member of the Blandon Lutheran Church. Mr. Miller is unmarried.

SAMUEL B. KEPPEL, late of Sinking Spring, was prominent alike in business and legislative affairs, and one of the most genuinely respected men of his district; he was born in Honeybrook, Chester county, Pa., Dec, 10, 1846, son of John Keppel.

John Keppel, the father, was born and reared in Chester county, Pa. He was raised by a family of the name of Gordon. His death occurred at Honeybrook July 15, 1894, when he was aged seventy years. He married Barbara Weaver, who bore him the following family: George; Samuel B.; Clara, wife of James Peck; Elizabeth, who for a period of seventeen years taught the Boyertown school, and is now teaching at Honeybrook; Sallie, wife of Lewis Guiney, of Coatesville, Pa.; and Alice, who died at the age of eighteen years.

Samuel B. Keppel received a good education, studying in the district schools, Waynesboro Academy, and Millersville State Normal. For six years he engaged in teaching in Lancaster and Berks counties, and was quite popular with his pupils as well as with the other members of the profession. He next spent two years as a telegrapher for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, leaving that Company to become clerk in the office and telegraph operator (special line) for the Moselem Iron Company, where he continued from 1872 to 1877. On April 1, 1877, he moved to Sinking Spring, and entered the coal, lumber and grain business, and to this he devoted twenty years with great success. In April, 1881, he opened a similar business at Robesonia, under the firm name of Keppel & Reber, and it was so carried on until April 1, 1886, when Mr. C. D. Reber retired. Mr. Keppel continued the business for some time alone, finally selling it to Mr. Leinbach. From that time until 1899 he gave his undivided attention to the business at Sinking Spring, but he was of too energetic a nature to be content with but one iron in the fire, and in April, 1892, he formed a stock company under the name of the Birdsboro Milling Company (Limited) of Birdsboro, Pa., and leased the mill of the Brooke Milling Company. This mill had a capacity of 150 barrels of flour per day. Mr. Keppel became secretary and treasurer of this company.

In spite of his extensive personal interests, Mr. Keppel took an active part in public affairs, as a representative of the Democratic party, and proved his popularity as a candidate by repeated elections to public office. In 1891 he was elected to the House of Representatives, receiving a majority of 7,034, and in 1893 was re-elected by a majority of 7,556, his increased plurality showing well the satisfaction his services had given in his district. He served on the following committees: Banks, Insurance and Manufacturing. At different times he was a delegate to State conventions, and he showed his interest in the cause of education by effective work as a school director. He was also engaged largely in the fire insurance business in connection with his other work, and was a director in the Manatawny Mutual Fire and Storm Insurance Company, organized in February, 1893. He also served as agent for the Mutual and Stock Fire Insurance Company. He was one of the best known men in the county—in fact he was widely known throughout the State.

Mr. Keppel was public spirited and progressive, and was ever at the front in any enterprise that tended toward the advancement and development of his town. He was one of the organizers of the Sinking Spring Foundry Company, capitalized at $10,000. The Water Company had for its founders, Mr. Keppel, Daniel Bitner, D. J. Herbein and James Ruth, and Mr. Keppel became its secretary and treasurer. He was a director of the Citizens National Bank of Reading, from its organization in May, 1888, and when it consolidated with the Second National Bank, he became a director of that bank. He was one of the largest stockholders and a director in the Colonial Trust Company, of Reading; and was president of the Reading & Womelsdorf Electric Railway Company. In all these concerns he had more than a nominal interest, and he kept fully posted on the work and conditions of each.

Mr. Keppel was twice married. His first wife Susan Lerch, died leaving one daughter, Leah, now the wife of Prof. W. S. Delp, of Philadelphia. On June 27, 1889, Mr. Keppel married (second) Eva Mull, daughter of Henry and Theresa Steltz, of Montgomery county, Pa. On April 18, 1903, Samuel B. Keppel entered into rest, after an active and useful life, leaving many friends to mourn his loss. He was a Mason of high degree, belonging to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory 32°; and and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Reading.

Upon the death of Mr. Keppel the board of directors of the Reading & Womelsdorf Electric Railway Company, of which he was president from its beginning until his death, passed a resolution, signed by all officers, as follows:

"Resolved, That the Company sustained a loss that cannot be repaired. The Reading & Womelsdorf Electric Railway Company stands an enduring monument to his memory. He was one of the founders, and to his courage and perseverance the success of the undertaking was largely due."

Mr. Keppel was a member of St. John's Reformed Church and was serving as a member of the consistory at the time of his death, taking an active part.

WILLIAM A. REED of Reading, Pa., proprietor of the "East Reading Hotel," was born in Frackville, Schuylkill Co., Pa., Jan. 2, 1880, son of Adam and Caroline (Roeder) Reed.

John William Reed, grandfather of William A., was born April 26, 1812, probably in Wayne township, where he died Jan. 24, 1878, aged sixty-six years. His wife was Mary Yoh, and they had a family of nine children, as follows: Adam, Jonathan, Levi, Solomon, John, Sallie, Esther, Marie and Katie. Of this family Adam, the father of William A., was born near Schuylkill Haven, Wayne township, Schuylkill Co., Pa., about 1850. He was a farmer and thresher in early life, but later became a carpenter at the Philadelphia & Reading shops at Mahanoy Plane, where he worked for about twenty years. In June, 1901, he removed with his family to Camden, N. J., where he is engaged as a ship carpenter in the employ of Heck, Rickenbach & Noecker. Adam Reed was married to Caroline Roeder, and to them have been born children as follows: Ella, Harvey, Dora, William A., Elmer, Emma, Sallie, Charles, Harry, Eva, Alva and Pearl.

William A. Reed spent his youth in Frackville, where he attended the common schools until ten years of age, at which time he commenced work as a breaker boy, picking slate, an occupation which he followed for four years. He then spent several years at driving mules on the rock banks at the coal mines, but subsequently entered employ of the Reading Railway Company, with which he continued until August, 1905, when he bought out the interest of Simon Behney, the proprietor of the "East Reading Hotel," located at No. 1830 Perikomen avenue. This hotel Mr. Reed has since conducted with much success, the ten rooms being almost continuously occupied by tenants. He is courteous and agreeable to all patrons, and has become one of the popular young men of the community. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp, No. 66, P. O. S. of A., of Frackville, and the Twentieth Century Quakers of Reading.

On July 18, 1901, Mr. Reed was married to Catharine Hepler, daughter of Daniel and Harriet (Mattern) Hepler, and granddaughter on the maternal side of Silas and Caroline (Kimmel) Mattern. Mr. Mattern is past his eighty-second year, and his wife is past eighty years old; she has been blind for the past forty years. To Mr. and Mrs. Reed have been born two children: Alma H. and Claud D. A.

SOLOMON E. LAUER, of Maiden-creek township, was born Feb. 8, 1866, in Spring township, son of William and Catherine (Saylor) Lauer.

Christian Lauer, the grandfather of Solomon E., was a farmer near Jonestown, in Lebanon county, where he died in middle life. He married a Miss Spohn, who bore him three children: William; Hannah, who married Isaac Huyett; and John, who died single, aged about twenty-one years.

William Lauer, father of Solomon E., was also a farmer by occupation, and made his home in Spring township. On Oct. 11, 1862, he was married to Catherine H. Saylor, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Hahn) Saylor, and this union was blessed by the following children: George McClellan S., born April 28, 1863, died aged about twenty-three years; Henry Milton, born Dec. 8, 1864, died May 5, 1867; Solomon Ellmore; John Howard, born April 9, 1867, died Oct. 6, 1867; Christian Ellis, born June 15, 1869, lost his life in a railroad accident in 1900; and Irwin Saylor, born Oct. 30, 1871, married Irene Guldin and resides at the Guldin homestead, at Blandon, Berks county. William Saylor Rothermel, a son born to Mrs. Lauer by a former marriage, was born June 15, 1859, and died in December, 1897.

Solomon Ellmore Lauer received his early training in Spring township, and later came to Maiden-creek township, where his education was completed. He has carried on agricultural pursuits for a number of years, and has been very successful in his operations. On Sept. 1, 1888, Mr. Lauer married Maggie Hall, daughter of Timothy and Sarah (Goodwin) Hall, residents of Blandon. Three children have been born to this union: Elsie Catherine, June 16, 1889; William Earl, Dec. 27, 1895, deceased Dec. 23, 1898; and Sarah Marguerite, April 15, 1897. Mr. Lauer and his children are members of the Reformed Church, while Mrs. Lauer belongs to the Lutheran faith.

JOHN LICHTENWALLNER. The Lichtenwallner family of Longswamp township traces its ancestry back to Johannes Lichtenwallner, who with his wife and one year old son, arrived at Philadelphia, Aug. 17, 1733, on the ship "Samuel," of London, from the Palatinate or Rhine country. On his arrival in Philadelphia, he purchased a team, loaded his wagon with what few household effects he had and, with his wife Barbara and son, followed the immigration as far as Hanover, in Montgomery county. There he remained a brief time, following his trade of blacksmith, at which he was a past master, as his passport from the mother country proves. He was in search of vacant land, and his evident desire was to settle where he could build for himself a home and till his own soil. He therefore took advantage of the new road opened in 1733 from Goshenhoppen, Montgomery county, across the Lehigh mountains, to where Trexlertown is now located. In 1734 he landed in "Magungy," which then comprised nearly all of the west end of Lehigh county, then a part of Bucks county. He followed an old Indian trail from Trexler's tavern, now Trexlertown, across Macungie into what is now North Whitehall township, and there settled on 300 acres of vacant land along the Jordan creek, for which tract he secured a warrant from the Province of Pennsylvania in 1738. Just how long he remained on this property is not definitely known, but the land being rough and hilly and the soil shallow and gravelly, he went back to Upper Macungie, and located on a tract one mile west of the present site of Fogelsville. He must have settled there about 1742, built himself a log dwelling (on the spot where now stand the farm buildings of the old John Lichtenwallner farm, at present owned by Peter R. Bear, Esq., of Fogelsville), and there spent the remainder of his life. He and his wife had these children: the one year old son whom they brought from the old country; Margaretta, born Feb. 3, 1734; Maria Agatha, in 1736; Johann (2); Catherine, Oct. 2, 1742; Anna Christina, May 12, 1745; Johann Tobias, April 23, 1747; Catherina Margaretta, Oct. 30, 1749; and Abraham, July 12, 1753.

Johann Lichtenwallner (2), the common ancestor of the Pennsylvania family of that name, was born June 29, 1738, on the Lichtenwallner homestead. When twenty-five years of age, he married Catharina Stättler, daughter of Daniel Stättler, who was one of the pioneers of Weisenburg township. He resided during his whole life, in the stone house erected before his father's death in place of the original log house on the old homestead. He inherited 413¾ acres of land from his father, which lay in a body one mile west of Fogelsville. He evidently was a thrifty farmer, buying one tract after another until he owned, all told, 952 acres of good land in this section of the county. He died Oct. 30, 1794, aged fifty-six years, and was buried in Jordan Lutheran Church cemetery. His widow died eight years later, aged fifty-seven years, and was buried beside her husband. They had twelve children, of whom five sons and five daughters attained old age and left numerous descendants. The children were as follows: Johann (3); George (or "Yarrick"); Peter; Christopher (or "Stoffel"); Jacob; Catharina, m. to Matthias Leibensperger; Anna Maria, m. to George Shaffer; Barbara, m. to Philip Leibensperger; Margaret, m. to Henry Kline; Mary Magdalena, m. to Jacob Fogel; and two who died in infancy.

Johann Lichtenwallner (3) was born Dec. 1, 1766, or ten years before the Revolutionary war. He married Margaret Steininger, and they had ten children, namely: Jonathan, born Aug. 20, 1794, died unmarried, April 6, 1817; Lydia, born Oct. 16, 1796, died in infancy; Eliza, born Dec. 5, 1798, died young; Leah, who died in 1886, aged eighty-five years, m. John P. Smith: Rebecca, born Dec. 5, 1798, who died Dec. 16, 1889, m. John Miller; John was born June 1, 1803; Samuel was born Jan. 16, 1806; Judith, born Jan. 13, 1810, died June 20, 1887; Solomon died in 1824, aged seventeen years; and one child died in infancy.

Samuel Lichtenwallner, seventh child of Johann (3), and father of John, of Longswamp township, was born Jan. 16, 1806, on the old homestead near Fogelsville. His first wife was Maria Albright, and after her death in 1884, he married Eliza Folk, who died some years later. Mr. Lichtenwallner died on his farm near Mertztown, March 24, 1876, aged seventy years, and is buried in the Mertztown cemetery. He had ten children, as follows: Eliza, born Oct. 20, 1832, m. James Schmoyer; Lydia died young; John; Mary, born Sept. 5, 1839, m. Mathias Gernert; Aaron and Samuel died young; Sarah m. Israel Stettler; Hettie died young; Susan, born Oct. 28, 1850, m. (first) Adam Stettler, and (second) Jacob Schantz; and Lewis S., born Dec. 21, 1852, m. Lizzie Lichtenwallner.

John Lichtenwallner was born Aug. 5, 1836, in Longswamp township, where he was reared, and received his education in the local schools, later attending the advanced school at the Trappe, Montgomery county, under Henry Hunsicker. He was reared to the occupation of an agriculturist, and followed this as his life work until the spring of 1908, when seventy-three years of age he sold his stock, rented his farm and since that time has lived in well-earned retirement. He is unmarried and his sister, Eliza, widow of James Schmoyer, resides with him, being his housekeeper. Mrs. Schmoyer was left with five boys and four girls, as follows: Maleria; Lorah; Elias; Llewellyn; Uriah, who died in 1907; Erasmus; Harvey; Myra, who married Frank Meitzler; and Alice, who lives with her mother and uncle John, near Mertztown.

The family are active members of the Mertztown Lutheran Church. Mr. Lichtenwallner has been a lifelong Republican, but has never aspired to office.

CHARLES J. MILLER, postmaster, station agent and telegrapher at Calcium, where he is also engaged in an extensive flour, feed, grain and coal business, was born near Calcium, in Maiden-creek township, Sept. 23, 1862, son of Charles and Maria (Schrack) Miller.

George Miller, son of Christian and grandfather of Charles J., was born March 17, 1786, and died Jan. 4, 1872, having spent his life in Maiden-creek township, where he was engaged in carpentering and undertaking, and where he owned a tract of land. He was married to Elizabeth Bersch, who was born Sept. 22, 1790, and died April 15, 1867, and they had these children: Samuel m. Priscilla Stahlnecker and removed to Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he kept the well known hostelry, "Miller's Hotel"; Charles; and Mary m. Charles Place, a farmer near Shoemakersville.

Charles Miller, father of Charles J., also followed undertaking and the trade of carpenter, and resided in Maiden-creek township, where he owned the old homestead. He died about 1900, aged seventy-four years. Mr. Miller married Maria Schrack, daughter of Daniel Schrack, and they had four children: Josiah, who died single in Idaho; George, who is also single, a resident of Blandon, Pa.; Mary, m. to Owen Fox; and Charles J.

Charles J. Miller received his early education in the local schools of his native district, after leaving which he learned telegraphy, and subsequently became station agent and telegrapher for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, in whose employ he has been for twenty-five years, giving the utmost satisfaction. He is also postmaster of Calcium, where he has through energy and enterprise built up a large trade in coal, flour, feed and grain. It is generally conceded that Mr. Miller is one of Calcium's most public-spirited men, and as a citizen he stands high in the esteem of his fellow-townsmen.

Mr. Miller was married to Adaline Hoffman, daughter of David and Catherine (Koller) Hoffman, and they have had two children: Lloyd, born Aug. 29, 1884, was reared and educated at Calcium, where he learned telegraphy and typewriting with his father, whose partner he now is in the firm of Miller & Son; and Andrew died young. Mr. Miller and his family are members of Blandon Lutheran Church, of which he is now serving as a deacon. He is fraternally connected with the F. & A. M., of Kutztown; Blandon Lodge, I. O. O. F., and the American Protective Association.

JEREMIAH G. RITTER (deceased), a former resident of Reading, Pa., was born in Colebrookdale township, Berks county, Sept. 21, 1840, son of Daniel K. and Sarah (Guldin) Ritter.

John Ritter, the grandfather of Jeremiah G., was a farmer of Berks county, owning land near Colebrookdale, and was a representative citizen of his day. In politics he was a Democrat; and in religious belief he and his wife were Lutherans. To John Ritter and wife whose maiden name was that of Memmerer, were born the following children: John, George, Henry, Daniel K., Mrs. Moyer, Mrs. Rebecca Seller, Mrs. Shaner and Mrs. Schell.

Daniel K. Ritter was born and educated in the vicinity of Boyertown, Pa., and his entire life was spent in agricultural pursuits. He was a good, practical farmer and highly esteemed citizen. He and his first wife, Sarah Guldin, had two children: Jeremiah G. and Mary, who married Jacob Hartman and lives in Philadelphia. By a second marriage, to Mary Landis, Mr. Ritter had six children, namely: Henry, John, Catherine, Lydia, Matilda and Ella. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Ritter was a Democrat.

Jeremiah G. Ritter received his education in the schools of Colebrookdale, and worked on his father's farm until the outbreak of the Civil war. In 1861 he enlisted in Co. C, 3rd Pa. Cav., and served three years, being honorably discharged at Philadelphia, Aug. 24, 1864. He was never sick; was never taken prisoner; was never wounded; and was ever a faithful and gallant soldier. About ten months of his service were spent in the ranks while the remainder of the time he was in the quartermaster's department. After his service to his country was completed, Mr. Ritter returned to his home, and for a year engaged in farming, but at the end of this time removed to Philadelphia, where for six years he was engaged in driving horse cars. The next eight years he was engaged as a repair man in the repair department of the same company, and he then went to Pottstown, Pa., to take care of his wife's uncle George's farm. Here he continued until 1886, when he was compelled to give up active work on account of rheumatism contracted during the war, and from that time he lived practically retired to the end of his life. After October, 1903, he resided at No. 1530 Perkiomen avenue, Reading, where he had many friends. In politics he was a Democrat, but took no part in public affairs. He was a member of the Lutheran Church.

In 1867 Mr. Ritter was united in marriage with Miss Weisner, daughter of Daniel Weisner, and to this union were born two children: Harry W. and Ada, who resides at home.

SAMUEL B. KLINE, of Maiden-creek township, who is engaged in quarrying and lime-burning near Calcium, was born at the old Kline homestead in Richmond township, Dec. 28, 1853, son of John K. and Catherine (Burkert) Kline.

William Kline, grandfather of Samuel B., was a farmer of Richmond township, where he died at an advanced age. He and his wife Elizabeth had these children: Peter, Henry, John K., David, William, and Eliza, who went out West. John K. Kline was born on the old homestead in Richmond township, and was a farmer practically all of his life. He served during the Civil war as a soldier in the Union army, and during the latter years of his life drew a pension for his services. John K. Kline was married to Catherine Burkert, widow of Samuel Burkert, and to this union there were born the following children: James m. Catherine Rothermel, who is now deceased; Adam m. Annie Schaerer; Catherine m. the late Willoughby Miller; Isaac m. Emma Bush; Samuel B.; Sarah m. Cosmus Weidner; Hannah m. John Weidner; Mary m. Aaron Bloch; and two died in infancy.

Samuel B. Kline was reared and educated in his native locality, and for a time worked on the home farm. He subsequently, however, engaged in the quarrying and lime-burning business, which he is now following with much success, his plant being located in Maiden-creek township, near Calcium.

On March 1, 1884, Mr. Kline was married to Amanda Louisa Adams, daughter of Benneville and Lovina (Gruber) Adams, and one child was born to this union: Bessie Geneva, who is deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Kline attend Blandon Union Church, being of the Lutheran faith.

MOSES K. BALTHASER, who is now living retired at his home on Maple avenue, Wernersville, was for over twenty-one years engaged in the hotel business at Brownsville, Lower Heidelberg township. He was born Jan. 19, 1852, in Ontelaunee township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Jacob and Sarah (Kauffman) Balthaser.

Jacob Balthaser, grandfather of Moses K., is buried at St. Michael's Church in Tilden township. He was an extensive farmer in Upper Bern township, where he was the owner of over 400 acres of land, and was very well known throughout that section, both for his fine personal appearance, and for his habit of driving a very high-wheeled, high-seated buggy, in which vehicle he often drove his wife, who was an ardent Catholic, to church. He married Molly Greth, daughter of Nicholas Greth, of Windsor township, and their children were: Sarah m. Jacob Boyer; Hannah m. Jacob Renno; Jacob; John, born in 1814, died in Windsor township (where he owned land), m. in 1842, and became the father of Joel; Mary m. Benjamin Sunday; George (1824-1899) owned 261 acres of land lying along the pike south of Hamburg, and was the father of Mahlon A.; William settled in Ontelaunee township, where he was engaged in business, becoming a wealthy man; Isaac was drowned in boyhood; Elizabeth m. John Baer; Susanna m. Edwin Kauffman; Jeremiah remained in Upper Bern township; Samuel; and Benjamin was the father of David who lives on the homestead and has a large family.

Jacob Balthaser, father of Moses K., was born in Upper Bern township in 1812, and died in Lower Heidelberg township, Dec. 6, 1879, and was buried at Bern Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He removed from Upper Bern township to Penn township, and thence in 1858, to Lower Heidelberg township, where he owned a farm of 112 acres at the time of his death. Mr. Balthaser married Sarah Kauffman, born in 1814 in Upper Bern township. She died Nov. 2, 1887, the mother of thirteen children, as follows: Cornelius, of Bern township; Caroline, who died aged fifty-six years; Jacob, of Bern township; Sarah, who died unmarried aged twenty-one years; Henry, who died April 9, 1909, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township; Charles, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Bern township; Lovina, who died aged fourteen years; George, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township; Emanuel, who resides in Reading; Moses K.; Louisa, m. to Adam Heck; and Elizabeth and Rosabella, twins, the latter of whom died in infancy, while Elizabeth m. Wellington Richard.

Moses K. Balthaser was reared on the home farm and worked for his parents until nineteen years of age, when he hired out on the farm for three years. In 1874 he commenced operating his father's homestead in Lower Heidelberg township, where he tenanted for four years, and then spent seven months on another farm. In 1885 he engaged in the hotel business at Brownsville, where he conducted a successful hostelry for twenty-one years, putting up the present hotel, a two story frame building, 28 x 30 feet, containing twelve rooms. With this property there are seven acres of land. In addition Mr. Balthaser owns a farm of 107 acres of good land in Bern township, near "Leinbach's Hotel," which is tenanted. For some time Mr. Balthaser has been living a retired life in Wernersville, where he is a substantial citizen. He is a large stockholder in the Wernersville Bank. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has never cared for office. He and his wife are members of St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, of which he was a deacon for three years.

On Oct. 19, 1873, Mr. Balthaser married Elmira B. Brossman, born in 1850, in Heidelberg township, daughter of Adam L. and Elizabeth (Bender) Brossman, granddaughter of John Adam and Catharine (Leiss) Brossman and great-granddaughter of Francis Brossman. (For full history of the Brossmans see sketch of Brossman family elsewhere in this work.) Francis Brossman located in Berks county between 1723 and 1729, and was an inhabitant of Heidelberg township at the time of the erection of the county in 1752. Adam L. Brossman was born in 1804, and was a farmer all his life in his native county, where he died in 1883, and was buried at St. Daniel's Church. He was twice married. By his first wife, Elizabeth Bickel, he had two children: William, who is buried at Hain's Church; and Priscilla, late wife of Caton Knorr, buried at St. Daniel's Church in Heidelberg township. His second wife was Elizabeth Bender. To this union there were born four sons and two daughters, as follows: Sarah B. m. Joseph W. Ernest, who died June 6, 1900, and is buried at St. Daniel's Church; Adam B. lives at Reading; John B., of Robesonia, m. Louisa Stricker, who is buried at St. Daniel's Church; Thomas is a farmer in Lower Heidelberg township; James is a contractor at Reading; and Elmira B. m. Moses K. Balthaser. Like all his family Adam L. Brossman was a Lutheran.

JACOB WANNER, of Maxatawny township, was born April 2, 1845, and is the fourth in direct line to bear the name of Jacob. The Wanner family came from the southwestern section of Germany, or from Switzerland, and family tradition, well corroborated by facts, says that they were of Jewish extraction. The first of the name to come to America was Michael Wanner, who settled in this locality in 1733, and was the progenitor of those bearing the name in Berks county.

The great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch was Jacob Wanner, and his son, Jacob Wanner (2), made his home in the vicinity of Fleetwood, where he was engaged in farming. He married and became the father of the following children: Jacob (3); Lena, m. to Peter Kieffer; Daniel, who settled in Exeter township; Betzy, m. to a Mr. Helfrich; Hannah, m. to Henry Miller; Peter, of Rockland township.

Jacob Wanner (3) was born in Richmond township in 1810, and he died in August, 1872, aged sixty-two years. He is buried at St. Peter's Church in Richmond, of which he was an official member. In his earlier life he was a farmer, but later he engaged in the building business at Fleetwood, where he continued for five years. At the end of that time he again engaged in farming. He owned a farm of 140 acres near Moselem, and another near Virginville, in Perry township, of 140 acres. He was well known and at his death left an estate valued at $30,000. He married Barbara Schlegel, daughter of Henry Schlegel, of Richmond township. Their children were: John, of Perry township; Catharine, m. to Reuben Ressler, both deceased; Elizabeth, who died unmarried; Lydia, m. to Lazarus Adam, both deceased; Esther and Peter, twins, of whom the former m. the late Jacob Kutz, and the latter resides in Kirbyville; Miss Sarah; Jacob (4); Daniel, of Richmond township; Amanda, deceased, m. to Urias Schucker, of Richmond township; William, who died young; Susan, who died unmarried; and Mary, deceased, m. to Jacob Stein.

Jacob Wanner (4) was reared to farming on his father's estate, and this calling he has followed all his life. He continued for his parents until he was twenty-one years old, and then farmed at home with his brother Daniel for four years. The next two years he served with his brother Peter on another farm. In 1879 he began farming near Crystal Cave on his father-in-law's farm, remaining two years. Then he purchased a farm from his father-in-law, Jacob Heffner, which contains 129 acres of good land near Kemp's Hotel in Maxatawny township. This has since been his home, and he has made of it not only one of the most profitable places in that vicinity but also one of the most attractive. He and his family attend St. John's Reformed Church at Kutztown.

On May 31, 1879, Mr. Wanner was married to Amanda S. Heffner, daughter of Jacob and Anna (Spohn) Heffner, of Richmond township. Six children have blessed their union, namely: Alice A., m. to Morris Spangler, of Kutztown; Jacob E.; Clara S., m. to John A. Reeser, of Kutztown; Solon H.; Ellen A., m. to Charles A. Berger, of Kuhnsville; and Ida V.

WILLIAM L. BOWER, a resident of Robeson township, was born in Allegheny City, Pa., March 23, 1863, son of Charles C. and Anna (Parks) Bower, and grandson of David Bower.

Charles C. Bower was born in Washington county, Pa., in 1828, and learned the business of potter at Geneva, in Crawford county, Pa. He located at Reading in 1869 and established a pottery plant at the foot of Washington street, which he operated for seven years. He was then connected with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for four years, and then was with the Boyd Directory Company for twenty years, when he retired. He married Anna Parks, of Geneva, a daughter of David Parks, and by her had seven children: Edward, who died unmarried; Charles F., who married a Miss Miller; William L.; Andrew P.; Edward; Anna; and one who died in infancy.

William L. Bower moved to Reading with his father when but six years old, and in that city he received his education, attending school until he was sixteen years of age. He then learned the trade of potter in his father's pottery, which then stood at the foot of Washington street, between the West Reading Rolling Mills and the sawmill of Foos & Bingaman. He served an apprenticeship of but two years, when he was sufficiently qualified to take charge of the Klahr Pottery at Bernville, and he managed the plant for two years.

Mr. Bower then turned his attention to bar-keeping, starting the "Eagle Hotel" in Bernville, and after remaining there two years went to Flying Hill Park, then a very popular resort along the Schuylkill river, several miles below Reading, to assist the proprietor during the summer season of 1885. He then took charge of the bar at the "Hotel Penn" in Reading, and here he continued for eight years. When the proprietor of the Sheetz saloon, on Penn street above Eighth, died, he purchased the place from the widow, but he carried it on less than a year when he sold out to remove to Pittsburg, to take charge of the Baily Café, opposite the postoffice, and recognized as the finest saloon in that prosperous city. He remained there two years, but preferring the eastern part of Pennsylvania, he returned to Berks county, and purchased the "Center House" at Grill, in Cumru township. He carried on this place for five years in a most successful manner, making it a very popular resort by first-class catering, and furnishing superior meals to many of the best people of Reading. The large and finely equipped "Lebanon Valley House" at Wernersville having then been offered for sale, he purchased it and took possession in 1901, and he operated this also in a very successful manner for five years, when he retired, after having been continually engaged in the business of catering to the public for upward of twenty years. He has recently removed to a large farm in Robeson township, which he purchased.

Mr. Bower has been twice married. His first wife was Rebecca Goodhart, of Adamstown, a daughter of John Goodhart, who was a soldier in the Civil war, and a prisoner at Libby Prison, where he was starved to death. After her decease, Mr. Bower married Ella Freeman, of Cumru township, a daughter of Peter R. Freeman and Dora Rathje, his wife, and they have a daughter, Anna.

JOSHUA ANGSTADT, residing near Kutztown, was born in Rockland township, one-half mile south of Stony Point, Dec. 15, 1850.

Rockland township has been for several generations the home of this branch of the family, and there Solomon Angstadt, grandfather of Joshua, was born. By occupation he was a wood-chopper. For some years he lived in Schuylkill county, but afterward returned to his native township to end his days. He died at the home of his son Abraham, near Pricetown. He married and became the father of ten children, as follows: Betsy, m. to John Haak; Benjamin, of Schuylkill Haven, who became the father of Helena, Mary and Kate; Judith, m. to Jeremiah Schappel; Daniel, of Lyons, who was the father of Henry, Mary and Oliver; Catharine, m. to a Mr. Hartman; Susanna, m. to David Levan; Peter; Abraham, of Rockland township; John, of Fleetwood, and later of Reading, who had children—Peter, Oscar, Solon, Frank and John; and Solomon.

Peter Angstadt, son of Solomon, was born in Rockland township, and there he died in January, 1883, aged sixty-two years, and is buried at Dryville. For many years he was engaged as a shoemaker, but later turned his attention to farming. His wife, Helena Heffner, born April 18, 1824, was a daughter of Andraes Heffner, and they had eleven children: Samuel; Jairus; William, whose children were—Fred, Robert, Winfield, Carrie, Peter, Bertolet and Katie; Hannah, m. to Nathan Heist; Louisa, who died unmarried; Sarah, m. to Jonas Hill, of Richmond; Joshua; Frank, of Lyons, Pa.; Clinton, of Maxatawny; Peter, who died aged twenty-three years; and Edwin, who lives in Maxatawny near his brother Joshua.

Joshua Angstadt was reared to farming pursuits, and worked for his father until he attained his majority. He then learned the carpenter's trade under the guidance of Henry Schaeffer, now deceased, and this occupation he followed for fourteen years as a journeyman in Fleetwood, Kutztown, Leesport and surrounding districts. In 1880 he came to Maxatawny township, where he bought one of the most valuable farms in the district. This consists of fifty-two acres, and he has it well improved with up-to-date conveniences. His walks are of cement and the lawn around the comfortable residence is always in a neat well-kept condition, making a most attractive home. In politics Mr. Angstadt is a Democrat, and for six years served as school director, two years of which time he was secretary of the board. He and his family attend St. John's Lutheran Church, in which he has been an elder since 1907.

On June 8, 1878, Mr. Angstadt was married to Louisa Heffner, daughter of Charles and Hannah (Rothermel) Heffner, and granddaughter of Joseph Rothermel, of Union county. Four children have been born to them: Lizzie H., m. to Samuel Menard, of Reading; Solon, who died aged twenty-three years, eleven months, eleven days; Odella H., and Leroy.

MOSES BENNECOFF, of Maxatawny township, was born Sept. 4, 1851, in Greenwich township, Berks county, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Spohn) Bennecoff.

Philip Benighoff was the ancestor of this family. He was born in the Old World, and came to America about the time of the Revolutionary war. In 1800 he was a taxpayer in Albany township, Berks county, his assessment being a county tax of twelve shillings. There is a record that in 1815 a William Benighoff paid a county tax of seven shillings in the same district. He was probably a son of Philip and brother of Peter.

Peter Bennecoff, grandfather of Moses, was a resident of Greenwich township. He married Polly Haring, and his immediate descendants were: Joel, who had Charles, Jeremiah and Austin; Levi, living at Allentown; William; Benjamin; Peter; and Abby, m. to Charles Eck.

There is another family record of about the same date. John Benighoff (1816-1886) and Lydia Benighoff (1830-1906) were brother and sister. Lydia married William Schick (1828-1890), and they owned a small farm in Millcreek, Maxatawny township. In 1889 they retired and moved to Monterey, where Mr. Schick died the following year. He had two brothers, Henry and Nathan.

Benjamin Bennecoff, father of Moses, was born Jan. 23, 1818, and died April 28, 1884. He was a farmer and also carried on carpet weaving. His farm of seventy acres was located near the Roth school house, in Greenwich township. He married Sarah Spohn, born July 25, 1822, who died April 16, 1892. They had nine children, as follows: Noah, who died Feb. 2, 1907, aged sixty-five years, was supervisor of Maxatawny township for twenty-one years; Mary m. Abraham Geist; Sarah m. Henry Derr; Benjamin lived in Claussville, Pa.; Moses; William is a farmer near Krumsville, Pa.; Emma died aged twenty-one years; and two died young.

Moses Bennecoff was reared on his father's farm and when eighteen years of age he learned the stone mason's trade, which he followed six years. In 1874 he began farming in Maxatawny township and after being a tenant for twelve years, he bought a farm of fifty acres, to which he has since added twelve acres. In 1900 he built a house on his farm, and in many ways has improved his property.

On Nov. 18, 1876, Mr. Bennecoff married Sarah Amelia Bausher, daughter of Jacob Bausher, of Windsor Castle, and they have had six children, namely: William, born in 1879, died in 1896; Charles, a farmer in Maxatawny township, m. Amy Krick; Edwin; James; Mamie, and Irwin. Mr. Bennecoff and family are Lutherans, and are members of Maxatawny Zion Church.

GEORGE P. ANGSTADT, proprietor of the "Pennsylvania House," at Kutztown, was born in that borough, Oct. 13, 1868, a member of an early settled Berks county family.

Samuel Angstadt, the great-grandfather, was a farmer of Rockland township. He married Catharine Herman, and their children were: Martin, Daniel, Peter, Dinah and Angelina.

Peter Angstadt, son of Samuel, was born July 4, 1808, and he died Jan. 29, 1890. He was long sexton of St. John's Union Church at Kutztown, and was a very highly esteemed man in his community. He married Eliza Fegely, and they had the following children: John, James, William, Sarah, Louisa, Samuel, George, Emma and Mary.

James Angstadt, son of Peter and father of George P., was born in August, 1841, and his death occurred Jan. 15, 1894, when he was aged fifty-three years. In his earlier life he was a brick manufacturer, but in his later life a butcher at Kutztown. His residence was on White Oak street. His widow, Mary (Herring) Angstadt, who still lives at the old home, was a daughter of John and Lydia Herring, of Greenwich township. Four children—two sons and two daughters—were born to James Angstadt and wife, namely: John H., of Kutztown; George P.; Lizzie (m. David James, of Kutztown); and Mamie (m. Alvin J. Hepner, of Kutztown).

George P. Angstadt received his education in the public schools and when eighteen years of age began to learn the carriage painter's trade from Charles Miller & Son, serving a full four years' apprenticeship. The effect of the paint on his health, however, was so injurious that he was obliged to abandon the trade. He then learned shoe making at the Keystone shoe factory, and there he worked for twelve years. On Jan. 3, 1900, he became proprietor of the "Pennsylvania House," which he has since conducted with great success. He is known all over the county for his turkey dinners and political feasts.

Mr. Angstadt's fraternal connections are with Castle No. 70, Knights of the Golden Eagles; Aerie No. 839, Fraternal Order of Eagles; and with the Sons of Veterans, of Allentown. He and his family belong to St. Paul's Reformed Church. Mr. Angstadt is an active political worker, and since 1906 he has been committeeman from the borough. He has frequently been a delegate to the county conventions, and has held a number of local offices. His influence is a valuable asset to any candidate for office in the county.

On May 23, 1890, Mr. Angstadt was married to Miss Alice Hilbert, daughter of John and Emma (Wessner) Hilbert, of Maxatawny township. Three children have blessed this union, namely: Ella M., a skilled musician, and a graduate of the Keystone State Normal, class of 1908; Anna, a graduate of the borough high school, class of 1908, and also a musician; and Marguerite J., a student in school.

SCHOEDLER. The Schoedler family, or as it was originally called von Schoedler, is of ancient date in the Rhine provinces in Germany, of free, that is noble, descent. From the Rhineland the family spread over large portions of Germany and Switzerland, where it originated various noble families, which are recorded partly in the Austrian, and partly in the Berner and Basler lists of Knights. The lineage goes back so far that it is lost in the early centuries of the Christian era in Germany. In the time of King Dagobert (in the seventh century), one finds in his retinue of attendants, Hiram Schoedler, Knight, and private secretary to the King; and in the time of Charles the Great (in the eighth and early ninth centuries), there were spread over the Rhine country various highly respectable and settled families of the name, as, for example, the Knight Hector, surnamed der Schoedler, in Bingen-on-the-Rhine, who was for a time town magistrate of Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle) to which office he was appointed by the Emperor; and Hans der Schoedler, who was constituted Count of Fiefenbach by Charles the Great, in the year 805 A. D. During the same period the Knight Gotthard, surnamed der Schoedler, distinguished himself by his crusades against the then heathenish Frieslanders, of whom he frequently took many captives and brought them to Aachen, where they submitted to Christian baptism. He died in 820 as a monk of the cloister at Paderborn, where to this day his tomb may be seen in the cross-passages of the choir, with the Schoedler coat-of-arms cut into stone.

The aforementioned Hector Schoedler is considered the ancestor of the Schoedler family, and appears to have been the father of the Hans and Gotthard Schoedler, mentioned above. Among his descendants was George von Schoedler, a landed proprietor on the lower Rhine, who left two sons, Adolph and Bernhard, the former of whom founded the noble Schoedler family of Wiesenthal, in Austria, the Emperor Albrecht, having in the year 1305 invested him with this honor and the fief of Wiesenthal. This family became extinct in the seventeenth century.

Bernhard's family spread among the lesser nobility of the Rhineland, under the name of von Schoedler, and his descendants have lived in various portions of Germany and Switzerland. In the latter country, descendants of this branch are found among the Berner and Basler nobility as early as the fourteenth century, all of whom have preserved and continued the Rhinelandian coat-of-arms. In the year 1260 this coat-of-arms was confirmed and sealed by the Emperor Rudolph I, by letters patent to George von Schoedler, of the Rhineland, and his descendants, as their hereditary and proprietary coat-of-arms. In the middle of the seventeenth century the name of Schoedler disappears from the genealogical tables of the Austrian and Swiss nobility, probably because at this time the most important and respectable branches of the family had died out, and those remaining had abandoned the title of nobility. Rev. Dr. D. E. Schoedler, of Allentown, Pa., has a copy of the Geschlechts-Wappen, or coat-of-arms, of the Schoedler family, but says he cannot interpret it.

There are many Schoedlers living in Germany to this day. One of them is a prominent leader of the Catholic Center party of the German Reichstag, and of the Bavarian House of Commons; and there are a number of the name in Berlin, having immigrated thither from South Germany. Some of them are holding office under the German government. The Schoedlers have also been prominent in the educational affairs of Germany. Friedrich Schoedler, Ph. D., and formerly assistant in the chemical laboratory of Giessen, has published a book entitled "Das Buch der Natur," which has been translated into English by Prof. Henry Medlock, F. C. S., of London, England.

Thus far no connecting link between the Schoedlers in Germany and Switzerland with those in America has been found. The Schoedlers settled mainly in the townships of Longswamp, Maxatawny and Richmond, Berks county, Pa., but it has not yet been ascertained when the first immigrants of the family arrived. It is known, however, that they were all related to one another. They no doubt came to this country under the age at which German immigrants were obliged to swear allegiance to the British government, as the name is not found in any one of the lists that have been preserved. Moreover they must have come over quite early as the father of Henry, great-grandfather of the Rev. Dr. D. E. Schoedler, of Allentown, was born in this country.

(I) Henry Schoedler married a Hoffman, by whom he had a son named Henry.

(II) Henry Schoedler, Jr., was born in 1771, and he died Feb. 12, 1832. He married Elizabeth Jaeger, who was born in Reading, Pa., April 18, 1773, daughter of Henry Jaeger and his wife, whose maiden name was Bingaman. Their children were: Solomon was born Jan. 25, 1795, in Oley township; Hannah was born June 4, 1800, in Alsace township, m. David O'Niel, and their son George is the veteran shoemaker at Kutztown; Esther was born Dec. 27, 1802, in Longswamp township; Susanna was born April 11, 1806, in Macungie township, Lehigh (then Northampton) county; Fayette was born Feb. 14, 1809, in Upper Sancon township, Northampton county, and m. Sarah Esser; George was born March 7, 1812, in Macungie township, and m. Lucinda Evarts; Sallie was born July 20, 1818, in Maxatawny township, m. Augustus Sprenger, and their son Lewis lives at Independence, Iowa.

(III) Fayette Schoedler, son of Henry, Jr., born Feb. 14, 1809, in Upper Sancon township, Northampton county, married Sarah Esser, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Humbert) Esser, of Kutztown. Fayette Schoedler was well and favorably known throughout Berks county. He served for many years as elder in St. John's Reformed Church of Kutztown, often served on juries at court, and for one term was chief burgess of Kutztown. He was not re-elected because he believed that borough ordinances were made to be carried out. In the old militia days he was a drum major, serving under Capt. Daniel Bieber, who gave him the following testimonial:

"To all whome it may concern:

I do hereby certify that Mr. Fayette Schoedler, of the Borough of Kutztown, has served for seven successive years as a volunteer and drummer under my command, in a corps of Light Infantry, called Washington Guards, of the First Battalion, Second Brigade, Sixth Division, Pennsylvania Militia, and for his skill in military tactics and general conduct, I grant him this certificate.

(Signed) Daniel Bieber, Captain,

Kutztown, Jan. 3, 1839."

Of the children of Fayette and Sarah, the eldest son, Henry D., lived many years in Reading, served two terms as coroner of Berks county, and died in June, 1890; the Rev. Dr. D. E., is mentioned below; Mrs. Sarah Ann Gehret lives at Reading; and Mrs. Mary E. Miller, at South Allentown.

(IV) Rev. Dr. D. E. Schoedler, son of Fayette, was born at Kutztown, Feb. 6, 1840, was baptized March 15, 1840, by the Rev. Daniel Kohler, and confirmed March 22, 1856, by the Rev. C. G. Herman. He attended the public schools of Kutztown, for a time Kutztown Academy, and in 1857 the private school of the Hon. William S. Ermentrout, deceased. He entered Allentown Seminary, afterward Muhlenberg College, in 1858, and Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, in 1860, graduating from the latter with honors in 1863. He studied theology under private tutors, and in 1865 was licensed by the East Pennsylvania Classis, and in 1868 ordained at Bath, Pa. He taught school at Kutztown from 1863 to 1864; at Easton, 1864-65; and at Bethlehem, 1865-70. While teaching at Bethlehem, he assisted in starting the first newspaper published in South Bethlehem, and he edited it for two years. It was known as the Weekly Progress, and became very popular. Dr Schoedler has served the following pastoral charges: Brodheadsville; Oley; one in San Francisco, Cal.; Mt. Zion and Paradise, Northumberland Co., Pa.; and Grace Church, South Allentown. From 1875 to 1884 he had charge of Oley Academy, during which time he prepared many young men and women for the profession of teaching, and put a number of boys on the way to college who have since found their way into various walks of life, many of them prominent in official and professional circles.

On June 18, 1865, Dr. Schoedler was married to Miss Ellen L. Coppel, of Allentown. One son and six daughters were born to them, of whom the son and three daughters survive. The son, Frank A., is an eminent scholar and musician, being now professor of German and History in the high school at Spokane, Wash., and also director of the high school orchestra. Dr. Schoedler is Stated Clerk of Lehigh Classis of the Reformed Church in the United States; secretary of the board of trustees of Classis; secretary and treasurer of the Phoebe Deaconess and Old Folk's Home, Allentown. He has spent a busy and useful life in religious, educational and benevolent work.

(III) George Schoedler, son of Henry, Jr., born March 7, 1812, in Macungie, and was a laborer at Kutztown. He married Lucinda Evarts, and had five children: William; Mary, who died young; Hettie, who married William Gehret; Henry P.; and Lewis, of Allentown.

(IV) Henry P. Schoedler was born at Kutztown, Feb. 25, 1843, and is now the proprietor of the "Washington House" at Bowers. He was brought up in the vicinity of Kutztown, and when nineteen years old began to learn the carpenter's trade under David Dunkel, and this he followed seven years. In 1868 he engaged in the hotel business at Kutztown, where he remained two years. In 1877 he located in Bowers, where he has since had charge of the "Washington House," now a period of over thirty years. He conducts an up-to-date establishment, and is very well known to the traveling public, his entire nineteen rooms being generally well filled. Mr. Schoedler is a member of K. G. E., No. 70, of Kutztown. In 1865 he married Amanda Billman, daughter of Reuben Billman, and they have five children: Ellen; Annie; George P.; Kate, who married Charles Bieber, of Lyons, Pa.; and Harry, who assists his father in the hotel business.

(V) George P. Schoedler, son of Henry P., has followed in his father's footsteps, and is now the popular hotel proprietor of Lyons, where he is also engaged as a veterinary dentist. He was born at Kutztown, Jan. 8, 1869, and he passed his boyhood days in that borough. When he was eight years old his parents removed to Fleetwood, where they lived until the fall of 1877, when they went to Bowers. Mr. Schoedler received his earlier education in the public schools of Berks county and the Keystone State Normal School, and in 1892 entered the Toronto Veterinary Dental School, from which he was graduated in 1893. He then located at Bowers Station, and there built up a good practice. Since November, 1904, he has been the proprietor of the "American House," at Lyons, but this has not necessitated his giving up his practice, which is large and constantly growing. He has a large Reading practice, having an office at the corner of Court and Poplar streets, where he is to be found every Tuesday. He also deals in horses and hogs, and is meeting with great success. Fraternally he belongs to Adonai Castle, No. 72, K. G. E., of Kutztown.

Mr. Schoedler married Edith Heffley, daughter of William and Amanda (Gehret) Heffley, of Kutztown.

JOHN RADENBACH, deceased, was a lifelong resident of Jefferson township, Berks county, having been born upon the farm where he lived and died. His great-grandfather, George Radenbach, also lived in that township, making his home for part of his life on the place now occupied by Miss Rebecca Radenbach daughter of the late John Radenbach.

Mr. Radenbach was a son of John and grandson of John, and the family has long been known and respected in this section of Berks county. He was one of the large land owners of Jefferson township, owning two farms, one of 170 and one of sixty acres, all valuable land. He married Polly Leib, and both are buried in the Little Tulpehocken cemetery in Jefferson township. They had children as follows: William, John (who died in infancy), Daniel, Sallie, Rebecca and John, all of whom are deceased except Rebecca, who owns and lives upon the old homestead. She also owns the other farm mentioned. Miss Radenbach was born in 1829, and is at present the only representative of her family. The house in which she resides, though over two hundred years old is in fine condition, and is a typical old-style log house.

Miss Radenbach's farm is cultivated by William Long, who was born in Jefferson township in 1854, son of Adam and Maria (Wagner) Long and he has lived on this place since 1898. He married Katie Richard, daughter of David and Kate (Stoudt) Richard; they have no children of their own, but they are rearing a niece, Helen Irene, who is now attending school.

There is a remarkable grove of walnut trees on Miss Radenbach's farm, one of which she sold recently for the unusual price of $110. It was nearly five feet in diameter near the base, and three feet in diameter fifty feet above the ground, without a single branch up to that height. The tree was sent to Germany, where it will be cut up for furniture veneer. There are a number of other valuable trees in the grove, but none equal this giant of the forest, which had long been famous in the locality. Walnut

JOHN E. SCHAEFFER, on the Easton road in Maxatawny township, was born in Richmond township, Berks county, Aug. 2, 1867, son of George S. Schaeffer, and grandson of Daniel Schaeffer.

Daniel Schaeffer was a farmer on the original Schaeffer homestead until his retirement. He prospered in his endeavors, and became very well-to-do. His wife was a member of the Sell family. Their children were: John, George S., Daniel, Philip, Nathan, David, Mary and Caroline, the three last named all being deceased.

George S. Schaeffer, son of Daniel, was born on his father's farm in February, 1840. In his earlier life for several years he was a merchant in Fleetwood, and then began farming on the homestead, which he now owns. It consists of 102 acres of the best land in the county. In 1902 he retired from active work and located in Fleetwood, his son David L. now cultivating the farm. Mr. Schaeffer was school director for a number of years, and is much interested in educational affairs. He married Catharine Leibelsperger, sister of Joel Leibelsperger (mentioned elsewhere), and they had children as follows: Emma, who died aged twenty-one years; John E.; Hannah, who died young; Kate, m. to William Kieffer, of Richmond township; Hettie, m. to Charles Rahn, of Richmond township; Amanda, who died young; David, who farms the homestead; and Robert, a student in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

John E. Schaeffer received his preliminary education in the common schools of his native township, and then attended the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown for four terms. Under his father he learned all the duties pertaining to farming, and worked for him until he attained his majority. In 1888 he entered the general store of Joel Leibelsperger, at Moselem Springs, where he clerked for fourteen months, applying himself to learn the principles of commercialism. He then clerked for Kutz brothers at Fleetwood for two years. He was next associated with N. S. Schaeffer under the firm name of N. S. Schaeffer & Co., and this partnership continued successfully for two years. John Schaeffer then retired and returned to farming, being induced to seek open air employment by ill health. He cultivated the homestead farm for two years. In the spring of 1896 he purchased the Charles Rahn estate, the farm consisting of 102 acres of valuable land, and to this he has since devoted all his attention. He has five head of horses, and averages about eleven cows. His farm machinery is all of the latest and most approved style, and the entire place shows the owner to be industrious and progressive. In politics he is a Democrat, and has held a number of local offices. He and his family attend St. Paul's Reformed Church at Kutztown.

On June 4, 1892, Mr. Schaeffer was married to Maria Rahn, daughter of Charles. Three children came to bless this union: George and Charles, twins; and Irwin, who died aged six months. Mr. Schaeffer is very highly respected, and has many friends in the county.

HENRY A. WILHELM, who is now living retired at Stouchsburg, Berks county, after many years spent in agricultural pursuits, is a worthy representative of one of Pennsylvania's highly respected families. He was born Jan. 22, 1841, near Host, Tulpehocken township, son of Isaac and Rebecca (Wagner) Wilhelm.

According to Rupp's "30,000 Names of Immigrants," there appears a Wilhelm (Christian name not given), over twenty-one years of age, who was among the emigrants who crossed the Atlantic to New York State in 1710, passed the winter of 1710 and summer of 1711 in Livingston Manor, N. Y., and who may have been among the number who in 1723 or subsequently came to Tulpehocken. Christian Wilhelm, a native of the Palatinate, was one of the pioneers of the Tulpehocken settlement, as is found on the Lindenmuth map of the Tulpehocken pioneer land-owners. He was a soldier in the Revolution, as was also Jacob Michael Wilhelm (probably a son), who paid a tax of three pounds in Tulpehocken in 1759, and who died July 8, 1834.

In Rev. John Caspar Stoever's Record of Marriages is recorded Jan. 19, 1741, the union of John Henry Wilhelm and Maria Haermaennin (probably Herman), of Swatara, and in the Record of Baptisms appear baptisms of children of Henry Wilhelm, as follows: Maria, born Dec. 4, 1741; and John Philip, Jan. 28, 1743.

The Wilhelms of Host and Marion are descended from John Adam Wilhelm, who was born May 25, 1751, and who died on his farm Aug. 31, 1831. He may have been a son of John Henry, mentioned above, or of Christian. Another theory is that John Adam was a son of Jacob Wilhelm, shown on the proprietary records of Berks county for 1767, 1768 and 1779, as of Tulpehocken township, being credited with 210 acres of land in the last year named. John Adam Wilhelm married Maria Christina Gruber, who was born Dec. 4, 1766, and who died Sept. 7, 1825 (daughter of John Adam Gruber (1735-1807), eldest son of Henry Gruber the emigrant). Both are buried at Host Church, of which they were faithful members, and where many of the family sleep their last sleep. The Wilhelms have always been of the German Reformed denomination in religious belief, and in political matters Democrats. John Adam Wilhelm was the original owner of the homestead, which has remained in the family name for over a century. To him and his wife were born seven children, as follows: (1) John (Johannes) is mentioned below. (2) Jacob, born Oct. 10, 1792, lived in Marion township, and died May 25, 1871. He married Barbara Boltz, born March 5, 1798, died Aug. 10, 1878, and had children: William, Edward, Mary (1823-1873, wife of Willoughby Scharff) and Mrs. Isaac Lebo. (3) Catharine, born 1789, died 1863, married John Henry Schmidt (1784-1848), and their son Henry Smith was the father of Henry K. Smith, of Mahanoy City, who now owns the old Smith home in Jefferson township and a farm near Bernville. (4) Maria, born 1796, died 1855, married Henry Christ, and had children: Jacob, John, Hannah (never married), Elizabeth (wife of John Henninger), and Mrs. Michael Hiester. (5) John Adam, born Aug. 19, 1799, died Sept. 10, 1837, married, in 1826, Magdalene Trautman (1804-1886), and had no children. (6) Elizabeth, born 1797, died 1875, married George Moyer (1810-1869), and both are buried at Strausstown. They had two sons and four daughters, of whom the two younger daughters died unmarried, and the other two became, respectively, the first and second wife of Jonathan Rauch. (7) Barbara married Paul Lengel, and had six children, among whom were Henry, Peter and Paul.

John (Johannes) Wilhelm, son of John Adam, was born May 27, 1785, and died May 22, 1872, aged eighty-seven years. His life was spent in agricultural pursuits on the farm at Host. He married Anna Maria Kurr, who was born April 29, 1786, and who died Feb. 19, 1870, aged eighty-three years. They became the parents of nine children, as follows: (1) Adam, born 1808, died 1858, married Elizabeth Kuhner (or Keener), and had children: Frank, Augustus, Fietta (wife of Elias Groff), and Sarah (wife of Lucian Potteiger). (2) Elizabeth, born 1809, died 1877, married John Himmelberger (1802-1871), and had seven children: Lydia (wife of John Wenrich, deceased, a tombstone cutter at Bernville), Rebecca (wife of Percival Lengel), Jared, Adam, Elizabeth (wife of Amos Anderson), Isabella (wife of Frank Forry) and Henry. (3) Isaac is mentioned below. (4) Jacob, born 1814, died 1883, married (first) Lovina (also given as Elweina) Keiser, and (second) and (third) two sisters, Mary and Elizabeth Miller. To the first marriage were born: John, James, Samuel, Rebecca (wife of Henry Snyder), Theresa (wife of William Miller), Sarah (wife of Samuel Deck), Mary and Elizabeth (first and second wife, respectively, of Nathaniel Allerd). To the second marriage were born: Jared, Jacob, Isaac, Amelia (wife of John Himmelberger), Lovina (who married a Mr. Shade) and Carrie (who married a Mr. Staudt). (5) A. Maria (Polly) married Henry Kuhner (also spelled Kiener and Keener), and had children: John, Adam, Henry, Joseph, Augustus, Sarah (wife of Adam Schmidt), Emma (wife of Isaac Schmidt, brother of Adam), and Amelia (wife of Henry Fidler, tobacconist of Womelsdorf. (6) Catharine married Jonathan Zeller, and had children: Reilly (of Stouchsburg), Mrs. Dr. Frank Kantner, and Mrs. Henry Kachel. (7) Joseph, born 1826, died 1902, married (first) Lovina Winter, and (second) Elizabeth Schaeffer. He had children: Amelia married (first) John Brossman and (second) Albert Behney, and Mary (wife of Henry Peiffer). (8) Augustus, born 1828, died 1903, married and had one child, Mary Amelia, who died in young womanhood. (9) John, born 1828, and living near Host, married and had children: Ezra, Mandon George, Henry, Hannah (wife of Frank Beidler), Maria (wife of Jacob Swope) and Katie (wife of Frank Frantz).

Isaac Wilhelm, father of Henry A., was born in 1812, at Host, on the old Wilhelm homestead, and he died in June, 1869, aged fifty-seven years. He was a life long farmer, and carried on operations on his 101-acre tract, situated near Millersburg. Mr. Wilhelm was buried at Salem cemetery, Millersburg. His wife was Rebecca Wagner, who was born in 1810, and died in 1885, daughter of Henry Wagner, and they had three children: Mary, deceased, who was the wife of James Spangler; Henry A.; and Rebecca, who died unmarried.

Henry A. Wilhelm was four years old when his father removed to Bethel township, and there he assisted the latter until twenty-three years old, at which time his father's death occurred, and Henry A. Wilhelm continued to cultivate the farm for two more years. After the death of his first wife he sold his farm stock and lived at Millersburg with his mother for one year, and in 1875 he married a second time. Three years later he removed with his family to Dunbar, Nebr., where he owned a quarter-section and an eighth-section of land, comprising 240 acres, which he cultivated with much success for upwards of twenty-five years, having on an average of fifty head of cattle and from twenty to sixty horses. After disposing of his property, person and real, he returned to Pennsylvania and settled at Stouchsburg, where he owns a fine farm of 105 acres, now tenanted, and he is also the owner of twenty-seven acres situated near the Lutheran Orphans' Home, at Womelsdorf. Mr. Wilhelm now lives retired, and is in comfortable circumstances, enjoying the fruits of industry, thrift and economy of his earlier life. He and his family are Reformed members of Tulpehocken (Leinbach's) Church. Mr. Wilhelm is fond of travel, and he and his wife visited the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, and the Omaha Exposition in 1898.

Mr. Wilhelm was married (first) to Sarah A. Spang, daughter of Isaac and Lydia (Daub) Spang, and granddaughter of Peter and Sarah (Deppen) Spang, farming people of North Heidelberg township. She died Oct. 2, 1871, aged twenty-six years, nine months, one day, leaving five children, as follows: Irwin S., who is engaged in farming in Nebraska; M. Alice, deceased, who was the wife of Henry Meyer; Sallie R., who married Oren Buchanan; Lizzie A., deceased, who married Charles Holliday; and Amelia M., who died unmarried aged thirty-one years.

In 1875 Mr. Wilhelm was married (second) to Mary A. Spang, sister of his first wife, and they have had four children: George I., Frank C. and Harry W., who are successful business men of Dunbar, Nebr.; and Miss Mabel A., a well known school teacher of Marion township.

STEPHEN SYLVESTER WISSER, a merchant in West Reading for upward of twenty years, was born at Ephrata, Lancaster county, Jan. 13, 1853. When three years old his parents moved to Reamstown, and they resided at that place until 1867, when they went to Denver. He attended the public schools until he was sixteen years old, and then learned tanning, in which business his father was engaged. After remaining in the tannery for three years, and not liking the vocation, he entered the general store of S. M. Brubaker as a clerk, and continued with him for eight years.

Mr. Wisser then learned cigar making and followed it for three years, when he moved to the village of Bird-in-Hand and engaged in the confectionery business, starting with a capital of less than $25. He carried on this business for three years and then determined to locate in a more promising place. He selected Reading and went there in 1882, locating at No. 240 Penn street, for the purpose of engaging again in the cigar business, but not realizing his expectations after conducting the store for two years, he removed to West Reading to engage in the grocery business. This was in 1884, and Mr. Wisser started with a limited capital at No. 26 West Penn street. In ten years he succeeded in developing a large trade, and this encouraged him to include dry goods and general merchandise in his stock in trade. By persevering and attending strictly to business he became more and more successful. Gradually enlarging his store, in 1902 he added another extensive department, that of household furniture. In the following four years he increased his trade to still larger proportions, and now he occupies three adjoining three-story brick buildings, altogether seventy-five feet wide by eighty feet deep, which evidences the extent of his great success from a small and well directed beginning.

In 1876 Mr. Wisser was married to Harriet Reinhold, daughter of Frederick and Susan (Sharp) Reinhold, of Reinholdsville, by whom he had six children: Daisy, Mrs. Walter Heckman; Bertha, Mrs. Nelson Boltz; Charles; Stephen; and two who died young. He and his family have been members of the First Baptist Church at Reading since removing from Lancaster county. He acted as one of the building committee in the erection of the superior building at Fifth and Franklin streets; and served as a trustee for several terms filling this position at the present time.

Mr. Wisser's father, Samuel Wisser, was born at Grimville, Berks county, and removed to Denver, Lancaster county, when sixteen years old. He there learned the tanning business, and carried this on for some years. He married Julia Ann Rhoads, daughter of Philip Rhoads, of Reamstown, by whom he had two children: Ann Eliza, who died young; and Stephen.

Philip Wisser, the grandfather, was of Reamstown, and by occupation was a cabinet-maker. He married Julia Ann Harding, and by her had children: Samuel, William, Elias, Frederick, Edward, Mary (Mrs. John Frecht) and Harriet (Mrs. Ephraim Carpenter).

EDWARD LAWRENCE, proprietor of the "White House Hotel," in the Neversink Mountains, near Reading, who is also engaged in bottling the famous White House mineral water, was born June 30, 1859, at the place where he now resides, and in this location secured his education.

As a young man Mr. Lawrence learned the hatting trade, which he followed for about four years, next being employed at the McHose brick-yard. He then spent a few years in the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, when he became clerk for his father, but later engaged at boiler-making, a trade he learned at the Union Boiler Works, continuing to be employed there for a period of sixteen years. Mr. Lawrence was then appointed a mail carrier in Reading, a position he held for five years, and he later held an official position at the Berks county prison. He then went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he spent some time, but in 1904 returned to Reading to engage in his present business. Here is obtained the finest water in the county, a tunnel, 175 feet long, being cut through the rocks of the Neversink Mountain. Mr. Lawrence and his father daily operate four teams in the city of Reading and for many miles around, besides having a large trade in Philadelphia, New York and Atlantic City, N. J. Edward Lawrence took charge of the hotel in 1906, and in this venture he has been very successful. He and his father also own twenty-eight acres of land adjoining the city of Reading, in Cumru township, along the Schuylkill river, from which property can be obtained a magnificent view of the surrounding country. Mr. Lawrence is a stanch Democrat in politics, and socially is connected with the F. O. E., and the Oley Valley and Commercial Clubs.

Mr. Lawrence married Emma Clark, daughter of Patrick Clark, and to this union have been born two children: Lewis J. and Helen E.

HENRY S. CLAUSER, justice of the peace and public school teacher at Sinking Spring, was born May 28, 1864, near St. Michael's Church, in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, Berks Co., Pa. He was brought up on his father's farm, and educated in the public schools. When sixteen years old he began teaching school and continued to do so for three terms. At the end of the school terms he attended the Keystone State Normal School to acquire greater proficiency in the profession of teaching, and in 1883, having been appointed as a teacher in Spring township, he located at Sinking Spring, and from that time until now he has been teaching in the public schools of the township, the last eighteen years as teacher of the grammar school with the exception of one year, at the beginning, when he taught in Lancaster county. Mr. Clauser has filled various township offices, and since 1903 has acted as local agent for five different fire insurance companies. In 1895 he was elected a justice of the peace, and he was re-elected twice, serving now in his third term; in 1905 he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Sinking Spring Water Company, and has been officiating until now. He is affiliated with several secret and social societies, serving as secretary of the Sons of America, and of the Odd Fellows, and as treasurer of the American Mechanics.

'Squire Clauser married Anna M. Hull, a daughter of Hiram R. Hull, a prosperous merchant of Sinking Spring for upwards of thirty years, and they have one child, Robert R. Clauser.

Harrison K. Clauser, father of the 'Squire, was a farmer of Upper Bern township. He died in 1904 at the age of seventy-eight years. He married Rebecca Snyder, daughter of William Snyder, of Centre township, near Belleman's Church, and they had seven children:

Elmira, Mrs. George Reinsel; Mary, Mrs. O. F. Berger; Harrison S., who married Emmaline Kauffman; Rebecca, Mrs. M. B. Seaman; Daniel S., who married Mary Haag; Henry; and one who died in infancy.

Wilhelm Clauser, the grandfather, was a farmer of Upper Bern township. He married Elizabeth Kauffman, by whom he had seven children: William, who married a Miss Sauser; Daniel, who married Catharine Lindenmuth; Simon, who married Mary Kline; Kate, Mrs. Joseph Savage; Harrison; Adam, who married a Miss Nunnemacher; and Jacob, who married Sarah Long.

LEVI BACHMAN, farmer and dairyman of Spring township, residing near Shillington, Berks county, is a son of Joseph Bachman and a member of an old pioneer family. Frederick Bachman, the ancestor of the family, was a pioneer of Ruscombmanor township, Berks county. He settled there sometime prior to 1759, and reared a large family. One of his sons, Henry, located in Rockland township, another settled in Lynn township, Lehigh county.

Nicholas (Nicholaus) Bachman, probably a grandson of Frederick, is said to have come to Lenhartsville from Lynn township, Lehigh county. He died a few years after his marriage to Elizabeth Benner, sister of Gideon and George Benner, and they had one son, Joseph (or Jost). The widow Bachman married for her second husband, Heinrich Reitz, and they lived on the first farm below Lenhartsville, on the Ontelaunee, having a farm of more than 100 acres. The only son of this union was Lewis. Mrs. Elizabeth Reitz, in about 1883, was burned to death when past seventy years of age, her clothing having caught fire from her pipe. Her remains rest in the cemetery at Dunkel's Church in Greenwich township.

Joseph (or Jost) Bachman, son of Nicholas, was born Jan. 1, 1826, in Lehigh county, Pa. He lived in Berks county, owning a small farm below Lenhartsville, along the Ontelaunee, where he carried on agricultural pursuits. He married Lovina Fenstermacher, who died in middle life, and they are buried side by side at Dunkel's Church, of which Mr. Bachman was at one time a member. He died March 4, 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Bachman had a family of six children, namely: Mary married Daniel Arndt, of Lenhartsville; James died young; Lovina married Eli Henry; Levi is mentioned below; Lizzie married James Jacoby, of Reading, and both are deceased; and Medina died young.

Levi Bachman was born Aug. 15, 1855, at Lenhartsville, Berks county, and he attended the common schools in that section for a few years. He was brought up on the farm, and during his young manhood hired out to various farmers, being thus engaged until he was nearly twenty years old. After the Civil war much ore was mined in this section, and for nine years Mr. Bachman drove an ore team in Oley township, at the end of that period going to Richmond township, where he was similarly engaged in the employ of John K. and James Rothermel, continuing with them for five years. In 1892 he commenced farming on his own account in Richmond township, on Widow Debbie Rothermel's farm, where he remained for two years. Then for four years he farmed a piece of property near "Six-Mile House," in Maiden-creek township, in 1900, moving to Cumru township, where he was a tenant on Benneville Yost's farm for two years. The following three years he was the tenant on the Bittner farm, in Spring township, and he has since occupied his present place in Spring township. It was formerly the Catharine Huyett farm, and consists of ninety-two acres of the best land in Lower Berks county, supplied with the best water in this section. Mr. Bachman purchased the farm in the fall of 1904. He is a thrifty farmer, and indications of his industry and good management are seen everywhere on his land and about his home. He has substantial buildings, all the most improved implements for carrying on his work, and keeps excellent live stock, including good horses and mules and from fourteen to twenty fine cows. He has made somewhat of a specialty of the dairy business, running a daily wagon to Reading, where he markets all his milk. His prosperity is well deserved, and he is highly respected in his community as a worthy man. Considerable iron ore has been found on his farm, adding to his revenue.

Mr. Bachman was married Feb. 13, 1873, to Miss Kate Schitz, daughter of John and Susanna (Welder) Schitz, of Rockland township, and six children have blessed this union: Lillie, wife of Mahlon Weider, of Spring township; William, who married and lives in Shillington; Glenson, married and lives at Oakbrook; Annie, who is married to Frank White, of No. 232 West Elm street, Reading; John, of Shillington; and Clarence, at home. Mr. Bachman and his family are Lutheran members of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring. He is a Democrat in political sentiment.

DAVID S. WENTZEL, who is engaged in cultivating the old Wentzel homestead in Oley township, was born May 27, 1842, on his present farm, son of William and Lydia (Seyler) Wentzel.

Lorentz Wentzel, the ancestor of this old Berks county family, lived in the vicinity of Spies's Church, where is a tombstone bearing the following inscription: "Lorentz Wentzel war geboren D 22 APril 1701 und starb 1780, 14 September—Alt 79 y. 4 monet 22." On the same tombstone, below that of her husband, is found the inscription of his wife, which reads as follows: "Catharina Wentzelin war gebohren 1708, 1 Jan. und starb d. 4 Februar 1793. Theres alter 85 yahre und etliche taga." Tradition has it that this couple had a large family. Baltzer Wentzel, of Douglass township, Berks county, a son of the ancestor, made a will, which is on record in Book A, page 38. This will, made June 14, 1781, and probated April 8, 1782, was executed by his wife, Catharine Wentzel, who survived him, and it mentioned "my son-in-law Henry Jorge." The children of Baltzer and Catharine Wentzel were: Johannes, Anna Maria and Catharine.

Daniel Wentzel, the great-grandfather of David S., and probably a grandson of the ancestor Lorentz, made his will May 23, 1811, and it was entered Dec. 22, 1812, the year of his death, being on record in Will Book A., page 602, his wife having preceded him in death. Their children were: Daniel, who had settled in Oley; John, of Alsace township; and Catharine, who married Matthias Balter.

Daniel Wentzel, grandfather of David S., was a native of Oley township, where he died in the fall of 1849, aged over seventy years. He was a farmer and tanner by occupation and bought the Wentzel farm from the Schwartz family prior to 1800, the tract then consisting of but eighty acres of land. He left a fair-sized estate in his will, which was made July 7, 1849, and entered Nov. 21, 1849, in Will Book 9, page 385, the executors being Abraham Wentzel and Daniel Buskirk. His wife, who was a Hoofnagel, bore him these children: Catharine, who married Solomon Hollenbush; Jacob and Abraham, of Ruscombmanor township; William; and Mary, who married George Bussler.

William Wentzel, father of David S., was born on his father's farm in Oley township, Sept. 25, 1797, and died July 27, 1870, being buried at Friedensburg. At the time of his father's death he obtained the home farm with $1,000 in money, and he followed the occupation of an agriculturist and tanner throughout his life. William Wentzel married Lydia Seyler, born Nov. 6, 1806, who died Jan. 26, 1883, and to them there were born five children: Maria, born in 1832, who died in 1844; Sarah, who died in infancy; Daniel, born in 1829, who died in 1830; Susanna, born in 1840, who died in 1844, and David S.

David S. Wentzel was reared to the work of an agriculturist, and also learned the trade of tanner at Wentzel's tannery. When about twenty-five years old he engaged in farming and for nearly a quarter of a century also carried on a tanning business, having a helper, and disposing of his product at Reading and Philadelphia. In 1897 he disposed of this enterprise to give his entire attention to his farming. The Wentzel tract, one of the fine farms of this locality, consists of 107 acres, the house thereon having been built by Mr. Wentzel in 1871, and the barn by his father and grandfather in 1837. In addition he owns four acres of woodland in Ruscombmanor township, and a tract of 106 acres there in partnership with Samuel Melot. He has been exceedingly successful in the various business enterprises in which he has been engaged, and enjoys the reputation of an honest and upright citizen. In political matters Mr. Wentzel is a Republican, and he has always had the interests of the community at heart, holding various local offices. He and his wife and children are faithful members of Friedensburg Reformed Church.

In 1868 Mr. Wentzel was united in marriage to Mary Ann Angstadt, daughter of Abraham Angstadt, and to this union there were born the following children: Clara, deceased, m. John Hinkle and had three children—Luella, Alvin and Charles; James, of Oley township, m. Alice Potteiger, and has had four children—Howard (deceased), Mary, Mabel and Eva; William, of Oley township, m. Sallie Hafer, and has one daughter—Clara; Wilson m. Katie DeLong and lives with his father; and Charles A., born Dec. 11, 1874, m. Lydia Angstadt, lives on the Wentzel homestead in Oley township and has these children: Emily and Alva (twins), Leroy, Maggie, Wilson, Floyd, Ira and Luella.

FENSTERMACHER. The Fenstermacher family of Longswamp township, Berks county, has its origin in (I) Matthias Fenstermacher, who was a native of the German Palatinate. He crossed the sea on the good ship "Glasgow," which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 9, 1738. On the original list of passengers his age is given as sixty years, and he was born in 1678. He was accompanied to America by his two sons: Jacob, who was then twenty-nine years old, and Wilhelm, twenty-five years old. These three were preceded to the New World by a third son, Philip, who qualified at Philadelphia Aug. 30, 1737. He was then twenty years of age. He settled in Longswamp township, Berks county, and in 1759 he paid a federal tax of £10 in that district. His father and two brothers also lived in Longswamp township for some time. Tradition holds that one of the sons, probably Jacob, located near Philadelphia. The name is also spelled Fenstermaker.

(II) Philip Fenstermacher was a large property owner in Longswamp township and owned valuable land on which in later years was found iron ore in large quantities. Some of this land is still in possession of his progeny. He died in 1790, aged eighty-seven years. This is a long-lived family, a number living to be more than ninety years of age. His will was probated July 9, 1790, and of it his widow Elizabeth was the executor. The names of his sons John and Christopher were mentioned in his last will. He also had a son Philip, Jr., and one named Joseph. The latter was the great-grandfather of B. Henry, and great-great-grandfather of Edwin R.

(III) Joseph Fenstermacher was a native of Longswamp township, and is buried at the Longswamp Church. He was a large land owner, and left considerable property. His will is on record in Berks Courthouse in Vol. 4, page 363. It was made in 1805, and probated Aug. 4, 1806. His wife, Anna Margaret Hoak, bore him these children: Joseph; Rebecca (m. John Ran), Catherine, Magdalene (called Molly), John and Elizabeth.

(IV) John Fenstermacher, son of Joseph, was born in Longswamp township, near Topton. He was a farmer and owned several valuable pieces of farming property in that township. His remains were interred at Longswamp Church.

The wife of John Fenstermacher was Dorothy Fisher, daughter of Heinrich and Catherine (Bastius) Fisher. Dorothy Fenstermacher died in 1858, aged sixty-seven years. She and her husband had eight children: (1) Reuben. (2) Leon m. Sallie Knappenberger, and had these children, Emeline, Henry, James, Sarah and Elmira. (3) Hettie m. John Henning, and they had a daughter, Marie J. (4) Benjamin m. Sarah Conrath, and had these children, Elvina, Cecelia, Mary, Victoria, James, Henry, Maria and Mary. (5) Angelina m. William Hamscher. (6) John, of Ohio, had eight children. (7) Jacob m. Hannah Bortz and had these children, Oliver, Eliza, Chester, Milton, Kate, Agnes, Kate, Lillie and Jacob. (8) Sally Ann, born Dec. 5, 1832, m. Frank Fisher, deceased, and had a son, Garion.

(V) Reuben Fenstermacher, grandfather of Edwin R., was born in Longswamp township, Aug. 1, 1811, and died Feb. 27, 1870, aged fifty-eight years, four months and twenty-six days. He was a farmer, residing between Hancock and Mertztown in Longswamp township, where he owned a good farm of fifty acres. Iron ore was found upon this land and many thousands of tons were mined, while the mine is still in operation. He was a substantial citizen and his estate was appraised at $16,000 at the time of his death. As he was a man of prominence, well and favorably known, his death was mourned by many and his remains are now resting at Longswamp Church, of which he was an official member. His wife was Mary (known as Polly) Mensch, of Bath, Pa., and these children were born to them: Frank, of Topton; Eliza, who died young; Amelia, who died young; Amanda, m. to Jonas Trexler; Sarah, who died young; Mary, m. to Frank Conrath; Eliza, who died young; Angelina, m. to Tilghman De Long; B. Henry; Joseph, m. to Catherine Geist; Charles, who is unmarried and lives at Topton; George, who died young.

(VI) B. Henry Fenstermacher was born in Longswamp township, June 12, 1844, and he was reared to farm life. When sixteen years of age he commenced working in the ore mines at Topton, and followed this line for sixteen years.

On Feb. 6, 1875, Mr. Fenstermacher was married to Isabella Dietrich, daughter of Heinrich (Harry) Dietrich, of Maxatawny, and they had two children: Edwin R. and Bella J. After his marriage, about 1877, he came to Maxatawny township and there engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he followed with success until his death. In the seventies he purchased the Heinrich Dietrich farm from Kline & Wiess, which is located in the northeastern end of Maxatawny township, at Greenwich township line. It consists of 104 acres of good land. On this property he erected in 1894 a Swiss barn, 84x40 feet, and in 1901 a large pig sty. In that same year he bought an adjoining tract of forty-three acres, which was the Heinrich Dietrich homestead, and is recognized as being one of the best pieces of property in the State.

Mr. Fenstermacher was a Republican, as is his son, Edwin R., and was loyal to his party, although not an office-seeker. He and his wife early connected themselves with the Reformed congregation of Longswamp Church, the building of which was erected in 1773.

The demise of B. Henry Fenstermacher occurred June 23, 1907, at the age of sixty-three years and eleven days. As a gentleman he was honored and respected by all who met him. Possessing as he did those fine natural abilities and qualities which constitute the true man and valuable citizen, it was not difficult for him to win the esteem and admiration of those about him, and his memory is tenderly cherished by those who remain behind.

(VII) Edwin R. Fenstermacher, a prosperous young farmer of Maxatawny township, near the Greenwich township line, was born there June 30, 1875. After a course in the township schools, in 1891 he commenced attending the State Normal School at Kutztown, but when he was in the junior class he was obliged to leave, owing to the increased work upon the farm, which required his presence. Since 1897 he has devoted all of his time to farming and has made a success of his work. Like his father before him he is a stalwart Republican and has held a number of the local offices. He and his sister are Reformed members of the Grimville Church, of which he has been a deacon since 1905. Miss Fenstermacher assists in church work and has been a member of the choir for some years, and both are much beloved not only in the church, but throughout the community.

Miss Bella J. Fenstermacher was born Oct. 3, 1876, in Maxatawny township. She obtained an excellent education in the public schools, and later attended the Normal school at Kutztown for four terms. Since her father's death she has assisted her brother in the management of their fine 148-acre farm and in extending the family hospitality to their many friends.

JOSEPH STOUDT, of Penn township, whose blacksmith establishment is situated at Obold postoffice, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., was born April 3, 1852, in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, son of William and Catherine (Kelchner) Stoudt.

Daniel Stoudt, the grandfather of Joseph, was a farmer of Wernersville, Pa., where his death occurred, he being buried at Hain's Church. His children were: Daniel died in Dauphin county; Henry lives in Michigan; William; Richard and Nathan live in Schuylkill county; James and David live in Wernersville; Sarah m. Mr. Kopp; Rebecca; Mary m. Henry Yoe; and Ann m. Jacob Spotts.

William Stoudt was born at Wernersville and there learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed for some time at Charming Forge, later engaging in business in Lower Heidelberg township, where he remained fifteen years, when he came to Obold and for five years worked for his son Joseph. He then went to live with his son George in Marion township until his retirement, when he went to the home of his son Conrad, in Reading, where he died in 1898, being buried at Hain's Church. He married Catherine Kelchner, daughter of Joseph Kelchner, who died in 1877, and they had these children: Richard lives in Dayton, Ohio; Ellen m. Edward Schell, of Dayton, Ohio; William is also a resident of Dayton; Joseph; Conrad lives at Third and Walnut streets, Reading; Lizzie m. Tyrer Schoener; Daniel died at the age of fifteen years; Sallie m. the late W. Shilling; Katie died young; and George lives in Womelsdorf.

Joseph Stoudt attended the public schools of Marion, Heidelberg and North Heidelberg townships, and when seventeen years of age learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, with whom he remained three years, then engaging in farming in North Heidelberg township for four years. Returning to his trade he formed a partnership with his father in Heidelberg township, but after four years this was dissolved and in 1881 Mr. Stoudt came to Obold where he purchased the business of Jacob Madeira, building a new house and shop. He has a flourishing business, which requires the help of one assistant.

Mr. Stoudt was married to Lizzie Mountz, daughter of William and Annie (Boyer) Mountz, and they have had one son: Irwin S., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School and the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. He lives at East St. Louis, where he is a druggist and chemist. He married Margaret Musser. Joseph Stoudt is a member of Hain's Church. In political matters he is a Republican and he has served a number of times as a member of the election board.

CHRISTMAN. Among the old and highly honored families of Maxatawny township is that bearing the name of Christman. (I) Peter Christman was the first of the family to locate there, making his home southeast of Kutztown. He owned a large and valuable farm and became a very rich man of his day. He made his will Dec. 30, 1811, and it was entered for probate May 26, 1812. In it he mentions his wife Elizabeth Christman, stating that she is to have the cattle and sheep, and 800 pounds of lawful money of Pennsylvania. His son Peter obtained his share during the father's lifetime. The amounts bequeathed the others are as follows: Elizabeth, 300 pounds; Marie, 500 pounds; Leah, 500 pounds; Jonas, 1200 pounds; Jonathan 500 pounds; and Rachel, 500 pounds. Maria, Leah and Jonas were not of age when their father died, and Jonathan and Rachel (the will says) were "non compos mentis."

(II) Peter Christman was a farmer, located along the Sacony, between Bowers and Kutztown. He was buried in a private cemetery upon the homestead in Maxatawny. His wife was a member of the Barto family, and they had these children: Isaac; John B.; Elizabeth; Anna m. Daniel Dietrich; and Kate m. Charles Detweiler.

(III) Isaac Christman, who was born in 1817 and died in 1894, was a native of Maxatawny, and became a farmer, residing near "Kemps Hotel" in that township. He is buried in Fairview cemetery, Kutztown. His wife was Esther, a daughter of Peter Deisher, and she was born in 1822, and died in 1880. They had children as follows: William; Deisher, born Aug. 25, 1844; Tobias; Peter; Jerome; Louisa; Helena; Wilhemina; Esther and Caroline.

(III) John B. Christman, also a son of Peter Christman, was born on the homestead in Maxatawny township. He was a successful farmer and owned a good farm of 100 acres. During his last years he lived retired in Kutztown, and for six years served as school director. For many years he was an official member of St. John's Reformed church. He married Susanna Geary, a daughter of John and Catherine (Glasser) Geary, and their children were: Fianna; Jemima; Mary; John; Charles I. G., born Feb. 19, 1866, a merchant of Kutztown. In 1896 he married Lucy Scheirer, of Lehigh county, a daughter of David Scheirer. Their children are: Marion, John and Carl.

Michael Christman, grandfather of Charles H. Christman, belongs to one branch of this early family. He resided in Rockland township, and is buried at New Jerusalem church, of which he was a member. He was a farmer and at one time kept an inn. Among his children are these: Daniel; John; Philip; and Susanna, m. to Benjamin Mertz.

Daniel Christman, son of Michael and father of Charles H. Christman, was born in Falkner Swamp in 1815, and he died in the spring of 1883, aged sixty-six years, eleven months and twenty-two days. He is buried at New Jerusalem Church, of which he was a member and elder. By trade he was a stone mason. His wife was Elizabeth Gruber, daughter of Michael Gruber, of Maxatawny. She died Feb. 1, 1853, aged thirty-one years. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Christman had these children: Charles H.; Sarah m. Daniel Mayer; Cassie m. Willoughby Eck; Daniel S. died aged seven years; and Frank resides in Kutztown.

CHARLES H. CHRISTMAN residing at Topton, Pa., was born in Maxatawny, July 5, 1841. He was reared on the farm and when only nine years of age was hired out among the farmers in Maxatawny and Greenwich townships. This continued for fifteen years. He married in 1864 and one year later commenced farming for himself in Upper Macungie township, Lehigh county, on a fifty-acre farm. Here he lived three years, and then removed to a farm of one hundred acres in the same township. For two years he worked hard upon his land and then removed to Maxatawny township, where he lived another two years. His next farm was in the upper part of Macungie township and consisted of 130 acres. This he cultivated for eight years, when he bought another farm in Maxatawny township, consisting of one hundred acres. After improving it, he located at Longswamp, near Hancock, and for four years lived retired. However, at the end of that time he once more engaged in farming in Longswamp and continued there for eleven years. In 1899 he removed to Topton where he has since made his home, employing himself by doing a little contracting and looking after his lot of seven or eight acres. In addition to other interests, Mr. Christman owns real estate in Topton and is a man of substance, highly respected by a wide circle of friends and associates.

During the late Civil war Mr. Christman enlisted in October, 1862, as a private in Co. I, 167th P. V. I., Capt. J. M. Schollenberger commanding, under Col. Knoderer. The latter was shot Jan. 30, 1863, at Deserted Farm. Mr. Christman served nearly ten months, and was honorably discharged Aug. 12, 1863. In March, 1864, Mr. Christman again went to the front, this time as a citizen teamster for three months service.

Mr. Christman was married July 24, 1864, to Sarah A. Koch, a daughter of Charles and Maria (Clauser) Koch, and granddaughter of Carl Koch, who married a Miss Dottery. Mr. and Mrs. Christman have had these children: Mary E. m. Moses Newbold, of Topton; Daniel S. lives at Allentown; Henry E. who died at the age of six years; William A. resides in Maxatawny; Sallie E., deceased, m. Wallace Fry; Oscar E. died at the age of four years; and Charles H. resides in Topton.

Mr. Christman is a member of the Reformed Church of Maxatawny, while Mrs. Christman is a member of the Lutheran Church of the same place, the two congregations holding service in the Zion's Union Church. There two of their children are buried.

CHARLES C. REESER, of Bernville, whose baking establishment is situated in Penn township near the borough line of Bernville, was born in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, Oct. 27, 1879, son of Benneville and Mary (De Turck) Reeser, and grandson of William Reeser.

Benneville Reeser, who was born in 1841, died in Maiden-creek township in 1891, after a life spent in agricultural pursuits. He married Mary De Turck, daughter of Charles De Turck, of Richmond township, by whom he had these children: Hettie m. David Schroeder, of Reading; James D. is the proprietor of the "Hotel Reeser"; Mary died unmarried, in 1907; Charles C.; Nora m. Albert Gibson, of Reading; Katie, who died in 1907, m. Orlando Moll; and John died aged ten years.

Charles C. Reeser attended the public schools of Molltown, and for a short time was engaged in farm work, but at the age of fifteen years went in with his brother James D. to learn the trade of baker, and continued in the latter's employ until 1901, when he purchased the business, known as the Bernville Bakery, from his brother and has since conducted it successfully. His trade demands the services of three employes and he runs two wagons through Leinbachs, Centreport, Strausstown and the surrounding country, supplying the best trade with bread, cakes and pretzels.

Mr. Reeser was married in 1900 to Miss Mary Stamm, daughter of Frank and Emma (Geiss) Stamm, well-known people of Bernville. To Mr. and Mrs. Reeser there have been born two children, Lester and Earl.

NATHANIEL P. STOUDT, who for more than twenty years has been engaged in supplying meat to the residents of Bernville, is one of the best known men in his line of business in Penn township. Mr. Stoudt was born Dec. 6, 1855, in Penn township, Berks county, Pa., son of Jared and Sophia (Obold) Stoudt.

Abraham Stoudt, the grandfather of Nathaniel P., was a farmer in Bern (now Penn) township, owning a tract of 150 acres about one mile south of Bernville. He married Barbara Schellhammer, and to them there were born two children: Jared; and Abraham, a saddler by trade who later engaged in the grocery business in Reading, where he died. Abraham Stoudt married a Miss Mosser, and to them there were born these children: Milton, lives in the West; Mary m. Harrison Reber; James m. a Miss Yoder and resides in Reading; and Elizabeth m. G. M. Britton, the well-known Reading merchant.

Jared Stoudt was born on the Stoudt family homestead in Penn township, March 18, 1826, and died there Feb. 19, 1862, being buried at the Union Cemetery at Bernville. His whole life was spent in agricultural pursuits. Jared Stoudt married Sophia Obold, born Aug. 9, 1827, a daughter of Philip Obold, and she died nine weeks before the death of her husband. They had these children: Emma, who resides in Bernville; Elias, who died at the age of eleven years; Nathaniel P.; Harrison A., deceased; and Mary S., also deceased.

Nathaniel P. Stoudt was accorded a fair public school education, but losing his parents when still a youth, he was forced to shift for himself, and at the age of eighteen years learned the trade of a butcher, engaging in business on his own account in 1886, since which time he has built up a large patronage, supplying the best trade in Bernville and engaging the use of three wagons and four employes. He has a comfortable residence on Main street, and is known as a reliable and public-spirited citizen. A Republican in politics, he has served the borough as school director and councilman and has shown himself to be a conscientious public official. With his family, he belongs to the Reformed Church.

Mr. Stoudt was married to Diana Potteiger, daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Strause) Potteiger, the former of whom was a miller by trade, an occupation which he followed near Hamburg, Pa., for some years; subsequently he came to Bernville, where until his death he was engaged in the hotel business. Mr. and Mrs. Stoudt have had these children: Edwin; Bertha, m. to Milton Kline; Anna, m. to S. P. Wilhelm; Charles A.; William; Albert; Warren, John, who died at the age of seven years; an infant daughter, deceased; Sallie and Mary.

ALANDON J. GRUBER, of North Heidelberg township, was born Feb. 18, 1854, in that township, son of Israel S. and Rebecca (Ernst) Gruber.

Henry Gruber was one of the early settlers of Heidelberg township, and is very likely the Heinrich Gruber who came to this country from Germany on the ship "Dragon," and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1761. His will was admitted for probate June 17, 1777. His wife's given name was Maria Eva Rosina, but the name of her parentage is not known. Mr. Gruber was a Lutheran, and for many years was a member of the Little Tulpehocken Church, but in about 1750, when the St. Daniel's (Corner) Church was founded he became a member of it. About fifty of his descendants rest in the burial ground of that church. He owned about 300 acres of land, which has since been divided, the original tract, however, remaining in the Gruber name to this day. The first warrant was dated June 17, 1737. Mr. Gruber had these children: John Adam; Elizabeth, born Feb. 6, 1737; Maria Eva Rosina, Dec. 3, 1738; Christian, Feb. 18, 1740; Henry, Aug. 19, 1747; Christopher and Elizabeth, twins, Oct. 10, 1749.

John Adam Gruber, the great-great-grandfather of Alandon J., was born in 1735 and died in 1807, on the homestead, where he spent all of his life. He married (first) Elizabeth Shower, and (second) Sarah, whose family name is not known, and all three are buried at St. Daniel's Church. Eight sons and four daughters were born to the first marriage, of whom two sons died in childhood, the ten remaining being: Maria Elizabeth, born in 1762; John George, 1764, deceased 1841; Maria Christina, 1766-1825; John; John Jacob, 1771-1849; Henry, 1773; John Peter, 1775-1828; Catherine; Anna Maria; and Philip, who moved from Berks county between 1814 and 1820.

John Gruber, the great-grandfather of Alandon J., was born in 1769, and died in 1840. He owned the homestead from 1807 until his death, and at times other farms, but for twenty-seven years lived on Governor Joseph Hiester's farm near the "Blue Marsh," in Bern township. He married Anna Maria Lash, who is buried at Hain's Church, and they had six children: John, George, Daniel, Maria Barbara, Michael and William.

Daniel Gruber, grandfather of Alandon J., was born in 1795, and died in 1867, on the homestead, which he owned and cultivated from 1841 until his death. He was married (first) to Christina, daughter of Michael Seidel, and (second) to Sarah Fidler, all of whom are buried at St. Daniel's (Corner) Church. Daniel Gruber had six children: Catherine, Israel S., Matilda, Elizabeth, Mary and Rebecca.

Israel S. Gruber was born July 9, 1827, on the old Gruber homestead, and was reared to agricultural pursuits, becoming later the owner of the property, which he farmed all of his life with the exception of two years when he lived in Marion township on the Major Seibert farm. His property consisted of 139 acres, and thereon he built in 1844 a substantial house, the barn not being erected until 1884. He was a prominent Democrat of his section, and held many offices, being a school director of the township for fifteen years and a supervisor for some time. He was well-known throughout this section of the county, and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him. Mr. Gruber was a deacon, elder and member of the cemetery board of St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, in the faith of which Church he died Aug. 2, 1907. During the Civil war Israel S. Gruber served as a soldier in the Union army. He was a member of the Robesonia Grange.

On Jan. 12, 1853, Mr. Gruber was married to Rebecca Ernst, born Aug. 5, 1833, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Wenrich) Ernst, and granddaughter of Johannes and Catherine (Boyer) Ernst, of Heidelberg township. To this union the following children were born: Alandon J.; Levi E., born Nov. 16, 1855, m. Vilanda Horn, lives near Wernersville, and has two children,—Charles and Robert; Joseph S., born Aug. 26, 1857, m. Amanda Potts, and lives in North Heidelberg township; Ebilia Sarah E., born Jan. 22, 1859, m. Isaac Horn, a farmer of Heidelberg township, and has two children,— Willie C. and Annie A.; Pierce M., born May 16, 1860, m. Mary Werner, a sister of Emma, who is the wife of Alandon J., and they live on the Ernst homestead in North Heidelberg township; Calvin J., born Nov. 17, 1861, m. Lillie Himmelberger, lives near Sinking Spring, and has two children,—Charles I. and Mabel; Arabella R., born May 9, 1864, m. Daniel Schneider, of Jefferson township, and has one son,—Clarence; Daniel H., born March 24, 1867, m. Ella Potteiger, lives in Centre township, and has two children,—Herbert W. and Esther; Lillia M., born April 24, 1869, m. Charles Speicher, lives at North Kill, and they have four children,—Calvin, Harry, Jennie and Florence; and Milton R., born Feb. 17, 1876, m. Annie Blatt, is farming in North Heidelberg township, and has these children, Laura, Alberta, Peter, Harry and Maggie.

Alandon J. Gruber obtained his education in the common schools of North Heidelberg and Marion townships, and until he reached the age of twenty-seven years worked for his parents. He was then married, and worked as a laborer for thirteen years, but in the spring of 1894 commenced farming on his own account on a tract of 102 acres, which he had purchased the year previous, the William Werner farm. Here has since resided, being engaged in general farming. His operations have proved successful, and he is now ranked among the substantial men of his community. He is a Democrat in politics, and has held several precinct offices. He and his family are members of St. Daniel's Lutheran (Corner) Church, of which he was a deacon for two years, elder since January, 1903, and since 1905 a member of the cemetery board.

On Nov. 13, 1880, Mr. Gruber was married to Emma C. Werner, born Jan. 19, 1861, daughter of William and Catherine (Miller) Werner, and granddaughter of William and Elizabeth (Lamm) Werner, of North Heidelberg township. Her maternal grandfather was Matthias Miller. One daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gruber: Ellenora Rebecca, who married John Brown, of Robesonia, and has one daughter,—Laura Emma.

EPHRAIM M. LEH, a farmer in Colebrookdale township, near the Douglass township line, Berks county, was born Nov. 14, 1849, and is said to have descended from John Philip Leh, who came to America on the ship "Two Brothers" in 1745, and settled in Bucks county, Pa. Prior to 1779 George Leh had located in York county, Pa., and in 1802 John Leh was on record in that county. Many of the name are found today in York county.

According to the Pennsylvania archives Henry Leh, of Bucks county, in 1779, owned one hundred acres of land, two horses and four head of cattle. He was the father of Henry (2).

Henry Leh (2), son of Henry, was born in Bucks county Dec. 6, 1767, and is thought to have been of English extraction, and of a Quaker family. He came to Berks county, and engaged in farming and in millwrighting, following the latter trade four years. He owned the old Leh farm from about 1800 until his death. This consisted of some eighty acres when he purchased it. He married Catharine Muth, born March 11, 1774, daughter of Philip and Barbara Muth, and she died Dec. 29, 1850. Their children were: William, a clock maker at Pottstown; Daniel, who lived at Easton, Pa.; Samuel, who made his home in Bucks county, as also did John; Henry (3); Jacob, who lived in the vicinity of Hill Church, but died of smallpox at Reading; Sarah, who married (first) John Reinert and (second) Samuel Burden.

Henry Leh (3), son of Henry (2), was born on the old Leh homestead in Colebrookdale township, June 10, 1814. He was a tailor by trade and followed it a number of years, but in latter life he farmed the old homestead, where he died Oct. 14, 1892, and he was laid to rest in Fairview cemetery beside his wife. He was a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, and he erected the present house and barn, the former in 1884, and the latter in 1868. He was an active worker in the Reformed congregation at Boyertown, and served as elder and member of the building committee. His wife, Mary Ann Maurer, born Oct. 27, 1818, was a daughter of Andrew Maurer, and she died March 20, 1857, in her thirty-ninth year. Their children were: Frank, who lived at Reading and died at the Soldiers' Home in 1908; Emma, who is the widow of Solomon Bush, and lives at Boyertown; Catharine, deceased wife of Ephraim Weider; Susan, who married John Ritter, of Boyertown; Ephraim M.; Henry, a painter at Pottstown; and Mary, who married Lewis Walters, of Pottstown.

Ephraim M. Leh, son of Henry (3), attended the public schools near his home until he was fifteen years old. He then learned the painting trade, which he followed for seven years. In 1871 he began farming on the old homestead, which consists of seventy-three acres. Of this he has been the owner since 1894, and he has a good outfit of machinery. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religion a believer in the faith of the Reformed Church, attending with his family the Church of the Good Shepherd.

On Feb. 11, 1870, Mr. Leh was married to Mary Houck, daughter of Amos and Hannah (Gabel) Houch, of Colebrookdale township, and to this union three children have been born, namely: Edgar E., who died in infancy; Warren, a cigar maker, who married Kate Lechner, daughter of Harrison Lechner; and Laura, who married Edwin Mowdey, of Reading.

GEORGE P. SCHELL, who owns and operates a fine farm of 190 acres in North Heidelberg township, is secretary of the township school board, and a member of one of Berks county's old and honored families. Mr. Schell was born June 23, 1862, in North Heidelberg township, son of Isaac and Sarah (Mounts) Schell.

The first of this family to locate in Berks county was Michael Schell, who settled in Hereford township at an early date, and died there between Oct. 18 and Nov. 10, 1783, the respective dates of making and of probating of his will, which is on record in Will Book B, page 84. The executor of the will was John Reder, probably a son-in-law. The ancestor and his wife Catherine had three sons and two daughters. One of the sons, Michael, settled in North Heidelberg township, where he died in middle age, his widow, Susanna Margaret, dying there in 1827. She made a will, which is recorded in Will Book 6, page 119, her grandson Henry being the executor of her estate. Items of the will were that her grandchildren Barbara, Peter and Henry were to have the bulk of the estate, and her children Adam, Henry and Maria (intermarried with Peter Leiss), should have nothing beyond five shillings each. Peter Schell, grandson of Michael of North Heidelberg, was the grandfather of George P.

Peter Schell was a farmer in North Heidelberg township, where he died when forty-three years of age, and was buried at Little Tulpehocken Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. His wife was Esther Reich, and their children were as follows: John; William; Isaac; Samuel; Amelia, m. to James McCalister; Rebecca, m. to Levi Fidler; Elias; Adam; Edward; Joshua; Alfred; Reuben; Levi; and Sarah, who went with James Wilhelm, her uncle, to Perry, Dallas Co., Iowa, and there married a Mr. Oliver.

Isaac Schell, father of George P., was born in North Heidelberg township in 1834, and died in 1899, aged sixty-five years. He was a shoemaker and farmer in North Heidelberg township, and lived and died on the old Schell homestead, near Klopp's store, a tract of forty acres. He was buried at Little Tulpehocken Church, of which he was a member. He married Sarah Mounts, daughter of George and Mary (Moyer) Mounts, who now lives with her son, J. Franklin Schell. Mr. and Mrs. Schell had these children: George P.; Samuel H.; J. Franklin, of North Heidelberg township; Sallie M., m. to William Lutz, a farmer of North Heidelberg township; Walter J., a successful farmer of Perry, Dallas Co., Iowa; and Clyde A., who is in the employ of his brother George P.

George P. Schell obtained his early education in the township schools, and later attended the Bernville Academy, taught by Prof. M. A. Gruber, and until twenty-one years of age worked for his parents. After his marriage he commenced farming on the John W. Fisher farm in North Heidelberg township, where he remained eight years, and at the end of that time removed to his present place, formerly the William D. Klopp homestead. This property, which is finely cultivated, consists of 190 acres, and is operated by Mr. Schell as a general farm. He is up-to-date in his methods, using the most modern machinery. He has thirteen horses, twenty-three head of cattle and fifty hogs. Mr. Schell is a Democrat in politics, and in 1886 was elected constable, an office which he held for twelve consecutive years. He was elected a school director in 1903, and re-elected to that office in 1904, now serving as secretary of the board. Fraternally he is connected with Bernville Lodge No. 113, P. O. S. of A. With his family he attends Christ (Little Tulpehocken) Lutheran Church, in which he has been deacon and elder.

On Nov. 13, 1886, Mr. Schell was married to Agnes Kintzer, daughter of Levi Kintzer, and they had one daughter: Miriam, who is attending school.

Samuel H. Schell is a brother of George P. Schell and is a highly esteemed citizen and progressive agriculturalist of North Heidelberg township, where he was born May 22, 1864. Until twenty-one years of age he worked for his parents, and then engaged in laboring until his thirty-second year, when he commenced operating the George Pflueger farm in North Heidelberg township. He continued there for four years and spent a like period on the John Filbert farm. In the spring of 1905 he removed to the John M. Kutz farm near Klopp's store, where he now resides. He has twelve horses, twenty-one head of cattle and thirty-five hogs, and his farm is conducted along modern lines. In politics Mr. Schell is a Democrat, and he succeeded his brother as constable, an office which he held for six years. He was elected a member of the board of school directors in the spring of 1905.

On Sept. 27, 1884, Mr. Schell was married to Celesta Blatt, daughter of Jacob Blatt, and they have three children, as follows: Thomas m. Alice Brecht, and has a daughter, Helen. Annie m. Calvin Dreibelbis, of Bernville, and has two daughters, Pearl and Mabel; and Willis assists his father on the home farm.

CHARLES T. HECKLER, late of Reading, was born June 29, 1872, in West Reading, son of William A. and Emma (Miller) Heckler, and grandson of Jacob Heckler.

Jacob Heckler was of Scottish descent. When a young man he came to Berks county from Chester county, Pa. He had learned the milling business, and upon locating in this locality he opened the old Schwartz mill, near the Pennsylvania bridge on the Schuylkill river. He operated the mill for several years, and later removed to Spring township, where he operated a farm for some time, dying in that township. His wife's maiden name was Adams. They were the parents of the following children: Charles, Augustus, William A., Henry, Anna, Thomas, and one that died in infancy. They were members of the Reformed Church.

William A. Heckler was born in West Reading, but received his education in the schools of Spring township. He followed farming practically all his life, although in young manhood he had learned the cigar-maker's trade. His farm was located where Wyomissing is now situated. Mr. Heckler now lives retired, looking after his valuable real estate interests. He and his wife became the parents of four children, as follows: Cora M., married to Charles High, a coal dealer at Reading; Charles T.; Laura; and Alice. Mrs. Heckler died in 1885, aged thirty-eight years. The family belonged to the Reformed Church. Mr. Heckler is a member of the K. G. E. In politics he is a Republican, and has held minor offices.

Charles T. Heckler was educated in the public schools of his native locality and of Spring township, and also attended Brunner's Business College and night school at Reading. He learned the machinist's trade with Elias Schmehl, and followed it for five years. On May 6, 1896, he began the bicycle business on Fourth street, near Penn, later removing to Penn near Seventh, and for seven years was at No. 222 Penn street, his late location. He was successful from the start, and besides bicycles sold motor cycles, phonographs, gas fixtures and mantles, and electrical goods. He handled the Reading, Pierce, Columbia, Iver Johnson and Packer bicycles.

On Oct. 13, 1898, Mr. Heckler married Miss Lizzie Masseno, daughter of William Masseno. Socially he was a well-known Mason, holding membership in Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Reading Consistory; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. In politics he was a Republican, but never sought office. Mr. Heckler died Sept. 13, 1908, and was laid to rest in Charles Evans cemetery with Masonic rites.

FRANK G. LEIDY, of Boyertown, proprietor of Leidy's Livery Stable, was born in that borough Feb. 15, 1862, son of Daniel S. Leidy, grandson of Samuel Leidy and great-grandson of Philip Leidy.

Daniel S. Leidy was born in Frederick township, Montgomery Co., Pa., and died at Boyertown, where he had been in business for a number of years. In early life he learned cigar-making, and followed that business as a manufacturer at Boyertown, but later he conducted Leidy's paper-mill at Bally for eight years, there employing from ten to fifteen hands. Coming again to Boyertown he engaged in the livery business in 1872, and was interested in same until his death. However, he carried on the business on a much smaller scale than his son, having only ten horses.

Mr. Leidy was married three times, and by his first wife, whose maiden name was Stettler, had three children, Henry, Joseph and Chester. To his second union, with Rebecca Daub, no children were born. By his third wife, Hannah Gabel, he had four children: Frank G. is mentioned below; Annie is unmarried; Emma married L. P. G. Fegley, of Boyertown; Hannah, widow of Henry Graffen, lives at Reading. The father was a member of the Boyertown Reformed Church. He is buried in the family plot in Fairview cemetery, Boyertown.

Frank G. Leidy obtained his education in the public schools of his native borough and at Mount Pleasant Seminary, Boyertown. He then learned the jeweler's trade from J. S. East, of Boyertown, but in 1883, after he had learned his trade, he had to abandon it to take charge of his father's livery stable, his father having been stricken with paralysis. He has ever since remained in the business, which he has built up from a small concern to its present proportions, his stable being now the largest in Berks county. He keeps fifty regular livery horses, and has eight men constantly in his employ. His main stable is 103 by 70 feet in dimensions, and other buildings are needed besides. Mr. Leidy understands his business thoroughly, and his methods and enterprise are appreciated by his numerous patrons, among which are many traveling men. He is widely known all over the county. In addition to his interests in the livery business, Mr. Leidy is a director of the Union Manufacturing Company of Boyertown and a stockholder in the famous Boyertown Casket Company, which he helped to organize.

In 1884 Mr. Leidy married Katie Ellis, daughter of James Ellis, of Reading, and five children have been born to them, as follows: Charles E. assists his father; Ralph E. is employed in the casket factory; Bessie E., a graduate of the Boyertown high school, class of 1905, and of the West Chester Normal School, class of 1907, is now a public school teacher at Boyertown; Franklin E. was one of the victims who met death in the Boyertown Opera House fire Jan. 13, 1908, at the age of thirteen years; and Anna E.

Mr. Leidy and his family are members of the Boyertown Reformed Church. He is a Republican in politics and has served his borough as councilman. His fraternal connections are numerous, including membership in the Odd Fellows, I. O. R. M. (Podicon Tribe), P. O. S. of A., Knights of Friendship and Knights of the Golden Eagle, all at Boyertown.

JOHN YERGER, of Muhlenberg township, where he is the proprietor of a sausage factory, was born in Muhlenberg township in 1852, son of John and Rebecca (Medler) Yerger.

George Yerger, the grandfather of John, made his home at Tenth and Court streets, Reading, and there his death occurred. Mr. Yerger married Catherine Bechtel, and among their children were two sons, George and John. John Yerger was born in 1814, and became one of the leading butchers of his day. His death occurred Feb. 28, 1872, at which time he left a widow and six children: Emma m. Mahlon Gehris, and had six children,— John, Charles, Mahlon, William, Edwin and Elizabeth; John; Deborah m. John Bowman; George died single; William is single; Edwin m. Alice Hunnerbreich, and had eight children. The mother of John Yerger was married (second) in 1874, to Solomon Yoder, and still survives, living at Hyde Park.

John Yerger was educated in the schools of Muhlenberg township, and learned the butchering trade with his father, an occupation which he has followed ever since. In 1887 he established his present plant, where he manufactures all kinds of sausages, smoked meats, etc. His enterprise and business ability have built up a good trade, and his fair dealing in business matters have won for him a reputation for honesty and integrity. In politics Mr. Yerger is a Republican. He and his family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Yerger was married in 1874, to Ellen Wanner, daughter of Reuben Wanner, and to this union there have been born four children: Deborah m. John Kurtz, proprietor of the "Kurtz House," and has one child,—Mary A.; John R. m. Sallie Snyder and has one child,—John A.; Jennie R. is unmarried; and Roy A.

DANIEL M. TROUT, who is engaged as a butcher at Boyertown, is a native of Earl township, Berks county, born Oct. 17, 1865. The early home of the Trout family was in England, whence came three brothers. Of these one, whose Christian name is a matter of dispute, some saying Samuel and some John, settled in Berks county, one in Germantown and one in Lancaster county. Tradition says all three served in the Continental army with Washington. The one who settled in Berks county was unable to speak any German at first, but he married a German woman by the name of Hartline, and his children all learned the German language, being unable to speak English at all. His children were John and Samuel.

John Trout was born in 1758, and he died in 1844, and was buried at Hillchurch. His children were: (1) George is buried at Reading. He had four children, Isaac, Sallie, Kate and George, Jr. (2) Samuel, who is buried at Hillchurch, had two children, Jeremiah and Mary Ann. The wife of Samuel attained the age of one hundred and one years. (3) Joseph is said to have died single. (4) Isaac became the father of eleven children—John, Isaac (2), George, Daniel, Samuel, Susanna, Polly, Lydia, Hannah, Peggy and Savannah. (5) John. (6) Elizabeth had ten children, Rachel, Mary, Sallie, Lillie, Elizabeth, Jacob, Hiram, James, William and Kate. (7) Kate (no record).

John Trout, son of John, died in 1870, at the age of seventy-five. He had seven children: David, still living at nearly four score years, moved to Philadelphia in 1863, and is the father of Nelson N. Trout, of Philadelphia; Lewis had fifteen children—Anna, John, Ephraim, Sallie, Elizabeth, Henry, William, Daniel, David, Mary, Edward, Charles, Warren, Kate and Amanda; John had thirteen children—Orlando, Horace, Kate, Mary Ann, Mahlon, Amanda, Henry, Emma, Sallie, Hettie, Triper, Malinda and William; Sarah had seven children—Henry, John, Emma, Amanda, Sarah, Catharine and Lizzie; and Henry, Elizabeth and Kate, who all died unmarried.

Samuel Trout, son of the emigrant, was born in 1772, and died in 1858. He was the father of nine children: William, who had two children, David (who was the father of William, Ephraim, David, Jr., May, Alvin and Sallie) and Esther (who had eleven children); Abraham, who had thirteen children; Reuben, who was the father of twelve children; Jacob, who had seven children; Samuel, who had nine children; John (two children); Christiana, who married, and became the mother of seven children; Lena, who married a Boyer, and had ten children; and Maria, who married a Dierolf, and had four children.

Jacob T. Trout, grandfather of Daniel M., was born in Earl township, Berks county, where he was a lath and rake maker. He made his home in the mountains near Shanesville, where he owned a tract of land. He is buried at Hillchurch, as are many others of the name. His children were: David, of Philadelphia; Sarah, who married Henry Henninger, of Sassamansville; Lewis; and John, of Earl township, who died in 1907, at the age of seventy-two years.

Lewis Trout, son of Jacob T., was born in Earl township, in 1822, and he died there Jan. 1, 1886. He carried on shoemaking at Worman. In religion he was Reformed, and is buried at Fairview Cemetery, Boyertown. He was twice married. His first wife, Kate Rhoads, became the mother of four children: John, Ephraim, Catharine and Anna. He married (second) Rebecca Boyer, who died in 1890, aged fifty-nine years. Ten children were born of this second marriage: Sally (Anderson); Elizabeth (Mecherly); Henry, of Pottstown; William, deceased; Daniel M.; David, of New Berlinville; Mary (Mock); Amanda (Lea); and Edwin, Charles and Warren, deceased.

Daniel M. Trout attended the public schools, and his boyhood days were spent at Worman, but since he was fifteen years old his home has been at Boyertown. As a young man he worked at the mines and in the rolling mills of Berks and Montgomery counties. For but two months less than twenty years he followed the iron business. On March 18, 1908, he became the proprietor of the butcher shop and meat store at the corner of Railroad street and Philadelphia avenue (formerly the property of Harry Foreman, who with his wife, two children and sister perished in the Boyertown Opera House fire, Jan. 13, 1908). He has built up a good trade, having three teams on the road all the time, and employing three men. He kills from six to eight steers and from ten to fifteen calves per week.

In 1887 Mr. Trout was married to Lizzie Bryan, daughter of William and Mary (Wentzel) Bryan, of Boyertown, the former of whom kept the toll-gate for forty-six years. The Bryans are of the same family originally as William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska. To Mr. and Mrs. Trout was born a son, Lewis B., March 6, 1888. Mrs. Trout died Feb. 5, 1905, aged thirty-seven years, and was laid to rest at Boyertown. Mr. Trout belongs to the Red Men and the Jr., O. U. A. M. He is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, and is active in its work.

FRANCIS ROTHENBERGER, foreman of the Mount Laurel Slag Crusher Company, and the owner of a fertile farm of forty-six acres in Muhlenberg township, was born in 1850 in Muhlenberg township, son of Samuel and Magdalena (Heckman) Rothenberger.

Samuel Rothenberger, who was a laborer, died when his son Francis was but an infant, leaving a widow and nine children, as follows: Sarah, who died unmarried; Samuel, Henry and Thomas, deceased; Emma, of Philadelphia; James, of Oley township, m. to Ellen Kauffman; an infant, deceased; Adam, deceased; and Francis. Mrs. Rothenberger died in 1854, in the faith of the Reformed Church, of which her husband had also been a member.

Francis Rothenberger was educated in the common schools of his native township, and until 1898 all of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, he having acquired a property of forty-six acres in Muhlenberg township. In the year mentioned Mr. Rothenberger accepted a position with the Mount Laurel Slag Crusher Company, of which he has been foreman since 1901. He is a Democrat in politics, and has served as school director and tax collector of the township. Fraternally he is connected with the I. O. R. M., and the Temple Relief Association.

In 1880 Mr. Rothenberger was married to Catherine Barrell, daughter of Jacob Barrell, and ten children were born to this union, nine of whom are living: Emma, unmarried; Samuel; Ellen, who married Mr. Weik; Frederick; Thomas; Minnie, deceased; James; Katie; John; and Lillian. Mr. Rothenberger is a member of the Lutheran Church, while his wife adheres to the Reformed faith.

THOMAS R. LUCKENBILL, of Virginville, Richmond township, is engaged in the butcher business, and has a large trade in first-class meats among the residents of this section. Mr. Luckenbill was born in Perry township, son of Simon Luckenbill.

The great-grandfather of Thomas R. Luckenbill was Christian Luckenbill, one of the early settlers of Perry township, a farmer by occupation and the owner of some land. It is probable that he was one of the sons of Johan Ekel Luckenbill, who emigrated to this country from Germany, on the ship "Thistle," which landed at Philadelphia, Aug. 29, 1730. He had with him his brother Hendrick, and these two are the progenitors of the Luckenbill family in this country. Thomas Luckenbill, one of the sons of Christian, was a farmer and land owner of Perry township, and owned the 200-acre tract later belonging to Thomas, his son. He married a Miss Wink of Maxatawny township, and they had these children: Edwin; James; Thomas; Alfred; Simon; Jacob, who died at the age of forty-five years; Cyrus; and Sarah Ann, wife of Simon Adam, deceased.

Simon Luckenbill, father of Thomas R., owns a farm of ninety-six acres of good land in Perry township, about two and one-half miles west of Virginville. He stands high in his community and is a member of Zion's Reformed Church of Perry township. Although a stanch Democrat he has never had a desire to hold office. His children are as follows: Samuel, of Virginville; Thomas R.; Sarah Ann, m. to F. F. Dreibelbis, a grain, coal and lumber dealer of Virginville; Simon, who died at the age of six years; and Augustus, a clerk of Hamburg, Pennsylvania.

Thomas R. Luckenbill was reared on his father's farm in Perry township, and worked for him until twenty years of age. He was equipped mentally by study in the common schools of his native township, and by personal application at home in leisure hours. After leaving his father he worked for three years in a creamery, and later, with F. F. Dreibelbis, formed the firm of Dreibelbis and Luckenbill, engaging in the manufacture of brick for three years, when the firm was dissolved by mutual consent. In 1886 Mr. Luckenbill engaged in butchering, and this he has continued successfully ever since. He owns a large brick house in Virginville, and seventeen acres of excellent farm land, on which he raises feed for his horses and cattle.

Mr. Luckenbill was married in 1891 to Louisa, daughter of David and Catherine (Adam) Bushy, of Richmond township, and to this union were born: Edna, Carrie, Curtis, Paul, Mabel and Thomas. The family are members of the United Evangelical Church of Virginville. In politics Mr. Luckenbill is a Democrat, but he is not a politician or an office seeker. He is a plain, practical business man. By honesty and fair dealing he has built up a paying business, is a good citizen, and is well thought of in his community by those who know him best. He is truly a representative citizen of Richmond township, Berks county.

GEORGE WASHINGTON PAINTER, foreman of the molding department of the Orr & Sembower Engine and Boiler works, at Millmont, Pa., was born April 18, 1860, at Bernville, Berks county, son of Rev. Joseph and Molly (Loose) Painter.

Jacob Painter, grandfather of George W., was a farmer and furnace worker in Chester county, Pa., later in life coming to Robesonia, Berks county, where his death occurred. Rev. Joseph Painter, his son, was born Dec. 3, 1822, in Chester county, but most of his life has been spent in Myerstown, where he has a fine residence on Main street. He was for many years engaged in the foundry business, in which he was very successful, and he is now living retired enjoying the fruits of his early labors. In politics Mr. Painter is a Republican, and he has served as county commissioner of Lebanon county, and school director of Jackson township in that county. In the United Evangelical Church of Myerstown he has held all the offices, was licensed a minister of the church, and has preached the Word in different sections of his own and surrounding counties.

Rev. Mr. Painter married Molly Loose, daughter of John Loose, of Lancaster county, and to them were born eleven children: John, who m. (first) Mary Spahn, and (second) a lady whose first name was Martha; Jacob, who m. (first) Fannie Spangler, (second) Beckie Rice, and (third) Agnes Miller; Stephen, of Beverly, Kans., who m. (first) Sallie Tice, and (second) Barbara Smith; Joseph, who m. Kate Dundore; Anna, who m. Milton Gockley; George W.; Mary, who m. John Spangler; Tillie, who m. John Shoemaker; Lizzie, who married George Peiffer; Samuel, who married; and an infant son.

George W. Painter was taken to Myerstown by his parents when three years old, and at that place he secured his education in the public schools. When fifteen years old he left school, and commenced to learn the molding trade in Myerstown, and this he has followed ever since. In 1894 he took charge of the molding department of Orr & Sembower's plant at Millmont, where he also has charge of the pattern department, having in his employ forty-five men. He resides in his own home in Millmont, and is also the owner of two fine properties on McKnight street, Reading. He is a Republican in politics, and fraternally is connected with Camp No. 65, P. O. S. of A., Lebanon, Pa.; Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F., of Reading; and Mount Penn Encampment, No. 252. Mr. and Mrs. Painter are members of the United Evangelical Church of Myerstown.

On June 18, 1879, Mr. Painter married Adeline Kunkelman, daughter of John and Catharine (Mertz) Kunkelman, and to this union there were born six children: Joseph, who died in infancy; Laura M., who m. S. F. Steltz, a teacher of Reading: Martha, unmarried at home; Paul and Arthur, who died in infancy: and Myron E., at home.

JEREMIAH W. ROYER, of Marion township, who is conducting the well-known Marion Mills, at Stouchsburg, on the Tulpehocken, was born July 13, 1852, in Jackson township, Lebanon Co., Pa., son of Benjamin and Mary Ann (White) Royer.

The Royer family of Pennsylvania traces its ancestry back to 1720, when Sebastian Royer and his four sons came to America, the first settlement of this family being made on the bank of a fordable river in Montgomery county, where the town is named Royersford. Here two of the sons settled permanently, but the father, being of a more roving spirit, removed to what was Elizabeth township, in Lancaster county, on the site of the present village of Brickerville, where Sebastian Royer spent the rest of his life. His youngest son, Amos, settled in what was then Cocalico township, but now Ephrata. He had four sons of whom Philip, the second, also had four sons, namely: Abraham, Jonathan, Joseph and Benjamin. Abraham had a son, Jacob, who was a farmer in West Cocalico township, where he died when nearly seventy-seven years old. His wife was Elizabeth Stuber, and their six children were: William; Jacob; John; Henry S., who was born Sept. 25, 1829, married Margaret Weaver, and had three children,—Lizzie, George, (deceased), and Dr. Jacob of Terrehill, Lancaster county; Samuel, of Mount Joy; and Abraham, deceased.

Joseph Royer, the third son of Amos, settled in Manheim township, where his son, Joseph, Jr., was born in 1801 and died in 1843. Joseph Royer, Jr., was married to Catherine Royer, daughter of Joseph Royer of Clay township, and she died in 1876. They were Dunkards in religious belief. Their children were: Israel; Sarah; David; Joseph R., a leading confectioner of Manheim township, who was born March 5, 1835, married Annie Shuman, and had four children,—Minnie, Milton, Joseph C. and Clarence de Vaux; Frances and Martin, who are deceased; and Tobias, a veteran of the Civil war.

Samuel Royer, the oldest of Amos' sons, had a son Samuel, who died near Millway, March 22, 1897, at the advanced age of ninety-nine years, ten months, twenty days, leaving an estate of upwards of $250,000.

Johannes Royer, brother of Amos (both sons of Sebastian the progenitor), settled in that part of Lancaster county now embraced in Jackson township, Lebanon county, and is buried at the Tulpehocken Meeting House. He married and among other children had a son, Samuel, the grandfather of Jeremiah W.

Samuel Royer is buried at Tulpehocken Meeting House. He was a farmer all of his life in Jackson township, Lebanon county, where he became the owner of two large farms, and was in comfortable circumstances. He married Nancy Bollinger, a daughter of Christol Bollinger, and they had these children: John, who died young; Samuel and Joel, of Jackson township; Jonathan, who died young; Christian, of Jackson township; Benjamin; Catherine, m. to Christol Geip; Anna, m. to Henry Bollinger; Mary, m. to Jonathan Bollinger; and Daniel, of Richland, Pennsylvania.

Benjamin Royer, father of Jeremiah W., was born in August, 1830, and died May 26, 1907, in his seventy-seventh year, being buried on Decoration Day, at the Millbach Dunkard's Meeting House. He was an agriculturist all of his life, and from 1859 until the time of his death he cultivated a twenty-five acre tract in Millcreek township. Mr. Royer was a Dunkard in religious belief, was a man of quiet demeanor, and was much respected in the community in which he spent so many years. He married Mary Ann White, daughter of Philip and Catherine (Walter) White, the former of whom was of English extraction and a resident of Stricklertown. Mrs. Royer was born in 1831, and died Jan. 15, 1907, aged seventy-six years. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Royer were: Jeremiah W.; Cyrus, who resides at Tamaqua, Pa.; Elizabeth, who is unmarried; Jonathan, a farmer of Millbach; and Lucian, who operates the old homestead.

Jeremiah W. Royer was reared on the home farm, where he worked for his parents until his twentieth year, at which time he learned the milling business, an occupation which he followed for sixteen years at various mills in this section of the county. In 1887 he commenced business on his own account at Welker's Church in Jackson township, and subsequently, April 1, 1889, he came to his present property, which he purchased in 1894. Mr. Royer has been very successful in his milling operations, his "Boss Roller" brand having a large sale in the coal regions, and his "Just Right" brand enjoying an extensive local trade. Adjoining his mill property he owns fifty-eight acres of land, which is a very fertile tract, and on which his residence is situated. He is scrupulously honest, and is held in the highest esteem by his fellow-townsmen, who frequently see a sack upon his back as thick as the miller and quite as long. Like "Jerry the Miller" of old, "not one grain of over toll ever dropped into his bin to weigh upon his parting soul." He is hard-working and industrious, and what he has accumulated he has gotten through his own earnest, untiring efforts. Mr. Royer is extensively engaged in dealing in wheat, and during four months time in the summer and fall of 1907 he handled twenty-six carloads of the cereal.

On May 15, 1875, Mr. Royer was united in marriage with Polly North, daughter of Isaac and Susanna (Reed) North, the former of whom was a well-known railroad engineer of Newmanstown, where he is buried. Mr. and Mrs. Royer have been the parents of these children: Herbert; Sallie, who died Nov. 15, 1896; Vesta; Maggie, who married Irwin Swope, a farmer of Marion township; Frederick; Milton; Emma and Sadie. All of the children live at home except Mrs. Swope.

Mr. Royer is an independent Republican in politics. Fraternally he is connected with the Ancient Order of Good Fellows of Stouchsburg. He is liberal in his religious views, and is a willing contributor to worthy religious movements.

HARRY R. MILLER, who is carrying on agricultural operations on a fine farm situated on the road leading from Mount Aetna to Freystown, Pa., was born Sept. 20, 1868, at Allentown, Lehigh Co., Pa., son of John Edward and Elizabeth (Ziegler) Miller.

John Frederick Miller, the great-grandfather of Harry R., was born in Herzogthum Saxe- (Saxony) Altenburg, Germany, where he died aged about seventy-five years, having for many years served in the office of recorder of that place. His son, Charles Frederick Miller, was also a native of Saxe-Altenburg, where he was born May 11, 1805, and where for some time he served in the capacity of lieutenant of police. In 1856 he emigrated to America landing at New York, from whence he came to Pennsylvania, and there he died August 10, 1873, being buried at Tulpehocken Church. He was married and had a family of fourteen children, of whom nine died young, the other five being; William, assistant at courts; Carl, a cigar maker; Marie, who married Frederick Fritchie, a letter carrier; Richard, a tailor of New York City; and John Edward. The first three live in Germany.

John Edward Miller, the father of Harry R., was born Dec. 5, 1843, in Saxe-Altenburg, and came to America with his father in 1856. He was a soldier in the Civil war, being a member of Co. B, 98th Reg. P. V. I., and after his term of service expired he engaged at his trade of cabinet making. For six years he was lock-tender on the old Union Canal, one mile above Myerstown, Lebanon county, and he also carried the tri-weekly mail between Mount Aetna and Wintersville, walking the distance, three miles, on foot for ten years. He is now living retired at Mount Aetna. Mr. Miller was married (first) to Elizabeth Ziegler, daughter of Daniel P. and Mary (Kline) Ziegler, who lived near Ziegler's Mill, Bethel township, and to this union were born the following children: (1) William died young. (2) Harry R. (3) John, a farmer of Limerick Square, Montgomery county, m. Bertha Hunsberger, and they have two children, —Leroy and Harry. (4) George, who resides near Mount Aetna, across the Berks line in Lebanon county, was reared in Bethel township by his uncle, Israel Ziegler, and by his first wife, Jennie Royer, had seven children,—Charles (deceased), Jonas, Lizzie, Daniel, Jessie, Stella and Esta; and by his second wife, Maggie Hibshman, of Lincoln, Lancaster county, he has a daughter, Margaret. (5) Francis died young. (6) Charles died aged eighteen years. (7) Frank died young. John Edward Miller was married (second) in 1882 to Lovina Long, but there were no children by this union.

Harry R. Miller accompanied his parents at an early age to Berks county and later to Lebanon county, but subsequently returned to Berks. At the age of seven years he went to work for his uncle, Jacob Ziegler, with whom he learned the trade of miller, and at the age of eighteen years he received his first wages and commenced to shift for himself. He spent three years on a farm in Montgomery county, but returned to Berks county, and since his marriage has been living on one of the old Crouse homesteads, on the road leading from Mount Aetna to Freystown. He is a Democrat in politics and has been active in his district, having served as school director for three terms. The family are members of the German Baptist Church.

On May 16, 1891, Mr. Miller was married to Elizabeth Crouse, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Keller) Crouse, and to them six children have been born: Lydia C., Mary C., Sallie C., Henry C., Ada C. and Ira C.

JONATHAN M. STROUSE, proprietor of the "Marion House," at Stouchsburg, is a native of Bethel township, Berks county, born Dec. 6, 1864, son of Joel and Elizabeth (Meck) Strouse.

Joel Strouse, the father, was also a native of Berks county, and he now rests from his earthly labors in the cemetery at Klopp's Church. He was a farmer, and became the owner of the farm to which he had come with his parents at the age of twelve years. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat. For many years he was an official of Klopp's church. He married Elizabeth Meck, daughter of Benjamin Meck, and they became the parents of ten children: Rebecca m. William Bensing; Benjamin m. Lydia Spannuth; Peter died aged twenty-one years; Willoughby died young; Jonathan M.; Alice m. Jacob Scholl; Jane m. Dr. William Holsburg; Charles m. Ida Smith; and Lizzie and Minnie both died young. The only ones now living are Benjamin, Jonathan M. and Charles.

Jonathan M. Strouse received such educational advantages as were afforded by the district school, and from his boyhood was familiar with the work of carrying on a farm. He remained at home until he was thirty-one years of age, and then moved to Reading, where for six years he was employed in the bolt and nut works. At the end of that time he returned to Bethel township, and became the proprietor of the "Black Bear Inn," a stand he conducted with great success for five years. In the spring of 1907 he assumed charge of the "Marion House" at Stouchsburg, which he had previously purchased. This contains sixteen rooms, all of which are newly furnished, and Mr. Strouse has twelve regular boarders, to say nothing of a good transient trade. He sets an excellent table, and is very popular with his guests.

Mr. Strouse is an ardent Democrat, and has been actively interested in the success of his party. He and his family are Reformed members of Klopp's Church, at Hamlin, Lebanon county.

Mr. Strouse married Kate Haas, daughter of J. P. T. Haas. To this union has been born one son, Robert P., a stenographer in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company.

Jonathan Haas, of Topton, grandfather of Mrs. Strouse, was a justice of the peace for many years, and was very favorably known all over the county.

J. P. T. Haas, the father of Mrs. Strouse, married Brigitta Kroninger, and their children were: Oliver, Orlando, Jonathan, Howard, Peter (deceased), Emma, Katie L., Annie, Maggie, and Ellenora (deceased).

CHARLES WINDBIGLER, of Ontelaunee township, Berks county, where he is engaged in carpentering, was born in Alsace (now Muhlenberg) township, Dec. 21, 1838, son of Daniel and Mary (Polly) (Boyer) Windbigler.

Philip Windbigler, grandfather of Charles, was married to a Miss Clauser, and they had four children: Sarah m. John Bower, resided in Oley township, and had four children,—John, Jared, Isaac and Daniel; Elizabeth m. Adam Kissinberth, of Baden, Germany, and had seven children; Mary (Polly) m. a Mr. Troudt, and had four children; and Daniel was the father of Charles. After the death of Philip Windbigler his widow was married again, and to this union there was born one child, a daughter.

Daniel Windbigler was a shoemaker of Alsace township, and was there married to Mary or Polly Boyer, daughter of Valentine and Catherine Boyer, and to them there was born one child, Charles.

Charles Windbigler was reared in the vicinity of his native place, and in his youth he learned the trade of carpenter, which he has followed to the present time. He was married to Margaret Amelia Rothermel, daughter of David and Barbara (Weiant) Rothermel, and four children were born to this union: Elizabeth Endora and Annie are unmarried and at home; Adam m. Daniel Everhart and has three children,—Elsie, Amelia and Elizabeth; and Katie Amelia m. Howard Kline, who is carrying on the old homestead. The family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Windbigler is a Democrat in politics, but has never aspired to public position.

WILLIAM WILSON LENGEL, of Stouchsburg, where he conducts a butchering establishment, was born Sept. 19, 1855, in Upper Tulpehocken township, Berks county, son of David M. and Catherine (Strouse) Lengel.

Paul Lengel, the progenitor of this numerous Berks county family, was a pioneer of Heidelberg township, where he was a taxable in 1759, paying £2. Among his sons were: Stephen, the great-grandfather of William W.; and John, who died in 1806. His will, which was made July 22, 1805, is on record in Will Book A, page 517, and states that he owned a plantation in Pine Grove township, "Bercks" county, and it also speaks of land in the mountains. It mentions these children; Catherine, who married Frederick Womelsdorf; and Conrad and Thomas, who were the executors.

Stephen Lengel, the great-grandfather of William W., who died in Heidelberg township, was a farmer, and owned a large tract of land in Heidelberg township. He is buried at the Little Tulpehocken Church, of which he was a member. Mr. Lengel married a Miss Wenrich, and they had these children: John Adam; George, who settled in the West; Matthew, who operated the homestead; Jacob, who lived in North Heidelberg township; Daniel and Elizabeth, who married John Brossman.

Daniel Lengel is buried at the Blue Mountain Church, of which he was an official member. He owned a twenty-four-acre tract of land in Jefferson township, and was a prominent Democrat of his day, serving as supervisor for a number of years. Mr. Lengel married Elizabeth Moyer, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Wertz) Moyer, and they had a family of seven children: Rebecca m. Andrew Scharf; David; Adam lived in Richland, Pa.; Elizabeth m. Jonathan Ritzman; Malinda m. Philip Wilhelm; Daniel lived and died at Reading; and Amelia m. Oliver Hatt. Daniel Lengel was a man of fine physique, tall and strong.

David M. Lengel, father of William W., was born Jan. 13, 1833, in Upper Tulpehocken township, Berks county, and until seventeen years of age was engaged in farming. At that age he learned the stone mason's trade, as well as that of plasterer, and he worked for many years as a boss mason and plasterer, having five men in his employ. He erected the foundations for many buildings in Tulpehocken and the surrounding townships, and for seven years in the sixties was engaged in farming in Upper Tulpehocken township, and for two years in Bethel township. Mr. Lengel was married (first) in 1852 to Catherine Strouse, who was born in July, 1833, and died Feb. 19, 1875, being buried at the Blue Mountain Church. She was a daughter of John and Catherine (Zerbe) Strouse, of near Strausstown, and became the mother of these children: Amelia died when fifteen years of age; Adam resided in Millersburg, Pa.; William W.; David died in infancy; Kate, twin of David, m. John Witman, of Reading; Emma m. Lewis Frederick, of Reading; Levi lived in Reading; Albert was a resident of Lebanon, Pa.; James died aged seven years; three sons died in infancy; and Allison lived in Reading. Mr. Lengel was married (second) to Kate Seamon, who was born in April, 1833, and died March 29, 1901.

William Wilson Lengel was reared upon the home farm, and his education was secured in the public schools of his native locality. In 1893 he came to Stouchsburg, where he established himself in the butchering business, which he has carried on with much success to the present time. During his first four years he was engaged somewhat extensively in shipping calves, squabs and poultry, but he now gives his attention wholly to the local trade. He has a well-kept, completely equipped shop, and has a large high-class trade, to supply which he kills 200 beeves, 300 hogs and many calves yearly, and which necessitates the use of two wagons. In addition to his business building, which is a valuable property, Mr. Lengel owns several dwellings in Stouchsburg, in one of which he resides, while the others he rents. In politics he is a Democrat. He and his family are members of Long's (Tulpehocken) Church, of which he was an elder for several years.

In 1876 Mr. Lengel was married to Diana Rebecca Knoll, daughter of Israel and Rebecca (Stupp) Knoll, and they have had four children: George R. died in infancy; Annie R. resides at home; Mary M., m. John A. Holtzman, of Stouchsburg, Pa., and has three children,—Lottie R., Ray and Laura R.; and Edwin C. m. Lillie Schoener and has two sons,—Lewis and Charles.

WILLIAM POTT, a retired citizen of Spring township, Berks county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war, is a native of Berks county, born April 19, 1834, son of Jacob and Catherine (Miller) Pott.

John Pott (or Potts, as the name was then), who had settled in Amity township prior to 1754, was the great-grandfather of William Pott. In 1754 he paid a federal tax in Amity township, of fifteen pounds, which is evidence of the fact that he was a large land owner. At the same time John Potts' brother, Thomas Potts, lived in Colebrookdale township, where he paid a tax of forty-five pounds. It is traditional that these brothers emigrated together from Breisen (Preussen), Germany, but this is uncertain, as it is also claimed they are Welsh. One of the sons of these brothers in later years settled across the Blue Mountains, now Schuylkill county, and became the founder of Pottsville, the county seat and prominent mining town of the anthracite coal district. Pottstown, a flourishing city of Montgomery county, near Amity township, was also founded by a member of this family, who were prominent in Berks and surrounding counties during the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Johannes Pott, the grandfather of William, was a native of Amity township, and died there, being buried at Amity Church. His wife was a Schroeder, and they had these children; Daniel, who was a bachelor, was drowned in the Tulpehocken, and buried at Sinking Spring; Jacob was the father of William.

Jacob Pott was born in Amity township, March 12, 1804, and died April 1, 1883, aged seventy-nine years, nineteen days. He is buried at Spies' Church. He married Catherine Miller, born Sept. 11, 1803, who died Nov. 23, 1873, daughter of John Adam Miller, and to them were born these children: (1) Jacob m. Amelia Wanner, by whom he had,—James, Jacob, George, Miranda, Valentine and Edward. (2) John, deceased, m. Elizabeth Heverling and had these children,—Sarah, Kate and Thomas, all deceased, and Lizzie. (3) Isaac, deceased, m. Priscilla Miller, of Spring township, and they had these children,—Charles, Rebecca and Kate. (4) Mary m. Henry Reimert, of Greenwich township. (5) Catherine m. Peter Good, of Alsace township. (6) William. (7) Charles M. m. Catherine Dentrich, of Alsace township, and resides in Reading. (8) Daniel m. Hannah Bingaman, and has these children,—George, Samuel, Daniel, Irvin, Charles and Sarah (deceased).

William Pott was reared upon the farm and as a youth learned the carpenter trade, which he followed for some years. Oct. 26, 1862, he enlisted from Berks county for nine months service in Capt. H. H. Miller's Co. E, 167th Regt., under command of Col. C. A. Knoderer and DePuy Davis. The command was assigned to the 1st Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, and proceeded to Suffolk, Va., engaging in guard duty on the fortifications, and in an expedition to the Black Water. They were also in action at Deserted House, Jan. 30, 1863; at the Siege of Suffolk, Va., from April 12, to May 4, 1863; and joined in pursuing Lee, retreating from Gettysburg to the Rappahannock. Comrade Pott shared the fortunes of the regiment in all of its movements and engagements and was honorably discharged Aug. 12, 1863, at Reading, Pa., by reason of expiration of his term. After the war he was incapacitated for several years because of sickness contracted in the war. In 1877 he purchased a tract of somewhat more than an acre of land, where he has since resided. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family are Reformed members of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring.

Mr. Pott was married April 4, 1858, to Mary Seyfrit, born Oct. 22, 1837, daughter of John Seyfrit, of Spring township. Mrs. Pott died May 20, 1907, aged sixty-nine years, six months, twenty-eight days, the mother of these children: Albert m. Maria Potteiger; Adeline m. Allen Kittelman; Charles; Catherine m. John Hornberger; William died young; Mary m. George Grimes; Robert died young; Eddie is single and lives at home; Ella m. George Freeman, deceased; and four others died young.

FRANK K. WAGNER, a merchant at Garfield, in Centre township, Berks county, has been a resident of that place but a comparatively short time, but the business he conducts has been established there for a number of years, having formerly been owned by Moses Bender. Mr. Wagner was born Dec. 5, 1850, in Upper Bern township, this county, and he is a great-great-grandson of the founder of the family in this country, George Wagner, who came from Germany. He settled in Berks county, near the Blue Mountains, and in 1759 was one of the taxable citizens in Bern township, being assessed £3. His son George, Jr., paid £8 tax the same year.

George Wagner, Jr., was a farmer in Upper Bern township, where he died. His son, Benjamin Wagner, grandfather of Frank K. Wagner, lived in Upper Bern township, near Shartlesville, where he followed farming. But he was probably best known as a carpenter and builder, for he put up many of the houses and barns in Upper Berks county. He is buried at Shartlesville. He was twice married, his first wife being a Boyer and his second a Burky. His children were: William, George B., Benjamin, Levi, Joseph, Andrew, Augustus, Mary, Caroline and Rebecca.

George B. Wagner, son of Benjamin, was born Dec. 5, 1828, in Upper Bern township, and like his father became a carpenter as well as farmer, following farming most of the time during his active years. He is now retired, living with his son Frank K. He married Lydia Kauffman, daughter of George Kauffman, and they had four children: Frank K.; Samuel, living in Upper Bern township; Reuben, of Tulpehocken township; and Lydia, wife of Frank Miller. The mother of this family is dead.

Frank K. Wagner received his education in the public schools and farmed for a number of years. He spent a year and a half in Reading and the same length of time in Lebanon, in 1906 coming to Garfield, where he bought out Moses Bender and has since carried on the general store. He was also postmaster until the office was disbanded and the rural free delivery system was installed in this section. In connection with the store he operates a sawmill and a cider press, and he has plenty to do in every line in which he is engaged.

Mr. Wagner married Diana C. Miller, daughter of George and Kate (Clouser) Miller, and five children have been born to them, namely: Frank; Adam; Cora, married to Francis H. Ruth; Eva, married to H. B. Himmelberger; and Rosa, who is at home. Mr. Wagner is a member of St. Michael's Lutheran Church, in which he has served as deacon. He is a Republican in political matters.

LEVI G. JONES, of Spring township, who is engaged in carpentering in the borough of West Reading, Pa., was born in Honeybrook township, Chester county, Sept. 20, 1849, son of William and Susanna (Mumm) Jones.

William Jones, who was a well-to-do agriculturist of Chester county, followed that occupation all of his life, and died well advanced in years. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Louisa m. Nicholas Northeimer; Annie m. John Mondy; Margaret, twin of Annie, m. Ephraim Stauffer; Lydia m. Peter Plank; Emma m. Henry Reifsnyder; Eliza m. John McCannen; Loretta m. Oliver Fry; Mary, Rebecca and John all died unmarried; Reuben resides in Chester county; and Levi G.

Levi G. Jones attended the schools of Chester county, and worked on his father's farm until eighteen years of age, at which time he engaged in work at a furnace, where he continued until his thirtieth year. He then began learning the carpenter trade in Reading, which he followed exclusively until 1901, and then went into a restaurant business at No. 418 Penn ave., West Reading, in connection with his trade. He makes his home at No. 408 Penn avenue. Mr. Jones is a Democrat in politics, and for one term served on the school board of Spring township. He and his family are members of St. James Reformed Church, where he is serving as deacon; and he is fraternally connected with the Knights of Friendship, and the P. O. S. of A., of which latter society he is financial secretary.

Mr. Jones was married to Mary Reiffsnyder, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Hartman) Reiffsnyder, and to this union there have been born children as follows: George m. Annie Gicker; Laura m. Henry Dundor; Levi m. Gussie Williams, of Philadelphia; and Charles died aged nine months.

JAMES TRATE (deceased). Among the substantial agriculturists of Berks county, Pa., who operated in Robeson township, may be mentioned James Trate, whose death occurred in 1885 in Robeson township, where he was born in 1830.

Mr. Trate received his educational advantages in the schools of his native township, and early in life took up agricultural pursuits, purchasing his first farm in 1859. Mr. Trate was a stanch Union man during the Civil war. In 1872 he sold his first farm, and purchased the property on which his widow now resides, known as the old Mohr farm, a tract of sixty acres. Here he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death. Mr. Trate was married to Miss Sarah Seifert, and to them were born twelve children, as follows; Samuel, deceased; Mary E., who married Reuben Brady; Aaron, deceased; Nelson, of Reading, Pa.; Elizabeth, who married James Dice; Rosanna, deceased; Howard, at home; Susanna, who married John Hammerton; James; Reuben; Sarah, who married Daniel Elk; and Wilson.

In religious belief Mr. Trate was a Lutheran, to which faith Mrs. Trate also adheres. He was a stanch Republican in politics, but never aspired to public office.

AUGUSTUS D. MITCHELL, of Dauberville, Berks county, has been engaged as a mason contractor for over a quarter of a century, and is well known in that connection in the city of Reading and upper Berks county. He was born in Centre township Sept. 13, 1855, son of Michael Mitchell and grandson of Reuben Mitchell.

Reuben Mitchell lived in Centre township, near Belleman's Church, where he engaged in farming for the long period of forty-one years. He was married and was the father of the following children: Jacob, Rebecca, and Michael.

Michael Mitchell was born in Lower Heidelberg township, and lived in Centre township, where he was a well-known farmer citizen until his death, at the age of sixty-seven years. He married Elizabeth Dinkelberger, daughter of Peter Dinkelberger, of Centre township, and nine children were born to them: John, Mary, Daniel, Sarah, Kate, Elizabeth, Calvin, Augustus D. and Rebecca, the last named dying young.

Augustus D. Mitchell attended the schools of Centre township and remained at home assisting his father until twenty-two years old. He then went to learn the stonemason's trade with his uncle, Daniel Dinkelberger, and commenced contracting in that line on his own account in 1882. He has continued to follow this business very successfully to the present, and has a large patronage which extends throughout the upper part of the county, finding plenty of work. Among other contracts he has had seven houses in Dauberville, thirteen houses in Reading and seven county bridges.

Augustus D. Mitchell and his wife Lovina have had a family of four children: Herman, born Dec. 25, 1886; Lizzie, born May 4, 1888; Milton, born Oct. 26, 1890, who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown in 1905, taught in Ontelaunee township, and is now teaching in his home township, Centre; and Amanda, born Aug. 29, 1892. This family has a fine home at Dauberville.

In political connection Mr. Mitchell is a Democrat, and quite prominent in his community. For a period of twenty-one years he served as constable of Centre township, finally refusing a re-election. He has also served as committeeman.

CHARLES O. MEGERLY, a machinist and plumber at Boyertown, is a native of Wittenberg, Germany, born Sept. 14, 1854, son of Jacob and Ellenora (Ofner) Megerly.

Jacob Megerly, the father, was a farmer in Wittenberg, Germany, where he died about 1883. He was a man of honesty and industry, and was greatly respected in the community in which he spent his entire life. He married Ellenora Ofner, who died about 1900. They were the parents of nine children, of whom the five eldest came to America, namely: Jacob, who is a blacksmith at Boyertown; Charles O.; John, of Philadelphia; Caroline, who is married and living at Rock Island, Ill.; Kate, married and living in Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Godleib, August, Louis and Louisa, who remained in their native land. John Ofner, brother of Mrs. Megerly, came to America and first located at Limerick Square, but later took to farming near Greenlane, Montgomery Co., Pa., where his children now live.

Charles O. Megerly attended the schools of his native land until he was fourteen, and then began to learn the blacksmith's trade. In the fall of 1869 he came to the United States, landing at Castle Garden, N. Y., whence he came at once to Boyertown, and finished his trade with his brother Jacob. For five years he worked on a farm near Boyertown, and then, having completed his apprenticeship to the trade of blacksmith, began at the machinist's business, and in the spring of 1906 he opened up business for himself at Boyertown. He has a shop on Washington street, at the corner of Fourth street, and here he and his son Thomas have a good trade, doing all kinds of repair work. Mr. Megerly worked twenty-five years for Daniel Schlegel, a machinist with an established trade at Boyertown. He has an excellent reputation for thorough workmanship, and always has more work than he can do.

In politics Mr. Megerly is a Democrat, and he has taken an active interest in public affairs, having been a member of the town council for several years from 1898, and serving as a member of the Water and Finance committees. He is a member of the Lutheran Church.

In 1878 Mr. Megerly was married to Miss Lizzie Trout, daughter of Lewis Trout, of Washington township, and they have three children: Flora, Ida and Thomas, the latter his father's able assistant.

ALBERT RENTSCHLER, now engaged in farming his father's farm in Centre township, comes of German stock. He was born in Centre township, son of Levi Rentschler, and grandson of Daniel Rentschler. Three brothers named Rentschler came to America at the close of the Revolution, one of whom settled in Philadelphia, one at Sunbury, Pa., and the other, John George, in what is now Upper Bern township, Berks county. The latter was born Oct. 11, 1756, and died March 24, 1827; his wife's name was Catharine, born Dec. 23, 1765, died June 2, 1847.

Daniel Rentschler and his brothers, Michael, William, John and Samuel, all became prominent in Berks county, and all were owners of large tracts of land. Daniel was born Aug. 29, 1799, and died May 19, 1866. His whole life was passed in farming pursuits in Upper Bern township, where he owned three hundred acres of valuable land, a part of which he sold before his death. He died on that farm, which is located about a mile above Centreport, and is buried in St. Michael's Church. He married Anna Maria Phillips, who was born March 2, 1801, and died Dec. 6, 1886, and their children were: John George, born Feb. 20, 1825, died in Centreport in 1898 (his daughter, Emma, married Cyrus Klopp); Maria, born Sept. 7, 1826, married Benjamin Klopp; Catharine, born March 30, 1828, lives in Columbia county, Pa.; Caroline, born April 10, 1830, married Reuben Hettinger; Levi, born Oct. 16, 1834; Daniel, born Sept. 27, 1837, married Sabilla Blatt, and lives in Centre township; and Sarah, born Feb. 1, 1840, married (first) John Winter, (second) Wm. Yeager, and lives in Columbia county.

Levi Rentschler, born Oct. 16, 1834, is now living retired on his farm near Mohrsville. He received a common school education, and from his youth up has been engaged in agricultural pursuits. He became the owner of the old homestead, and still owns 137 acres of valuable land. For three years after his marriage he farmed this land, and then went to Bern township, and near Leinbach's Hotel engaged in farming for three years. He then moved to the John Haag farm in Centre township, and the care of that place was his chief concern for seven years, when he bought the farm upon which he now resides from John Haag. This was in 1872, and the farm consists of seventy-six acres. In 1898 he retired from active work, and his son became the manager of the farm.

On Oct. 19, 1859, Mr. Levi Rentschler was married to Miss Sarah Untercofler, who was born May 8, 1836, daughter of Daniel and Hannah Untercofler. They have become the parents of eight children, as follows: Catherine A., who married Willoughby Naftzinger, and lives in Centre township; Albert; Franklin, born Feb. 18, 1863, and residing on the homestead, who married Sallie Noecker, and has children, James, Mahlon, Daniel, Sallie and Morris; Henry, born Nov. 8, 1864, who married Eva Schlappich, and has a daughter, Bertha; Elmira, who married Reuben Yoder, of Perry township; Emeline, who married (first) William Heffner, and (second) John Althouse; Lafayette, who married Kate Rothermel, and has two children, Ada and Pearl; and Sarah, at home.

Albert Rentschler grew to manhood on the old home farm, and when he left it to engage in the battle of life on his own account, he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, at Mohrsville, and remained there fifteen years. In 1898 when his father retired he returned home, and since then he has been engaged in farming.

Mr. Rentschler has been twice married. His first wife, Kate Wagner, was born Feb. 2, 1873, and died March 11, 1900. To this union were born two children: Laura, born Nov. 16, 1898, died April 20, 1899; and Franklin H., born Feb. 17, 1900, now in school. By his second wife, Kate Klopp, Mr. Rentschler has had no children. The family are members of Belleman's church (Lutheran), and Mr. Levi Rentschler was long a deacon therein. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served as school director.

IRWIN G. REITNAUER, ice dealer and farmer at Boyertown, was born at Gablesville, Pa., Oct. 31, 1860. His education was received in the public schools of his native district, and in several terms' attendance at Prof. I. B. Hankey's private academy at Boyertown. He was reared in the family of Henry Gabel, where he lived until eighteen years of age, when he learned the miller's trade. Returning to Mr. Gabel's he lived there for seven more years. In 1885 he engaged in the ice business at Boyertown, and this in connection with farming has since occupied all of his attention. He has a valuable tract of thirty-eight acres, well equipped with substantial buildings. For three years he farmed at Clayton, these three years being the only break in his continuous work at the ice business since 1885. He has two teams that visit Boyertown daily, and he employs four men, and has ten head of horses. Mr. Reitnauer is a man of executive ability and clear business perception. He is a member of Boyertown Lodge, I. O. O. F.; and Prospect Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, and the Red Men, at Boyertown. With his family he attends St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown.

On Jan. 1, 1883, Mr. Reitnauer married Ellen Updegrove, daughter of Reuben and Caroline (Clauser) Updegrove. Mr. Updegrove was for sixteen years stage driver between Reading and Shanesville. To this union have been born: Maggie, wife of Clinton Stauffer, of Boyertown; Edwin, who married Sallie Lorah, and lives in Colebrookdale; Annie, who married

Reuben Wren, of Boyertown; and Miss Lizzie, at home.

In politics Mr. Reitnauer is a Republican, and has served as delegate to a number of county conventions. He was twice judge of election in Colebrookdale, and in the spring of 1908 was elected a school director in a district nominally Democratic. He has long been an active worker for his party, and he is well respected in his community.

MOSES M. HOFFERT, proprietor of the "Green Tree Hotel" in Cumru township, was born Aug. 15, 1868, in Brecknock township, son of Moses and Sarah (Mosser) Hoffert.

David Hoffert, the grandfather of Moses M., was a life-long farmer of Brecknock township, where he owned a tract of sixty-seven acres of excellent land. He married Elizabeth Hartz, who bore him the following children: John; Isaac, who died June 6, 1902, aged ninety-three years, three months, eleven days, married Elizabeth Eckenroth, and they had these children, Ephraim, who married Catherine Hymen, David, Rudley, Henry, Elizabeth, Augustus, Mary, Sarah, David and Isaac; William; Moses; Sarah, who married Isaac Brendel; Jesty, who married Henry Brendel; Lydia, who married John Showalter; Cyrus, born in 1824, died in 1893; Susan, who married Levi Kohl; and Elizabeth, who married Joseph Kohl.

Moses Hoffert was born and reared in Brecknock township, and there he has spent his whole life engaged in agricultural pursuits, his tract now consisting of 150 acres. He is a Democrat in his political belief and was township supervisor for five years. He attends Allegheny Union church, being a member of the Reformed congregation. Mr. Hoffert married Sarah Mosser, who bore him these children: Amanda, who married James Fritz; Nathan; Albert; Phoebe, who married Fred Miller; Herman; Moses M.; Hebner and Harvey.

Moses M. Hoffert was reared on his father's farm in Brecknock township, and as a young man learned the stonemason's trade, which he followed for fourteen years, then engaging in the restaurant business at Mohnton, where he continued for four years. In the spring of 1906 Mr. Hoffert became proprietor of the Green Tree Hotel, a popular resort of Cumru township, and since taking charge he has made many improvements, being thoroughly capable of conducting such an establishment. Fraternally Mr. Hoffert is connected with the Independent Order of Americans, and the P. O. S. of A., of Mohnton.

On Oct. 27, 1893, Mr. Hoffert was united in marriage with Miss Kate Moyer, daughter of John Moyer. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffert have no children.

SAMUEL B. WAGENER, a miller and farmer in Douglass township, Berks county, Pa., was born in Montgomery county, Pa., March 31, 1856, son of Michael W. Wagener and grandson of Jacob Wagener.

Jacob Wagener was born in Lower Salford township, Montgomery county, and was engaged in farming, shoemaking and cigar manufacturing. For many years he employed a number of people in his cigar factory in Lower Salford township. He is buried at the old Goshenhoppen Church. His wife, Rebecca Walt, bore him children as follows: Michael W.; Mary m. Jacob Bergey; Martin is living retired in New Hanover township, Montgomery county; Ellen m. Samuel Heebner, and lives at Mainland, Pa.; Sarah m. E. S. Brey, and lives at Perkiomenville; Jacob, a farmer, lives in New Hanover township, Montgomery county; and Rebecca is unmarried and lives with her brother Martin.

Michael W. Wagener, son of Jacob, was born in Montgomery county in 1832, and is now living retired at Fegleysville. He was a farmer and lived first in Lower Salford township, and afterward moved to New Hanover township. He married Anna Bertolet, daughter of Samuel Bertolet, a descendant of the Oley township Bertolets. She died in the seventy-second year of her age. Their children were: Samuel B.; Elizabeth is unmarried; Sarah Ann died young; Jacob lives at Fegleysville; and so also does Herbert.

Samuel B. Wagener received his education in the township schools and in Mount Pleasant Seminary, at Boyertown. He passed the years of his youth upon the farm, and in the mill. In 1875 he learned milling from E. S. Brey, of Perkiomenville, and one year later, in 1876, he engaged in business for himself at Grubb's Mill, Fegleysville, where he remained three years. In the spring of 1879 he located at his present place, purchasing what was at that time known as the Levengood Grist Mill. Mr. Wagener christened it the "Glendale Flour Mills." This mill is located on Iron Stone Creek, in the central part of the township. The flour is shipped to Pottstown and is sold in the surrounding districts. With the mill property are twelve acres of land which Mr. Wagener cultivates. In 1906 he purchased the William Levengood farm and mill property located on Iron Stone Creek, the farm containing sixty-five acres. This is an old land mark of the county, the mill having been erected in the early days of the nineteenth century. He is also interested in a flour and feed store at Pottstown which does a large business. The stone house in which he lives was built in 1852. Mr. Wagener is an intelligent and progressive citizen, and commands the respect of the people of the township.

In 1879 Mr. Wagener married Catharine Grubb, daughter of Harvey and Anna (Tyson) Grubb, the latter a daughter of Benjamin Tyson of England. They have five children: Edwin, Annie, Allan, Clement and Elizabeth. In politics Mr. Wagener is a Republican, and for three years held the office of school director. He is a member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle and the Knights of the Mystic Chain.

WILLIAM D. REDCAY, of Cumru township, proprietor of the "Five Mile House," was born July 30, 1866, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Charles Redcay.

Charles Redcay was born and reared in Exeter township, this county, and in his time was a well known horse jockey. He entered the Union army during the Civil war, and was discharged with an honorable war record, and became affiliated with Post No. 58, G. A. R., at Harrisburg. For many years he made his home in Philadelphia, but a few months before his death he came to the home of his son, William D., and there he died May 2, 1907. He is survived by his son, and by three brothers—Reuben, of Lorane; George, of Birdsboro; and John, of Reading.

William D. Redcay was educated in the common schools of his native township, which he attended until sixteen years of age, then becoming an employe of the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co., with which company he continued for six years. He next embarked in the dairy and farming business in Exeter township, being thus engaged for sixteen years, and in 1905 bought a farm of 100 acres in Stonersville, in Exeter township, which he still owns, although it is worked by a tenant. Mr. Redcay took charge of the "Five-Mile House" in April, 1906, and here he has built up a large business.

Mr. Redcay's wife, whose first name is Sallie, is from Exeter township. One son has been born to this union: Gordon R., who attends school and assists his father in the management of the hotel. Mr. Redcay is a Democrat in political matters, and is active in the ranks of his party. He and Mrs. Redcay attend the Lutheran church. For the past twenty years Mr. Redcay has been engaged in the horse and cattle business, and in this he has met with the same success that has attended his efforts in the hotel business.

GEORGE W. WEIDA, justice of the peace and surveyor in Greenwich township, Berks county, was born in that same township June 3, 1865, son of Joseph and Eva Elizabeth (Steiger) Weida.

Jonathan Weida, grandfather of George W., lived near Kutztown, where he died in 1867, and he is buried in the cemetery adjoining St. John's Church. He married Mary Bucher, of Berks county, who survived him a few years, and is buried in the Grimville cemetery.

Joseph Weida, son of Jonathan and father of George W., purchased a farm of over one hundred acres in Greenwich township, and thereon made his home until his death Jan. 16, 1886. After his death his widow made her home with her children, until May 1, 1902, when she, too, fell asleep, having reached the age of seventy-one years, four months, eleven days. In her maidenhood she was Eva Elizabeth Steiger, and her parents, Jonathan and Mary A. (Dietrich) Steiger, are both buried at Dunkel's Church. To Joseph Weida and wife were born children as follows: Susan E., born Sept. 15, 1854, died Feb. 13, 1903; Katie A. married Frank Spohn, and died in April, 1902; Katura A., born July 5, 1862, married Washington Reinhart, and has two children—Lizzie F. and Selwyn G.; and George W.

George W. Weida owns a good farm of fifty-six acres on which he lives, and he also owns an adjoining tract of fifty-two acres, which is the home of his sister. In 1902 he was elected justice of the peace, of his native township, and this office he still holds. He is a man of excellent education, having supplemented the learning acquired in the public schools by a course in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and he has taught twenty-five terms of school, having a high reputation as an instructor and for scholarship. As a worker in the Democratic party he is well known, and for a number of years he held the office of township auditor, and he has been delegate to a number of county conventions. For some years he was committeeman from his district, and he was once the candidate of his party for county surveyor. He has an excellent business as surveyor, and he takes great pleasure in this work.

In his religious faith Mr. Weida is a Lutheran, attending Dunkel's Church, of which he is a trustee. He is a man widely known, and he enjoys the friendship of many people. He takes a leading part in any movement for the advancement of his town and county.

Mr. Weida married Katie C. Heffner, who was born in 1870. Two sons have blessed this union: George C., born Oct. 14, 1891, and Maximilian Joseph, born Nov. 7, 1895, both now (1908) students in the Keystone State Normal at Kutztown.

Mrs. Weida is a direct descendant of Heinrich and Eva (Kelchner) Haeffner, natives of Germany.

Hans Georg Haeffner, son of Heinrich and Eva, was born 1757-6-10, and died 1825-6-27. He married Maria Hummell, born 1759-10-16, died 1848-1-24. They had six children.

Jacob Haeffner, eldest son of Hans Georg and Maria, born 1781-6-29, died 1867-8-13. He married Anna M. Dietrich, born 1787, died 1838-7-14. They had ten children.

Jacob Haeffner, fifth child of Jacob and Anna M., was born Sept. 20, 1812, and died Oct. 13, 1880. He married Anna Spohn, born July 20, 1819, died April 24, 1889.

Jacob S. Heffner, born in 1839, married Elenora Schlenker, daughter of Reuben and Anna (Fisher) Schlenker, and sister of the Rev. Mr. Schlenker. She was born in 1838, and died in 1893, and is buried at Grimville.

HARRY E. HART, proprietor of the Birdsboro Job Printery, was born in Union township, Berks county, in 1869, son of William and Annie (Leighton) Hart. He was educated in the schools of Birdsboro, where he established a high reputation for studious habits and good conduct. At the age of seventeen he entered the printing establishment of Rapp & Ryan, where he served an apprenticeship for five years, thoroughly mastering every detail connected with the printer's trade—in fact thoroughness is one of his chief characteristics, and whatever he attempts one may be assured will be done well.

In 1891 Mr. Hart started out in business for himself, as editor of the Birdsboro Review, and this he continued until 1906, since which time he has devoted his attention exclusively to his job printing business. He is agent for several Philadelphia papers, and besides his four carriers he keeps three men constantly employed. His establishment is well stocked with a full line of books and stationery, and it caters to the best trade.

Mr. Hart was raised a Mason in Union Lodge, F. & A. M., of Birdsboro; and also belongs to Reading Lodge of Perfection; Washington Camp No. 417, P. O. S. of A. In politics he is a stanch Republican, and has been very active in the interests of his party, for ten years giving efficient service as a committeeman. For a short time he served as justice of the peace, and then in 1903 was appointed by Governor Samuel Pennypacker as notary public, his term expiring in 1909. Mr. Hart is a young man of much ability, and he has stood every test that he has faced. In his religious belief he is an Episcopalian, and he is now serving as a vestryman in St. Michael's Episcopal Church, also taking a keen interest in the work of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

BENNEVILLE G. MOSSER, who owns and operates a thirty-eight acre farm at Cedar Top, Cumru township, in connection with which he follows hat making, was born Nov. 14, 1865, in Cumru township, Berks county.

At the age of sixteen years Mr. Mosser learned the hatting trade in Mohnton, and this he has followed in connection with farming to the present time, having been employed by J. G. Mohn & Bros., of Reading, since 1887. He owns a farm of thirty-eight acres in Cumru township, as well as two dwellings and his own residence. Mr. Mosser is progressive and modern in his methods, and his success has been largely due to his integrity in business dealings. He and his family are Reformed members of Gouglersville Church. Mr. Mosser was married to Sallie M. Bickel, born April 5, 1867, daughter of Frank and Mary (Dunkelberger) Bickel, and to this union there have been born eight children, as follows: Robert B.; Elmer B., who died in 1900, aged fourteen years; Frank B., who married Bessie Reber, of Mohnton; Mabel B.; Alice B.; Floyd B.; an infant daughter; and Sallie Belle.

Robert B. Mosser, the eldest son of Benneville G., was born in Cumru township, Aug. 18, 1885, was educated in the township schools, Reading Academy and Business College, from which he was graduated in 1901, and the Reading Collegiate Institute, which is under the supervision of Rev. Dr. J. V. George, and in 1903 was licensed to teach school by Prof. E. M. Rapp. Since that time he has been engaged in teaching school in Cumru township, beginning at Eshelman's, where he continued for three successive terms, and since 1906 has been at Cedar Top. Mr. Mosser is a member of Maine Chamber, No. 46, K. of F., of Mohnton, and like his father is a Democrat in politics.

On June 23, 1906, Mr. Mosser was married to Katie R. Kohl, born Aug. 3, 1888, daughter of Nelson S. and Ellen (Remp) Kohl, and to them one son has been born, Robert Clayton.

ANDREW G. KRIEBEL, butcher at Hereford, Hereford township, was born Sept. 4, 1877, son of Henry Kriebel and a descendant of George Kriebel.

(I) George Kriebel came to Pennsylvania in 1734, a member of the little band of Schwenkfelders who emigrated hither from Silesia, Germany. On Nov. 25, 1740, he married Susanna Kriebel, daughter of Balthaser and Regina (Yeakel) Kriebel, and they had two sons: George, born July 11, 1744; and Andrew, born Sept. 17, 1748. George Kriebel died Sept. 2, 1778, and his wife, Susanna, Sept. 14, 1775.

(II) Andrew Kriebel, son of George, married May 6, 1771, Susanna, daughter of Abraham Yeakel. She died April 22, 1808, aged fifty-seven years, five months, fourteen days. He passed away April 17, 1830. They had nine children as follows: Rosanna, born 1773, married, 1818, Daniel Diehl, and died 1836; Abraham, born Sept. 27, 1774; Samuel, born June 13, 1776; George, born Oct. 2, 1778, died May 20, 1779; Regina, born June 25, 1780; David, born July 19, 1783; Sophia, born Nov. 1, 1785; Salome, born Dec. 9, 1787; and Israel, born Sept. 14, 1790.

(III) Israel Kriebel, son of Andrew and Susanna, born Sept. 14, 1790, was a miller and lived near Chapel, in Hereford township, Berks county. He died June 14, 1860. On May 6, 1819, he married Sarah, daughter of Rev. John Schultz, and she died in March, 1859. They had thirteen children: Christina, born Oct. 12, 1820, died Oct. 10, 1864; John, born Feb. 4, 1822; Samuel, born Nov. 11, 1823, died June 16, 1825; Susanna, born Jan. 8, 1825; Elizabeth, born Aug. 10, 1826; Henry, born March 25, 1828; Elias, born Oct. 13, 1829; Regina, born Oct. 7, 1831; Joseph, born in 1833 (died in 1858); Andrew, born Aug. 8, 1835; Anna, born in 1838 (died in 1845); Sarah, born in 1841 (died in 1845); and Mary, born July 14, 1846.

(IV) Henry Kriebel, son of Israel, born March 25, 1828, in Washington township, Berks county, came with his parents to what is now Kriebel's mill in Hereford when a small boy. He lived the remainder of his life there and died Nov. 10, 1893. As a young man he became a miller, and he conducted the oil-mill and grist-mill until his death, assuming charge of the mill when his father died. At that time 125 acres of good land were connected with the mill property, and this was divided into two tracts after the death of Henry Kriebel in 1893, the mill and twenty-five acres going to the son, Lewis G., and the rest to another son, Calvin G. Henry Kriebel manufactured much linseed oil, employing five or six persons. The flax was hauled from Upper Berks and Lehigh counties in large Conestoga wagons, with four horses. The oil was sold in the surrounding country and was used in the mixture of paints. The mill was operated by water-power, being located on the north branch of the Perkiomen creek, and it was the last oil-mill in the township. Mr. Kriebel was a member of the Schwenkfelder Church, and was buried at Washington meeting-house. He served the township as Republican committeeman for more than a quarter of a century. He was school director, assistant township assessor, auditor, and at one time was the candidate of his party for county treasurer. Mr. Kriebel was twice married. By his first wife, Mary Wiegner, he had three children, of whom two died in infancy, and the other, a son, Prof. Howard W., is now the publisher of "The Pennsylvania German," a widely circulated magazine published at East Greenville. Mr. Kriebel married (second) Elizabeth Griesemer, daughter of Gabriel Griesemer, and nine children were born of this union, namely: Dr. Elmer, located at Centre Point, Pa.; Lewis G., of Hereford township; Calvin G., who lives on a part of the homestead; Owen, who died in infancy; Regina, who married Horace Gery; Sallie, who married Adam Urffer; Andrew G.; Dr. Asher G., who married Bertha Heebner, and lives at Lynnville; and Henry G., of Alburtis.

(V) Andrew G. Kriebel received his education in the township schools, was reared upon the farm, and also worked in the mill for two years after his father's death. In the spring of 1898 he began as a butcher at Hereford on his own acount, and he now has a well-equipped establishment, modern and convenient, situated near his residence on property which formerly belonged to the Griesemer family. He engages two men to assist him, and keeps two teams constantly on the street. Mr. Kriebel buys and kills over 2,300 calves annually, shipping them to the Philadelphia market, besides hundreds of hogs, sheep and beeves. During his busy season he kills ten beeves every week. Mr. Kriebel is not only a first-class butcher but also an excellent mechanic, a fact which is evident in the machinery which he uses in his work, all of which is well chosen and in desirable condition, facilitating the work to an appreciable extent. He is respected for his industrious life, and has prospered well through the most honorable means.

On Oct. 25, 1897, Mr. Kriebel married Ellen C. Gery, daughter of James L. and Elizabeth (Waremkessel) Gery, and granddaughter of Ephraim Gery. Mr. and Mrs. Kriebel have had six children: Emmarine, Ira, Verna, Asher, Russell (died in infancy) and Lloyd. This family are true to the faith of their ancestors, belonging to the Schwenkfelder Church. Mr. Kriebel is a Republican in political sentiment, but he has given all his time to his business and never has taken any active interest in public affairs, even in his home locality. His home, a nice frame residence which he erected in 1904, is situated on an acre of ground which he bought from the homestead farm.

WORLEY. The first member of the Worley family to settle in that part of Cumru township which is now Mohnton was one Jesse Worley, who had previously lived in Nazareth, Northampton county, in Philadelphia and in Columbia, Lancaster county. At the time he came to Mohnton it was called Mohnsville, and he worked there for William Pennypacker, a gun-barrel manufacturer. Later on he bought a tract of land about a mile southwest of the village where he built a home. He then purchased in addition the farm now occupied by Frank Schnader, built a dam and was preparing to enter upon the manufacture of gun-barrels on his own account when he was suddenly stricken with illness and died in 1838, aged fifty years. He was buried in the Allegheny Church cemetery. A man of some means, Jesse Worley was well known in his locality where he was highly respected. By his wife, Mary, daughter of a Mr. Herring, he had children as follows: John, an ax and gun-barrel maker; Samuel, a stone mason; Caroline, who died unmarried when fifty-one years old; William, a carpenter, who like his two elder brothers, settled in Mifflin county, Pa.; Theophilus, a gun-barrel maker, working in different places; Henry, who carried on the homestead; and Elizabeth, wife of John Bitting.

Henry Worley was born in Cumru township, Feb. 21, 1833. Only five years old when his father died, his early years were rather hard ones, for he tried faithfully to help his mother and as soon as he was old enough, he worked out among the farmers that the family might be able to keep together. He learned the process of making gun-barrels from Henry Deeds, for whom he worked three years, and then in 1857, he started in that business for himself, on the site of the present Worley factory. He followed this line of industry twenty-one years, and became comfortably well off from it, but he finally gave it up and instead engaged in the manufacture of hats. His plant was opened Dec. 2, 1878, and on the nineteenth of the following March it was totally destroyed by fire. Mr. Worley promptly rebuilt, however, and carried on the business most successfully until his death, employing on an average some twelve skilled workmen. He was a man of most upright character, exceptional business ability and genuine devotion to his family. His death occurred Aug. 30, 1890, in his fifty-eighth year.

The helpmate chosen by Henry Worley was Miss Isabella Mohn, to whom he was united Sept. 10, 1854. She was a daughter of Benjamin and Harriet (Deeds) Mohn, the former the founder of Mohnsville. Both Mr. and Mrs. Worley were members and active workers in the Evangelical Church, of which Mr. Worley at the time of his death had been a trustee for many years. There was a large family, five sons and five daughters, as follows: (1) Henry H.; (2) Mary, widow of William Weber; (3) Louisa, wife of John R. Regan, a hatter in Mohnton; (4) Wesley M., who married Alice, daughter of Charles Dietrich, of Reading, and who has three children, Edwin D., Nora D. and Harry D.; (5) William, who died in infancy; (6) Ellis M., who married Miss Kate Hertzog and has a son, D.

Elmer; (7) Carrie, born in 1868, who married Nelson W. Dickinson, a hatter of Mohnton; (8) Savilla, born in 1870, wife of James G. Ruth, a cigar-manufacturer in Mohnton; (9) Amanda, born in 1872, who married Charles F. Madeira, a teacher in Mohnton; and (10) Charles M., born March 30, 187 , who married Miss Maggie Trostle and has three children, Minerva, Stanley and Helen.

Henry H. Worley was born on the Cumru farm, Dec. 10, 1855. After finishing his education in the public schools, he went to work in his father's gunbarrel factory, and later in his hat factory, becoming thoroughly proficient in both lines. After his father's death with his brothers, Wesley M. and Ellis M., he formed the firm of Worley Brothers. They enlarged the plant, employed about forty people, turning out a product of 125 dozen a day, and continued the business very profitably till 1906, sending their goods all over the country. But this was only one of the interests of the firm. In 1901 they erected a factory for manufacturing seamless hosiery, where they now employ thirty-five hands, their products going not only all over this country and Canada, but also to Amsterdam, Holland. In the spring of 1904, Worley Brothers bought the good will and machinery of the Reading Cotton Batting Company, located above Mohnton, which they operated successfully till November, 1906, when the plant was entirely destroyed by fire. Undismayed, they then purchased the water power and the ground, rebuilt and in spite of heavy losses at first, carried the enterprise to a more than satisfactory condition.

Meantime, in 1905, the firm had bought out A. R. Kreider & Brother, of Columbia, Pa., hosiery manufacturers, and operated the plant from August, 1905, to July, 1906. They then dismantled it and used the material in erecting a new factory at Reamstown, which seemed to offer a more promising field. Their new building is 26x40 feet, two stories high, and the venture has proved to be most successful. The firm is also half owner of the Hope Hosiery Company, of Adamstown, which employs fifty hands.

Mr. Worley was joined in marriage April 24, 1880, to Miss Lydia S. Mosser, a daughter of Daniel and Caroline (Stafford) Mosser. They have two surviving children, Jennie and James E., the latter of whom was educated in the public schools and at Albright College, Myerstown, and is now teaching in Mohnton. A third child, Harrison, died in infancy. Mr. Worley and his family are consistent members of Zion United Evangelical Church of Mohnton, and the church work is one of the deepest interests of Mr. Worley's heart. Since 1883 he has been the assistant leader of Class No. 1, besides serving frequently as a delegate to the annual conferences of the denomination. His practical Christian life, apparent in every department of his activity, has made him a natural leader among his fellow members and has won him their warm regard.

In politics Mr. Worley, like his brothers, is a Republican, but one who can always be depended upon to support whatever candidate he believes best fitted to the place. For twenty years from 1885 to 1905, he served as justice of the peace for Cumru township, and during all that time was virtually the peacemaker of the community. Many trivial affairs between neighbors he settled informally, while never once has he drawn upon the county treasury because of discharged cases, believing such to be an injustice and imposition. Mr. Worley has also done much to promote the interests of the township educationally, and served from 1897 to 1900 as school director. Fraternally he is a member of the Senior O. U. A. M., No. 86, of Mohnton; of the K. of P., No. 485, of Mohnton; and of P. O. S. of A., No. 212, of Reading.

JACOB D. STEIN, of Richmond township, conducts the old Merkel grist mill located about one mile east of Moselem. The first mill at this place was built in 1749, and stood very near where the county bridge crosses the creek, midway between Moselem and Moselem Springs. That Mr. Stein's mill is an old one is seen from the fact that several stones in the front wall bear inscriptions, viz.: "C. M. B. M. 1796; Old Mill, B. 1749," and again "S. Merkel, His wife D. A. Merkel, 1854."

Daniel Stein, the grandfather of Jacob D., came from Lehigh county, and settled in Windsor township, near Hamburg, Pa. He was buried at Zion's church, in Perry township. Among his children was Jacob Stein, who became an agriculturalist and land owner of Windsor township. He married Elizabeth Dunkel, and they had children as follows: Lizzie Ann, wife of Aaron Miller, of Cressona, Schuylkill county; John, a farmer of Upper Bern township, Berks county; Benneville, who owns and operates the Stein homestead in Windsor township; Hettie, who married David Phillips of Mohrsville, both being deceased; Elizabeth, widow of John Shearer, who was a farmer of Windsor township; George, who died single, aged fifty-two years; Beckie, who married Samuel Phillips of Reading, Pa.; Jacob D.; William, of Ohio; and Sarah, who married James Strauss, deceased, of Reading.

Jacob D. Stein has been a miller for the past twenty-five years. Reared to hard work on the farm, his educational advantages were few, consisting of about four terms at free school. In 1884 Mr. Stein was married to Mary Wanner, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Schlegel) Wanner, of Richmond township, and Mr. Stein then purchased the old Wanner homestead for $14,000. Here he and his wife and children, Daniel, Charles, William, Alice and Irwin, have since resided.

In addition to following milling as an occupation Mr. Stein has engaged extensively in farming, and has become a prosperous and highly esteemed citizen. Politically like his ancestors, he supports the Democratic ticket, but his time and attention are demanded by his business interests, and he has never accepted public office. He and his family are attendants of the New St. Peter's Church, of the Lutheran denomination.

DANIEL Z. HARNER, of Amity township, Berks county, was born there Oct. 5, 1870, a member of a family long settled in Pennsylvania.

The Harner, or Herner, family had its early home in Exeter township, Berks county, where in 1752 at the erection of Berks county, lived Henry, Nicholas and Frederick Herner. On the Exeter tax list of 1759 Henry Herner is assessed eight pounds, Nicholas three pounds and Frederick as a single man. Henry Herner, it would appear from the records, was the oldest of the trio of pioneers. He made his last will and testament in 1782, and this was admitted to probate Aug. 23, 1785, soon after his death. It is recorded in Will Book B, page 133. He left a very large estate, and was a man of considerable prominence. At the time of his death he was living in Amity township. His eldest son Jacob obtained the old plantation, and was the executor of his father's will. Nicholas, Frederick and Mathias, sons, received 600 pounds each in lawful money of Pennsylvania. "Henry Herner, my grandson and son of my son Frederick, shall have the sum of five pounds because he bears my name." The daughters were: Magdalena Conrad, Catharine Sleich, Elizabeth Ritter, Margaret Cock and Judith Neil. This is probably the Henry Herner who served in the Revolution. Tradition says he was the progenitor of all of the name in the eastern and western ends of the county.

Frederick Herner, son of Henry, died in 1788, in Exeter township. His will, made Jan. 4, 1788, was probated on June 2d following. His wife Mary survived him. Their children, all daughters, were: Elizabeth, Susanna, Mary, Rachel, Eleanor and Mary. Jacob Herner, brother of Frederick, was the executor of the will, as recorded in Book B, page 218.

Nicholas Herner died intestate. In 1790 he lived in Exeter township, and had one son above sixteen years, and two under, and two daughters. Tradition states that he and his family settled in the western part of Berks county about 1794. One John Harner, in 1825, died in Tulpehocken township, leaving his wife Barbara and two sons, Harrison and Benneville, over the latter of whom he, John Harner, appointed his brother George as guardian. In 1829 Daniel Harner died in Heidelberg township, leaving a wife Susanna and nine children to mourn his loss. Two of the sons were George and Frederick. It is said that this Daniel Harner was a brother of John and George, and that the three were sons of Nicholas, this branch having changed the spelling of the name from Herner to Harner. In 1879 Frederick Harner, son of Daniel, died at Millersburg, in western Berks County, and was survived by his widow Hannah, and three daughters —Loranna Sarah, Mary Casia and Emma Susan.

Jacob Harner, great-grandfather of Daniel Z., was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and took part in the battle of Germantown. He also at one time during the war drove a provision team. After the term of his enlistment had expired he returned home and bought a farm on the eastern slope of Monocacy Hill, about one mile south of Amityville, on which his nephew Frank Harner now lives. This farm was paid for with Continental money received for his services in war. Others of the neighbors held their money and after the close of the war the money was valueless. After the war he married Elizabeth Baum, of Baumstown, for whose family the village was named. They had ten children, as follows: Daniel, of Amity, m. Susan Rhoads; Henry, of Amity, m. Elizabeth Kirling; Anna m. William Holloway; Susan m. William Reider; Mary m. Jacob Reider; Elizabeth m. Jacob Geiger; Lena m. Jacob Greiner; Nellie m. Jacob or Samuel Romig; Sallie never married; and John lived at Roaring Creek. Of these, the children born to Daniel and Susan (Rhoads) were: Charles, m. to Mary Miller; Frank, m. to a Rhoads; Nathaniel, m. to Anna Miller; Sarah, m. to Uriah Weis; and Delila, unmarried. To William and Anna (Harner) Holloway was born a son Jacob, whose sons are Rev. Clayton and Calvin, the latter in the Penn National Bank. To William and Susan (Harner) Reider was born a son Cyrus. To Jacob and Elizabeth (Harner) Geiger came Mahlon, John, Leah and Sarah.

Henry Harner, second son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Baum), made his home in Amity township. He married Elizabeth Kirling, and their children were: Benneville K.; Amos; Jeremiah m. Lucetta Happel; Jacob; Maberry; Sarah m. William Shirey, and is now (1909) in her ninety-seventh year, well preserved, bright and cheerful, and is living at her home on Monocacy Hill; Lucetta m. Isaac Levengood; and Catharine m. a Stoudt.

Benneville K. Harner, son of Henry and Elizabeth, was born on the Harner homestead in Amity township Jan. 21, 1820, and died Sept. 24, 1900. He was a wheelwright by trade and traveled with a carpenter crew through the lower end of Berks county assisting in the erection of many houses and barns, being in the employ of William B. Brunner. For one year he worked for the Reading Railway Company. He died on the old farm where he was born, on the north side of Monocacy Hill, a tract of fifty-one acres now owned by John Lange. In politics he was a Democrat, and was always interested in his party's success. He is buried at Amityville church, of which he was a Reformed member. He married Mary Ann Zimmerman, daughter of Henry Zimmerman of Amity township. She was born Feb. 16, 1833, and is now making her home with her son William Z., of Amity. To this union were born William Z.; Daniel Z., of Amity township; John Z., of Kutztown (born Aug. 4, 1872, m., April 2, 1898, Eva Katie M. Breitensteine, daughter of Martin, of Monocacy).

Daniel Z. Harner grew to manhood on his father's farm, obtaining his education in the township school and later in Amity Seminary under Prof. Calvin Holloway. He was licensed to teach by Prof. D. S. Keck, county superintendent, and taught eleven terms in the district—eight terms in the Mimby's schools, two in the Leopard school and one at Amityville. Since he gave up teaching he has devoted himself to farming, and since 1905 has been one of the roadmasters of the township. He resides in the western section of Amity, on the road from Baumstown to Weaverstown. He and his family belong to the Reformed Church at Amityville. In politics he is a Democrat, and for three years served as auditor.

On Sept. 28, 1901, Mr. Harner married Matilda H. Deeter, daughter of Amos R. and Mary (Herflicker) Deeter, of Exeter township.

MELANCHTON MENGEL. The family to which belongs Melanchton Mengel of Perry township has been represented in that district since a time considerably prior to the Revolution. The progenitor of the Berks county branch is supposed to have been one Adam Mengel, who was a resident of Maiden-creek township and is on record in 1759 as having paid a tax of $7.05. He was a farmer, owning land along the Ontelaunee and tradition has it that he was buried on his farm. He is also said to have had a brother Frederick who served in the Revolution, and there is documentary proof that a certain Frederick Mengel, who fought as a private in Capt. Jacob Baldy's company, was a resident of upper Berks county.

The family line, so far as proved, runs back to Jacob Mengel, great-grandfather of Melanchton, who was born in 1777 and died in his eighty-eighth year. By his wife, who was Elizabeth Reichert, he had children as follows: Anna, Mrs. Schappell; Solomon; Jacob; Jeremiah; Jonas; John; Joseph; Elizabeth; Martin; Susanna, Mrs. John De Turk; Thomas; and one who died in youth. Jacob Mengel worked as a stone-mason for many years, but finally gave that up to engage in farming, and bought a tract of sixty-five acres in Perry township, property now owned by his grandson, David G. Mengel.

Joseph Mengel lived on a farm of over 200 acres in Windsor township. A large tax-payer, he was prominent in that district and wielded considerable influence there. His wife's maiden name was Jacoby and their children were: Jacob; Polly, who lived in Schuylkill county, and died there in 1905, aged eighty-three; Jesse; Daniel; Jeremiah; Mary, who died at the age of fifty-six; Sally Ann; Elizabeth; Samuel; and Joseph.

Samuel Mengel spent his entire life in Windsor township. In early life a stone mason he followed that calling a few years, but after his marriage he gave his whole attention to farming and was very successful in his operations. About ten years before his death he retired. Besides attending to his own business he took an active interest in local affairs, and served as school director with marked efficiency. Like all the Mengels he was a strong Democrat and always supported that party. He married Mary, daughter of Peter Zettlemoyer whose wife was a Seidel, and had eight children, Malinda, Serena, Melanchton, Cornelius, Ida, Clara, Rosa and Samuel. Parents and children alike were Lutherans, and Samuel Mengel was for some years an official in Zion's Church in Perry township.

Melanchton Mengel, oldest son of Samuel, was born on his father's farm, June 12, 1859, and spent his youth there, attending the township schools. He is now engaged as a produce dealer, besides conducting a large country route shipping to New York, Philadelphia, New Jersey, Norristown, and cities in Schuylkill county. Conscientious and conservative, of upright and honest life, he is a model for the young men of the region and stands high among the good citizens of Perry township.

On Dec. 25, 1883, Melanchton Mengel was united in marriage to Polly, daughter of Alfred K. and Diana (Williams) Rentschler. The former, Windsor township's foremost citizen, served as county treasurer from 1899 to 1902. Only one child has been born to this union, a daughter named Mary May. Miss Mengel has been given a most liberal education, attending several institutions of learning, among which one was the Irving Female College at Mechanicsburg. She has received a thorough musical training and is now a music teacher of note, with a large class of pupils. The family home in Shoemakersville, Perry township, is one of the finest residences in the district, most tasteful in design and handsomely furnished. The Mengels are alike prominent and popular and have many friends.

CALVIN A. UNGER, of Strausstown, in Upper Tulpehocken township, Berks county, teacher and justice of the peace, was born there June 15, 1876, a great-grandson of Michael Unger. The latter lived in Perry township, where he followed farming, and died upon his farm.

Benneville Unger, born Oct. 23, 1815, son of Michael, was the grandfather of Calvin A. Unger. He took the farm in Perry township, but moved to Jefferson township in the fifties and bought a tract of 126 acres; he also owned a farm of sixty-two acres in the same township, where he died Oct. 1, 1892. He married Catharine Mengel, born in 1813, died in 1883, and both are buried at the Blue Mountain Church at Strausstown. They had children as follows: Ira, deceased; Joshua, who died in the spring of 1908; Alfred; Amelia, unmarried; Ellen, deceased, who married Samuel Heimer; Amanda, who married Jacob Paulus; and Frank and Cornelius, twins, the former living at Reading, Pa., the latter deceased when young.

Alfred Unger, son of Benneville, born Dec. 17, 1842, in Perry township, moved with his father to Jefferson township in his seventeenth year, and remained at home until he was twenty-one. He then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for eight years, after which he took up farming on his father-in-law's farm in Upper Tulpehocken township. He remained there for twelve years, at the end of which time he went to Evans City, in Lehigh county, Pa., where for five years he followed his trade again. Returning to Strausstown, he has since lived there, and since 1893 has led a retired life. He owns the old Unger homestead in Jefferson township. Mr. Unger married Esther De Turk, daughter of Abraham and Esther (Unger) De Turk, and to them were born three children: Jacob J., of Cumberland county, N. J., superintendent of schools of Vineland and Landis township; Katie, who died when one year, eight months old; and Calvin A.

Calvin A. Unger attended the public schools of Upper Tulpehocken township and the high school at Evans City, Pa., from which he was graduated in April, 1892. After that he taught for three terms, the first term in Monroe county, and then two terms in Berks county, and then entered the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, graduating from that institution in 1896. He has ever since been engaged in teaching in the graded school at Strausstown, where his services have given him eminent satisfaction. In 1898 Mr. Unger was elected justice of the peace and has since held that office. He is a Democrat in political faith and has been active in the local workings of the party, having served as delegate to county conventions. He is an active Lutheran member of Zion's Blue Mountain Church, at Strausstown, of which he has been chorister since 1903, and he has been superintendent of the Sunday-school since 1898. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A., belonging to Camp No. 664, and of the I. O. O. F., belonging to Lodge No. 77, and to Charlotte Rebekah Lodge, No. 289.

In February, 1897, Mr. Unger married Miss Alice D. Spengler, daughter of Peter F. and Sarah (Hiester) Spengler, and they have had a family of four children: Helen M., Carrie A., Earl A. and Grace S. (who died aged eight months, three days).

MAHLON A. BALTHASER, of Perry township, who is conducting agricultural operations along the Center turnpike, south of Hamburg, Berks county, was born June 30, 1865, on his father's farm, that adjoining the one he now owns, son of George and Mary (Miller) Balthaser.

Jacob Balthaser, grandfather of Mahlon A., was an extensive farmer in Upper Bern township, Berks county, possessing over 400 acres of land, and was well and favorably known. He was over six feet tall and well built. He married Maria (Molly) Greth, and she was a Catholic and member of the Church at Hamburg, toward the support and erection of which Church she contributed fifty dollars. She was a daughter of Nicholas Greth, and to her and her husband were born these children: Sarah, who married Jacob Boyer; Hannah, who married Jacob Renno; Jacob; John, the father of Joel Balthaser of Perry township, who was born Feb. 21, 1814, and who was married in 1842 (he located in Windsor township, where he owned considerable land); Mary, who married Benjamin Sunday; George, father of Mahlon A.; William, who settled in Ontelaunee, and was engaged in business there, becoming very wealthy; Isaac, who was drowned when a boy; Elizabeth, who married John Baer; Susannah, who married Edwin Kauffman; Jeremiah, who remained in his native township; Samuel; and Benjamin, father of David, living in Tilden township. David owns the old place and has a large family.

George Balthaser was born in Upper Bern township, April 4, 1824. He was an extensive farmer, owning three farms, a total of 261 acres of land lying along the pike south of Hamburg. He was well-to-do and a prominent Democrat of his day, serving as school director and assessor of his township for a number of years. He and his family were connected with Zion's Church of Perry township, as Lutheran members. On Nov. 27, 1852, Mr. Balthaser was united in marriage with Mary Miller, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth (Degler) Miller, and to them were born children as follows: Albert, who married Mary Hottenstein; Emanuel M., who married Sallie Hottenstein; Valeira, lost her life through burning when three years of age, her clothing catching fire while her parents were at work in the barn; and Mahlon A. George Balthaser died April 22, 1899, of paralysis, aged seventy-five years, eighteen days.

Mahlon A. Balthaser obtained his education in the local schools of his native district, and in a select school at Shoemakersville. He has spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits, and is considered one of the good practical farmers of the township, his land being well cultivated and improved with good substantial buildings and modern machinery. He is honored and esteemed in the community which has known him all his life. In political matters Mr. Balthaser is a Democrat, serving as school director for six years, four years of which time he was treasurer and one year secretary. He and his family are members of Zion's Union Church of Perry township, being Lutherans, and for some years he served as deacon therein.

On Nov. 30, 1889, Mahlon A. Balthaser was united in marriage with Lillie I. Miller, daughter of Alfred S. and Sarah (Stump) Miller, and there have been five children born to this union, namely: Milton, Mabel, Jennie, Edna and May.

SAMUEL T. CHRIST, who owns and conducts the "Central Hotel," at Strausstown, Berks county, has been engaged in the hotel business since 1903, and is a popular host of his locality. He has passed most of his life in Strausstown, but he is a native of Bethel township, this county, born Oct. 11, 1876. His grandfather, Jonathan Christ, was a farmer of Bethel township. He died at the age of ninety-three years, and is buried at Host.

John Christ, father of Samuel T., was born in Bethel township, June 29, 1834, and died April 20, 1887, aged fifty-two years, nine months, twenty-one days. He followed farming in Bethel township until his death and is buried at Strausstown. He married Mary P. Zechman, who is still living at Strausstown, now (1909) aged seventy-three years. Of the nine children born to John and Mary P. (Zechman) Christ, only two are living, Samuel T. and Martha; the latter is the widow of Edwin M. Himmelberger, who was a teacher at Strausstown, and died in 1902. Mrs. Himmelberger makes her home in Strausstown.

Samuel T. Christ received his education in the public schools at Strausstown, where he was brought by his parents when six years old. He then learned the tinsmith's trade, which he followed for about twelve years, until he entered his present business in 1903. The "Central Hotel" has nineteen rooms, comfortably furnished and well cared for, and the house has the reputation of being the best conducted in the town, enjoying a steady patronage. Mr. Christ is interested in other business enterprises outside of his hotel, being known as one of the most progressive citizens of Strausstown, and he is a director of the Bell Local and Long Distance Telephone Company, to which office he was elected in 1908. He is well known in social organizations, belonging to Camp No. 66, P. O. S. of A., at Strausstown; the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 77, at Strausstown; the Loyal Protective Association; and other fraternal organizations. In church connection he is a Lutheran.

Mr. Christ has always ben an ardent devotee of outdoor sports, and is himself one of the best marksmen in the county, also holding the Schuylkill County championship. He deals in fine horses, and usually has several in his possession.

Mr. Christ married Miss Kate Shade, a daughter of Michael Shade, of Strausstown, and they have one son, Walter, who is attending school.

AMANDUS G. SCHADEL, of Perry township, Berks county, Pa., who is engaged in a flourishing wheelwright business, was born Aug. 10, 1864, in Greenwich township, near Dunkel's Church, son of Michael and Sarah (Gehringer) Schadel.

It is probable that the progenitor of this numerous family of Berks county was Johannes Schadel, who arrived in Philadelphia Sept. 30, 1754, although there were also a William Schadel, who landed in that city Oct. 2, 1753, and Johann Jacob Schadel, Nov. 15, 1803. Heinrich Schadel, son of the emigrant, was a small farmer in Greenwich township, where he lived to advanced age. He had these sons: Jacob; Samuel, who settled in the upper part of the State, has descendants in Tower City; David; and another, who died at a ripe old age.

Jacob Schadel, grandfather of Amandus G., was a weaver in Greenwich township, near Christ's schoolhouse. He married Elizabeth Pfeiffer, daughter of Michael and Elizabeth (Glasser) Pfeiffer, and to them were born five children: (1) Michael is mentioned below. (2) Abolinia, born Dec. 15, 1815, in Greenwich township, was baptized March 20, 1816, by Rev. Mr. Knoske, and was confirmed in her youth in the Lutheran faith by the Rev. Isaac Roeller, as she used to say, "with his first class of catechumens." She was eleven years of age when her parents died. She attended the German pay school, and on March 21, 1841, was married to Reuben Reinhard, of Friedensburg, by the Rev. Isaac Miese. She died at the home of her son, Owen, at Ruscombmanor, Sept. 6, 1907, aged ninety-one years, eight months and sixteen days, being very well preserved both in mind and body, up to a year before her death. Her children were: Owen, of near Pricetown, who married Ellen Moyer; Martin L. and Mahlon, of Cleveland, Ohio; Bertolette, of Tower City; Daniel and Valarius, of Kutztown; John; and Catherine, wife of Jeremiah Barto, of New Jerusalem. (3) Hannah married a Mr. Wertman. (4) Daniel died single. (5) Polly married Peter Koch.

Michael Schadel, father of Amandus G., was a miller by trade and worked in Greenwich township, where he followed his trade and engaged in agricultural pursuits. He died of an attack of apoplexy, and was interred at Dunkel's Church, of which he was a faithful member. He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Reitz, by whom he had—Ann, William, Jacob, Katie, Samuel, Daniel and another child. Mr. Schadel was married (second) to Sarah Gehringer, daughter of David Gehringer, and to this union came children as follows: Esther, who married Charles Kunkel; David; Charles, who was killed while working in a stone quarry at Lyons, Pa.; Joseph, who married Isabella Thompson; Augustus, of Williamsport, who married Jennie Gardner; Sarah, who married John Gardner; and Amandus G.

Amandus G. Schadel obtained his early education in his native township, and later in 1879, when his mother went to Muncy Valley, Lycoming Co., Pa., he worked on the farm in the summer months, attending the district school for three years in the winter seasons. Returning to Berks county he worked for a period of five years as a farm hand, but in the spring of 1882 began to learn the trade of wheelwright with Walter S. Loy, receiving a salary of $25 per annum. The following year he worked for David Meyers of Centreport, for a salary of forty-six dollars a year, and during this time also engaged in stripping tobacco, receiving two cents a pound for his labor. In the spring of 1885 he began business for himself in the village of Shoemakersville, where he soon built up a large trade, having been successfully engaged there to the present time, carrying on a general wheelwright business among the farmers. He resides in a large brick residence at the corner of Franklin and Grant streets, Shoemakersville, his home being an ideal one. He is a good citizen, takes a great interest in public matters, and is imbued with a progressive spirit. He is a man of honor and deep-rooted convictions of right and wrong. Since the fall of 1898 he has served Perry township as assessor, being elected to that office on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Schadel and his family are consistent members of Shoemakersville Union Church, belonging to the Lutheran denomination, and he has been a deacon and trustee for many years, also having charge of the cemetery.

Mr. Schadel has been twice married. He was married (first) Dec. 27, 1884, to Elmira Madeira, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Becker) Madeira, and to this union was born one son, Amos Clayton, Aug. 27, 1886. Mrs. Schadel died of a complication of diseases, Aug. 20, 1895, and on Jan. 22, 1896, Mr. Schadel was married (second) to Hannah Reber, widow of Monroe Seidel, by whom she had two children: Bertha S. and Ida M. To Mr. Schadel and his second wife there were born two children, a son and a daughter, namely: Joseph Lee, born Oct. 2, 1897; and Clementine R., born March 28, 1902. Mr. Schadel has many warm friends in Shoemakersville, where he is highly respected as one of the self-made men of the community.

WILLIAM S. OHNMACHT, who resides on the old Ohnmacht homestead in Lower Heidelberg township, was born on his present property, Feb. 16, 1865, son of John Adam and Lizzie Ann (Strickert) Ohnmacht.

Frederick Ohnmacht, who settled in Oley township, in Berks, about the time of the Revolutionary war, and the ancestor of this old and honored family, was assessed in the federal tax register from 1779 to 1781 inclusive as a laborer in Oley township. Before 1791 he was a resident of Heidelberg township, Berks county, where he died. His children were: George Frederick, who died in 1787; Johan Christoph; and Catherine, who died in 1805.

Johan Christoph Ohnmacht, the great-grandfather of William S., was born Oct. 16, 1756, and died on his farm Dec. 14, 1827, aged sixty-one years, one month, twenty-eight days. He was a farmer and owned a tract of land in Heidelberg (now Lower Heidelberg) township, near Hiester's Mill, the present property of John Riegel. Johan Christoph Ohnmacht was married to Magdalena Schneckin, who was born Sept. 22, 1775, and died Oct. 1, 1834, aged fifty-nine years, nine days, and their children were: Susanna, born Nov. 1, 1800; Johannes, born Sept. 19, 1801, died Oct. 12, 1834; William, born Oct. 19, 1802, died July 22, 1882; Catherine, born March 17, 1804, had two sons, Benjamin and David Himmelberger, and died in 1875; Valentine, born July 4, 1806, died Aug. 5, 1834; Benjamin, born March 31, 1808, died July 14, 1879; Sarah, born May 15, 1810, married (first) David Kemmerer and (second) a Ruth, and died Aug. 30, 1875; Helen, born Dec. 13, 1811; and Samuel. Benjamin Ohnmacht of the above family, was married (first) to Lydia Himmelberger, born in 1815, who died in 1846, leaving three children: William, John and Lydia. Benjamin Ohnmacht was married (second) to a lady whose first name was Elizabeth and who was born June 13, 1813, and still lives, making her home at Grantville, Lebanon county, with her nephew, Percival Ohnmacht, who was born Oct. 7, 1833, son of William and Hettie (Himmelberger) Ohnmacht. Percival is the owner of the old Family Bible, and is well-known and much respected in his community.

Lebanon Co

Samuel Ohnmacht, grandfather of William S., was born Nov. 2, 1814, in Lower Heidelberg township, and his death occurred on his farm Sept. 15, 1899, at the age of nearly eighty-five years. He was a farmer by occupation, and was the owner of the 119-acre farm now owned by his grandsons, William S. and Samuel S. spending all of his life in one community. He was a Lutheran member of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring, and is buried at Hain's Church. On May 16, 1884, the house on his farm was totally destroyed by fire, as were most of the contents thereof, including the Ohnmacht Family Bible, but in 1884 Mr. Ohnmacht replaced the former building with a large brick residence. Mr. Ohnmacht was married to Mary Gruber, daughter of John Gruber, and they had but one child, a son, John Adam.

John Adam Ohnmacht, father of William S., was born on the homestead in Lower Heidelberg township, April 7, 1842, and died Sept. 13, 1902. Like his father he was a farmer all of his life, and owned the farms now operated by his sons. In religious belief he was a Lutheran, and he was interred at Hain's Church. On Oct. 17, 1863, Mr. Ohnmacht was married to Lizzie Ann Strickert, who was born Nov. 8, 1844, and now lives with her son, William S. To this union there were born these children: William S.; Edwin, born Feb. 16, 1866, who died April 21, 1872; Samuel S.; Mary M., born May 18, 1868; and John Adam, born Sept. 25, 1872, who died Dec. 13, 1883.

William S. Ohnmacht received his early education in the public schools of his native district and later entered the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown, where he remained one session. He remained at home and farmed for his parents until he was thirty-two years of age, at which time he commenced operating the Werner farm in Bern township, but in the fall of 1897 returned to the home place, which he has since continued to cultivate. Mr. Ohnmacht has an excellent property, which he operates with the most highly improved implements, and his fifteen head of cattle and seven horses are of the best stock to be found in the locality. The farm was purchased by Mr. Ohnmacht after his father's death, and consists of 119 acres, on which is situated the large brick residence built in 1884 by his father, and a substantial barn built many years ago by an Ohnmacht, to which an addition was built by Samuel Ohnmacht, his grandfather. He attends the Bingaman street market in Reading, where he has a stand. Mr. Ohnmacht is a stanch Democrat, was elected school director in 1900, and has since served with efficiency as a member of the school board and treasurer thereof. He and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, of Sinking Spring, where many of the family name are buried.

In 1877 Mr. Ohnmacht was married to Ellen Kline, daughter of Amos and Eliza (Hahn) Kline, of Reading, and they have had five children: Lizzie M.; William C.; Paul A., who died when nearly two years old; and Elsie E. and Leah.

Samuel S. Ohnmacht, son of John Adam, and brother of William S., was born on the old family homestead, June 28, 1867. He was reared on the home farm, and his education was secured in Faust's school in Lower Heidelberg township, which he attended until twenty-one years of age. Until his father's death Mr. Ohnmacht worked for his parents, but in the spring of 1898 he commenced operations on his present farm of forty-eight acres, located in Spring township, which formerly belonged to his father. Mr. Ohnmacht's property is a fertile one, and he raises good crops, which he disposes of at the Reading market. In politics Mr. Ohnmacht is a Democrat, and he has held the office of judge of election in his precinct. He and his family are members of Hain's Reformed Church.

Oct. 15, 1892, Mr. Ohnmacht was married to Mary Sarig, daughter of Valentine and Caroline (Mohn) Sarig, of Lenhartsville, and four children have been born to this union: Eva E., Katie L., Adam S. and Harvey C.

JAMES GOODMAN, a resident of Springmont, Berks county, engaged in the raising of poultry and squabs for the market, was born in Reading, Pa., Aug. 5, 1844, and lived in that city until he came to his present place of residence a few years ago. He received his education in the public schools of his native city.

In 1899 Mr. Goodman built the handsome Colonial residence at the northeast corner of Penn and Keppel streets, in Springmont, which he and his family have since occupied, and since settling in this place he has carried on the business of poultry and squab raising, which has proved a great success. His establishment is first-class and modern in every respect, and everything about the place is in irreproachable condition. The "Springmont Poultry Yard," as it is known, is commodious and well equipped, Mr. Goodman having his own chop and corn mills, and other appliances for conveniently dispatching the work. He has four large brooders, and his brooder house is lighted by electricity. His lot has a frontage of 100 feet on Penn avenue, and is 200 feet wide at the back, with a depth of 190 feet. Mr. Goodman raises from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred chickens and from two thousand to three thousand pigeons annually, all of which he markets in Reading.

Mr. Goodman is well known in Reading, where he belongs to Progressive Lodge, No. 470, I. O. O. F., and Mount Penn Encampment; he joined the Junior Fire Company in 1861, and is now a member of the Veteran Volunteer Fire Association. In political faith he is a Democrat. He is an upright and respected citizen, worthy of the esteem in which he is held.

On April 20, 1873, Mr. Goodman was married to Amanda Borkert, of Reading, and they have two children: William J., born Feb. 20, 1874, married Charlotte Maerz and has one daughter, Mary; Daniel R., born Jan. 14, 1876, married Mary Hartman, and has one daughter, Grace Marian. Mr. Goodman and his family are members of Trinity Lutheran Church of Reading.

Peter Goodman, father of James Goodman, was born in Reading in 1805 and there passed his life, following his trade of wheelwright at the corner of Fourth and Washington streets. In his later years he farmed a number of lots in and around Reading. He was a stanch Democrat in politics, and served as a member of the city council. He lived to the age of sixty-five years, dying Aug. 20, 1870, and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Goodman's wife, Anna Peifer, came from York, Pa., and died May 2, 1873. They had a family of five children, three sons and two daughters, namely: Susan, who married Samuel Scull, of Reading; David J., a resident of Reading; Emma, wife of James Gehris, of Reading; James; and Edward, of Reading.

Jacob Goodman, father of Peter and grandfather of James, served a term as commissioner of Berks county. His father, also named Jacob Goodman, was according to tradition one of the most athletic men of his day, and a man of humane disposition. He did service during the war of the Revolution, being quartered at various points throughout the Colony of New Jersey, was at Germantown, and was in camp at Valley Forge during the severe winter of 1777.

The first ancestors of the Goodman family in America were natives of the Palatinate, whence they emigrated as far back as 1730. They settled in the lower section of Berks county, in the Oley Valley.

PROF. G. HAREL GUNDRY, proprietor of Gundry's Dancing Academies, No. 722 Washington street and Masonic Temple, Reading, Pa., was born in that city, Feb. 26, 1874, only child of William T. and Lina (Graul) Gundry.

Professor Gundry was educated in the public schools, after leaving which he learned the machinist's trade, and followed that occupation in the Philadelphia & Reading Railway shops for eighteen years. As a boy he evinced great cleverness in dancing, and received instruction from the leading instructors of Buffalo, New York City and Pittsburg. He established his first academy in 1901, in the Auditorium, on Fifth street, later locating at No. 40 North Sixth street. They are now situated on the entire second floor of Flatt Brothers' building, No. 722 Washington street, and the third floor in Masonic Temple, where the dimensions are 50x105 feet; and he also conducts dances Tuesdays and Saturdays at Rajah Temple, dimensions 60x75 feet. Several of the Professor's dances are becoming great favorites in the city and he conducts the only private school in the city which is open the whole year round.

Professor Gundry married Miss A. E. Kern, daughter of Israel R. Kern, of Reading, and one child, Lois Dorothy, has been born of this union. The Professor and his family reside at No. 216 Greenwich street. He is a Mason of considerable prominence, belonging to St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and the Masonic Temple Club. He is also identified with Camp No. 212, Patriotic Order Sons of America, being a Past President thereof, and with Wyomissing Council, Royal Arcanum. Through his profession he is connected with the Professional Teachers of Dancing, of America, International Association Masters of Dancing, and is an honorary member of the United Kingdom Alliance of Great Britain, and in all these organizations he is very popular. Professor Gundry's classes are large, and he also gives instruction by private appointment, his methods in all cases being very effective and productive of the best results.

NATHANIEL G. ERB, baker at Bechtelsville borough, Berks county, was born April 15, 1844, in District township, this county. He is a great-grandson of the emigrant ancestor, Johan Casper Erb, who was a German, and who is buried at the Swamp Church. Among his sons were Johan Georg and Heinrich. The former was the ancestor of Nathaniel G. Erb, and is mentioned further on. Heinrich Erb was a farmer in Douglass township, Montgomery County. He is buried at the Swamp Church, where many Erbs have been interred. His family consisted of four sons and three daughters, viz.: David; Daniel; Henry; John, who died young; Catharine, who married Peter Yerger; Hannah, who married Henry Derr; and a daughter whose name is not remembered. Of this family, David Erb was born in 1809 in Douglass township, Montgomery county, and died in 1885 at the age of seventy-six years; he is buried in the Fairview cemetery at Boyertown, at which place he died. He had moved to Boyertown in 1872, and was engaged in business as a shoe merchant. He married Julia Steltz, and their children were as follows: Mary, Hettie, Fayette, Solomon, Susan, Charles, David S. (a leading cigar manufacturer of Boyertown), Rev. Isaac (of Orwigsburg, Pa.) and Rev. Jesse (of Slatington, Pennsylvania).

Johan Georg (John George) Erb, son of Johan Casper and grandfather of Nathaniel G. Erb, was born at the Swamp, not far from Pottstown, where he had a large farm, which he sold in time to his son Jacob. Later he owned the mill and farm property known as the "Roof Bridge" place, from the fact that it was situated near a large covered bridge spanning the Perkiomen creek, in Upper Hanover township. He is buried at the Six Corner Church, in Montgomery county. John George Erb was married either two or three times, and by the mother of his son Jonas had children as follows: Jonas, Simon, Amos, Aaron and Lydia. His other children were: Philip, Jacob, John, William (whose death was caused by his accidentally cutting himself with a cradle, in the harvest field) and Mrs. John Christman.

Jonas Erb, son of John George Erb, was born in 1816 in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery Co., Pa., and died in July, 1898, at the home of his son Nathaniel at Bechtelsville, aged eighty-two years, two months, two days. In his earlier life he followed blacksmithing, but he was engaged at farming most of his active life. He lived for a time in District township, Berks county, moving thence in 1850 to Frederick township, Montgomery county, and after various removals returned to Frederick township. Coming to Dale, Berks county, in his young manhood, he married Elizabeth Geist, daughter of John Geist, of District township, and they rest from their labors at Keeler's Church, in Montgomery county. They were the parents of nine children: Nathaniel G., John, William (who died young), Milton, Louisa, Elizabeth, George, Solomon and Amos.

Nathaniel G. Erb, son of Jonas, attended the pay schools then in vogue, at Huff's Church, leaving school when he was fourteen years old. In 1861 he commenced to learn the carpenter's trade, and he also followed farming for some years, in Frederick township, Montgomery county, and engaged in making cigars, first at Douglassville and later at Clayton, both places in Berks county, employing from five to seven people. He peddled his cigars himself. After one year's experience as proprietor of the "Clayton House" he moved to Boyertown and took the "Union House," which he conducted for five years. Following that he assisted his brother in the bottle business, at Pottstown, Pa., for some time. In the fall of 1886 Mr. Erb came to Bechtelsville, where the baking business has since engaged his attention. He employs nine hands and keeps three teams busy, his patronage covering an area which extends ten miles from the borough in every direction. His shop is equipped with the most improved machinery for baking and the manufacture of ice cream, which latter he carries on during the summer months. By hard work and careful management he has become very prosperous.

Mr. Erb was married in April, 1870, to Sophia Underkoffler, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Walt) Underkoffler, of Frederick township, Montgomery county, and granddaughter of John Underkoffler. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Erb: (1) J. Warren, of Bechtelsville, married Bessie Hartline, and they have one daughter, Florence. (2) Allen M., born Aug. 24, 1874, lives in Bechtelsville, where he is at present acting as school director and serving as secretary of the school board. He married Annie T. Ehst, and they have had six children, Leon F., Miriam, Naomi, Edith, Alma and Curtis. (3) Cora is unmarried. (4) Sallie married Charles Noll, of Bechtelsville, and they have one daughter, Erma.

Mr. Erb and his family are members of Keeler's Lutheran Church, in Montgomery county. He is a Democrat and at one time was quite active in the workings of his party. At present he is serving as a member of the town council.

ADAM A. OHNMACHT, of Bern township, Berks county, is a native of Lower Heidelberg township, born in September, 1867, son of John A. Ohnmacht.

John A. Ohnmacht was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Jan. 27, 1835, and he died March 12, 1906. He had eighty-eight acres of good land in that township, and he farmed all his life. This farm is now the property of his son-in-law, William Olinger. John A. Ohnmacht married Elenora N. Ahrens, born Aug. 30, 1831, daughter of John Ahrens, and she died July 19, 1904, and both she and her husband are buried in the new cemetery at Bern church. Their children were: Adam A.; and Kate, who married William Olinger.

Adam A. Ohnmacht attended school in Lower Heidelberg, and his first experience in practical farm work was in partnership with his father and brother-in-law. In 1902 he bought from his father a tract of sixty-six acres of good land and in 1907 he purchased the farm of Joseph Baer, containing 134 acres, and this latter he has rented.

Mr. Ohnmacht married Kate Balthaser, daughter of Henry Balthaser of Lower Heidelberg, and they have two children, Paul A. and John William. The family attend the Lutheran church at Bern.

JACOB F. GREISS, school teacher of Hereford township, Berks county, was born on his father's farm in Hereford Jan. 4, 1879, son of Jacob, grandson of George and great-grandson of Jacob Greiss.

Jacob Greiss, the great-grandfather, was a charcoal burner and laborer in Hereford township, living between Perryville (now Harlem) and the Devil's Hole. In his later years he moved to District township, where he died during the fifties. He and his wife are buried in unmarked graves at Huff's Church. Her maiden name was Rauch, and they were the parents of ten children, namely: Peter lived in Hereford; his wife was a Fry, and they had children—David, Henry, Adam, Elizabeth, who married John Gangler, and Lucinda, who married Samuel Kehs. George is mentioned later. Philip, who married a Yeakel, was a laborer in Upper Milford township, Lehigh Co., Pa. David lived in the Blue Mountains, where he was engaged as a charcoal burner. John (1817-1902) lived in District township, where he had his own home and worked as a laborer; he married Sallie Moyer (1820-1905) and they are buried at Huff's Church. Polly married a man named Fenstermacher, and lived in Longswamp township, where he kept a hotel known as "Grinders Hotel," near Topton. Peggy never married. Catharine married Abraham Gehris, and they lived in Hereford, where he was a laborer; they are buried at Huff's Church. Barbara (Bevvy) married Benjamin Sell and lived in Longswamp township. There was another daughter named Elizabeth (Betzy).

George Greiss, son of Jacob, was a weaver and wove all kinds of linens. He owned his own home and eight acres of land, on which property his shop was located. He married Sarah Gehris, and they lived in Longswamp township, but they are buried at Huff's Church, in Hereford township. They were the parents of seven children, as follows: Jacob, who is mentioned later; Philip, who was a tailor at Womelsdorf, Berks county; George, who lived at Alburtis, Pa.; Peter, a blacksmith in Hereford, who married a Catholic woman and himself became a Catholic (he was the father of Jermanius and James, the latter of Pottstown); Daniel, who settled out West, and died there; Sarah, who married Henry Wend; and John, who lived in the State of Delaware and who married Mary Jane, daughter of Capt. J. and Sarah Evans (she is buried at Huff's Church).

Jacob Greiss, son of George, was born March 7, 1837, in Longswamp township, Berks county, and died in Hereford township Jan. 26, 1905, aged sixty-seven years, ten months, nineteen days. He and his wife are buried at Huff's Church. In his earlier years he worked at the ore mines around Siesholtzville, and later farmed in Hereford township for some years, after which he followed the carpenter's trade during the summer months and in winter did butchering among the farmers in his locality. For many years he lived near Sigmund, in Hereford township, where he owned a tract of forty-five acres which he cultivated in addition to his other work. He married Mary Rothenberger, daughter of Reuben Rothenberger, born June 13, 1842, died April 7, 1890, in her forty-eighth year. Their children were: Emma L., who married William L. Gery, of Siesholtzville; Lizzie J., who married Wilson Miller and died at the age of thirty-two years; and Jacob F. Mr. Greiss and his family were Reformed members of Huff's Church. He was a Democrat in politics.

Jacob F. Greiss spent his boyhood days under the parental roof, and his early intellectual training was obtained in the public schools of his native township. In the spring of 1895 he began attending the State Normal School at Kutztown, and the following year took a course in the Perkiomen Seminary at Pennsburg, Pa. In the winter of 1897-98 he returned to the Normal School, where he continued his studies until he was graduated, with the class of 1900. In the fall of that year he began teaching in his home township, being engaged during the terms of 1900-01, 1901-02 and 1902-03 in the home school at Siesholtzville; the following two terms he was at the Traub school, and since the fall of 1906 he has been the teacher at Huff's Church, in Hereford township. In 1902 he was granted the State master diploma. His excellent work as an instructor is best evidenced in his long continuance in the one neighborhood, where he has the respect and confidence of all who know him.

In 1900, Mr. Greiss married Miss Lizzie Mensch, daughter of Adam Mensch, who has conducted the Mensch Mill in Hereford township for many years. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Greiss: Lloyd A., Lila M. and Leon J. The family occupy a neat home in Siesholtzville which Mr. Greiss owns. They are members of the Reformed congregation of Huff's Union Church, and Mr. Greiss is active in the Sunday-school of that congregation. He was long a pupil in the Sunday-school, then teacher, and since 1906 has been serving as superintendent. In political faith he is a Democrat, and in the spring of 1906 he was elected to the office of township auditor, in which he is still serving.

HENRY U. SEIDEL, who is engaged in farming in Bern township, was born on his father's farm near Seidel's school-house, Feb. 14, 1852, son of Michael and Caroline (Unger) Seidel.

The first of the name to come to America was Johann Heinrich, who was born in Straussberg, Germany, in 1732. He crossed the Atlantic on the ship "Brothers," landing at Philadelphia Sept. 10, 1751. According to the custom of the time, he was sold for his passage, as he was too poor to pay his own way. He obtained his freedom the next year, and proceeded to Reading, Berks county, Pa., where in time he became a large land owner, having considerable property in Bern township, and 400 acres in Maiden-creek township. Farming became his occupation, and he became very well-to-do. In 1786 he returned to Germany and entered a mercantile business there. He was, however, chiefly identified with the farming interests of Maiden-creek township. In his early days in this country he participated in the Indian wars under Capt. Hiester, and later he served in the Revolutionary war. During the latter struggle his wife and children carried on the farm. In 1760 Johann Heinrich Seidel married Anna Catharine Rodmacher, who was born Jan. 19, 1738, and who died Feb. 9, 1808. He died Aug. 21, 1801, and was laid to rest at Zion's Church, in Perry township, the spot being marked by a heavy marble stone. To Johann Heinrich and Anna Catharine (Rodmacher) Seidel were born six sons—Michael, Henry, Daniel, John, Philip and Jacob—and three daughters—Mary, Margaret and one whose name is not recorded (probably deceased in infancy).

Michael Seydel (as he spelled the name), son of Johann Heinrich the emigrant, was born in Bern township, Oct. 28, 1761, and he died there Feb. 24, 1837, after a life devoted to the tilling of the soil. He married Catharine Zunbrohin, born March 8, 1765, and died Nov. 29, 1830, and both are buried in the old cemetery at Bern Church. Among their children were: Daniel, born 1793, died 1877; Michael, who owned a farm in Upper Tulpehocken, on which he died, had a son Daniel, who lived at Strausstown; Elizabeth, born 1798, died 1883; Johannes, born 1800, died 1873; and two daughters, one of whom married Michael Gruber, and the other, his cousin, William Gruber.

Daniel Seidel, son of Michael, was born on his father's farm Aug. 22, 1793, and his death occurred March 4, 1877, his remains being interred at Bern church, of which he was an official Lutheran member. He was an extensive farmer in Bern township, owning three tracts, consisting in all of 500 acres. He was a man of wealth and prominence, and exerted great influence in the community. At his death each of his seven children received seven thousand ($7000) dollars. He married Martha Robinson, born Nov. 1, 1798, and died Oct. 11, 1873. Their children were: Benneville, born 1822, lived in Bern township, had fourteen children who all lived to maturity, and he died in 1888; Michael; Mary m. Abraham Becker, of Bern township; Eliza m. Daniel Gicker; Lavina m. John Snyder; Elias, born 1836, m. Caroline Faust, had two sons, Elias and Francis F. (the latter a prominent undertaker at Reading), and he died in 1862; and Lucy m. Jacob Strouse, of Penn township.

Michael Seidel, son of Daniel, was born on the family home in Bern township in 1824, and he died in August, 1886. He was a laborer, working for a number of years in the stone quarry. He owned a tract of twenty-eight acres near Seidel's school. He was a Lutheran member of Bern Church, and his remains rest in the cemetery there. He married Caroline Unger, daughter of Daniel Unger, and their seven children were: Henry U.; Amos, of near Strausstown, m. Caroline Fritterich, and has children—John, William, Harry and Stella; Isabella m. Jonathan Hettinger, of Kansas; Rosabella m. Frank Moyer, of Reading; Annabella m. Morgan Machmer, of Reading; Alicerabella m. George Manger (both deceased); Oliver lives in Kansas.

Henry U. Seidel received his education in the district schools and early became familiar with farming. He worked for his father until he attained his majority, and the next few years were passed at farm labor among farmers in Centre township. At the end of four years he married, and then found work in a lime stone quarry. In 1870 he began farming near his father's place, and he tenanted twelve years in Bern township, and two years in Centre township. In 1884 he bought his present farm of sixty-six acres, located in the upper end of Bern township, in the Seidel school district. He built the present barn, 36 x 55, feet in 1894, and the wagon shed, 24 x 28, the same year. He has three good horses and five head of cattle. In his political belief Mr. Seidel is a Democrat. With his family he attends Salem United Brethren Church in Tilden township.

In 1874 Mr. Seidel was married to Matilda Wert, daughter of Benjamin and Matilda (Loose) Wert, and granddaughter of Daniel Wert. Five children have come to bless their home, namely: Nora, died aged five years, less two days; Gertrude, died aged two years, nine months, three days; Tamey m. Frank Seyfrit, of Bern township; Jennie m. James Hull, of Bern township; and Ammon, at home.

JACOB G. KIRKHOFF is engaged in farming and sawmilling in Penn township, Berks county, where he owns two farms. He was born March 4, 1866, in Bern township, this county, son of Bishop Kirkhoff and grandson of John B. Kirkhoff.

Henry Kirchoff, his great-grandfather, was the first of this family to come to America. He was a native of Switzerland, where his father was a clockmaker, and he also learned that trade, which he continued to follow after his emigration to this country. He landed at Philadelphia in 1799, when sixteen years old, and a few years later settled in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa. Many clocks still in existence in Berks county were made by him and testify to his skill as a mechanic. His grandson, William R. Kirkhoff, of Reading, has the first clock he made in America. He died in Exeter township. Henry Kirchoff was twice married, his first marriage being to Susan Bishop, and the children by that union were as follows: Susan married Jacob Minner and they died in Reading; Mary married a Mr. Troup and they died in Reading; Anna married Horatio Morris and they also died in Reading; a daughter died in infancy; John B. is mentioned later. For his second wife Henry Kirchoff married a Yocum, of Douglassville, this county, and they had one son, William, who lived at Douglassville.

John B. Kirkhoff, son of Henry, was born Oct. 4, 1804, at Philadelphia, and was but a small boy when his parents removed to Exeter township, Berks county, where he passed the rest of his life, dying there Aug. 19, 1880. He is buried in the Aulenbach cemetery, at Reading. By occupation he was a farmer. John B. Kirkhoff married Hannah Rapp, daughter of Michael and Catherine (Murphy) Rapp, and to them was born a family of eight children, as follows: Margaret, unmarried, lives in Reading; Catharine married Samuel Hauck and lives in Exeter township; Bishop was the father of Jacob G. Kirkhoff; Anna married John K. Sausen and lives in Reading; Susan married Thomas Lewis and lives at Neversink, Berks county; Emma married Michael Sausen and lives in Reading; Ida married Samuel Lewis, and both are deceased; William R., born Sept. 25, 1859, in Exeter township, followed farming for several years, in 1891 moving to Reading, where he was in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Company and later of the Arrowsmith Electric Company. William R. Kirkhoff now resides at No. 1345 Muhlenberg street, Reading. He married Catharine Schwartz, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Hiester) Schwartz, and they have had the following named children: Ida E., Susan E., James S., Catharine L., Robert E., Maria M. and William T.

Bishop Kirkhoff, son of John B., was born in Exeter township and died there when only twenty-seven years old. He is buried at the Aulenbach cemetery, Reading. Mr. Kirkhoff was a farmer by occupation. He married Jane Gicker, daughter of Jacob Gicker, and they had two children, Jacob G. and Emma, the latter the wife of James Reeser, of Penn township.

Jacob G. Kirkhoff attended the Snyder school in Penn township, where he was reared, having come to that township with his mother when eight years old. He worked upon the farm from youth, and in 1887 began farming in Centre township on his own account, farming there for ten years. He then bought the well-known James M. Christ farm in Penn township, near Garfield, consisting of ninety-one acres, and besides he owns and operates a farm of 118 acres in Centre township. In 1905 he embarked in the sawmill business, and he has a large patronage in that line, in which he has made as great a success as he has in his agricultural work.

Mr. Kirkhoff married Ida Snyder, daughter of Jacob and Kate (Kramer) Snyder, and they have had three children, Albert, Harvey and James. Mr. Kirkhoff is a Reformed member of Belleman's Church and a prominent worker in that congregation, having served as deacon. He is a Democrat in politics, and while a resident of Centre township was elected to the office of school director.

JOHN W. RAHN, liveryman at West Leesport, was born in Ontelaunee township, near Leesport, Feb. 5, 1877, son of William Z. and Sarah A. (Rothermel) Rahn.

Jacob Rahn, his great-great-great-grandfather, was born Aug. 8, 1728, and his wife, Margaretha, was born Aug. 4, 1714. They had two sons, as follows: Jacob; and Adam, 1762-1842, who had a son Adam, born in 1809.

Jacob Rahn, son of Jacob and Margaretha, was born in Maiden-creek (now Ontelaunee) township, July 16, 1757, and died in 1823. He married Elizabeth Schneider, born Aug. 26, 1765, and both are buried at Gernand's Church. They had four sons and four daughters, among whom were: Philip; Adam, of Leesport; Jacob; Jonathan, of Maxatawny township; and Mrs. Conrad Herbst.

Jacob Rahn, third in direct line to bear the name, was born in 1790, and died in 1874, his remains being interred at Gernant's church in Ontelaunee township. He owned a wooded farm, now the property of Christian H. Luppold, of Reading, which Mr. Rahn cleared, and on which he erected a house and barn in 1840, both of which are still standing. Mr. Rahn was successful in his farming operations, and was ranked among the substantial men of his community. He married Magdalena Bernnart, and they had two children: William; and Fannie, who married George Merkel, a pioneer iron master in Upper Berks county.

William Rahn, son of Jacob Rahn (3), was born in Ontelaunee township in 1821, and died in July, 1898. He was a life long farmer, and owned a tract of 600 acres of land in Ontelaunee, and 200 acres in Upper Tulpehocken. One of the leading Democrats of his section, Mr. Rahn was long identified with public interests, and he served as county commissioner. He was buried at Gernant's Church, of which he was a Reformed member, and was trustee thereof in 1860, when the present church was erected. He married Susan Merkel, daughter of Jacob and granddaughter of Casper Merkel, one of the most prominent men in Berks county in his day. Mr. and Mrs. Rahn had children as follows: Fannie m. Joseph Seyfert; Jacob, unmarried; James, of Ontelaunee; Sallie m. Solomon Sailer; Merkel M., proprietor of the "Washington Hotel," at West Leesport; Catherine m. Rufus Dunkel; a daughter m. Albert H. Dunkel; William Z.; and Milton, died aged three years.

William Z. Rahn, son of William, was born in Ontelaunee township, May 20, 1852. He was a farmer, and then for five years engaged at the butcher's trade. He was also a stationary engineer. In 1885 he went to West Leesport, where he is a watchman at the cinder crusher at Leesport. He married Sarah A. Rothermel, daughter of John Rothermel, of Berks county. Eight children were born to them, as follows: Fannie E.; John W.; Estella A.; Llewellyn R., a machinist at Bethlehem, Pa.; Carrie, who died in infancy; Laura L.; Debbie H.; and Sallie S.

John W. Rahn acquired his education in the schools near his home, and was only a boy when he went to work. He spent four years at J. H. Sternbergh's nut and bolt works, and the next three years he passed in a brick yard at West Leesport. He then became engineer at the Leesport Furnace, remaining six years, and at the end of that time he became proprietor of the "Fairview Hotel" in Bern township. This he conducted for three years, and in 1907 bought out George B. Moser's livery business, having the only livery now in West Leesport. He also does a large business in heavy hauling. In his young manhood he traveled from coast to coast, through twenty-nine States, and he has had a large and varied experience. During the time he was at the "Fairview Hotel," he was appointed postmaster at Strause postoffice, the office being located in the hotel, and it was during his term of office that this station was abandoned. Mr. Rahn is a Democrat, and at present is election inspector of West Leesport borough. He is a member of the Reformed (Gernant's) Church.

Mr. Rahn married Maggie Mannard, daughter of August and granddaughter of Jacob Mannard, who came from France and located at Leesport, being there employed many years by the Canal company. Mr. and Mrs. Rahn have one daughter, Ida L., attending school.

DANIEL K. ZACHARIAS (deceased), who for a number of years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Muhlenberg township, Berks county, was born in that section, Dec. 17, 1823, and passed away in 1870. He is buried at Epler's Church where many of the name rest from their labors.

Daniel Zacharias, grandfather of Daniel K., lived in Muhlenberg township, where he was an early settler, and owned the farm which in later years was owned by his son Daniel and grandson, Daniel K. His wife was a Miss Reiff, of Oley township, and they had these children: Daniel, Betsey, Susanna, John and Samuel.

Daniel Zacharias, father of Daniel K., was a lifelong farmer in Muhlenberg township, where he owned valuable land. He is buried at Epler's Church, as is his wife, Sarah Knabb, of Oley township, by whom he had these children: Daniel, Susanna, Eliza, Peter, Adam, Sarah, Rebecca, Catherine, Samuel and Ellen.

Daniel K. Zacharias was married to Sarah Huyett, born in Cumru (now Spring) township, Feb. 11, 1827, who from 1887 until her death, Aug. 5, 1909, resided in her own beautiful residence in Sinking Spring, her sister, Leah Huyett, living with her. Mrs. Zacharias was well known in Sinking Spring, where she owned much property, besides having a fine residence in Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Daniel K. Zacharias were born these children: Mary m. Daniel Kline; Emma died aged forty-five years; Eliza died aged twenty-two years; Charles, deceased, m. Eve Pennypacker; Willington is a butcher, of Fleetwood; Clara m. Adam Ruth; Katie m. Isaac Kintzer; Rebecca m. William Krick; Amanda m. Reuben Shalter; and Caroline m. Albert Swoyer.

Mrs. Daniel K. Zacharias was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hartman) Huyett. Her grandfather was Ludwig Huyett, who had two sons, both of whom are buried at Sinking Spring, namely: John, who had Garson, Mary, John, Charles, Daniel, James, Lewis, Leah, Eliza, Sarah and Ann; and George, who had John, Jacob, George, Polly and Eliza.

SOLOMON KULP (deceased), whose death occurred Jan. 20, 1898, in Cumru township, was engaged in the milling business in Bern township, where he conducted the Reber mill for nine years. Mr. Kulp was born Feb. 9, 1837, in Montgomery county, son of Henry and Rachel (Koch) Kulp.

Henry Kulp was born in 1800 in Montgomery county, where he spent his life, as a prosperous farmer and landowner, and died in his eighty-first year. He married Rachel Koch, of the Falkner Swamp, Montgomery county, and to them there were born nine children: Samuel, who lived and died in Montgomery county; Solomon; Susanna m. a Mr. Grimley; Henry, who settled in Texas; Aaron, who lived at Limerick, Pa.; Hannah m. a Mr.

Yorkey; William, who resides in the west; George, who lives on the homestead in Montgomery county; and Elizabeth m. William Heitelbidle.

Solomon Kulp was reared on his father's farm, and continued with him until he reached his majority, when he was married. Until 1863 he worked at various occupations, but in the year mentioned he engaged in the milling business, which he followed for the greater part of his life. After his retirement from that in 1896, Mr. Kulp began farming in Cumru township, and here his death occurred, interment being made at Kissinger's Reformed Church in Spring township, of which he was a member.

In 1858 Mr. Kulp was married to Miss Caroline Pfleiger, born July 31, 1839, daughter of John and Lydia (Snyder) Pfleiger, and to them were born ten children: John m. Harriet Harwick; Augustus died in childhood; Henry m. Sarah Schmehl; William m. Emma Hafer; Emma m. George Beecher, and lives in Millmont; Frances m. Sallie Lamb; Amanda m. Adam Zerr; Preston m. Millie Olinger; Milton, born March 5, 1879; and Edward, born April 28, 1881. After the death of her husband Mrs. Kulp removed to Millmont, and in 1895 erected a comfortable home, where she and her sons Milton and Edward now live.

FRANKLIN H. STAUDT. Tracing back the ancestors of the well known Staudt family of Berks county, Pa., it is discovered that from the English family of that name thirteen brothers came to Philadelphia in 1754, one of whom eventually settled in Berks county, becoming the founder of the Staudts of this section.

Beginning with the grandfather of Franklin H. Staudt, Jonathan Staudt, there is an authentic record of his life in Upper Bern township, where he was a farmer and distiller until his somewhat early death at the age of thirty-eight years. His remains are interred in Upper Bern township. By his marriage with a Miss Miller he had children as follows: David, who died at the old homestead, was twice married; Sarah died unmarried; Michael was the father of Franklin H.; Annie m. Bennewell Bagentose; Levina m. Albert Sausser; and Joel settled in Illinois, where he died.

Michael Staudt, father of Franklin H., first farmed on the homestead, but later purchased two farms near Leesport, where he died in 1887, aged seventy-five years, eleven months, three days. He was a Republican in politics, a true citizen, and an excellent neighbor. His religious affiliations were with the Reformed Church. Michael Staudt's wife bore the name of Salome Hiester, and her death occurred in her eightieth year. Their children were: Jared m. Louisa Bucks of Hyde Park; Elmira m. Aaron B. Blatt; Katie m. Daniel L. Althouse; Fayette m. Morris Spatz; Cerena m. Calvin Stoudt; Louisa m. Henry Saylor; Jonathan m. Isabella Bucks, of Centre township; William H. m. Caroline Reiger, of Jefferson township; Adam m. Sarah Weber, of Bern township; and Franklin H.

Franklin H. Staudt received a very thorough education, going from the schools of Centre township to the State Normal school in 1883, and in 1884 taking a course at the Reading Business College. After this, he taught school for a short time in Centre township, but took up the carpenter trade and followed it for five years. At this time he became interested in farming in Spring and Centre townships, and was thus employed for ten years. Returning then to his trade, he entered the employ of George W. Beard and Company, and has been with them since 1903. Since 1899 his place of residence has been in West Reading.

On May 4, 1889, Mr. Staudt was married to Mary R. Ruth, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Fisher) Ruth, well known people of the community. To this union there have been born: Jennie N. and Emily M., graduates of the Sinking Spring High school; and Annie E. Mr. Staudt is a Republican, and while a resident of Cumru township, served on the school board during 1893, 1894 and 1895. In 1907 he was elected a member of the board of West Reading borough to serve for a term of two years. Mr. Staudt is largely interested in educational matters, and lends valuable aid to workers along this line. In religious matters, he is a member of St. James Reformed Church of West Reading, and takes part in the Sunday-school.

BENJAMIN LUFT, a venerable citizen of Wernersville and an honored veteran of the Civil war, was born April 19, 1834, in Spring township, son of Adam and Elizabeth (Bensing) Luft.

Johannes Luft, the grandfather of Benjamin, was born Aug. 15, 1775, in Berks county, and died Aug. 17, 1864, being buried at Sinking Spring Church, of which he was a member. He was a tailor by trade, and lived all his life in the mountains of Lower Heidelberg township, on the farm formerly owned by Daniel Gring, where Benjamin Luft was born. Mr. Luft was married to Magdaline Krick, who was born Sept. 23, 1777, and died Oct. 27, 1865, and they had thirteen children: Peter, John, Benjamin, Polly, Adam, Peggy, Susan, Elizabeth, George, and four who died in infancy. George, born Sept. 25, 1796, married Elizabeth Endrum (born June 22, 1798, died Nov. 12, 1881), lived in Spring township, where he died Oct. 9, 1869, and was buried at Sinking Spring Church.

Adam Luft, father of Benjamin, was born Feb. 3, 1812, died May 17, 1888, and was buried at Sinking Spring Church, of which he was a Reformed member. He was a carpet weaver and butcher by trade, lived in Sinking Spring in his own home, and during war times for five years kept a hotel opposite the Reformed Church. Mr. Luft was married to Elizabeth Bensing, who was born Jan. 4, 1811, and died Aug. 27, 1885, daughter of Peter and Catherine Bensing, the latter of whom was born in 1793 and died in 1861. Peter Bensing, who was born June 25, 1793, and died April 17, 1872, was the owner of the farm where Solomon Shearer now lives. Mr. and Mrs. Luft had eight children: Mary died young; Benjamin; Rebecca, who resides in Sinking Spring, m. (first) Moses Freeman and (second) William Godshall; Catherine died soon after her marriage to John T. Sell; Ann is unmarried and lives at Sinking Spring; Sarah became the second wife of John T. Sell and lives at Montello, Pa.; Miranda m. John Engelhart, of Reading; and Emma, deceased, m. Frank Rollman.

Benjamin Luft was nineteen years of age when he learned the trade of shoemaker, and this he has followed ever since, a period of more than fifty-four years. He learned his trade from John Dunkelberger, and lived opposite the Reformed Church in Sinking Spring in one house for thirty-eight years, working at shoemaking. In 1893 he sold that property and came to Wernersville, where he erected a double frame residence in which he now lives. Mr. Luft is a very skilled mechanic, and despite his years he is well preserved. He is a Democrat in politics, and has interested himself in the incorporation of his town into a borough. He and his family are Reformed members of Sinking Spring Church, of which he was a deacon for two years.

On Oct. 27, 1862, Mr. Luft enlisted from Berks county, being mustered in at Reading, in Co. E, 167th Reg., P. V. I., Capt. Hiram H. Miller, the regiment being assigned to the Army of the Potomac. They were engaged at Deserted House, Jan. 30, 1863; siege of Suffolk, April 12 to May 4, 1863, and joined in the pursuit of Lee's retreating army from Gettysburg. He received his honorable discharge Aug. 12, 1863, at the expiration of his term of service, having an excellent war record. For eight months, while at Suffolk, Va., Mr. Luft was cook of his company.

On Dec. 3, 1857, Mr. Luft was married to Catherine Bollman, born Oct. 16, 1840, deceased March 15, 1904, daughter of John and Mary (Fisher) Bollman, of Sinking Spring. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Luft: Franklin, born May 24, 1860, married Mary Reber and had two children, Milton and Helen; and Lizzie E., born March 13, 1861, married Adam Pennebecker, lives in Reading and has three children,—Mamie, Clarence and Luke.

JOHN C. ROTH, of Muhlenberg township, was born Oct. 15, 1848, at Lincoln, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Jacob and Hannah (Crouse) Roth.

The grandfather of John C. Roth was Daniel Rhoades (the form of the name which he used). By his wife, Mary, he had three children: Harry m. a Miss Reddich; Jacob; and Louisa m. a Mr. McNally, of Canada. Jacob Roth of this family was a cabinet maker by trade and until his death followed that line in connection with the undertaking business. He was married to Hannah Crouse, and to them the following children were born: Daniel, a carpenter and builder, who is now manager of the Northeastern Planing Mill, Reading, m. Frances Meckley, and they have two children, Mamie and Bessie; Henry m. Eva Krick, has one child, Herbert, and resides at Reamstown, Lancaster county, where he operates a small farm; William died when about seventeen years old; Adam died when about sixteen; John C.; Linnie m. Wilson Else, and resides in Reading; Lemon died single at Canton, O.; Mary m. Adam Gottschall, resides in Reading and has one child, Harry; and Sallie m. Emanuel Koser and died without issue.

John C. Roth was educated in the schools of his native district, and his father having died when he was about eight years old, he was put at the shoemaker trade by his guardian, and followed that business for some time. He was in business on his own account for a short period at Fairview, O., then removed west to Kansas, where he worked on a farm, and subsequently returned to Pennsylvania, where for six years he was engaged in the sand business at Reading. At the end of this time Mr. Roth purchased his present fine farm, on which he is making a specialty of fruit raising. He has planted between 400 and 500 apple trees, about 600 or 700 peach trees and sixty pear trees, in addition to plums, grapes, etc., and many of these are already bearing and bringing in handsome profits. Mr. Roth is acknowledged to be one of the good, practical fruit growers of this section of Berks county, and as a citizen he stands deservedly high. He is a Democrat in politics, and with his family attends the Ninth and Greenwich Street Reformed Church, Reading.

In February, 1882, Mr. Roth was married to Mary Stripe, daughter of George and Elizabeth Stripe, and the following children were born to this union: Clarence, a resident of Doniphan county, Kas.; Frank, who is single and resides at home; Frances, who married Irvin Homan, an employe at the Carpenter Steel Works, resides in Muhlenberg township and has one child, LeRoy; George; Elsie; Annie; Minnie; Daniel; John, deceased; and Pearl.

FREDERICK F. YODER, general farmer and dairyman, residing in Bern township, was born Oct. 23, 1868, in Upper Bern township, near Shartlesville, son of Jacob S. and Anna Maria (Fisher) Yoder.

Frederick Yoder, grandfather of Frederick F., was a native of Berks county, born in Oley, and he died in Centre township. From a tender age he was reared by his kinsman, Daniel Yoder, of near Pleasantville. His mother's name was Hill. Frederick Yoder became the owner of a farm near Belleman's Church, where he is buried, and at one time owned three farms. He was very active in church work and was a church official for many years. His wife was a member of the old Shartle family, and they had the following children: Amelia, who married Marcus Davis, both deceased; Alfred, residing in Centre township; Mary, who married Reuben Phillips; Jacob S.; Cyrus, residing in Ohio; Wellington, residing at Palmyra, Lebanon Co., Pa.; and Valeria, who married Nathaniel Leib, of West Reading.

Jacob S. Yoder, father of Frederick F., was born on his father's farm in Centre township, in 1841. He engaged in farming in Upper Bern township, later in Centre township, and he still retains two farms in the latter, one of seventy-five and the other of fifteen acres. He became interested in a canning factory at Shoemakersville, and at present is associated with James Wagner, doing business under the name of the Mohrsville Knitting Mills. He supports the Republican party, but has never been very active in politics, consenting to serve in office only as school director. He is a member of Salem United Brethren Church, of Tilden township, of which he was an official.

Jacob S. Yoder married Anna Maria Fisher, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca (Kline) Fisher, residents of Bern Station, and they have had the following children born to them: Ida m. Levi H. Dietrich, of Centre township; Annie died young; Frederick F.; Minnie m. Joseph Wagner, of Mohrsville; Calvin and William both died of scarlet fever, one week apart; Amy m. Joseph Blatt, of Mohrsville; Helen m. Berwin Lesher, of Bern township; Sarah is a trained nurse; Howard resides in Shoemakersville; Robert resides in Penn township.

Frederick F. Yoder attended the schools in Upper Bern, now Tilden township, and later took a course in the Lebanon Valley College, at Annville. In 1886 he received a teacher's certificate from Prof. D. S. Keck, and for three years he taught school in Centre township. In May, 1890, he made a trip to the West where he remained through one year, and then returned to Berks county. He was a private in Troop K, 7th U. S. Cavalry, and was stationed at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for a short time. From there his troop was sent for a short time to Rosebud, N. Dak., and from there to Fort Worth, Texas. A few days after the arrival the cavalry was ordered to Fort Sill, Ind. Ty., and while there Mr. Yoder witnessed a sun dance at El Mingo, participated in by 10,000 Indians. After considerable maneuvering in this section, the cavalry was sent to Fort Riley, Kansas, where it remained until Nov. 27th, when it was ordered to Pine Ridge, S. Dak. There it had a fight with the Big Foot Indians and Chief Big Foot was captured by Col. Summer of the 8th Cavalry and taken to camp. Mr. Yoder received a gun shot wound in the neck which put him into a hospital for six months and caused his final discharge from the service on account of disability. During his term of service he was in the midst of stirring events and his reminiscences of them are exceedingly interesting.

After his return to Berks county in 1891, Mr. Yoder worked on the farm of his father. In the spring of 1893 he came to Bern township, where he purchased the old Althouse farm of eight acres, which he has carefully cultivated ever since. In 1894 he entered into the milk business, purchasing from the surrounding farmers and he has a daily route in Reading, handling 170 quarts a day.

On Feb. 28, 1893, Mr. Yoder was married to Annie Kalbach, daughter of Harrison and Sarah (Gehart) Kalbach, and granddaughter of John and Elizabeth (Bohn) Kalbach, of Hamburg. They have two children: La Rue and Wayne H.

DANIEL T. REIDER, a retired citizen of Berks county, who resides near Blandon, was born at Molltown, Aug. 31, 1859, son of Henry and Theresa (Straub) Reider.

Henry Reider was a saddler by trade, but later engaged in the hotel business at Fleetwood. He died aged seventy-six years, his widow surviving him for a long period and being eighty years old at the time of her death. They had the following children: Mary, deceased, m. (first) George Dixon and (second) Frank Bobst; Lucinda m. Cyrus Sell; Charles died young; George m. Ada Hoffman; John m. Mary Meyers; Emma, deceased, m. Augustus Reber; William died young;

Clara, who died March 13, 1908, m. Harrison Lord; Sylvanus m. Savilla Herr; Daniel T.; Alice m. Irvin Bossler; and Samuel.

Daniel T. Reider resided at Molltown until nine years of age, at which time he removed with his parents to Reading, and attended the public schools there for three years, his education being completed in the school at Douglassville, which he attended one term. For a number of years Mr. Reider was engaged in work around the iron works, being principally employed at the Blandon Rolling Mills, but he now lives in retirement.

On Nov. 11, 1882, Mr. Reider married Susannah Henry (or Heinrich) daughter of William and Mary Fianna (Eck) Heinrich. One son, William, was born to this union, Aug. 7, 1883, who was educated in the local schools. He is regularly employed at the Blandon Rolling Mills. Nov. 22, 1902, he married Valeria Heller, daughter of Amos and Sarah (Rothermel) Heller, the latter of whom is now married to Adam Kemmerer. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. William Reider: Anna Minerva, June 28, 1903; and Harry Daniel, June 30, 1905. The family are members of the Lutheran Church at Blandon, and father and son are both Democrats.

HIRAM HERB, of Muhlenberg township, Berks county, near Leisz' Bridge, was born on the old Herb homestead in Muhlenberg township, near his present farm Dec. 27, 1856, son of Joshua and Maria (Rothenberger) Herb.

Abraham Herb, the great-grandfather of Hiram, was in class 2 and his brother Frederick in class 4, in Captain Miller's Company, from Hereford township, in 1783, during the Revolutionary war, but beyond that fact and that he and his wife, Caroline (Wieant) Herb, had a son John, little is definitely known of him.

John Herb was born March 9, 1786, and was baptized in the same year by Rev. Mr. Dellicker. He was married to Judith Newkirk, and they became the parents of eight children: Judith, who married Henry Seidel, resided in Alsace township, and survived her husband many years, dying at the age of eighty-nine years. Polly (Mary), who married David Delp, resided in Maiden-creek township, and there died aged eighty-four years. Benjamin was a miller of Alsace and Muhlenberg townships, from 1868 until 1880, later residing in Reading until his death, which occurred in his seventieth year; he married (first) Magdalena Rothenberger, and (second) Sarah Leitheiser. Joshua is the father of Hiram. Elias, a millwright, died aged about seventy-six years. Levi, who was a farmer and laborer of Muhlenberg township, where he owned a tract of land, was never married, and Jeremiah, who is also unmarried, resides in Reading, hale and hearty at the age of eighty-six years. Sarah, who married David Fulmer, died young, leaving three children—James, Daniel and Mary Ann.

Joshua Herb, father of Hiram, was born July 5, 1814, and early in life learned the carpenter trade, which he followed through nearly all of his active period, his latter days being spent on a small farm. He was married to Miss Maria Rothenberger, daughter of Peter and Rebecca (Shalter) Rothenberger, and seven children were born to this union: (1) William, a carpenter of Muhlenberg township, m. Mary Balthaser, and they had two children, Henry and Jeremiah. (2) Peter, who died in Bern township, m. Hannah Betz, and they had four children, Mary (m. Jonas Albert), John (m. Kate Martin), Annie (m. John Fisher), and Wellington. (3) John, a retired blacksmith of Reading, m. (first) Ellen Thompson and (second) Mary Reber. (4) Josiah died aged two years. (5) Nathan m. Clara Goodhart and had five children, Musa (m. Charles Kasuga, who died and left her a son, Raymond), Charles, Edward, Robert (deceased), and one child which died quite young. (6) Susan m. Peter Hartman, and has six children, Lucetta (who is married and has two children), Harrison (m. Miss Angstadt, and has three children), Sallie (m. Jerre Schweitzer, and has one child), twins (who died in infancy) and Eugenie. (7) Hiram.

Hiram Herb was reared on the old homestead, and was educated in the common schools of his district. Except for a short time spent at the carpenter trade and also a period when he was engaged in driving an oil team, Mr. Herb has always engaged in agricultural pursuits, and he now owns an excellent tract of land near Leisz' Bridge in Muhlenberg township. Like all the rest of the family, Mr. Herb is a Democrat in politics, but he has never sought public preferment. The family are of the Reformed faith and with few exceptions attend Alsace Reformed Church.

On Oct. 21, 1882, Mr. Herb was married to Miss Kate C. Moyer, daughter of Xavier and Rachel (Clark) Moyer, and six children were born to this union, one of whom is deceased. The five living are: James, Nov. 7, 1884; Emma Rachel, March 7, 1887; Xavier M., Sept. 1, 1890; Katie M., July 30, 1895; and Edward Hiram, May 22, 1899. The children all reside at home with their parents.

SAMUEL FLOWER, of Maiden-creek township, Berks county, who has lived at Blandon all of his life, was born in the house in which he now resides, April 26, 1852, son of Nathan and Barbara (Williams) Flower.

Samuel Flower, the grandfather of Samuel, was married to Elizabeth Cassel, and they had five children, as follows: Nathan; John m. Rebecca Fox; Nellie m. Pierson Taylor (deceased), resides at Blandon and is seventy-four years old; Sarah m. Morgan Spangler; and Mary m. Isaac Winters.

Nathan Flower, father of Samuel, was born at Blandon, where in early life he followed the trade of cooper, but subsequently became interested in agricultural pursuits and purchased a farm, on which he died in 1900, aged about seventy years. Mr. Flower was married to Barbara Williams, who was a daughter of William Williams, who married a Miss Miller, and there were five children born to this union, namely: Elizabeth, who died young; Samuel; John, who died in youth; James, deceased, who married Mary Trout; and Charles, night puddle boss at the Blandon rolling mills, who married Hettie Dubson.

Samuel Flower received his education and was reared to manhood at Blandon, where he learned the trade of carpenter in his youth. This trade he continued to follow in his home locality with much success until several years ago.

Mr. Flower was married to Tryphena Gernant, and five children have been born to this union: Samuel R. m. Katie Hiller (deceased) and has two children, Raymond and Laurence; Clara, the widow of George Sehl, has had two children, Rosie (deceased) and Stephen; Ellen m. Lawrence Stocker; Harry A. is unmarried; and Robert W. m. Gertrude Koch and has two children,—Robert and Evelyn. The family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Flower is connected with the Carpenters' Union, and is a Democrat in politics.

WILLIAM K. ROTHENBERGER, a retired citizen of Muhlenberg township, who for many years was engaged in farming, milling and butchering, was born on the old family homestead in Centre township, Dec. 13, 1842, son of John D. and Mary (Kauffman) Rothenberger.

The great-grandfather of William K. Rothenberger was a resident of Alsace township and the father of these children: Peter; Hannah m. John Close; Polly (Mary) m. Josiah Herb; Molly m. Benjamin Herb.

Peter Rothenberger, the grandfather, was married to Polly Snyder, and they had these children: John D.; and Polly, m. to Elias Bickel.

John D. Rothenberger was a farmer in Alsace township, where he resided all of his life. He married (first) Mary Kauffman, and they had ten children: Cyrus K., deceased; William K.; John K., Peter K. and Levi K., all deceased; Cornelius K., of North Reading; Milton K., deceased; Mary K., m. to Wellington Moser; Debora K., m. to Edward Schearer; and Thomas K., of San Francisco. He married (second) Matilda Kauffman, sister of his first wife, and they had seven children, namely: James, of Temple; Harry, who went out West; Morris, deceased; Kate, m. to Elmer Angstadt; Rose, m. to Edward Moore, of California; George, of Reading; and Sallie.

William K. Rothenberger was educated in the schools of Centre and Muhlenberg townships, and early in life learned the trade of miller and butcher, which, in connection with farming, he followed all his business life. He now lives practically retired. With his family he attends Alsace Reformed Church, and in politics is a Democrat, but he has never aspired to public office. Mr. Rothenberger has done much traveling, and in 1907 took a trip to Florida, remaining there from Christmas until May, 1908.

Mr. Rothenberger was married to Elizabeth Close, a daughter of John and Hannah (Rothenberger) Close, and they have three children: Magdalena m. Harry Bently; Elenora m. William A. Sharp; and Jennie m. John Ruth.

TOBIAS. One of the old and honored families of Berks county, members of which have been prominently identified with the agricultural and other interests of this section for many years, is that of Tobias, which is represented in Maiden-creek township by James R. Tobias, a well-known farmer, and his son Charles L. Tobias, a railroad man.

Christian Tobias, great-grandfather of Charles L., owned the farm opposite Leinbach's Tavern, in Bern township, where he died before his fortieth year. He had these children: Peter; Abraham, of Leesport; John, who died at Sunbury; and Elizabeth, who married Harry Gring. Peter Tobias the grandfather was also a farmer all of his life, and died on the farm between Alsace Church and the Rolling Mills, Reading. He was married to Sarah Rothenberger, daughter of Peter Rothenberger, and they had nine children: James R.; Daniel m. Annie Kemp, of Hyde Park; Sarah m. William Moser, of Cumru township; Elizabeth m. William Hemmig; Rebecca (deceased) m. George Fatzinger; Edward died young; Ellen m. John Savage, of Bern township; Catherine m. Allen Aulenbach; and Peter died when eighteen years of age.

James R. Tobias was born in Muhlenberg township, then Alsace, near Leisz' Bridge, and early in life learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed for some time. He also taught school during the winter months, having secured his education at West Chester, Trappe and Morgantown. He now owns and conducts a nice farm on the road between Temple and Blandon in Maiden-creek and Ontelaunee townships. Mr. Tobias was married to Esther C. Wilkinson, daughter of Isaiah and Julia (Coleman) Wilkinson, and they had three children, as follows: William, who died unmarried, aged twenty-eight years; Charles L.; and James S., who died aged three years.

Charles L. Tobias was born near Berkley, Ontelaunee township, July 23, 1858, and was reared and educated on the present homestead in Maiden-creek township, later attending Brunner's Academy at Reading. He is following railroading, and is now engaged as baggage master between Harrisburg and Allentown. Mr. Tobias was married to Ella H. Reber, daughter of Simplicius and Sarah (Herbein) Reber. They have no children.

Mr. Tobias is a member of Reading Castle, No. 51, K. G. E., of Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F., and of Lodge No. 227, F. & A. M. He is also connected with the P. & R. Relief Association. With his wife he attends the Reformed Church.

WILLIAM PENROSE SCHADLER, of Kutztown, Pa., whose bakery, confectionery and ice cream factory are located on Main street, was born March 1, 1878, in Longswamp township, Berks county

Solomon Schoedler, grandfather of William P., was a cooper and potter, a native of Berks county, living for many years in the vicinity of Lenhartsville. Later he removed to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Dankel, with whom he died in 1899, in his eighty-fifth year. He married a Miss Grosscup, and to them were born children as follows: Nicholas died young; William is mentioned below; Elizabeth m. Levi Schiffert, of Macungie; Rebecca m. Charles Moll, of Macungie, and Catherine m. Aaron Dankel, of Red Lion, Pa.

William Schoedler, the father of William P., was born in 1854, in Longswamp township. He is a stone mason of Alburtis, Lehigh county, having followed this trade all of his life with the exception of three years when he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Theresa Stauffer, daughter of Israel, and to this union there have been born children as follows: Annie died in her sixteenth year; Emma m. Oswin Moll; Robert m. Rosa Boger, deceased; Nicholas m. Annie Boyer; William P., is mentioned below; Gertrude and Lizzie are unmarried; Stella m. James Adams; Fred m. Lizzie Trexler.

William Penrose Schadler was educated in the local schools of his native township and learned the baker's trade with Wesley P. Miller, of Alburtis, Pa., in whose employ he remained for a period of five and one-third years. He then went to Womelsdorf, Berks county, and engaged in business there for six months before settling in Kutztown, where he has been very successful. He has a large trade, his bread, cakes, pies, pretzels, etc., being in general demand, while he is noted for the fine quality of his ice cream. Mr. Schadler and his wife worship at the Lehigh Union Church of Alburtis, being Lutheran members thereof. In politics Mr. Schadler is a Democrat. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A., of Alburtis, and the Jr. O. U. A. M. of Kutztown.

May 30, 1902, Mr. Schadler was married to Jennie Trexler, daughter of Alfred and Mary (Deisher) Trexler, and two children were born to this union: Edward and Mary, both of whom died in infancy.

DANIEL IRENEUS HARTMAN, of Maiden-creek township, was born Oct. 13, 1870, in Muhlenberg township, son of Mabery and Mary (Rothenberger) Hartman.

John Hartman, the great-grandfather of Daniel I., lived at Spies's Church, where he married a Miss Hassler. They had these children: Kate m. George Kinsey; Mary (Polly) m. John Noll; Elizabeth m. Daniel Schmeck; Judith m. Isaac Kinsey; Sally m. Daniel Spies; John; Daniel; Jacob; Samuel; and Benjamin.

Jacob Hartman, grandfather of Daniel I., was a farmer by occupation, and cultivated a large tract of land near Spies's Church. He was married to Helena Schmeck, and they became the parents of these children: Hiram m. Mary Miller; Jacob m. Sarah Hill; Mabery; Lydia m. Theodore Maurer; and Angelina m. Levi Kline.

Mabery Hartman, father of Daniel I., was reared in Alsace township, where he was married to Mary Rothenberger, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Gerhart) Rothenberger. They had six children, as follows: Emma m. (first) George Spangler, and (second) William Dolch; Kate m. Howard Weaver, deceased; Daniel I.; Ida m. Wilson Rothermel; Urias m. Lizzie Dellicker; and Mary died young.

Daniel I. Hartman received his education in the common schools of his native district, and as a young man assisted in the work on his father's farm, after leaving which he learned the carpenter's trade. Mr. Hartman followed that occupation for thirteen years, and then purchased his present property in Maiden-creek township, which he has been operating with much success to the present time. He has brought his property to a high state of cultivation, has built good, substantial buildings, and is rated as one of the substantial farmers and good citizens of his community.

Oct. 13, 1900, Mr. Hartman was married to Miss Agnes Lesher, daughter of Reuben and Esther (Wanner) Lesher. It is a singular coincidence that both Mr. and Mrs. Hartman were born on the 13th of October, and that that was the date of their marriage. Two children have been born to them: a boy, who died in infancy; and Esther Mary, born Sept. 13, 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Hartman are members of the Reformed faith, and attend Gernant's Church. Fraternally, he is connected with Camp No. 68, P. O. S. of A., Hyde Park, and Muhlenberg Castle, No. 372, K. G. E.

JOHN I. KRICK, of Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, pleasantly located on an excellent farm, was born on his present property, June 4, 1862, son of William B. and Anna (Hain) Krick.

Jacob Krick, the grandfather of John I., was a son of Francis Krick, who married a Miss Kerlin, and was a farmer of Spring township. He married Catherine Bechtel, daughter of Richard Bechtel, of Cumru township, and they had eight children: William B.; Mary m. Daniel Seltzer; Jacob m. Sarah Seltzer; Richard m. Emma Bickel; Francis m. Elizabeth Fincher; Sarah; Hannah; and Susan m. Jacob Eckert.

William B. Krick, father of John I., was a farmer, brought up in Spring township, who moved to Lower Heidelberg township in 1860, locating on the farm now owned by his son, John I., where he carried on agricultural pursuits until his retirement in 1901. He died in 1906, at the age of seventy-six years. William B. Krick married Anna Hain, daughter of Daniel Hain, of Lower Heidelberg township, and to them were born three children: Daniel, m. to Rebecca Fritz; John I.; and Mary, m. to Frederick Gaul.

John I. Krick was educated in the township school, and was reared to the life of a farmer until he was twenty years of age, at which time he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and later the Lebanon Valley Railroad, where he continued for the next ten years. Returning to the home place, he assisted his father for three years, and then leased the farm. He carried it on under the lease until 1901, at which time he purchased it. He has since conducted it very successfully, and makes a specialty of dairy farming, supplying milk daily to numerous customers at Reading.

Mr. Krick was married to Mary E. Nunnemacher, daughter of Levi B. and Elizabeth (Fritz) Nunnemacher, and sister of John Nunnemacher, who married Sallie Yocom. Mr. and Mrs. Krick have had three sons: Harry, Clayton and Willie.

ANDREW BLANKINHORN, who is now living retired on his fine property of seventy-one acres in Cumru township, is a survivor of the Civil war, through which he served as a member of the Army of the Potomac. Mr. Blankinhorn was born Aug. 19, 1839, in New York City, N. Y., son of John Blankinhorn, and grandson of Joseph Blankinhorn, who died in Wurtemberg, Germany, after a life spent in agricultural pursuits.

John Blankinhorn was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and after completing his education learned the blacksmith trade. In 1839 he came to America, landing at New York City, where he remained for about one year, then removing to Reading, Pa., where he secured employment in the old car shops, working at his trade until his retirement, seven years prior to his death at the age of eighty-eight years. John Blankinhorn's wife's first name was Elizabeth. She died in 1849 at the age of forty-five years, and to them were born three children: Andrew, John and Augustus.

Andrew Blankinhorn accompanied his father to Reading when a child, and in this city secured his education. After leaving school he worked in the cotton factory for one and one-half years, spent one year at the Brumbach factory, and then went to the Conestoga valley, Lancaster county, where he engaged in farming for five years. He enlisted in Co. G, 2d Pa. Vol. Inf., March 13, 1861, to serve three years or during the war, and was discharged March 13, 1864, re-enlisting the following day as a member of Company B, 191st Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, for three years service, his final honorable discharge coming at the end of the war, June 28, 1865. His service was with the Army of the Potomac, and he participated in many bloody engagements, including Fredericksburg, Antietam, Gettysburg, Petersburg and Weldon Railroad, at which latter place he was taken prisoner and later confined in Libby Prison, and Belle Isle. At the battle of Fredericksburg he was wounded in the fleshy part of the left leg, and this wound still gives him a great deal of trouble. Faithful and cheerful, he was ever an efficient and gallant soldier, and won the respect of his officers and the esteem and friendship of his comrades.

After the completion of his services to his country, Mr. Blankinhorn went to Highland township, Chester county, and was there engaged in farming for a period of thirty-seven years. In 1903 he purchased his present fine property of seventy-one acres, at Angelica, and this he has made into one of the best farms of the township, supplying it with the latest and most highly improved machinery, and erecting large, substantial buildings.

On April 27, 1869, Mr. Blankinhorn was married to Phoebe Harper, daughter of Jacob and Rachel (Dickinson) Harper, of Lancaster county, Pa., and to them have been born children as follows: Minnie, who married George Watson, of No. 1045 A North Tenth street, Reading; John, of Newtown Square, married Addie Gordon; Howard, of Chester Co., Pa., married Bertha Mellinger; Harry, of Chester county, married Elsie Mellinger; Levina, married Robert Riday, of Philadelphia; Roscoe, who operates his father's farm, married Lillian Conway; Charles, married Annie Lesher, of Cumru township; and Dora, married Percy Bailey, of Oakbrook.

In politics Mr. Blankinhorn is a Republican, and he is connected fraternally with G. A. R. Post No. 76, Reading. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, while Mrs. Blankinhorn is a Presbyterian.

HEBER MAST, of Caernarvon township, Berks ccunty, who lives on the old Mast homestead, was born on this farm, April 27, 1856, son of Christian and Barbara Mast.

David Mast, grandfather of Heber, was born April 9, 1769, and died on the Mast homestead Feb. 18, 1849, while his wife, Mary Mast, born Nov. 18, 1775, passed away Feb. 8, 1845. Christian Mast, father of Heber, was born on the Mast homestead, Oct. 17, 1817, and died there Sept. 3, 1899. He married Barbara Mast, born Aug. 23, 1828, who survived him until Feb. 21, 1907, and to them were born these children: Margaret E., born May 3, 1848, living with her brother on the homestead; John D., born April 5, 1853, m. to Martha Yoder and living on a farm near the homestead; Heber; Sara A., born Feb. 25, 1858; Jacob K., Feb. 2, 1860; Samuel H., July 19, 1865; and Henry A., Feb. 23, 1870.

Heber Mast has spent his entire life on the old homestead, where he now lives with his two sisters. The home is one of the prettiest spots in the locality, the house being surrounded by a large and beautiful lawn. Mr. Mast is a stanch Republican in politics. He and his sisters are members of the United Brethren Church.

EDWARD LUIGARD, of Reading, Pa., who conducts a first-class livery and boarding stable at No. 419 Court street, was born in the city of Reading, in April, 1860, son of Simon and Louisa (Huber) Luigard.

Mr. Luigard received his education in the schools of Reading, and his first work was in his father's livery stable. No man in the city is better posted on horses than he, as he has made this line his life work. In 1886 he started in business on his own account at his present location, and with the exception of a few years has been here ever since. He has stable room for forty horses, and sometimes has as high as twenty-five horses boarding at his stable, this line being his specialty. He keeps fifteen head of fine animals, and a large number of first-class vehicles, and caters to weddings, funerals, etc. Mr. Luigard is fraternally connected with the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and is very popular in that order. He is a stanch Republican and lives in the Sixth ward of the city. His wife is connected with the First Reformed Church.

Mr. Luigard was married (first) to Lillie Daniels, deceased, of Woodstown, N. J. His second marriage was to Rosie Geho. Mr. Luigard has no children.

JAMES EISENHOWER, a retired citizen and native of Reading, Pa., is a son of Nathan M. and Margaret (Mowrey) Eisenhower, and grandson of John and Margaret (Mohn) Eisenhower.

John Eisenhower was of German descent and was an early pump-maker of Reading, his place of business being on South Tenth street, Reading, where he died in 1839, aged about seventy-two years. In religious belief he was a Lutheran, and he and his wife were the parents of four children: Nathan; David; Angelina m. John Fink, and Polly m. Solomon Frill.

Nathan M. Eisenhower was born in the city of Reading in 1812, and received his education in the subscription schools of Reading, and when a young man apprenticed himself to the carpenter and joiner's trade, with a Mr. Henry, who was the builder of Trinity Lutheran Church. After completing his apprenticeship, he worked for some years as a journeyman, and then engaged in contracting and building, at one time being one of the leading men in his line of business in the city. A stanch Republican, he took quite an active part in political matters, and in 1864 was prevailed upon to run for the office of mayor, to which he was elected by a large majority, filling that office from 1865 to 1867. Many reforms were inaugurated during his administration, among them the organization of the first uniformed police squad in the city. Mr. Eisenhower's death occurred in 1877. He was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Chapter and K. T. Commandery No. 42. He was a captain in the State Militia, being in Colonel Knoderer's regiment, and was a member of the Reading Artillery in 1846, taking an active part in the military maneuvers until its disbandment. Mr. Eishenhower was a member of Montgomery Lodge of the I. O. O. F. The children born to Captain Eisenhower and his wife were: William, born Dec. 17, 1834; George, who went to California after the Rebellion and died there; Charles, who died at the Soldiers' Home in Erie, was a member of Co. B, 128th P. V. I.; Daniel, who was a member of the 46th P. V. I.; James; Nathan M., a carpenter of Reading; and Emma m. Joseph Green. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower were members of the Lutheran Church. She died in 1881, aged seventy-two years.

James Eisenhower received his education in the common schools of Reading, and as a boy apprenticed himself to Douglas & Connard, machinists, working with them until 1861, when he enlisted with the old Reading Heavy Artillery under Capt. George W. Alexander. Having served out his term of enlistment, he re-enlisted with Company B, 128th P. V. I., Aug. 14, 1862, under Capt. William McNall and Colonel Crosedale, the latter of whom was killed at Antietam, being succeeded by Colonel Matthews. Mr. Eisenhower entered the service as second sergeant, and was then promoted to ambulance sergeant, serving as such during his term of enlistment. Receiving his discharge June 19, 1863, he re-enlisted in 1864 in the 3d Heavy Artillery, serving in Hampton Roads and at Fortress Monroe until his discharge in 1865.

After his discharge Mr. Eisenhower returned to Reading and completed his trade with Douglas & Connard, remaining with them for a period of two years and then went to Corry, Pa., engaging with the Atlantic & Great Western Railway Company as machinist. Returning to his former employers he continued with them until his retirement.

Mr. Eisenhower married Miss Mary Fichthorn, daughter of William Fichthorn, and five children were born to this union. We have record of James; Paul, who was drowned; and two children who died in infancy. Mr. Eisenhower is a member of Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 65, K. P. In politics he is a Republican.

AARON ADAMS, deceased, who for many years was a resident of Reading, where he was engaged as a machinist, was born in 1828, in Amity township, Berks county, son of Henry and Mary (Bell) Adams, the former a native of New York State, who came to Berks county when a young man, working as an iron worker until his death in 1850. He and his wife had these children: Hiram, Aaron, Samuel, Harry, Sarah, Mary and Martha.

Aaron Adams received his education in the common schools of his native township, and later learned the blacksmith trade, which he followed for some years, and then took up the trade of machinist which he followed in Reading until his death. Mr. Adams was married in 1852 to Esther Hart, daughter of John and Kate (Moyer) Hart, and to this union were born children as follows: Ida died in infancy; Mary E., deceased, m. Charles McCormick, and had one child, Winfield; Melvin E., a machinist, m. Ida Adams, and they had five children, Aaron W. (m. Cora Egolf and has two children, Stanley and Fred), Esther (m. Daniel Estley and has one child Mary), Sally, Melvin and Harry M., deceased; Kate, deceased, m. Charles Geiger and has one child, Carl; Amelia, deceased, m. Hale Robinson, and had two children, Eugene, deceased, and Albert. In religious belief, Mr. Adams was a member of the Reformed Church, and in that faith he died in 1881, his funeral being conducted by the I. O. O. F., of which he had been a member for many years, being connected with the Encampment. In political matters he was a Republican.

LAWRENCE M. KLUSEWITZ, who follows the carpenter's trade at Reading, was born Oct. 11, 1857, in Prussia, Germany, a son of Michael and Mary (Pluskieska) Klusewitz.

Michael Klusewitz was born Sept. 6, 1829, in Prussia, where he attended school until he was fourteen years of age and then engaged in farm work. In 1872, he came to America and located at Reading, which has been his home until the present, and is living with his son, John Klusewitz He was in the employ of the Reading Railway Co., for many years. He was married three times, (first) to Mary Pluskieska, (second) to Mary Bluskewitz, (third) to Annie Bliaskewisk. The children born to his first marriage were: John; Lawrence; Joseph, who has been on the Reading police force since 1902; and Julia. To his second union were born Annie and Frank, and to his third were born: Anthony, Thomas, Celia and Benjamin, the latter of whom is a soldier in the U. S. Army.

Lawrence M. Klusewitz was fifteen years of age when his parents came to America and settled at Reading, where he attended the public schools until he was eighteen. In 1876 he learned the carpenter trade with George M. Garst, of Reading, and his first work was on the present Junior Fire Company house on Walnut street. He has worked continuously as a journeyman, sometimes at Reading and through Berks, Schuylkill, Montgomery and Philadelphia Counties.

In 1885, Mr. Klusewitz was married to Theresa Nurnburg, daughter of Peter and Gertrude (Kalmund) Nurnburg, of the Rhine Province. Mr. and Mrs. Klusewitz had eight children, namely: Mary, Joseph, Peter, Joseph (2) deceased, Leonard, Gertrude, Joseph (3) deceased, and Helena. Mr. Klusewitz was bereft of his wife, who died Aug. 17, 1901, aged thirty-nine years, she having been born July 19, 1862. He is a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church, and of the Holy Cross Association. He is identified with the Carpenters' Union. His comfortable home is located at No. 705 Dick street.

WILLIAM H. GIBSON, of Reading, who resides at No. 826 North Sixth street, was born April 27, 1855, at Schuylkill Haven, Berks Co., Pa., son of David and Catherine (Shearer) Gibson.

The great-grandfather of William H. Gibson came from Germany at an early day and settled in the State of Maine, where his son George, the grandfather of William H., spent his life. David Gibson came to Pennsylvania when a young man and settled at Schuylkill Haven, where for many years he was lock-tender of what was then and still is known as Gibson's Locks, located at the lower end of the town. He died in 1875. David Gibson married Catherine Shearer, daughter of Peter Shearer, who came from Pottsville and settled at Schuylkill Haven, where he was a carpenter and millwright. To Mr. and Mrs. Gibson these children were born: Samuel, Albert, George, Frank, William H., Emma, Mary J. and Lillie.

William H. Gibson attended the public schools of Ontelaunee township, Berks county, after leaving which he worked for two years in the mines, and then entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, with which company he continued as brakeman and conductor for seventeen years. He then engaged with the well-known firm of Slocker & Roerich, and he has continued with Mr. Roerich, in the capacity of engineer, to the present time.

Mr. Gibson was married to Lucy Reppert, daughter of Daniel and Catherine Reppert, and they have these children: Mazie, Frank, Katie, Ida and Albert. One child, also named Mazie, died in infancy.

Mr. Gibson resides in his own home at No. 826 North Sixth street, and with his family attends the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the K. G. E. and the B. of R. F., the latter of which he helped to organize, serving for twelve years as secretary of this association.

WILLIAM H. WILHELM, deceased, for many years one of Reading's prominent manufacturers, was born in the State of New Jersey in 1826.

Only the latter part of Mr. Wilhelm's life was identified with Reading, as he had worked up to 1874 as a machinist in Easton, Pennsylvania. On coming to Reading he engaged in the manufacture of hat machinery, and was very successful in it. During a period of two years he removed to Hamburg, and in connection with several others became interested in the manufacture of bicycles, but he soon returned to Reading and he remained there until his death in 1896, at the age of seventy. Mr. Wilhelm was a strong Republican, but took no part in public affairs save in educational matters, in which he always manifested a deep interest, serving as a school director for seven years. Fraternally he was a Mason, a member of Easton Lodge, F. & A. M.

In 1854, Mr. Wilhelm was married to Miss Catherine Ruple, daughter of Joseph Ruple, and four of the children, born to this union, lived to maturity, namely: Elmira, Mrs. George Shenton, of Carlisle, Pa.; W. Irvin, of Bethlehem, Pa., who married Miss Mary Marshall; Clara, wife of the late Walter Kinzie; and Harry, who married Miss Sally Pyle, and died in February, 1904. In religious belief the family are Methodists.

WILLIAM AND CHARLES LEYMASTER, who, under the firm name of Leymaster & Bro., have been carrying on a business in painting and papering in Reading, since 1900, belong to the second generation of their name associated with that occupation.

The Leymaster family came from Muhlenberg township, where the grandfather, a well known farmer of his day, lived and died, and where his son, Samuel, was born. The latter became a skilled painter, and early established himself in Reading. His first partner was M. J. Serling, but later a Mr. Bricker was admitted to the firm, and the name became Leymaster, Serling & Company. Their first location was at No. 15 North Sixth street, the next at No. 45 North Sixth street, and then for twelve years the firm was at No. 105 North Sixth street. The final location, where the sons still continue the business, was No. 16 North Sixth street, and there Mr. Leymaster remained in active control until his death in December, 1893, over twenty-eight years from the time he established his business in Reading.

Samuel Leymaster was twice married; by his first wife, who was Miss Catherine Stoltz, he had five children, William, Ellen, Elizabeth, Charles and Catherine (who died young). By the second wife, Rebecca Nagle, there were three daughters, Annie, Mary and Sallie. Mr. Leymaster was perhaps as well known as a musician as a business man, for he had played with a number of the local bands, belonging at different times to the old City, the old Rifle, the Keystone and Ringgold bands.

WILLIAM LEYMASTER, eldest son of Samuel and senior member of the present firm, was born in Reading. He took up his father's trade and followed it until 1880, in that year entering the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad. He left that to go into the cigar business, and for thirteen years was successfully engaged in that line at No. 28 North Sixth street. In 1900 he and his brother together bought the other interests in the business founded by their father, and have since then been conducting it on their own account.

CHARLES LEYMASTER, also born in Reading, is younger than his brother. He also learned papering and painting under his father, and has always been engaged in that line. At the time of his father's death he acquired an interest in the business, and later, in 1900, he and his brother, as stated above, acquired the entire control of the business. They have an established trade in both departments, carry complete lines, and as they employ skilled workers have a reputation for satisfactory work.

Charles Leymaster was married to Miss Emma L. Otto, a daughter of the late Jacob Otto, and they have three children, Clara, Florence and Ella, and have lost one, Carrie.

LUDWIG TALBOT CUSTER, one of the leading business men of Reading, Pa., who in addition to being president of the Consumers Gas Company, holds numerous other official positions in large financial enterprises, was born in 1835, in New Holland, Lancaster county, Pa., son of Samuel L. and Rachel (Ubil) Custer.

Paulus Kuster, the emigrant ancestor of all of the name in this country, come from Crefeld, Germany, in 1682, and settled near Germantown, Pa., bringing his wife and three sons, Arnold, Johannes and Hermanus. They were members of the Mennonite Church.

Hermanus Custer, the great-great-great-grandfather of Ludwig T., had a son Paul, who married Sarah Martha Ball, daughter of John Ball, of Virginia, a relative of George Washington. It is believed that Mr. and Mrs. Paul Custer settled in Montgomery county, and were agricultural people, although the early records show that they were also woolen yarn manufacturers. Paul Custer purchased 200 acres of land near Skippackville, Montgomery county, but resided in Perkiomen township from 1708 to 1760. To him and his wife were born these children: John, Jonathan, Paul, George and William.

Jonathan Custer, son of Paul and great-grandfather of Ludwig T., married Hannah Kendall, and they had children as follows: Benjamin; Jonathan, Jr.; George; Peter and Hannah who married a Mr. Prutzman.

Jonathan Custer, Jr., son of Jonathan, married Eva Rosanna Ludwig, and to this union were born children as follows: John; Hannah; Samuel L.; Susan; David; George; Michael; Jacob; Aaron; Lewis; Lydia; Rebecca and Solomon, who became a member of the State Legislature. Jonathan Custer settled between Douglassville and Amityville, where he became a large land owner and representative farmer, and died there in 1822, his wife surviving him ten years. In religious belief they were Lutherans. He was a Democrat in politics, but it is not definitely known whether he was an office holder.

Samuel L. Custer, son of Jonathan, Jr., was born in 1793, and early in life he engaged in agricultural pursuits on the home farm. This farm was purchased by three of the sons. Samuel L. farmed it until 1835, when he removed to Lancaster county, where he purchased a property, and there both he and his wife, Rachel Ubil, died. He belonged to the Lutheran Church, while his wife was an Episcopalian. Three children were born to them: William, deceased, who married Lydia Owen, and had children: Wallace, Frank, Charles and Valeria; Ludwig Talbot; and Elizabeth.

Ludwig Talbot Custer was educated in the common schools of Lancaster county, and at Whitehall Academy, Cumberland county, and he remained on the home farm until March, 1858, when he became employed in a general mercantile establishment at Wernersville, remaining there until the spring of 1863. Later he was employed by his father-in-law John Musser, at Adamstown, continuing there until 1876, when he began the manufacture of hats, a business he carried on at Adamstown until October, 1904. At that place he was burgess from 1893 to 1896. He is president of the Adamstown and Mohnsville Electric Railroad, director of the Kutztown and Fleetwood Electric Railroad; the United Traction Company of Reading; the Reading Power Company; and the Schuylkill Valley Bank, and in May, 1903, he became president of the Consumers Gas Company at Reading. Mr. Custer has always had large financial interests to look after, but has invariably given both money and time to encourage public enterprises tending to promote the welfare of the people and the advancement of this section. In 1863 he was married to Kate Musser, and to them have been born two children: Caroline and Elizabeth. Mr. and Mrs. Custer attend the Episcopal Church.

JOHN S. LEVAN, residing at No. 623 North Ninth street, Reading, follows the business of carpenter and builder and is well and favorably known to a large number of his fellow citizens. He was born in Exeter township, in 1860, a son of Peter S. and Sarah E. (Snyder) Levan.

Daniel Levan, the paternal grandfather, was a farmer in Exeter township almost all his life, and became a man of prominence, holding various township offices, and of substance, leaving property to his family. He had three sons: Edward, who married Amelia Snyder; Peter, father of John S.; and Daniel, who died unmarried. The Levan family has always been Democratic in its political sentiment and of the Reformed Church religiously.

Peter S. Levan followed farming and carpentering all his life. He died in 1893, aged seventy-one years. His widow survived to the same age, dying in 1897. They had nine children, as follows: Mary, who died young; Ellen, who married Amos Goodhardt; Sarah, who married Franklin Heister; Daniel and Mahlon, both of whom died young; Charity, who married Samuel Gilbert; John S.; Hannah, who died young, and another child who died in infancy.

John S. Levan enjoyed the educational opportunities offered by the schools of Exeter township and then started to farming. He showed an aptitude for carpenter work and did a great deal of repair work before starting at the age of twenty-two years to learn the trade, with a neighbor, Henry Fisher. He completed his trade with Elam Hook, with whom he remained for twelve years and then engaged with Raymond Moore, a contractor at Birdsboro, with whom he remained six years. Mr. Levan then farmed for several years, but in March, 1904, he came to Reading where he has found plenty of work in his line ever since. He has invested in real estate here and owns his comfortable home.

Mr. Levan married Kate K. Young, daughter of Nathan Young, of Exeter. They have seven living children, namely: Walter, Daniel, Joseph, George, Sallie, Edgar and Catherine.

Mr. Levan is a member of Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A.; of the Maccabees and of the Carpenters Union.

HIRAM W. SCHITLER, a well known citizen of Reading, to which city he came in 1839, was born in Frederick township, Montgomery county, April 27, 1831, son of Lewis Schitler. He died Oct. 2, 1892, at his home, No. 42 North Eighth street, Reading.

From the time he was a little lad of eight years, Mr. Schitler was a lover of horses, and at that age had his first lessons in riding. While still a boy he was sent by his parents on horseback to drive a cow to their farm in Montgomery county, but on the way the boy forgot the name of his destination, and when found was roaming about the country. Schools were few in those days, and what education he acquired was gained by his own pluck and perseverance. When he was eighteen he began a railroad life as fireman on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. At the end of a year he was deemed competent to fill the position of engineer, and for eight years he held that responsible position. He seemed to bear a charmed life, for, although he was in a number of wrecks, he always escaped uninjured. He next engaged in the hauling business, but this did not prove a success, and he lost considerable money. To retrieve his finances he followed boating on the Schuylkill canal for two seasons, having charge of the "Blue Bird," a boat of about 190 tons, and this business he found quite profitable. His next venture was the purchase of a livery stable, and this laid the foundation for his later success. There were but eight horses available for the business, but Mr. Schitler persevered and succeeded. From this he developed the Reading Horse Exchange, with a large building at Poplar and Court streets. After the Civil war the Reading Horse Market developed rapidly, and was visited frequently by the leading dealers of the country, from thirty to fifty horses changing hands in a week. Mr. Schitler was exceedingly fortunate in his horses, but he gave them his personal supervision, and in cases of illness saw that they had prompt attention. One of his greatest successes was "Lydia S.," a horse he purchased for $135, trained to a first-class trotter, and sold for $5,000. The highest price he ever paid was $5,000, for "Little Mary," and she maintained her trotting record of 2:25, winning every race entered. Mr. Schitler traded her for two trotters, but after this did not stay much longer in the sporting business. Only once did he lose a horse through theft. He looked after his business himself and did his own bookkeeping to the last. During the Civil war he enlisted for service and was assigned to the 149th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and for ninety days was on active duty.

In 1848 Mr. Schitler married Lydia Hartman, daughter of "Blind" Hartman, who for many years conducted the hotel on the Kutztown road known as "Blind Hartman's Hotel." Two children were born to them: Clara L. married Michael R. Hare, who was born at Reading July 7, 1853, and died July 19, 1897, and who was associated with his brother-in-law in the livery business; they had four children, George, Elsie, Gertrude and Hiram. William J., born April 7, 1852, was educated in the public schools and Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy, and is an excellent penman. He was associated with his father in the livery business, and after the latter's death, with his brother-in-law, Michael R. Hare, who, however, died nine months later. William J. Schitler then sold out the business and has since lived retired. He married Clara Hoover, daughter of Simon Hoover, of Miamisburg, Montgomery county, Ohio, and they have a son, Richard H.

EDWARD YEAGER, ex-mayor of Reading and one of the leading and representative men of the city, was born there July 6, 1859, the son of Abraham and Harriet (Dickinson) Yeager.

The Yeager family has been resident in America for three generations, the first to settle here bearing the name Abraham. He came from Wales at an early day and located first in Philadelphia, but after some years there moved to Reading and remained in that city the rest of his life. He reared a large family of children.

Abraham Yeager (2) was born while his parents lived in Philadelphia, but spent his boyhood in Reading. When old enough to go to work he began in the confectionery line and after learning his trade conducted a store on the corner of 5th and Penn streets for many years. In time he abandoned this occupation and learned instead the trade of a plumber, which he followed for the rest of his life. He met with considerable success in this line and was comfortably off when he died. Mr. Yeager was very active in local politics and represented the Fifth ward of the city as a delegate to the Democratic county convention in 1862. He favored Daniel Ermentrout, who gained the nomination at that time for district attorney and was afterward elected. Abraham Yeager passed from this world June 20, 1870.

Mrs. Abraham Yeager was a Miss Harriet Dickinson and was born in Myerstown, Lebanon county, the daughter of Henry and Phoebe Dickinson. The union was a very happy one and was blessed with five sons and three daughters, namely: Clara E.; William B., who conducts a tinsmithing, galvanizing and copper cornice establishment in Reading; Alice, who married Henry Heckman, a tinsmith and manufacturer of incubators in Oakland, Calif.; Henry P., who is employed in the establishment of Glase & Lichtenthaler, carpet dealers, of Reading; Edward; Pearson N., who has been employed for the past twelve years in the office of the passenger agent for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad; Albert, deceased; and Phoebe, wife of Harry Krug, a clerk in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, at Reading.

Edward Yeager was educated in the public schools of Reading, and then began to work in the japanning department of the Jones & Oaks Lock Works, Reading. After two years' experience with them, Mr. Yeager was employed for a time on the canal boat "Yubadon," under command of Capt. John W. Ringler, which plied the Susquehanna from the upper coal regions to tide water, returning with a cargo of watermelons in place of the coal. After this, he was for six months in the boiler works of Enoch Reazor, as a rivet heater, but at the end of that time he decided to enter upon an entirely different field of activity and began preparing for the law.

Mr. Yeager first read law in the office of Daniel and James M. Ermentrout, prominent attorneys in Reading, and there, in January, 1880, he secured the appointment of Court Crier in all courts of the city except the Orphans Court, a capacity in which he has ever since served. He is a strong Democrat, politically, and has from early manhood been in active service for the party. His first office was in the common council, where he represented the 6th ward, and later he represented the same district in the select council, serving on the committees on law, fire and city property. He removed from the 6th ward to the 5th, which was Republican by about 285 votes, but such was the confidence inspired by Mr. Yeager's previous record, that he was elected again to the council by a majority of 96, and at the end of that term was re-elected by a majority of 116. In 1896 he was a candidate for the nomination of mayor but was defeated by one vote. Two years later, however, he secured the nomination, was elected and served with distinction. On the expiration of his term he was made city registrar and again proved himself an efficient man, as in every other capacity. He has always been a faithful worker, using his time and influence for the best interests of the city and has promoted many enterprises which proved of great benefit to the community. His valuable services have established him firmly in the good will of his fellow citizens and he stands deservedly high in Reading.

One of Mr. Yeager's main interests has for many years been the question of fire service. During his terms in the select council, his influence secured recognition of two newly organized companies in the fire department. He has been himself an active fireman since February, 1878, and during the greater part of the time has been president of the Keystone Hook and Ladder Company, never missing a meeting unless prevented by his official duties. He has also served frequently as a delegate to the State Firemen's Association and is widely known as a leading member of that body. It was almost entirely due to Mr. Yeager's efforts that the present quarters of the Keystone Truck and Chemical Company, built at a cost of $16,000, were paid for by the city the year following its erection.

On April 19, 1882, Mr. Yeager was united in marriage to Miss Kate Irene Grass, a lady whose admirable traits of character have won the affection of all with whom she is acquainted. Both Mr. and Mrs. Yeager are devoted members of the Baptist Church.

In fraternal as well as political circles, Mr. Yeager is a prominent figure, and he belongs also to various social organizations. He is president of the Independent Gun Club, of Reading; has been president of the West End Club for eleven years; president of the Commercial Club for the past two years; is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. and A. M.; of Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; of De Molay Commandery, No. 9, Knights Templar; of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; of the Foresters of America; of Wigwam No. 89, I. O. R. M.; and a charter member of Castle No. 8, Knights of the Golden Eagle.

WALTER FOLGER, a well-known hotel man of Reading, Pa., proprietor of the Folger hotel and cafe, on North Fifth street, was born in Boston, Mass., Aug. 13, 1866. Mr. Folger received his education in his native city, and for some years was employed as a reporter on the staff of the Boston Herald, later being connected with the Burkhardt Brewing Co. of that city.

Mr. Folger came to Reading, Pa., in April, 1901, and on September 22nd of the same year engaged in his present business. His cafe bears the reputation of being one of the most up-to-date and finest in the city of Reading, catering to the commercial trade, and to the theatrical profession. As a hotel proprietor, Mr. Folger is popular, and his up-to-date hostelry is fitted with every modern improvement of convenience to his patrons. Mr. Folger was married in Reading to Miss Annie Hemig of this city, daughter of William H. Hemig.

In fraternal circles Mr. Folger is popular and belongs to a number of organizations, among them the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 66, of which he was for one year president (he was one of the members to walk through the woods and select the site of the present beautiful home of this order); Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 65, Knights of Pythias; the Maccabees; Neversink Fire Company; Junior Fire Company; Humane Association; and other fraternal and social bodies.

E. C. KIEFFER, M. D., physician and surgeon at Reading, with offices at No. 810 North Fifth street, enjoys a large practice, and has been connected with some of the public medical institutions of this city.

Dr. Kieffer was born Nov. 8, 1873, at Hagerstown, Md., son of Samuel and Mary Jane (Zentmyer) Kieffer.

Dr. Kieffer was primarily educated in the common schools of Maryland, subsequently entered Juniata College, and in 1895 he became a student in the Philadelphia Medico Chirurgical College, where he took a two years' course and graduated in 1899. Dr. Kieffer then settled at Reading for the practice of his profession, shortly after being appointed house physician at St. Joseph's hospital. After the termination of his services at this institution, he located on Tenth street, where he remained some time and then moved to his present very desirable location. Dr. Kieffer has been very successful, and numbers among his patients some of the best people of Reading.

Dr. Kieffer married Ella G. Missly, and they have one child: Mary Isabel. Fraternally he belongs to Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Reading Chapter, R. A. M., De Molay Commandery, K. T. He is professionally connected with the Reading Medical Association, and the Berks County Medical Society. In politics the Doctor is independent.

GEORGE L. MOORE, of Gibraltar, Pa., who holds the responsible position of superintendent of the Gibraltar Iron Works, was born Jan. 10, 1883, in Robeson township, Berks county, son of Isaac C. and Amelia (Levan) Moore. The Moores settled in Robeson township in 1731, and George L. Moore is a representative of the family that located along Allegheny Creek in that year.

George Moore, great-great-grandfather of George L., resided in Robeson township. He was the father of these children: Samuel, Elias N., Joseph, Abraham, William and George, and three daughters (whose first names could not be learned, all records having been lost), Mrs. Elmgood, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Delcamp.

Samuel Moore, son of George, and great-grandfather of George L., was born Dec. 13, 1791. He was a cabinet maker and undertaker, occupations which he followed all of his active period, his death being caused in an accident on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad in February, 1847. He and his wife, Elizabeth (Seifrit), were the parents of these children: Isaac, deceased; George, deceased; Abiah S., deceased, who was with his brother Isaac in the iron business; Monroe, deceased, in the iron business with Jonathan Seidel; Samuel, who emigrated to Stephenson county, Ill., in September, 1855, where he was killed while operating a reaper, Aug. 1, 1863; Emanuel, who is a resident of Stephenson county, Ill.; Elias, deceased, a carpenter; Elisha, deceased, who was engaged in farming near Lebanon, Lebanon county; Raymond, deceased, an undertaker and contractor of Birdsboro, Pa.; Mary, deceased, who married David Slike, and resided in Harrisburg, Pa.; Lucetta, deceased, wife of Jonathan Seidel, of Lebanon, Pa.; and Susanna, deceased, who married Jonathan Barto, and resided at Elroy, Illinois.

In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Moore was a stanch Whig in politics, but it is not believed that he took more than a good citizen's interest in public matters.

Isaac Moore, son of Samuel and grandfather of George L., was born Aug. 17, 1815, and was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and when a young man engaged at iron making with the Seidels. He later became the possessor of a charcoal forge, which he operated on his own account until within a few years of his death, in 1885, when he retired. He married Sarah Clauser, daughter of John and Sarah Ann (Figel) Clauser, and to this union there were born children as follows: Sarah, deceased (m. Jeremiah Boyer); Catherine, deceased (m. John Deeds); Samuel C. (m. Annie Schaeffer); and Isaac C. First a Whig Mr. Moore later became a stanch Republican, while in religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church.

Isaac C. Moore was educated in the common schools of Robeson township, and for fifteen years taught school there and in Exeter township. In 1881 he entered the employ of Simon Seyfert, as foreman of his farm, but later entered the iron works, where he was gradually and steadily promoted until he reached the position of superintendent, which he held at the time of his death, March 15, 1903, aged fifty-five years, three days. Mr. Moore was a business man of ability, a substantial citizen of much integrity, and a popular member of the P. O. S. of A., K. G. E., and the I. O. R. M. He was a Republican in politics. In 1868 Mr. Moore was married to Amelia Levan, by whom he had children as follows: Harvey A. m. Mamie Brown, daughter of William and Katie Brown; W. Oscar, a heater, m. Sallie Seidel, daughter of Frederick and Mary Seidel; Irvin is unmarried; Emma m. Harvey O. Clauser; Edmund, deceased, m. Virginia Cassidy; George L.; and two children died in infancy. The family are connected with the Reformed Church.

George L. Moore was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and at Brunner's Business College, Reading. He entered the employ of the Gibraltar Iron Works in the position of weighmaster, May 29, 1899, continuing as such until 1902, when he was promoted to the position of assistant superintendent, and at the time of his father's death he was made superintendent, of the works, in which capacity he has ably served to the present time, having under him 130 employes.

In politics Mr. Moore is a Republican, and is at present a member of the board of school directors of Robeson township. He is a prominent member of the P. O. S. of A., being a past district president of the Fifth Berks district. In December, 1908, he was selected to compile a history of the order in Berks county. He is also a member of the Commandery.

CHARLES E. SCHLAPPICH, M. D. Among the rising young medical practitioners of Berks county, Pa., one who is favorably known to the public as well as the profession is Dr. Charles E. Schlappich, who has chosen for his field of practice the borough of Bernville. Dr. Schlappich was born Jan. 5, 1882, at Shartlesville, Pa., son of Jefferson F. and Polly (Wagner) Schlappich.

William H. Schlappich, grandfather of the Doctor, is very well known at Shartlesville, where he now resides. He was born in Upper Bern township in 1832, and for many years was one of the prominent agriculturists of his district, although he now lives retired. He married Mary A. Savage, who is buried at St. Michael's Church burial ground, and they had three children: William S.; Ellen m. Frank Dietrich, of Bern township; and Jefferson F., born at Shartlesville in 1864.

Jefferson F. Schlappich now follows farming on a fine tract of Upper Bern township land. He married Polly Wagner, daughter of Ephraim Wagner, of Shartlesville, and they have had these children: Dr. Charles E.; Calvin L. m. Katie Siefert; Sallie N. m. Oliver Moll; Annie M.; Cora L.; H. William; Lawrence S. and Clarence M., twins; and Miranda E.

Charles E. Schlappich's primary education was secured in the local schools of Shartlesville, and later he attended the Bernville Academy. In the fall of 1900 he was appointed to teach in the Scull Hill school in Penn Valley, Penn township, where he taught two successive terms, and in the spring of 1903 he entered the Schissler College of Business, from which he was graduated in October of the same year. He then entered the employ of the Webster Coal & Coke Company, at Cresson, Pa., as clerk and stenographer for the chief engineer. During the winter of 1904 he entered the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown, taking up college preparatory work, and entered the Baltimore Medical College in September, 1904, from which he was graduated May 24, 1903. He was a close and careful student, but was always popular with his fellows, having the honor of being the president of the Phi Chi fraternity during his senior year. After leaving this institution, he took a general course in the Maryland General Hospital, where he secured valuable experience, and received second honorable mention out of a class of one hundred and twenty-one students. The Doctor located on Main street, Bernville, July 17, 1908. He is a member of Washington Camp No. 133, P. O. S. of A. His religious connection is with the Reformed Church.

Dr. Schlappich married Martha E., daughter of George J. Schwader, of Cresson, Pennsylvania.

HEBER Y. YOST, the general private secretary to President Baer of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Co., is a native of Reading, coming from a family which has long been identified with Reading and Berks county.

Nicholas Yost, grandfather of Heber, was a prominent and financially able farmer of the county, and took an active part in its development.

Francis Yost, son of Nicholas, was also an active man of affairs in the county, but has now retired. He married Emma Louisa Yocum, daughter of Daniel, who in his day was one of the wealthy landowners of the county and was also engaged in manufacturing. He owned the well-known Speedwell Forge, and Yocum was named after him. He was a Director of the Farmers National Bank of Reading. Heber Y. Yost is one of three sons born to these parents. Henry N. is Assistant Bookkeeper with the Reading Iron Company, while Daniel F. is the Treasurer and General Manager of the William F. Remppis Company.

Heber Y. Yost was born in Reading. He profited by the excellent public schools of the city, finishing the course at the Boys' High School, after which he took a business course at Prof. Brunner's business college. For a year thereafter he filled the position of assistant bookkeeper in one of the box factories of the city, then, in 1888, came to his present important and exacting position as private secretary to President Baer. His long period of service speaks volumes for his efficiency.

Mr. Yost is unmarried. He satisfies his social proclivities in membership with the Reading Library and Berkshire Country Clubs, organizations of the city. He votes with the Republicans, and in his religious life affiliates with the Trinity Lutheran Church.

H. ROBERT MAYS, a rising young attorney of the Berks county Bar, who has already become prominent in public life, was born Nov. 12, 1882, at Womelsdorf, Berks county, son of Henry J. Mays, a tanner.

H. Robert Mays attended the borough schools until fourteen years of age, and then attended Albright College at Myerstown for one year. He prepared at Franklin and Marshall Academy, and in 1898 entered Franklin and Marshall College, where he remained two years, finishing the sophomore year. In the fall of 1900 he entered Dickinson School of Law, and graduated in June, 1902, with the degree of LL. B. At this college he belonged to Allison Law Society and made a record in athletics, and at Franklin and Marshall was a member of the Goethian Literary and Nevonia Clubs and played on the 'Varsity team. After Mr. Mays' graduation from the law school he did practical office work and read law for one year with Rothermel Brothers, the senior member of this firm, Hon. John H. Rothermel, being now a member of Congress from this district. Mr. Mays was the first member of the Berks county Bar to be admitted under the new rules and regulations, which went into effect Jan. 1, 1903. Prior to that date the local board examined the applications, when, if successful, they were admitted to the Berks and Supreme Courts on motion. Under the new rules the applicants for admission to any Bar of the State must pass a severe examination by the State Board of Law Examiners. Mr. Mays was one of four applicants from this county, who took this examination Dec. 8 and 9, 1903, and was the only one that passed. On Feb. 20, 1904, he was admitted to practice at the Berks county Bar, being the youngest member admitted to that date. Since beginning practice, Mr. Mays has been interested in a number of important cases, including that of the Commonwealth vs. Miles King, a colored man indicted for murder in the first degree. Mr. Mays was one of the attorneys for the defendant, for whom there seemed little hope of escaping the gallows. After a trial of several days the jury brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree, a verdict declared wrong by the district attorney. A local paper in an editorial, under the caption: "Pretty Lucky," says: "At all events Miles King can consider himself a mighty lucky man that he escapes the gallows. He owes much to his attorneys." Mr. Mays was also an attorney for the defense in the county almshouse cases.

In political matters Mr. Mays is a Democrat, is the borough solicitor for Womelsdorf and the solicitor for the Womelsdorf Bank, as well as its notary public since 1905. He is county solicitor for Berks county, having taken up the duties of that office Jan. 4, 1909. He is a member of Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf, and of Welcome Home Grange, of Robesonia. His law office is situated at No. 541 Court street, Reading.

F. G. RUNYEON, M. D., a medical practitioner of No. 1390 Perkiomen avenue, Reading, Pa., was born Sept. 1, 1881, in the city of Reading, son of George O. and Ida (Griffith) Runyeon, natives of Berks county.

Dr. Runyeon secured his early education in the grammar and high schools of his native city, graduating from the latter in 1898, after which he took post-graduate work at same institution, entering the University of Pennsylvania in 1899. He was graduated from this great institution in 1903, with the degree of M. D., and he immediately entered the Reading Hospital where he served as resident physician for one year. On July 1, 1904, he settled in practice at his present office, where he has since continued with much success. As the people of the community have gained confidence in the Doctor, so has his practice grown. He is a close student and skilled physician, keeping well abreast of the times by his membership in the leading medical societies, including the Berks County and Reading Medical societies, the Pennsylvania Medical society, and the American Medical Association. He is a member of the staff of the Reading Hospital, as assistant to Dr. W. S. Bertolet. He is fraternally connected with the Kappa Sigma and the Sigma Xi, of his University. His offices are well appointed and equipped with all the latest and most highly improved appurtenances.

On Dec. 28, 1904, Dr. Runyeon was married to Miss Anna Wobensmith, and to them there has been born one child, A. Margaret.

JAMES BOWMAN MERCER, a member of the Berks County Bar, was born in Reading, Dec. 19, 1881. His early education was obtained in private schools of the city, and he graduated from the Reading high school in 1900. He chose law for a profession, and entered Yale Law School, from which he graduated in 1903, being at that time admitted to the Bar of the State of Connecticut. After returning to his home city he was admitted to Berks County Bar on Aug. 14, 1905, and later was admitted to practise before the Supreme Court of the State. In politics, Mr. Mercer is a Republican.

His father is James R. Mercer, who is a prominent citizen of Reading, where he is a wholesale notion merchant. Mr. Mercer is one of the substantial merchants and business men of Reading. He has been a director of Keystone National Bank of Reading for many years. He is also a director of the Prince Furniture Company, operating a string of stores in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey; Penn Hardware Company; and a director and secretary of Penn Shoe Company. He is married to Ellen Louisa Bowman, daughter of the late Colonel John G. Bowman, a native of Lancaster county.

George Parker Mercer, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Philadelphia, and a descendant of an old English family. He operated a line of boats between Philadelphia and tropical ports.

DR. FRANKLIN FULFORTH MASSEY, a rising young physician of Womelsdorf borough, Berks county, was born Sept. 15, 1881, in Philadelphia, Pa., son of John M. Massey, and grandson of Charles Massey, a well-known business man of Philadelphia, who died there at the age of ninety years.

John M. Massey was born Oct. 3, 1848, in Philadelphia, and there obtained his education, his early employment being in the brass business, in which he still continues, having been employed by the same firm for the past thirty-two years. He married Martha Wright Nelson, daughter of James and Eliza Jane (Chapel) Nelson, of an old and prominent Virginian family, and to this union there were born the following children: Charles, inspector for the Keystone Telephone Company, of Philadelphia, whose twin brother died in infancy; James Nelson, who died when three years of age; Dr. Franklin F.; and DeWitt F., who is engaged in the dry goods business in Philadelphia.

Dr. Franklin Fulforth Massey attended the public schools of Philadelphia, and after taking the course at Temple College, entered Hahnemann College, Philadelphia, being graduated with the class in medicine in 1903. He was the first interne at the Crozer Hospital at Chester, and superintended the building of his apartments, also assisting in purchasing the instruments at the hospital. After leaving Chester, he located in Philadelphia for a short time, but on Jan. 24, 1905, he came to Womelsdorf and located on High street, where he has since continued in practice. He has won the confidence of the people of his community, and his practice extends not only throughout Womelsdorf, but to Reading, covering a radius of ten miles from the borough. Since 1906 he has been the specialist at the Homoeopathic Hospital, Reading, on ear, eye and throat diseases, and he is also the examiner for the Manhattan, Fidelity, Hartford and Prudential insurance companies. Dr. Massey is a member of the State and county medical societies; of the Alumni of his college, and O. U. A. M. Council No. 69, of Womelsdorf. He holds membership in Zion Lutheran Church, where he has been very active in the Sunday-school as superintendent, and as teacher of a class of young men.

DANIEL A. ROTHENBERGER, who is engaged in trucking near Friedensburg, Berks county, has also been very successful as a teacher. He was born in Ruscombmanor township, at Basket, Feb. 11, 1858, and was reared to farming. At the age of sixteen he went to learn the carpenter's trade under his grandfather, Daniel Angstadt, and this trade he followed eight seasons. His early education had been obtained in the township schools and at Oley Academy, and in 1876 he was licensed to teach by Prof. Samuel A. Baer. He taught his first four terms in Alsace township, and since then has taught in Oley, having taught in all thirty-two terms, and having a high place in the educational world of Berks county.

In politics Mr. Rothenberger is a firm believer in Democratic principles, and has been active in his party's welfare. He has been committeeman from Oley township, and assistant assessor, and has also served as delegate to county and State conventions. In 1906 he was a candidate for the State Legislature, and made a very creditable run. From the time he was twelve years old he has been connected with the Lutheran Sunday-school, and has been teacher and superintendent. He is a member of Minnehaha Lodge, No. 154, K. P.; Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E.; and Council No. 123, O. U. A. M., of Oley.

In 1882 Mr. Rothenberger married Clara Lutz, daughter of John and Mary (Freyberger) Lutz, of Exeter township. Twelve children have been born of this union: Mary m. Wilson Reinert; John C. m. Lilah M. Haring; Sophia; Sallie m. Peter Angstadt; George; Charles; Daniel died in infancy; Sylvester; Roy; Clara; Leon; Catharine.

JOHN C. ROTHENBERGER, son of Daniel A., was born in Oley township Aug. 28, 1884, and is now engaged as a merchant in Griesemersville. He was reared upon the farm and attended the public schools and Oley Academy, later going to State College and taking a special course in dairying. He then assisted for a short time in the New Jerusalem Creamery, and in 1904 came to Griesemersville, conducting there the creamery for M. B. Clauser. On May 1, 1908, he took charge of the store at Griesemersville, purchasing the good-will, stock and fixtures for Mr. Clauser, and he has a fine country trade.

On April 25, 1908, Mr. Rothenberger married Lilah M. Haring, daughter of James and Sophia (Falkenstein) Haring, of Oley township, and a daughter, Ethel Marguerite H., was born to them Jan. 11, 1909. In fraternal societies Mr. Rothenberger has taken an active interest, belonging to Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E.; the Red Men at Friedensburg; and Lodge No. 1109, I. O. O. F., at Griesemersville, in which he is past grand. He is a member of Friedens Lutheran Church. On May 1, 1908, he was made assistant postmaster at Griesemersville.

JEROME B. BAGENSTOSE, of Penn township, proprietor of the "Penn Valley Hotel," was born in the place where he now resides, Jan. 30, 1878, son of Daniel and Emma (Bender) Bagenstose.

Jonathan Bagenstose, grandfather of Jerome B., followed farming in Centre township, where he died, being buried at Belleman's Church. On March 21, 1833 (according to the old family Bible now in the possession of Jerome B. Bagenstose), Jonathan Bagenstose married Maria, daughter of John Zerbe, and the same authority gives the births of their children as follows: Israel, Nov. 25, 1833, and William, Sept. 20, 1835, who are both living in Centre township; Catherine, March 22, 1837, and Johannes, Feb. 9, 1839, both of whom died in Centre township; Elias, April 14, 1841, who died in Penn Valley, May 17, 1904; Sarah, March 13, 1843, m. to Mayberry Leinbach, and living in Centre; Daniel, Feb. 25, 1845; Isaac, Nov. 26, 1847, living at Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county; Henrich, Sept. 23, 1849, living in Centre; and Levi, Sept. 9, 1851, living at Downingtown, Chester county.

Daniel Bagenstose was born in Centre township, and when a young man engaged in work upon the home farm, but later learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for several years. He came to Penn Valley, in 1875, where he engaged in the hotel business, in which he continued for a period of thirty years, his death occurring Aug. 7, 1903. He was a director in the Bernville Live Stock Insurance Company, and the Bernville Horse Protection Association, positions which are now held by his son Jerome B., and he was also delegate to numerous county conventions. He is buried at Belleman's Church. Mr. Bagenstose married Emma Bender, daughter of John Bender, and they had the following five children: James, who died in Penn Valley; Francis, who died in Penn Valley; Jerome B.; and two who died in infancy.

Jerome B. Bagenstose attended the public schools of Penn Valley and assisted his father in the hotel business, taking charge thereof in 1894 and in 1905 he purchased the hotel property, eighty-two acres of land fifteen miles from Reading on the Bernville road. This is one of the oldest established stands in the county, and Mr. Bagenstose enjoys a fine traveling trade. He is a Democrat in politics, and in addition to serving on election boards in his township, was made a member of the school board in 1902 and re-elected in 1907, and he is now serving as president of that body. For one year he served as postmaster at Scull Hill. He is a member of Belleman's Lutheran Church. Fraternally he is connected with Camp No. 399, P. O. S. of A., of Scull Hill; Commandery No. 15, of Bernville; and Lodge No. 122, I. O. O. F., of Bernville.

Mr. Bagenstose married Polly Naftzinger, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Epting) Naftzinger, and they have three children: Francis, Clarence and Florence, the two latter being twins.

HENRY SEIDERS is a representative citizen of Hamburg, Berks county, Pa., engaged in the manufacture of boilers. He was born May 2, 1858, in Lebanon county, this State, son of William and Mary (Hoffman) Seiders.

Friederich Seiders, his grandfather, was from the province of Wurtemberg, Germany, and was born about 1792, dying in 1847. His wife, Christina, bore him fourteen children, among them being Jacob, Godlieb, Friederich, Godfrey, Charles and William.

William Seiders was born in February, 1822, and died of dropsy, July 9, 1875. He was a boiler-maker by occupation. He was the father of these children: Christina married John Engelbach; Mary married William A. Nagel; Elizabeth died in her nineteenth year; Charles married Crilla Clillinger; Rosa married John Burkert; Henry; Lewis died in childhood; William died single aged thirty-three years; Maud, deceased, married John Pennypacker; Annie is deceased; three children died young.

Henry Seiders attended the public schools of Reading—whither his family had removed when he was still quite young—until he was thirteen years of age, and then learned the trade of boiler-making, which he has followed ever since. In 1886 he engaged in the manufacture of boilers at East Stroudsburg, employing thirty-five men, and in 1901 sold out at this place, coming to Hamburg in September of that year. Here he engaged in the same business, and now employs a force of fifteen men. His boilers have a ready sale in the open markets, and are shipped to all countries of the world. He resides with his family in his own residence at the corner of Grand and Third streets, Hamburg.

Mr. Seiders was married March 10, 1882, to Catherine Fisher, daughter of George and Mary (Mast) Fisher, and four children have been born to this union: Harry A., Mary L., Glossie W. and Nellie E.

HUYETT FAMILY IN AMERICA.* To begin with those who "came over," and to explain away the traditional theory that the Huyetts came from France—which all admit that none of them have been able to prove—it may be said in proof of the fact that the name came from Germany that their very French branch proves to be the most German of the entire stock. Let us be honest and call it Romano-Germanized-American. There is satisfactory evidence that the quartette of ancestors of whom we find record came directly from the German Palatinate to this country. It does not seem natural to think that the French Huguenots brought the name over and established it in southeastern Pennsylvania, for the simple reason that when 500,000 Huguenots left the borders of France in one year they came over from fifty to one hundred years previous to the Protestant persecution in Germany. Furthermore, they nearly all tended south to the Carolinas and settled North and South Carolina. The constant warfare between Germany and France made so much feeling, that the French would naturally flee from the Germans as soon as the Germans had root. This is a fact of history which is almost self-evident. In what follows we record the Huyetts as they emigrated hither, the lines being given of three who came directly. Several of the others cannot be certainly connected.

(I) Peter Huyett, born in 1702, emigrated in the ship "Samuel," Capt. Hugh Percy, sailing from Rotterdam. He was thirty-five years old, and married. The ship's log plainly says that he was a native of the German Palatinate, and does not mention Huguenots, which it does every time it brought Huguenots over. This seems to be proof enough for all French doubters. This ship "Samuel," last from Cowes, England, arrived here Aug. 30, 1737; 318 passengers. This Peter Huyett is the earliest of the name in America. His children were: Jacob is mentioned below; Anna Catherine, born Dec. 6, 1742, died Jan. 11, 1818, m. John Heiferichin, born March 10, 1743, died Dec. 25, 1813; Christopher, born in 1744, was unmarried in 1765 (this is the only record there is of him, and he may have been in the Revolution); George, born Oct. 6, 1747, was killed in the battle of Germantown, where he was serving as colonel in the Continental army; Catherine died young; Philip, born in 1754, died in 1822, settled in Robeson township in 1794 (his wife's name was Margaret, and among the children of his son Jacob was Vane, who had a son William). The records show that Peter Huyett (1702) had 200 acres of land in Exeter April 5, 1733 (?).

(I) Frantz Carl Huyett, born in 1708 in the Palatinate, emigrated in the ship "Glasgow," Capt. Walter Sterling, from Rotterdam, which arrived Sept. 7, 1738, with 349 passengers. He was thirty years old, and married. There is no name more German than Frantz or Carl, and the compiler does not believe a Frenchman would have used these names at that particular time. From Philadelphia he drifted across the Susquehanna river into Washington county, Md., near Hagerstown. He had a son Ludwig and some daughters.

(I) Michael Huyett, born in 1719, started for England at the age of twenty. At thirty he left England in the ship "Leslie," Capt. J. Balledium, 450 passengers, arrived Oct. 7, 1749, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, England; he was also a native of the Palatinate, from Manheim, Zweibrücken. Michael no doubt went to England in 1738 and tried to settle with the German colony in lower England, about one thousand, where he remained ten years. He became so English that he could scarcely talk German any more. He lived in Exeter township, then in Philadelphia county, until the French and Indian war, when he marched with Generals Braddock and Washington to Pittsburg, to be defeated and killed in 1755, whereupon the Indians became so brave as to drive Frantz and Peter Huyett across the Susquehanna river into Maryland, where Frantz found rich soil and settled; but Peter came back on horseback to Exeter township, which he had helped to organize in 1741 (or 1749), afterward visiting his Maryland brother.

(I) Ambrose Huett must be of this stock, the difference in the form of the name being accounted for by the lack of general education in those days. He came over in the "Peter Bonaventure," from London, England, when twenty-seven years old, arriving April 3, year not known. He was lost in the Revolutionary war.

There was another emigrant, who may or may not belong to this stock, and who is here mentioned simply for the sake of the doubt. But there are so many Jacobs in the family that it seems reasonable he is one of the Huyetts, and the difference in the spelling of the last name may be only a misprint, as the name was used in many forms then. This emigrant, Jacob Huwitt, emigrated in the "Phoenise," Capt. Reuben Honor, 500 passengers, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, arriving Nov. 22, 1752. We have no further record of him here.

The compiler has further names of others probably connected with the family, and hopes to add to the list by continued research. But it is a very difficult task. So far he has gathered several thousand names, dates, etc., out of more than one dozen States, into which the Huy-

*This sketch of the Huyett family is written by Harvey T. Huyett, of Shillington, Berks Co., Pa., a son of the late Daniel Huyett, of the same place. Harvey T. Huyett has become quite a student, and has taken some interest in the study of and careful research into the family history. After considerable thought he feels that nearly all—if not quite—of what is contained in this sketch is as near correct as it can be made at present.

etts have spread; and in half a dozen counties here in Pennsylvania are found numerous representatives of this good stock.

These Huyetts came from the city of Worms, Germany, and vicinity, out of a district twenty miles west and ten miles east of and along the river Rhine, mostly southwest. They were all thrifty Christians, and for this reason were persecuted there, and even followed here by the same spirit which prevailed at the time.

Some years ago a German who passed through Virginia tracing the name, said that he had traced the name through Germany back to Rome. Therefore we can say that it is a very old name, and has proved to be one of the best wherever found. Many of the best settlers in Pennsylvania came over at the time they emigrated, and the Huyetts have intermarried with the Boones, Hartmans, Bechtels, Beidlers, and Pennepackers. Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania is a second cousin to James Pennepacker, of Shillington, Pa., who married Catherine Huyett (second cousin of Daniel Huyett, father of Harvey T.), daughter of Isaac, great-grandson of Peter Huyett (who came over in the ship "Samuel"). This Catherine Huyett's brother, Joseph Huyett, married James Pennepacker's sister. A great-great-great-grandson of the Boone who settled in Exeter, Pa., near Peter Huyett, married a daughter of Cyrus Huyett, first cousin of Harvey T. Huyett.

The emigrant Peter Huyett at one time purchased a large farm from Abraham Lincoln's grandfather, when Lincoln went to Kentucky. Some years afterward the Lincolns rebought the farm, which is still in Lincoln hands. This presumably happened when Peter Huyett became lost. Tradition has it that he was in the habit of visiting his Maryland brother, going by horseback from below Reading, Pa., to Cavetown, near Hagerstown, Md., and while on one of his return trips to Pennsylvania his horse tripped and fell, Peter dashing head first on a rock, breaking his neck. Consequently he was never heard from. The compiler has no wish to set tradition aside, but if there is any guess-work about this circumstance he would like to record his own theory. It is known from the records that Peter Huyett was very actively interested in the political and civic welfare of his district and Commonwealth. In 1741 he was the first tax collector of his township, and in 1752 he helped to organize the county, and records also show that he was actively connected along these lines up to 1755, when he suddenly dropped out of sight, disappearing completely. Therefore I would suggest that the Indians scalped him, as they did Henry Hartman, H. T. Huyett's grandmother's grandfather. For the French helped the Indians to become very bold in 1755, when they defeated the careless General Braddock at Pittsburg, and Mr. Huyett is convinced that Peter Huyett was one of their victims, thus ending a brave and honorable career.

Mr. Huyett's grandfather, John Huyett, great-grandson of this Peter, married Elizabeth Hartman. Her grandfather, Henry Hartman, came from Germany, not many miles from the town of Worms, in the Palatinate by the river Rhine, and a John Hartman may have been his brother or his oldest son. Henry Hartman's widow said that on Oct. 16, 1755 (other witnesses say Oct. 30th is the correct date), her husband, who was out on the hill working, and his oldest son were murdered by the Indians, but that the daughter was spared her life, but was missing. The two men were scalped by a number of Indians, who were pursued by twenty-six whites. Adam Reed (a white man) found the Hartman bodies with the skin cut off their heads, and buried both of them in one grave on the spot where they were killed, to avoid their being carried away by men or attacked by birds of the air. They were buried Oct. 31, 1755, without removing their clothes or looking at their possessions, according to a letter from Reed to William Parsons on Nov. 1, 1755. These Hartmans lived in Bethel township, the Indians being numerous on the western slope of the Blue mountains, and every fall they would creep over to the eastern valley and carry away the grain crops the white men had raised during an entire season. The Hartmans and Fishers and other whites gradually drew southeasterly, to Muhlenberg and Oley townships.

If we could realize the endurance of our ancestors, and the ordeals through which they had to pass, our hearts' gratitude would surely be theirs. Breaking away from all friends and home ties, with their penny knotted in a handkerchief tied around a limb, they sold themselves to the captain of a ship like so many sheep or oxen. Then the captain gave them free steerage; but at this end of the passage they found another knot had been put in their string, as the captain made auction sale of them, releasing them to the farmers who offered the highest bid, whom they had to serve until the price was earned off; the women had to serve many years. This must have been worse than any hardship the descendants of these courageous people would endure, even for their kith and kin. However, there were means of softening these severe conditions. A particular or close friend already settled here would be requested to meet the newcomer from the Old World when his ship came in, and be sure to bid the highest price for him or her. Otherwise they might be lost to each other forever, by being sold to someone in a distant section.

The Huyetts have had all these trying experiences, but they have prospered and multiplied, the name being well represented in the present generation. We shall now trace the direct line of Harry T. and M. Luther Huyett.

(II) Jacob Huyett, son of Peter, born April 23, 1732, died April 2, 1802. He and his wife, Maria Gegin, born Jan. 4, 1735, died Nov. 22, 1803, had a married life of forty years. They are buried at the Schwartzwald Church. They had nine children, of whom Henry, born April 28, 1759, died Nov. 17, 1816; he married Christiana Beiberer (daughter of Henry), born March 9, 1759, died March 8, 1841. Christian was mentioned in 1767 (no dates, but was unmarried). John, born Oct. 30, 1763, died Nov. 27, 1825; his wife, Sophia, born Feb. 6, 1763, died Oct. 7, 1813 (their children were: William, Christian, Philip and Catherine, born Oct. 1, 1789, died Aug. 9, 1794; of these, Philip, born in 1784, married Mary Lash, and their son John had a son Vane Calvin, born Feb. 7, 1859, whose son William lives at Shillington, Berks county). Jacob, born March 8, 1766, married Rosina Bechtel in 1790, and died Jan. 19, 1831; his father sold him a farm of 180 acres in Cumru (adjoining his brother Ludwig's), near the Five Mile House, now owned by one of the Huyett daughters. Catherine, born Nov. 17, 1772, died May 26, 1840, unmarried. Ludwig and Philip are mentioned below.

(III) Ludwig Huyett, son of Jacob, born in 1761, died Sept. 30, 1799, aged thirty-eight. His grave has not yet been located. John Huyett, his brother, signed off, also John Beaver and Christian Gernant. On June 5, 1787, his father sold him a farm of 273 acres in Cumru township, Berks county. He and his brother Jacob had some slaves, and from five to ten cows and sheep. He and his wife Magdalena had children: Catherine m. John Shoup, born Nov. 17, 1790, died May 25, 1840, son of Peter Shoup, the emigrant; Leah; George, born Aug. 18, 1793, died Aug. 25, 1857; John. Of these, George m. Sarah Gicker July 16, 1814, had children as follows: John had a daughter Amanda (m. Henry Matz and had Eve Ann, John, Rose, Daur and Sallie); George went to the war and did not return (he m. Mary Reifsneider and had John, whose son John had Sallie, Cora, Irwin and others; Obediah, who had a son Harry; Mrs. Dr. Ammon, of Reading, and Wellington, who m. a Smith); Jacob, born Jan. 17, 1820, died June 26, 1866, unmarried; Polly (or Margaret) married (first) a Mr. Umpenhaur and (second) Isaac Idyl, by whom she had a son Isaac.

(IV) John Huyett, youngest son of Ludwig, born June 11, 1798, baptized Sept. 8, 1798, died Jan. 22, 1887. He was a very successful farmer, being able to give a farm to each of his numerous children. He married Elizabeth Hartman, daughter of John Hartman, whose father Henry was the "Bravado." These are the Hartmans previously mentioned as having suffered at the hands of the Indians. We have the following record of their children:

(V) Garson Huyett, son of John, born March 25, 1823, died July 17, 1890. He became a wealthy farmer, and like all the family a valuable citizen. He m. Eve Gaul (daughter of Christian and granddaughter of Peter, the emigrant), born July 29, 1821, died April 8, 1895. Their children were: Henry m. Catherine Reber and had Thomas (whose children were Minerva, George, and two deceased), Irwin (no children), Harry (one child) and Nora (unmarried); Sarah m. Henry Grill and had Annie and Frank (neither has children); Cyrus m. Annie Kurtz and had children, John (no children), Charles (no children), Ellanora (children, Blanche Viola, Alice Esther and Mary Grace), Cyrus (children, Alice Pearl, Charles Walter and Minerva Ruth), Oscar Kurtz (no children), Ivan (no children), Alvin (no children), Adam Franklin (no children) and Mary Alice (no children); Mary m. Adam Grill, but had no children.

(V) Mary Huyett, daughter of John, born Nov. 16, 1824, died young.

(V) Leah Huyett, daughter of John, born Dec. 2, 1826, is unmarried. She was a great help to her father for many years. She and her sister Sarah lived together.

(V) Sarah Huyett, daughter of John, born Feb. 11, 1828, died Aug. 5, 1909. She m. Daniel K. Zacharias, and they had eleven children, nine daughters and two sons, one of whom died recently: Mary had no children; Emma, Mrs. Hassler, had four children, Irwin, Earl, Eida and Margaret; Elizabeth died young; Carolina m. Allen Schwoyer and had three children, Charles (who has several children), Nora (unmarried) and John (deceased); Amanda m. F. Shalter and had James, Frank (in State of Washington), John, Carrie and Florence; Charles m. Eve Pennepacker and had Minnie (who is m. to Rev. Mr. Raub, a U. B. minister, and has one son); Wellington m. Ella Hornberger and had a daughter Gertrude; Clara m. Adam Ruth and had Adam and Nora; Catherine m. Michael Kintzer and had Chester, Leroy and Charles; Rebecca m. William Krick and had Irwin (who had one child, deceased) and Sallie; Gertrude died in infancy.

(V) John Huyett, son of John, born Sept. 28, 1829, died young.

(V) Elizabeth Huyett, daughter of John, born Sept. 12, 1831, died March 29, 1895, unmarried.

(V) Charles Huyett, son of John, born April 30, 1833, died Aug. 16, 1894. He, too, was a well-to-do farmer. He m. Elizabeth Beidler, and they had: Annie m. John Huyett, son of Joshua, a third cousin, and had a daughter Annie and a son; Evan, of Center county, Pa., had a daughter Lelia and a son; Olean m. Annie Wenrich, of Sinking Spring, Pa., and had a daughter Catherine; Alice m. Oliver Miller and had a son Warren.

(V) Lewis Huyett, son of John, born July 30, 1834, died Oct. 1, 1865, unmarried.

(V) Daniel, son of John, born Aug. 7, 1836, died Dec. 26, 1900; he was buried New Year's Day in Sinking Spring cemetery, and had a very large funeral. In 1860 he m. Lydia Gaul (daughter of William, son of Peter who came over), born Oct. 26, 1830, and still living. They had the following children, all born on the old homestead: (1) Calvin Douglas, born Sept. 13, 1864, died young. (2) Garson McClellan, born June 21, 1863, m. Emma Ruth, of Wernersville, Pa., daughter of Michael Ruth, a wealthy retired farmer, and (second) Susan Hartman, of North Reading, and had three children, Victor (by the first marriage), Maple and Lillie. He was licensed to teach, and taught several terms before his marriage, later teaching four terms more; graduated from a business and shorthand school of Reading and obtained a good position as stenographer with the Pennsylvania Railway Company; transferred to Sunnyside, Ark., where he was superintendent of a large cotton plantation for some years, and is now in the business of building and selling houses, living at Reading. (3) Emma Adeline, born July 19, 1866, m. Morris A. Ernst, of Bernville, and now lives in Shoemakersville, Mr. Ernst having this year retired from farming and built a home in the village, besides which he owns two fine farms, woodland, etc. They have two children, Lincoln (studying medicine at the University of Pennsylvania) and Flora. (4) Martha Madora, born Nov. 27, 1867, m. Jacob S. Hatt, son of Samuel and Carolina Hatt, and had Charles and Irwin (the latter died young). Mr. Hatt is a well-to-do farmer and farmed his large place until several years ago, when he purchased the large grocery and department store in Reading which he has since conducted in connection with the management of his farm. (5) Harvey Tyson and (6) M. Luther are mentioned below.

Daniel Huyett even exceeded his father in local influence and in accumulation of wealth. He was careful, honest, thrifty, fair-minded and possessed of fine judgment. He farmed the finest of the Huyett estates, a property of 108 acres of excellent land (on which is a remarkably fine spring), now owned by his son Harvey. For many years he owned another of the finest farms in the state, 111 acres in Heidelberg township, Berks county, one mile west of Wernersville, which he sold to the state of Pennsylvania for a State sanitarium site; there is also a fine spring on this place. Daniel Huyett always took great interest in the affairs of the community, and was looked up to for his intelligence as well as his sterling uprightness. He was a stanch Democrat, and not only had a reputation as a valuable party man, but was also esteemed for the services he rendered in the locality as school director for many years and juryman; he rendered special services on the grand jury, being well up on points of law and court customs, and well acquainted with the best lawyers, judges, and civil officials.

Mrs. Daniel Huyett was a daughter of William Gaul (born June 17, 1780, died March 30, 1857) and his wife Rosina Wenrich (born Jan. 12, 1786, died April 19, 1866). Mr. Gaul was an expert blacksmith, engaged in business near Shillington. Three of his sons went as far West as Ohio, making the journey on horseback. The family were all earnest Christians, and all bore Bible names, John, Joel, Levi, Lydia, Elizabeth, Reuben, etc. William Gaul's uncle married a Huyett, and her father married a sister of this Jacob Gaul. William Gaul's grandfather came over in 1767, and his descendants are now scattered all over the country.

(V) James Huyett, son of John, born Dec. 22, 1839, is still living. He farmed the place which formerly belonged to his father, now his own property, retiring from active work about ten years ago. He was an honest business man and a useful citizen, serving his locality and State well. He is a Democrat, and has done much for his party. He was frugal and successful, at present owning two very good farms and two houses, and has financed a stocking factory. He married Mary Gaul, daughter of Solomon and Catherine Gaul, the latter living to be ninety-six years old. Mr. and Mrs. Huyett had children as follows: Carrie died unmarried; Walter, a veterinary surgeon, m. Sophia Coleman and had Edith and Violet; Alva m. Howard Bender and had Luther H.

(V) Anna Huyett, daughter of John, born Dec. 29, 1843, m. Richard Hain and had sons Franklin (who had a son Richard) and Charles (who had no children). Richard Hain came from the oldest and best Colonial stock in this part of the world. Mr. and Mrs. Hain were well-to-do farming people until they retired some twenty years ago, and they are residing in Wernersville, having erected a mansion on the lower end of their farm. She is a handsome and well built woman. One of her sons is principal of a large school at Cape May; the other manager of a stocking factory in Wernersville.

(VI) Harvey T. Huyett, author of this family sketch, is neither a D. D. nor quite an M. D., never having asked for either degree though he may be deserving of both. He graduated with first and special honors, at the head of a large class, from the Brooklyn Institute of First Aid to The Injured & Diseased, which made him a very active member of the Red Cross Society of Brooklyn's greatest institution. He was born March 17, 1870, on the old 100-acre Huyett homestead, near Shillington, Pa., which farm he now owns, and is living in the famous mansion of his father on Lancaster avenue, Shillington.

He received a district school education, after which he took several terms in the Charter Oak Academy, at Sinking Spring, Pa., and several in the Keystone State Normal School. He was licensed to teach district schools by Supt. David S. Keck, but did not engage in the profession. He then entered the Frank Harrison Shorthand College, Newark, N. J., where he graduated with special honors, after which he occupied a splendid position in New York City, and at the same time took three courses in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, the greatest institution of its kind in the country. He was a stenographer of expert qualities, both in the court and commercial lines of New York City, and occupied several good positions there.

Mr. Huyett married May 21, 1898, in New York City, Catherine Swain, daughter of John Jackson and Anna Barbara (Beyerer) Swain, of Butler, Pa., her father being a tradesman in and about Pittsburg. To this union were born Ruth Washington, John Bryan, Claude Harvey and Grace Catherine. Mrs. Huyett's grandmother was a Brown, either a sister or cousin of the famous John Brown.

(VI) M. Luther Huyett, M. D., one of the rising young physicians of Berks county, whose chosen field of practice is the borough of Shillington, Pa., was born Aug. 7, 1874, on the Huyett homestead in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Daniel and Lydia (Gaul) Huyett. He received his preliminary education in the public schools of his township, taught public school for two terms, graduated from the Interstate Commercial College in 1892, attended Palatinate College, at Myerstown, and Muhlenberg College, and in 1900 graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, later taking a special course in diseases of the ear, nose and throat at the same institution. After graduation Dr. Huyett established himself at Shillington, where he soon built up a large practice, of which many an older practitioner could well feel proud. In 1901 he purchased the well-known Rev. M. L. Fritch estate, which is located at the corner of Lancaster avenue and Miller street, in Shillington, and in 1905 he erected the handsome pebble-dashed residence which is one of the finest in the place. The Doctor is very public-spirited and is an exemplary citizen. He is a Democrat in political matters, and he is fraternally connected with Teutonia Lodge No. 367, F. & A. M., Knights of Pythias Lodge No. 485 at Mohnton, the O. of I. A. (No. 186) at Shillington, and Reading Tent of Maccabees, and is examiner of two of the former orders. He is also examiner for a number of well-known insurance companies. He is connected with the county, state and national medical societies, is at present physician at the County Almshouse, and a member of the Board of Health of Shillington.

On June 9, 1898, Dr. Huyett married Ella N. Bitting, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Worley) Bitting. They have no children.

(III) Philip Huyett, youngest son of Jacob Huyett (1732), married Magdalena Klohs, youngest daughter of John Klohs, son of Thomas Klohs, of Alsace township, Feb. 9, 1794, in presence of Jacob Klohs, in minister's house. (John Klohs was buried Sept. 23, 1795, by Thomas Klohs, who, born on Dec. 6, 1723, had ten children. Jacob Klohs m. Catherine Baldy Sept. 13, 1789). Philip and Magdalena Huyett had children: Daniel, born March 11, 1795, died in middle age; Catherine m. a Moyer; Elizabeth; Samuel m. Elizabeth Troop (he was born about 1805, and died in 1854, aged forty-nine years); Margaret (perhaps); Jacob, born Oct. 10, 1810 (sponsors, Henry and Catherine Focht); Mary (born in 1812) m. Jacob Klohs.

(IV) Samuel Huyett, born about 1805, married Elizabeth Troop, and they had children: (1) John, who died when seventy-two years old, was twice married, first to Susan Griffith (sister of his brother Isaac's wife), and second to Sarah Machamer (sister of his brother Augustus' wife). There were nine children by the first union: Samuel, of Gibraltar, Pa.; John, of Reading, Pa.; Israel, of Baumansville, Pa. (he has three children); Harrison, of York county, Pa.; Catherine; Elizabeth; Lydia; Susan; and Harvey, of Turkey Hill, Pa. There were five children by the second marriage: Martin, another son, and three daughters, all of Turkey Hill. (2) Isaac, who died when sixty-two years old, married Maria Griffith, and they had children as follows: August, John, Isaac, Jacob, Annie (who has two children), Emma, Carolina and Cassanna. (3) Jacob, who died in his twenties, went to the Civil war in 1864 under a captain popularly known as "Cheap John of Unchsterdam" and was killed on the battlefield. (4) Samuel, now sixty-six years old, went to Chester county, where he resides with a child. He no doubt had other children. (5) Adam, born in 1845, is still living. He entered the service of the Union in August, 1862, under Capt. Patterson Galt, 122d Pennsylvania Infantry, and saw service in Maryland and Virginia, going on to Fredericksburg. He was mostly on guard duty. When he had been at the front six months he was taken sick with typhoid fever, was four weeks in hospital, suffered with frostbitten finger tips and feet, and was taken to Washington hospital. On account of gangrene he lost both his feet, and though obliged to wear cork limbs he walks as well as anyone, attracting no notice. He married Lovina Behm, and they have had fourteen children, seven dying in infancy. The others are: Barton, Adam, Joshua (a shoemaker, unmarried) Franklin (unmarried), Annie (whose children are Wood, Florence, Susan, Dora and Nellie), Hettie (whose children are William, Charles and Adam), and Dora (who has a son, Howard). (6) Augustus, who died when sixty years old, was twice married, first to Catharine Machamer, by whom he had: Irwin, of Ephrata, Pa., who has one child, Maple), William (who has had a family of six, Bertha—who died when sixteen years old, Edna, Harry, Annie, Girdie, and Charles, the last named deceased), Vane, Elizabeth, Emma, Catherine and Cora. His second marriage was to Esther Lambert, of Reading, by whom he had two children, Oscar and Charles.

(IV) Sarah Huyett, daughter of Henry (son of Jacob, son of Peter), born April 28, 1782, died Dec. 9, 1866.

(IV) Jacob Huyett, son of Henry, born March 25, 1784, died Feb. 2, 1842. He lived along the Schuylkill river, in Exeter, Pa., and bought and farmed the best farm in the county at the Beaver Creek lands, Hagerstown, Md. On Jan. 10, 1809, he m. Maria Steiner. Their children were as follows: (1) Jeremiah went West fifty years ago, to Montgomery county, Kans., where he homesteaded 160 acres. He had three sons, George, Jacob and Daniel, all of whom own farms, and four daughters, not named. (2) John had children: Jacob (who died at the age of forty-five), Claggett (who died at the age of twenty-eight) and a daughter, also deceased. Jacob is survived by two children, Charles, of St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. William Arts, of Hagerstown, Md. Shortly after Claggett's death his wife moved to Illinois; they had several children. (3) Susan, born in 1833, died Feb. 3, 1852. (4) Jacob had a family of seven: Millard, who opened a store four miles west of Hagerstown, Md., where the Green Castle turnpike crosses the old National turnpike, about thirty years ago, and the town has ever since been known as Huyett (he had no children); Franklin, a tradesman of Hagerstown, Md.; Isaac, in Oregon; Daniel, a trucker near Hagerstown, Md.; and Mollie, Alice and Susan, all married. (5) Leah was born Dec. 2, 1826, on the Huyett homestead, on the same day and year as Leah (now living at Shillington, aged eighty-three), daughter of John Huyett, of Cumru township, near Shillington; the coincidence is somewhat remarkable, as the parents were not acquainted at the time. Isaac Huyett, of Exeter, Pa., also had a daughter Leah born the same year, 1826, who died young. Leah Huyett m. J. A. R. Brewer, and lived to be forty-five years old. (6) Elizabeth m. Henry Stough, and lived to be seventy-seven years old. (7) Daniel, born in 1823, died May 31, 1905, was engaged as a farmer, merchant, miller and fertilizer manufacturer. His children were: John B., who had four sons and four daughters, Eugene, Brinham, Jacob, Earl, Zelene, Betty, Bertha and Clara; Huron A., whose children were Daniel G. (manager of the Colorado Telephone Company at Longmont, Colo.), Margaretta S., Virginia, Eva, Maizie, and Dorothy; Luther A., whose children are William (he has 600 acres of the finest land near Winchester, Va.) and Edna; Margaretta O.; and Nettie R. (II) Ludwig (Ludwich) Huyett, son of Frantz Carl, born Jan. 7, 1739, died April 17, 1828. He married Margaretta Potter, born Feb. 1, 1752, died Feb. 21, 1833. They are buried at Cavetown, Washington Co., Md.; the gravestones are badly weatherworn. A deed of 1785 when he made a purchase, shows him a resident of Washington county, and he was a member of the Reformed Church in Hagerstown. He died at the home of his son Jacob, who was a captain in the militia of 1812. In 1799 he bought an estate of 430 3-4 acres, about six miles east of Hagerstown, which he called "Huyett's Meadows," by which name it is still known. It is at the foot of South Mountain, about two miles south of Cavetown. This he kept until his old age, when, about 1811, he divided it into two sections, selling equal parts to his sons Jacob and Daniel. Daniel's grandchildren to-day own all of his half, and Jacob's grandchildren own most of his half. Ludwig Huyett was a thoroughly honest and extremely energetic man. He and both of the sons named owned quite a number of slaves. The old brick house on Ludwig's original plantation is still standing, in good shape.

(III) Margaretta Huyett, daughter of Ludwig, married William Hogmire, and they had a son, Daniel Hogmire. Mrs. Margaretta (Huyett) Hogmire lived with her brother, John Huyett, during the closing years of her life, and is buried in Huntingdon, Pa., where he lived.

(IV) Benjamin Ingram Huyett, son of Jacob, born April 24, 1828, died March 31, 1885, unmarried.

(IV) Elizabeth Margaret Huyett, daughter of Jacob, born Jan. 14, 1831, died Sept. 13, 1905, was the only one of her parents' family that married. She married Isaac G. Beard. They had children as follows: (1) Benjamin Huyett, born Feb. 12, 1863, died June 13, 1864. (2) William Edward, born Nov. 29, 1864, died Jan. 17, 1866. (3) Sarah Allen, born Jan. 18, 1866, died Sept. 10, 1867. (4) Mary Elizabeth m. William F. Shank, and had children: Elizabeth Frances, Raymond Isaac and Robert Huyett. (5) Daniel Santee married Lillie A. Hoover and had Frances Elizabeth. (6) Catherine Amelia, born March 18, 1872, died Sept. 3, 1899. She m. Lloyd K. Hoffman, and had Calvin Beard and Harold Huyett. (7) Emma Virginia, born Feb. 5, 1871, died March 22, 1871.

(IV) Cynthia Ann Huyett, daughter of Jacob, born April 21, 1833, died May 9, 1906.

(IV) Edward Milton Huyett, son of Jacob, born Oct. 18, 1835, died May 3, 1903.

The Yosts, with whom the Huyetts have intermarried, are descended from Jacob Yost, who was born in Germany March 16, 1696, and came over in company with Rev. George Mitchell Weiss, the first regularly ordained minister of the Reformed Church in America, on Sept. 21, 1727. He settled in Whitepain township, Montgomery Co., Pa., and his property is held by his descendants. Rufus Yost m. a Miss Kurtz; Joshua Huyett had previously m. Annie Kurtz, and since they have become related in other ways.

The Huyetts have also intermarried with the Boones, the family to which Daniel Boone, the famous hunter and pioneer, belonged, living side by side in Exeter township, with Peter Huyett, his son Jacob and the rest of them, and going to the same church. As both families have numerous descendants a mention of the Boones will be of interest here.

Boone.—The immediate ancestors of Daniel Boone, the famous hunter and pioneer of Kentucky, occupied a small settlement near Exeter, England, where they nearly all followed a pastoral life. George Boone immigrated to America with his wife, Mary, in 1717, bringing with them eleven children, but few worldly goods. Two of the eleven children were daughters. The nine sons were: William, Joseph, Joshua, Jeremiah, Hezekiah, Benjamin, James, John and Squire, the last named being the father of Daniel Boone.

George Boone settled in Berks county, Pa., where he obtained a large tract of land and founded a small settlement which in honor of his birthplace was called Exeter. It is also related, though with no better authority than tradition, that he pre-empted the ground on which Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, is situated, that he located the town, and gave to it his name.

George Boone and his family were Quakers. They are buried at the Exeter meeting-house. His descendants in Berks county are still quite numerous.

Squire Boone married in Pennsylvania Mary Morgan, about the year 1732, and resided at Exeter, Berks Co., Pa., on the original home of his father. They had seven sons and four daughters, as follows: Daniel, James, Squire, Edward, Jonathan, George and Samuel, Mary, Sarah, Hannah and Elizabeth. Daniel's uncle James, a schoolmaster, left a memorandum in a book to the effect that Daniel Boone was born July 14, 1734; the date is given elsewhere as 1733. About 1750 or 1751 his father moved from Exeter to a spot on the Yadkin river, ten miles from what is now known as Wilkesboro, Wilkes Co., North Carolina.

Daniel Boone married Rebecca Bryan, a neighbor's daughter, and to them were born nine children: James (born 1756), Israel, Nathan, Daniel, Jesse, Rebecca, Susan, Lavina and Jemima. Five years after his marriage Daniel was still living on the Yadkin, following the same pursuits as his father, hunting, trapping and cultivating a garden patch.

The material for the following is found in "Fifty American Soldiers of Fortune."

In 1767 Daniel Boone left his family and his farm in North Carolina and with six companions went to explore the Kentucky wilderness. Finding the soil fertile and the game plentiful he returned to North Carolina and raised a little colony whom he led to the new territory. Food was scarce and the Indians troublesome, but they finally succeeded in founding a fortified settlement on the banks of the Kentucky river, named Boonesboro in honor of the leader. Boone's wife was the first white woman to enter that region, and one of their sons was the first white boy born in Kentucky.

With thirty comrades Boone went in search of salt to Salt Licks, a hundred miles from the settlement, and on the trip they were surrounded by a party of over a hundred Indians, led by English officers, who captured the entire party and took them to Detroit. All were ransomed, however, but Boone, for whom the Shawnee chief had formed a liking. He was held against his will and adopted into the tribe, being well treated but closely watched. Hearing of a plan to swoop down upon the little settlement of Boonesboro and massacre all its inhabitants, he determined to escape to warn them, and although five hundred of the savages gave chase he succeeded, arriving in time to help the settlers prepare for the attack. They held the fort successfully against six times their number, though the Indians were led by British and Canadian officers.

Boone's wife and family, believing him dead, had during his captivity returned to North Carolina, and after the battle he followed them without delay, and in 1780 brought them back to Kentucky. Shortly afterward, while on a hunting trip with his brother, he was ambushed by the Indians, and the brother was slain and scalped. Boone escaped this time, but was later captured by four savages; he got free by throwing snuff into their faces, blinding them while he fled. His daughter being taken prisoner, with two girl friends, by a band of Indians, Boone followed and rescued the three women single-handed. Two of his sons were killed by the Redmen.

Unfortunately, when Kentucky became a state in 1791 it was found that Boone had not secured proper title to his lands, and he was ousted from the property he had fought so hard to gain. It was then that he went to Missouri, at that time under Spanish rule, and the Spaniards in recognition of his fame and prowess, gave him a tract of 8,500 acres and made him a sub-governor. However, when Missouri, after passing into French hands, was sold to the United States as part of the Louisiana Purchase, he again lost his property through neglect in establishing his title, and in his old age found himself without land or money. Returning to Kentucky, he was there given 850 acres as the result of a petition to Congress, and he passed the remainder of his long life in hunting and farming. He died in September, 1820, and was buried at Frankfort, Ky. Years before he had made for himself an enormous coffin, which he kept always under his bed. He was a man of gentle and modest manners, and of irreproachable private life.

ELLSWORTH FRICKER of Reading, who is extensively engaged in raising fine poultry, was born in 1861, in that city, son of Andrew J. and Mary C. (Mills) Fricker.

Andrew J. Fricker was born in Reading, and in early life learned the molding trade, but later engaged in the paper box business, which he followed the major portion of his life. He died in 1895 at the age of sixty years, and his wife in 1878, when thirty-five years of age, their children being: Ellsworth; Kate, deceased; Sarah, single; and Jacob, deceased. Religiously the family were connected with the Reformed Church. In political matters, Mr. Fricker was a Republican, and was prominent in city affairs, being councilman for two terms. He was very well known in the city, where he had many friends, and was a member of the I. O. O. F.

Ellsworth Fricker was educated in the schools of Reading, and as a boy learned the trade of blacksmith, which he followed for about eight years, and then engaged in teaming. For eighteen years he was in the employ of the P. & R. Co., as brakeman and baggagemaster, resigning in 1903. In 1906 he engaged in the poultry business, purchasing the Miller Poultry Farm, and in this he has continued to the present time with much success.

Mr. Fricker is a member of the Royal Arcanum, Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 518, and the I. O. O. F. His politics are those of the Republican party.

Mr. Fricker married Clara S. Reischard, and to them have been born two children, Jacob and Esther. Mr. and Mrs. Fricker attend the Reformed Church.

SAMUEL H. ROMIG, a representative of the old Berks county family of that name, is a retired farmer and contractor. He now lives with his son, William E., at No. 1344 Good street, Reading.

The Romigs, spelled "Romich" by other branches of the family, trace their history back to one John Romig, who settled near Worman, Douglass township, where he resided until his death in 1804. He left five sons: John, George, Christian, Jacob, and Henry, all of whom reared families.

George Romig, grandfather of Samuel H., was a farmer and lived in the vicinity of Amityville. He was born Jan. 9, 1765, and passed away April 2, 1850. He married Sophia Fritz, born Nov. 17, 1773, died March 24, 1828. They had seven sons and four daughters, among whom were: Samuel, who lived in Amity township; George, who lived in the Swamp; Jacob; William, mentioned later; Betzy, m. to Jacob Romich; Mary, m. to John Schaffer; and Sarah, m. to Thomas Mauger. The will, dated May 28, 1842, and probated May 24, 1850, gave the homestead of seventy acres to William, where he resided during life; George also obtained a farm; and Jacob Romich, a son-in-law, was given a tract of land in Earl township. The executors of the will were George Romig and Jacob Romich.

William Romig, son of George, was born March 26, 1806, and passed his life as a resident of Amityville, where he owned and cultivated a tract of land. He died Feb. 11, 1885, and was buried in Amityville cemetery. His wife was Lydia Holloway, born Sept. 13, 1811, daughter of Jacob; she died March 7, 1893. Their children were: Sarah, now deceased, m. to Wellington Gross, of Amityville; and Samuel H., our subject.

Samuel H. Romig was born in Amity township April 20, 1841, and in this township continued residence until the spring of 1909. He secured a common school education, and learning the carpenter's trade, pursued that as a business vocation, together with operating his home farm. For many years he was in partnership with Jacob Holloway, and some of the largest and most substantial of the buildings in and about Amityville are monuments to their industry. Mr. Romig, although retired from business life, continues his interest in social and religious affairs. A lifelong member of the Amityville Lutheran church, he has been in the church council since 1876. For many years he served in the offices of deacon, elder, treasurer etc., and was always officially connected with the Sunday-school as teacher, treasurer, etc. Having children of his own, he was earnest in improving the educational facilities of his home township, and was the means, in connection with others, of securing teachers and equipment which made Amity township schools second to none in the county.

When the war cloud rolled up from the South in 1861, Mr. Romig became actively interested, enlisting in Company A, 128th Pa. V. I., and serving in this regiment during 1862-63, some nine months, being in many engagements, the most severe of which was Antietam. In politics Mr. Romig votes the Republican ticket.

Mr. Romig was married to Sarah Eshelman, born Sept. 20, 1843, daughter of Abraham and Sarah (Rhoads) Eshelman, the former for many years a well known miller of Amity township. To this union have been born two children: Maggie Jane, who died Oct. 1, 1878, at the age of twelve years, two months and one day; and William E

WILLIAM E. ROMIG was born July 10, 1870, in Amity township, and was reared with all the advantages found in a cultured home. His education was carefully looked to, and by the time he was seventeen, he had become so proficient as to convince Prof. D. S. Keck, county superintendent of schools, that he was entitled to a license to teach. After two successful terms of teaching, in what is called the "March" school, in his native township, he entered the railroad office at Douglassville. After proving himself thoroughly competent to take charge of a station, he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, and for seventeen years was at different points on that system in New Jersey, principally at Cape May. In 1893 he returned to Berks county, and was stationed at Temple, until 1909, when he secured a position as stenographer for the Parish Manufacturing Company, of Reading, where he is still employed.

Mr. Romig married, July 12, 1890, Sarah Ellen Boyer, daughter of John H. and Elizabeth Boyer [see sketch elsewhere]. An only daughter, Lena B., brightens their home. In a social way Mr. Romig affiliates with the Odd Fellows, Mayflower Lodge No. 258, and with the Modern Woodmen of America, both at Cape May. He and his family are members of the Amity Lutheran Church, and, like his father, he votes the Republican ticket.

DETURCK-DETURK FAMILY. (I) Isaac DeTurk, the first American ancestor of this old established American family, was born in 1686. He landed at New York with his sister Esther about 1707, settled at Esopus and was among the settlers of Quassick Creek, Dutchess Co., N. Y., in 1709. But June 11, 1712, the Commissioners of Pennsylvania (province) issued a warrant to him for 300 acres of land out at a place called "Oley," of which locality this is the first mention. In this warrant he is mentioned as "late of Franklin-thal, in Germany." He was married to Maria Gerber (possibly in New York), who bore him three children: Catharine, who m. Abraham Levan; John, who m. Deborah Hoch or High; and Esther, who m. Abraham Bertolet. Maria (Gerber) DeTurk had been married previously to a Mr. Vemar, and had a daughter who m. a Mr. Bertolet. (V) Benjamin G. De Turck, son of Jacob and Esther (Goodhart), was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Oct. 12, 1829, and for fifty-one years lived on the old homestead. He was an agriculturist, and also engaged in the buying and selling of live stock. By his first wife, Susanna Hoch, daughter of Benjamin and Susanna (Kinsey) Hoch, he became the father of: Morris H., born Dec. 29, 1860; and Alice H., born Aug. 30, 1862, who married Frank Brown, and has the following children—Elsie, Susan, Emmett, Clayton B., George and Morris. Mr. De Turck married (second) Rachel Pyle, and two children were born of this union: Edwin P., born Nov. 5, 1871, who married Esther Wentzel; and Susan R. M., born Sept. 15, 1884.

(VI) Morris H. De Turck, son of Benjamin G. and Susanna (Hoch) De Turck, was born Dec. 29, 1860, on the old De Turck homestead in Exeter township, Berks county. This farm at one time belonged to the father of Daniel Boone, and is without doubt the birthplace of the distinguished pioneer. It consisted of more than 400 acres of good land, and on it in 1775 the elder Boone erected what was then the largest barn in Berks county. The story is told of him that he traveled on horseback all over the county, learning the dimensions of all the large barns, and then erected one larger than any other. This was standing for ninety-nine years, but in 1874 was replaced by a more modern as well as larger structure. The old one was so substantially built that it was necessary to undermine the walls in order to throw them down. Underneath the barn was a store house for fruit and grain. Close to the house is a never-failing spring of purest water. This farm came into the possession of the De Turcks in 1785, when it was purchased by Samuel De Turk, the great-grandfather of Morris H., and since that time it has remained in the possession of the De Turcks. The stone house was built in 1812 by Samuel De Turk, father of Jacob De Turck, grandfather of Morris H. George De Turck owned the farm for a few years, and then sold it to his brother Jacob, who continued to own it until his death. At that time it was purchased by his son Benjamin G. De Turck, who continued its owner as long as he lived. After his death, Aug. 8, 1892, his son Morris H. became the owner. The farm now contains 187 acres.

Morris H. De Turck now makes his home on the old Lynch farm in Union township, near Monocacy, which he purchased in 1901. It contains 212 acres, improved with a large stone house, surrounded by a well-kept lawn, besides two tenant houses, and a large Swiss barn, 48 x 108 feet. Mr. De Turck cultivates both his farms, and he frequently makes trips as far west as Iowa and Nebraska to purchase cattle and horses, which he disposes of in Berks and neighboring counties.

On Dec. 21, 1886, Mr. De Turck married Miss Lydia Alice Guldin, daughter of Washington and Lavina (Schmehl) Guldin, of Exeter township. To this union have been born two children: Morris G., born April 1, 1899, exactly one hundred years after the birth of his great-grandfather, Jacob De Turck, and on the same farm in Exeter township; and Ruth Susanna, born Nov. 28, 1902. Mr. De Turck and his family are members of the Schwartzwald Reformed Church, of which he was an official member until his removal from the parish in 1901.

(III) Abraham De Turk, son of John, was born March 3, 1752, and died Arpil 19, 1829. He married Anna Weiser, born April 11, 1755, and died June 20, 1829. Children born to Abraham and Anna were: (1) Abraham, born April 13, 1785, died Oct. 8, 1865. (2) Isaac, m. Maria Weiser, and they had one child, Elijah (who m. Mary Levan, and had Mary m. John Rahn and had Anna, Ellen, Isaac and James; Isaac m. Esther Schaeffer; James m. Marbara Kutz; Keziah m. Levi Merkel and had Sarah, who m. (VI) Abraham K. Deturck, Director of First National Bank of Oley and retired farmer residing at Friedensburg, was born in Oley township, on the Deturck homestead, near Friedensburg, on April 22, 1852, son of Daniel and Deborah (Knabb) Deturck. He was educated in the local public school and in the Oley Academy, and reared on a farm; and at the age of 30 years he engaged in carrying on farming operations on the homestead for himself, and he continued doing so in a very successful manner for near 20 years. In 1903 he built a fine two-story brick dwelling-house in the village of Friedensburg and since then he has been living there in retirement. He owns the superior homestead farm which comprises 204 acres, and is joint owner with his brother Ezra of several other fine farms in the township which are in a high state of cultivation. He assisted in organizing the First National Bank of Oley in 1907 and has since served as one of its directors. He is also a director of the Reading Hat Manufacturing Co.; and a trustee of the Union Cemetery at Friedensburg. He served as a school director of the township for four years. In politics he has been Republican. He and his family are members of the Friedens' Reformed Church. He is affiliated with the Freemasons at Reading, being a member of Lodge No. 62, and Reading Commandery No. 42, K. T.; also with the Minnehaha Lodge No. 154, K. of P., of Oley.

In 1881 Mr. Deturck was married (first) to Kate M. Bertolette (daughter of Jacob, of Oley), and after her decease (second) to Alice K. Herbein (daughter of Jacob Herbein and Susanna Knabb his wife), by whom he has two children: Daniel H. (graduate of Chicago Veterinary College, in practice at Birdsboro, Berks county); and Raymond (graduate of Keystone State Normal School in 1908).

(VI) Ezra K. Deturck, retired farmer residing at Friedensburg, was born on the Deturck homestead on Aug. 2, 1859, son of Daniel and Deborah (Knabb) Deturck. He attended the township school and the Oley Academy and was reared to farming until he became of age when he rented one of his father's farms adjoining the village, which comprises 128 acres and this he cultivated successfully until 1907 when he moved to Friedensburg. Upon the decease of his father in 1893, he became the owner of the farm; and in 1899 he erected a model barn.

In 1881, he was married to Alice Merkel, daughter of Levi Merkel, farmer of Oley; and they have four children: Eva M. (m. to Ammon Bieber); Deborah (m. to Horace Dry); Marion M., and Levi M.

(III) Philip DeTurk, son of John, was born April 30, 1757, died Nov. 10, 1815. (V) Daniel De Turck, son of Philip and Maria (Yoder), was born in Oley township Dec. 3, 1808, and died Dec. 25, 1881, aged seventy-three years, twenty-two days. He was a farmer all of his active life, and died just fourteen years after his retirement. In 1851 he built the present barn, one of the best in the township. The family cemetery, where his remains were interred, is on the old home farm. Mr. De Turck was twice married. On Nov. 15, 1831, he married (first) Catharine Levan (born Oct. 29, 1809, died March 12, 1833), daughter of Daniel Levan, and they had a son who was born dead. On Nov. 11, 1834, he married (second) Willi Levan (born Oct. 19, 1814, died Jan. 5, 1885), a sister to his first wife. They had three sons and two daughters, namely: A son that died in infancy; Naomi, born April 14, 1837, m. Gideon W. Hoch and had Clara (who died Oct. 24, 1886); Mahlon L. m. Susan K. (VI) Mahlon L. De Turck, son of Daniel and Willi (Levan), was born in Oley township, May 28, 1840. He was reared upon the farm one mile east of Friedensburg which belonged formerly to the Levan family, and began farming in 1868, following this occupation for twenty-five years. At the end of that time he retired and moved to Friedensburg, where he was living at the time of his death, thirteen months later, April 27, 1894, when he was aged nearly fifty-four years. He was very successful in his work, and became very well-to-do. In politics he was a Democrat, and for three years served as school director of his town. He and his family all belonged to Frieden's Reformed Church.

In 1867 Mr. De Turck was married to Susan K. Levan, daughter of Daniel H. and Hannah (Kauffman) Levan, and granddaughter of Jacob and Esther (Hoch) Levan, both of Oley township. This old homestead of the Levan family, now in the possession of the fifth generation to live there, is owned by Elizabeth, widow of Jacob Levan. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. De Turck: (1) Seth L. is mentioned in full below. (2) Chester, born in 1876, is a clerk in the P. L. Glase store. He married Hannah Kohler, born Dec. 20, 1874, who died Oct. 21, 1906, the mother of one son, Maurice. (3) Harry, born in 1880, lives in Oley township. He married, Oct. 19, 1907, Charlotte Schmeck. (4) Fredericka is at home. (5) Cyrus L. died in the sixth year of his age. (6) and (7) Twins died in infancy. Mrs. Susan K. De Turck resides in a beautiful home on Main street, Friedensburg. She has in her possession one of the largest German Bibles in the county, containing Biblical Calendars and old-time maps of the Holy Land. This is the old Levan Bible, and bears date 1748. She has another German Bible, with heavy wooden lids, printed in 1717, in Europe, and brought to America by Abraham Levan, the ancestor of this old French Huguenot family. Both Bibles contain old family records. The home which Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon L. De Turck built on their farm in 1886 is one of the most perfect in its appointments of any in this vicinity. It is a spacious mansion of sixteen rooms.

(VII) Seth L. De Turck, son of Mahlon L. and Susan K., is an extensive farmer on his father's and grandfather's farm, and was born there Jan. 29, 1869. He was early trained to farming, and this vocation he has followed since reaching man's estate. In the spring of 1893 he began farming on the old homestead, which he now owns, and which is a valuable farm in the heart of the fertile valley in Oley township. It consists of 184 acres of good arable land, well stocked, and his farm and home are always in first-class condition. He has seven horses and upward of thirty head of cattle. His milk is all sold to the creamery. Mr. De Turck is a man of fine physique, tall and well proportioned, with the clear, healthy skin which right living and sunshine win. He is highly respected in his community. In politics he is a Republican, and he was a delegate to the county convention when C. B. Cleaver, of Oley, was made county commissioner. He and his family attend Frieden's Reformed Church.

On Dec. 15, 1892, Mr. De Turck was married to Lillie Hartman, daughter of Levi and Mary Ann (Schaeffer) Hartman, and granddaughter of the late Capt. Henry Schaeffer, of Stonersville. Eight children have been born to them: Frieda, Carrie, Edna, Marie, Mahlon, Willi, Levi, and Lillian May (born July 5, 1908).

The old family burial ground is at the back of the house. It is large and surrounded by a fence. Family tradition says that the Indian burial ground began immediately to the northeast of this De Turck, Weiser and Manwiller burial ground. The Indian burial ground was also inclosed by a fence until 1895, when this was removed. Just across this meadow was an old Indian settlement, and there the last wigwam stood at the outbreak of the French and Indian war. Its last occupant had been fetched there by others of his race from the Albany township district, and he proved a very peaceable neighbor, often going for milk to Daniel Levan's. He was once asked the signification of the blossoming of one of the peach trees in the fall, and he replied "It means war." Three days later he was taken away.

(VI) Daniel P. De Turck, son of Daniel and Willi (Levan) and brother of Mahlon L., was born Dec. 4, 1851, and died Oct. 26, 1898, aged forty-seven years; he was buried at Oley Church. He was a lifelong farmer, owning a valuable farm that is now the property of his son, Charles P. He married Margaret Schollenberger, who resides with her son. They had children: Mary, who died in infancy; Charles P.; and Willi, who married Warren Matthias, a farmer at Manatawny.

(VII) Charles P. De Turck, son of Daniel P., and one of the prosperous young farmers near Griesemersville, in Oley, was born on the farm where he now lives June 2, 1878. He was reared under the parental roof, and when twenty-four years of age began farming for himself. He owns a fine farm of 140 acres. The present barn was built in 1866 by his grandfather; the house, which is an old landmark in the district, was a school building and the original structure was of logs; two additions have been made to it. Mr. De Turck keeps seven horses and twelve head of cattle. He belongs to Oley Castle, No. 119, K. G. E., and to Camp No. 480, P. O. S. of A., of Manatawny. In politics he is a Democrat.

On May 11, 1901, Mr. De Turck was married to Sallie Clouser, a daughter of Mahlon B. Clouser, of Griesemersville, and to this union have come two sons, Monroe C. and Daniel C.

PETER H. DUNKEL, a well known and highly respected citizen of Maiden-creek township, Berks county, who is living a quiet life on his farm, was born on the old Dunkel homestead in Maiden-creek township, July 28, 1840, son of John and Eliza (Hill) Dunkel.

Michael Dunkel, great-grandfather of Peter H., sold his farm in Richmond township in 1762, in which year he purchased and moved to the present homestead in Maiden-creek township, which had formerly been a Starr property and evidently a Penn grant. He had the following children: Jacob; George; John; Conrad; Peter; Maria, m. to Jacob Stoudt; one daughter, m. to Adam Weidehammer, and another m. to John Weidehammer.

Peter Dunkel, son of Michael, came into possession of the old homestead in 1800. Ten years before (1790) he married Magdalena Hoch, who bore him these children: George, who died aged thirty-three years; John; Elizabeth, m. to Abraham Hottenstein; Maria, m. to Jacob Reeser. Both daughters lived to be over eighty years old.

John Dunkel, father of Peter H., was a well-known farmer of Maiden-creek township, where he spent all of his life, and his death occurred Sept. 6, 1874, aged seventy-four years. He married Eliza Hill, daughter of Jacob Hill, and they had a family of six children, namely: Esther m. William S. Merkle, deceased, and had three children, Howard, Mary and Sallie; Sarah is the widow of John K. Huy, and had six children, John D., James, Fred, Susan, Mary and Sallie; Mary, deceased, m. Daniel B. Edelman, and had three children, George, Katie and Sallie; Hannah, deceased, m. William R. Bartlett, and had one child, Alvin; Ephraim died single aged fifty-six years; and Peter H.

Peter H. Dunkel was educated in the common schools of his native locality, and at the age of fourteen years contracted white swelling, from the effects of which he has suffered all of his life. He owns the old homestead farm, on which he resides, although he has it rented. Mr. Dunkel has never married. He still is a subscriber to the old Reading Adler, which has been a constant visitor to the Dunkel family since 1818, when Mr. Dunkel's grandfather first subscribed, it being taken by his father from 1837 to 1874, since which year Mr. Dunkel has taken it.

WILLIAM MORRIS, after living practically retired at his home, No. 1152 Cotton street, Reading, in which city he was long engaged in the grocery business, died June 24, 1908, and was buried in Aulenbach cemetery. Mr. Morris was born Nov. 10, 1835, in Robeson township, Berks county, son of David and Hannah (Cooper) Morris.

William Morris, great-grandfather of William of Reading, was a native of Wales, who came to this country in young manhood. It is traditional that he settled in Bucks county, and the following record in the court house would indicate that he was a property owner in Robeson township, Berks county: "On Sept. 16, 1787, William Morris and his wife Sarah transferred a water right to Enos Morris," it being also of record that he owned property in Douglass township, Montgomery county. Among others he had the following sons: Enos; Isaac, who had a son, Cadwalader; John, who had three children, John, Mordecai and Elizabeth; and Mordecai, who died unmarried.

Enos Morris, son of William, was born in Chester county, and with his three brothers, Isaac, John and Mordecai, came to Berks county, all except Mordecai settling in Robeson township. Enos Morris was a lifelong farmer, and was the owner of a good tract of land. He married Lydia Jackson, daughter of Ephraim and Mary Jackson, and to them were born children as follows: David, Eleanor, William, Mary, Enos, Rachel, Ephraim, Lydia, John and Sarah.

David Morris, father of William, was born May 1, 1781, in Robeson township, and died Nov. 6, 1850. He was a wheelwright and farmer cultivating a tract of fifty acres, and was an old-line Whig in politics, serving as justice of the peace for about eight years. He and his family were good Quakers, and he was beloved and esteemed by all who knew him. David Morris married Hannah Cooper, born Aug. 8, 1793, who died Jan. 26, 1867, daughter of William Cooper, of Chester county, and to them were born these children: Enos, born July 1, 1825, m. (first) Harriet Schlichter and (second) Rebecca Beard; Mary Ann, born Sept. 24, 1826, m. Mordecai Beard, whom she survives; Eliza died young; Sarah Jane died unmarried March 13, 18—, aged fifty-seven years; David and Allison, twins, are deceased; and William.

William Morris acquired his education in the district schools, after leaving which he learned the wheelwright's trade with his brother Enos, following this trade as a journeyman for two years at Lionville, Chester county. Later his mother returned to Reading, and young Morris went with her, working in that city for upward of a year at coachmaking for John Treat. He then removed to Seideltown, now Gibraltar. Here he carried on wheelwrighting for six years, and for ten years he was engaged in the same line at Birdsboro. In 1863 he enlisted for three months in Company I, 42d Pa. V. I., Capt. F. B. Kerns, of Birdsboro, his regiment going as far as Hagerstown, Md., engaged in reserve duty. In 1872 Mr. Morris returned to Reading and engaged in the grocery business at Sixth and Laurel streets, being associated with his brother Enos, and the firm of Morris & Co. continued for three years, when William Morris went into business for himself at the corner of Fifth and Laurel streets. Later he removed to Tenth and Muhlenberg streets, where he successfully continued in business in his own building until 1902, after which he was employed by R. Sindell, the well-known grocer at Sixth and Laurel streets. Ill health claimed him two years before his death, and he was obliged to give up active work.

In political matters Mr. Morris was a stanch Republican, and served as councilman of the First ward of Reading from 1880 to 1882. He was a member of Neversink Lodge, No. 514, I. O. O. F., of Birdsboro, with which he had been connected from 1857; Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 65, K. P.; Birdsboro Council, No. 37, Jr. O. U. A. M.; and Mt. Pleasant Council No. 37, O. of I. A. Mr. Morris was a consistent member of St. Peter's Methodist Episcopal Church, of Reading, to which his widow belongs.

Mr. Morris was twice married. In 1858 he wedded Mary A. Foreman, daughter of Frederick Foreman (whose wife was a Bechtel), of Gibraltar, Pa.; she died May 3, 1881, aged forty-five years, five months, twelve days. To this union were born the following children: Hannah Louisa, who died aged two years; Harriet Jane, deceased wife of William Embry, of Reading; Mary Alberta, wife of Cyrus Wertz; Enos, who married Louisa Reider, and lives in Reading; Ellen Rebecca, who married William Weidner, a barber of Reading; Harry, who died aged two years; and Carrie E., who died in infancy. Mr. Morris married (second) June 29, 1886, Ella Fox, daughter of George Fox, of Reading, who survives him.

S. JULIA HEINE is the proprietress of the Turkish Baths in the Colonial Building, Reading, Pennsylvania.

THOMAS F. ADAMS, now residing at No. 961 North Ninth street, Reading, was born in Perry township, Berks county, May 14, 1860, son of Simon and grandson of Jacob Adams.

Jacob Adams, the grandfather, was born in Windsor township (now Perry township), son of Peter and grandson of Anthony Adams. He became a well-known farmer. He married a Miss Goddner, and both are buried at Zion's Church cemetery. They had a family of sixteen children, all now deceased.

Simon Adams, son of Jacob and father of Thomas F., was born in Perry township. He became the owner of a farm of 140 acres which he cultivated. His wife, Sarah Luckenbill, was a daughter of Thomas Luckenbill, and their children were: Thomas F.; Cyrus and Simon live in Perry township; and Annie married Albert E. Smith.

Thomas F. Adams attended the schools of Perry township and the Reading business college one term. When eighteen years old he turned his attention to the carpenter's trade, and under the direction of his uncle Thomas Luckenbill, in Perry township, he became an able workman, and he continued with him for twenty-three years. At the end of that time he went to Fleetwood, and for four years engaged there in the hotel business, and then for one year lived retired. In 1900 he came to Reading, and since that time has been working at his trade as foreman.

Mr. Adams married Miss Ellen E. Hoffman, daughter of Joel and Susanna (Reber) Hoffman, and of the eight children born of this union, six are living: Wilson J. m. Hettie Mengel; Elwood m. Carrie Acker, and lives in Allentown; Sarah m. Robert Molley, and they live in Lebanon county; Cora m. Clarence Dougherty, and they reside at Upland, Delaware Co., Pa.; Benjamin enlisted in the U. S. Navy Sept. 27, 1907, and has been around the world; Mary is at home; Walter S. died Dec. 3, 1908, aged ten years, of typhoid fever; and Irvin C. died in infancy. While living in Perry township, Mr. Adams served as school director two terms, and also while living at Fleetwood held the same office one term. He is very popular in the Democratic party. He has been nominated (1909) on his party's ticket for prothonotary of Berks county, which in this county is equivalent to an election. He is a member of Camp No. 103 P. O. S. of A., of Fleetwood; Aerie No. 66, F. O. E., Reading; Carpenter's Union No. 492; and the Maccabees of Reading. With his family he attends the Reformed Church.

GEORGE L. MAST, an employe of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway, and a well-known man in Reading, where he is serving as an alderman, is American born, but of foreign ancestry.

The early home of the Mast family was in the Kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, where the great-grandfather of George L. was a prominent and influential man. He entered into negotiations to marry his son John to a very desirable girl there, but the son objected, following the dictates of his own heart and wedding a poor seamstress. In his turn, the son John became prominent and was given high office. On one of the great political issues of the day, however, he cast his lot with the people in opposition to the King, and was obliged to flee from Germany to America, leaving behind his little son, Jacob B., then two years old. On reaching the New World John Mast located at Stony Point, Rockland township, Berks county, Pa., where he lived with his eldest son John, who became extensively engaged in farming, and reared a large family. Among his children were George, Daniel and John.

Jacob B. Mast was born in Wurtemberg Oct. 24, 1826, and grew to manhood there. He became a good mechanic, and went to France, where in Alsace Lorraine he secured the position of building boss, retaining it three years. While there he married Elizabeth Lehman, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Lehman. Mr. Mast met an agent from the United States, who persuaded him to come to America. They entered into a contract, and Mr. Mast, his wife and one child, and about 400 others boarded a vessel for the United States, but the agent became stranded, and instead of coming to the United States, he landed the whole ship load of French and German emigrants at Maracaibo, Venezuela, and basely deserted them. The cocoanut palms and the blue sky afforded them their only shelter. Mr. Mast, his wife and child were taken into a Spanish doctor's family as servants. One of Mr. Mast's duties was to look after the water supply. Water was carried for general purposes from several miles away by means of large bottles strapped over the back of an ass. While performing this task he came to a sawmill operated by an American Consul named Taylor. Two Spaniards were sawing a log of wood, and were needlessly exhausting themselves through a lack of knowledge or want of energy to better the condition of their machinery. Mr. Mast asked for a file and filed their saw for them. Mr. Taylor then asked him if he could file a circular saw, and he replied that he could. He was immediately offered employment, and arrangements were made with the Spanish doctor. Mr. Mast easily acquired the Spanish language, and then went before the authorities and secured the freedom of all of his fellow passengers—many of whom had died of yellow fever, among them being Philip Lehman, a brother of Mrs. Mast. Under the guidance of Mr. Mast the value of the sawmill was greatly increased. He inaugurated several improvements so that the monthly output was greater than that of the whole previous year. Consul Taylor recognized his ability, and when the desire to reach his originally intended destination caused Mr. Mast to tender his resignation, he offered him for another year double salary, $100 in addition, and passage to New York. This offer was refused as Mr. Mast greatly desired to see his father and brother John who had come to America more than twenty years before and whom he had never really known. While in Maracaibo his family had been increased by the birth of a daughter, Hannah L. (said to be the first white child born there of European parents), and a son, James L. Mr. Mast and his family embarked in a condemned vessel that had laid along the coast for several years, and of which his wife and daughters Elizabeth and Hannah L. were the only female passengers. When about half way over, struggling with their battered vessel, a privateer who intended to rob them saw their condition and furnished them with good food and water. After ninety days they landed at New York, and from there went to Philadelphia, and thence by wagon to Stony Point. There they remained a short time, Mr. Mast following his trade at twenty-five cents per day and paying ten percent of his net earnings for the use of his tools. He then went to Lobachsville, in Pike township, where he lived about a year, walking to and from Pottstown, where he had secured work as a bridge builder with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway. After working seven days as a journeyman he was made boss bridge builder for the whole system. After he had built many bridges he was transferred to the car shops at Reading for the repairing and building of freight and passenger cars. In 1843 he moved his family to Reading and purchased his first home for $425. On Aug. 4, 1847, he became a naturalized citizen of the United States.

In the early fifties Jacob B. Mast entered the hotel business on Ninth street, where now is located the Orphanage of St. Paul's Catholic Church, and then, in order, to Ninth and Washington streets, Seventh and Penn streets, "Jefferson House" at No. 137 South Seventh street, Ninth and Laurel streets and at No. 835 Penn street. He next moved to No. 823 Walnut street and accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as lumber foreman, remaining in their employ until Aug. 16, 1880, when he died. In 1872 he was elected a director of the poor, in which office he rendered the poor, especially the children, great service. He was benevolent and kindly of heart, and was the benefactor of the needy. Mr. Mast became quite a linguist, speaking fluently English, Spanish, French and German. Of the twelve children born to him and his wife, four are living: Hannah L., who married John Bauman and has two children living, Albert G. and Ellen L.; James L., a printer at Slatington, and former editor of the Slatington Star, who served as first lieutenant in the Second U. S. Artillery, in the Civil war and was one of the "First Defenders"; George L.; and Ellen L., unmarried, who lives with her brother George L. Mrs. Elizabeth (Lehman) Mast was born April 9, 1818, and makes her home with her son George L. Jacob B. Mast helped to organize and build St. John's German Lutheran church, and was the building master.

George L. Mast was born May 12, 1858, in Reading, and was educated in the public schools, supplementing the knowledge there acquired by a course in the business college conducted by Chester N. Farr and D. B. Brunner. He then learned the trade of tinsmith under George W. Dauth, secured a position in the works of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and for thirty-one years was in the employ of that corporation. He was married Oct. 11, 1881, to Bertha Louise Smith, a teacher, and the daughter of Frederick Smith, a shoemaker. The children born of this union are as follows: Paul, born 1882, a machinist with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway; Albert F., born 1883, who holds a position similar to his brother's and like him is also married; James E., born 1891, who graduated in 1908 from the Reading high school, and is now a civil engineer; and Carl H., born 1892, a member of the class of 1909, Reading high school. Mr. Mast and his family belong to St. John's German Lutheran Church, Reading, and he served nine years in the vestry, and as an official in the Sunday-school. He belongs to Camp No. 212, P. O. S. of A.; and in its day was an active member of the Philomathean Literary Society.

Mr. Mast has always manifested much interest in political questions, and has taken an active part in local affairs. He is a believer in Democratic principles, and in 1891 was elected on that ticket to the common council. In February, 1904, he was elected alderman of the Ninth ward, for the term beginning May 1st of the following year, an office he has filled with great satisfaction to the constituents.

ALBERT W. KLINE, proprietor of the Union Boarding Stable, with barns at No. 721 Cherry street, Reading, was born at Red Lion, in Exeter township, Berks county, Sept. 29, 1876, son of Charles L. and Susan (Wanner) Kline.

Albert W. Kline, grandfather of Albert W., was born in Amity township, and died at Reading in 1859, when less than forty years of age, meeting an accidental death by an explosion of the old Iowa engine, at Seventh and Chestnut streets. He settled at Reading after his marriage to Angelina, daughter of Jacob Ludwig. They had the following children: Amanda; Henry; Emma, m. to Samuel Manmiller, of Exeter township; John; Frank, residing at Denver; Charles L.; William; Olivia, m. to Francis Moser, of Johnstown; and Albert W., four of the above surviving.

Charles L. Kline, father of Albert W., was born August 23, 1851, at Reading, and was eight years of age when his father died, after which he went to live with his uncle, Henry B. Kelley, at Greshville, in Douglass township. He continued to live there for five years and then went to Manayunk, where he drove a horse and cart at the Pencoyd Iron Works and later a street car on the old Ridge avenue line. He then came to Reading, and since then has been engaged in the horse business, maintaining a branding and sales stable at Wood and Cherry streets, since 1899. He carries from forty to fifty-five horses. Every spring he goes to Missouri, where he purchases from two to eight car loads and these he sells mainly in Schuylkill county, finding ready markets. In 1876 he married Susan Wanner, daughter of Jacob and Susan Wanner, and they have three children, namely: Albert W.; Chester, of California, and Minnie, at home.

Albert W. Kline obtained his education in the schools of Reading, which he attended until he was sixteen years of age, when he learned the harness-making trade with S. M. Hartman, of that city, remaining in his employ for four years. After this he formed a partnership with L. C. Strineger, under the firm name of the Reading Lumber Company, and a successful business was carried on for three years, when Mr. Kline withdrew from the firm. He then became traveling salesman for S. W. Van Note, of No. 754 Penn street, Reading, and had charge of Berks and surrounding counties, in the harness line, and continued to represent the above house for three years less two weeks. Mr. Kline then turned his attention to his present business, learning all the details from his father, and on June 21, 1907, he purchased the good will, stock and fixtures of Mahlon Geiger, who formerly occupied his present quarters. Mr. Kline has increased the efficiency of the business in every way. He keeps about forty horses, has all the equipments found in a first-class livery and enjoys an excellent trade.

On Sept. 3, 1904, Mr. Kline was married to Sadie Spotts, daughter of David Spotts, formerly of Birdsboro, but who later owned a farm in Exeter township. Mr. and Mrs. Kline have two children, Ruth E. and Thornton Jack.

CHARLES ALBRECHT, proprietor of "Friendship Hotel," Reading, was born in that city Nov. 24, 1873, son of Isadore and Mary Albrecht. He spent all his boyhood days in the city, and was educated in the parochial school of St. Paul's Catholic Church. He commenced working with White & Albrecht, plasterers, remaining about one year, then entering Hendel's hat factory, and before he was twenty he learned the painter's trade. This he followed for five years, and the year following was employed as a core maker in the Reading Iron Company (Scott Foundry). In 1894 he started in the hotel business at Ninth and Oley streets, being one of the youngest men in Berks county to take out a license. For two years he conducted the "Imperial Hotel," and in June, 1906, Mr. Albrecht assumed charge of the "Friendship Hotel" at No. 1100 North Tenth street, and this he has since conducted with great success. He has fifteen pleasant rooms, and the guests are uniform in their praise of the courteous treatment given them.

Mr. Albrecht is a member of the Knights of St. John; Foresters of America; Aerie No. 66, Fraternal Order of Eagles; Mountain Home Association; Mt. Penn Family Circle; Marion Fire Company; and the Commercial Club. He and his family are active in St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

In 1893 Mr. Albrecht was married to Mary Kulp, daughter of George and Sarah Kulp, of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Albrecht have had five children, namely: Charles, Lillie, John, Philip and Paul, of whom Lillie and Philip died young. Mr. Albrecht is a self made man, and has met with great success in his undertakings, being now the owner of considerable real estate. He stands well in his community, and is very popular with those who know him best.

F. PALMER-PORONER, of Reading, was born in Paris, France, Oct. 6, 1875. He is a graduate of the Paris Sorbonne, with the degree of B. A., and also spent a year at Margate, England, where he became proficient in the English language. He is a fine linguist, being a fluent writer and speaker in both English and German as well as his native French.

On Nov. 27, 1893, Mr. Poroner sailed from Nantes, France, for America, and settled at once in Reading. He was first employed in Louis Kremp's real estate office, and remained there until July 2, 1896. He then, after a month's vacation, took charge of the Wingate Collection Agency, which he conducted for several months. In April, 1897, he was engaged by the Executive committee inspecting the various building associations which had claims against the Kremp estate. These numbered about twenty-five and Mr. Poroner appeared as an expert witness before the Arbitration court. While these legal contests were going on, Mr. Poroner was made secretary of fifteen building associations, and to facilitate their liquidation invested some $2,000,000 of their money in 500 houses and hundreds of city lots. Mr. Poroner's work in this connection was more than satisfactory and led to his establishing himself in the real estate business. He is now one of the well known men in that line in Reading, and is doing well with his office located at No. 606 Court street. He has a seat on the Board of Trade. He belongs to St. Peter's Catholic Church, and hence is naturally found among the members of the Catholic and Benevolent Social Union. He also belongs to the Knights of Columbus.

REUBEN GOODHART, one of Reading's venerable citizens, who enjoys the distinction of being the oldest ex-chief of police in the United States, is a native of Reading, born Oct. 18, 1818.

His paternal grandfather was John Goodhart, a farmer and miller in Robeson township. He and his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Hottenstein, were both members of the German Reformed Church, and in politics John Goodhart was a Democrat. They had eight children, John; Joshua; William; Barbara; Hettie; Susan; Jacob and Mary.

Jacob Goodhart, son of John, was born in Exeter township, and was there given a good common school education. Early in life he learned to make shoes, and when twenty-one years old established himself at Reading, where the rest of his life was spent carrying on his trade. He married Miss Mary Beidler and they had fifteen children, fourteen of whom lived to maturity. The father and the mother were devout members of the Reformed Church.

Reuben Goodhart, eldest child of Jacob and Mary, attended the common and subscription schools of Reading and while still in his teens learned to follow his father's trade of shoemaking. He gave his whole attention to this work for twenty years, but at the end of that time gave it up and became baggage master for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company. Later he served for fifteen years as a railroad police officer. He was also at one time elected chief of police for the city, filling that position for several years. In 1880 he was made tipstaff at the Berks county court house, and has held that office ever since. In spite of his advanced age, he is still enjoying unimpaired faculties, and is as active as many men much younger than he. In 1840 Mr. Goodhart was married to Miss Elizabeth Bright, and they have had four children, Frederick, Reuben, Charlotte and Ellis. In religion the family are connected with the German Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Goodhart has been a lifelong Democrat. He has also been for many years a member of the I. O. O. F., and joined Montgomery Lodge in 1845. He is now the only surviving member of that lodge, having lived to pay the death claim of every other man on its rolls. He also belongs to the K. P. and for fifteen years was treasurer of his lodge. Mr. Goodhart is naturally very well known in Reading from his long residence there, and is held in universal esteem.

Reuben Goodhart (2), son of Reuben, was engaged in the produce business in Reading, where he died in 1886. He was buried in Aulenbach's cemetery. His widow, whose maiden name was Mary Schell, now resides at No. 431 North Ninth street, with her son Reuben D. To this union were born six children, as follows: Amanda, Albert, Annie, Reuben D., William and Charles.

Reuben D. Goodhart, son of Reuben (2), and grandson of the former chief of police, was born in Reading in 1870. He attended the public schools, and after obtaining a good common-school education learned the trade of painter and paper-hanger with H. A. Halbeisen, with whom he remained four years. He then spent eight years as a journeyman, after which he engaged in business at his present location. He has built up a good trade, and has met with success, due to his upright business methods and his artistic workmanship.

Mr. Goodhart married Sarah A. Smith, daughter of Aaron Smith. Four children were born to this union, as follows: Arthur, Lewis, Elsie and Reuben, Jr. In politics Mr. Goodhart is a Democrat, and in 1908 he was elected as assessor for the Eleventh ward. He is a member of the Hampden Fire Company and Northeastern Democratic Association. His religious connection is with St. Luke's Lutheran church. Mr. Goodhart is well-known and popular.

JOHN SPANGLER, of Reading, who died Dec. 20, 1907, at No. 211 South Second street, was born in Switzerland, Dec. 8, 1832, son of Ulrich and Margureta (Abultzchuser) Spangler, who lived and died in Switzerland. They had six children, Jacob; Ulrich; Heinrich; Gotlieb; John and Susan. The parents were members of the Dutch Reformed Church.

In 1860 John Spangler embarked on the sailing vessel "Frotingham," for New York, and after a voyage of thirty-two days, landed at Castle Garden. He had learned shoemaking in Switzerland, and for the first six months remained in New York City working at his trade. He then spent a year in Schenectady, N. Y., similarly employed, and another at Syracuse. Meantime the Rebellion had broken out, and in 1863 Mr. Spangler enlisted in the 3d N. Y. Light Artillery, under Captain Kelsey. He served from that time until the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged by general orders. He was brave and fearless and had a most creditable record. His health suffered ever after from the effects of his military experience, as he not only contracted asthma but was permanently injured by a fall from his horse, when he struck on his neck. On returning to civilian life he settled in Geneva, N. Y., where he opened a shoe shop and store, and remained there until 1887. He then sold out and moved to Philadelphia, but remained there only a short time before settling permanently in Reading, where he continued in the shoe business as before.

Mr. Spangler was married in 1866 to Miss Anna von Haven, and they had six children, only three of whom are living: John, Frank and Jennie. Mr. Spangler was formerly a member of the I. O. O. F., but of late years severed his connection with the organization. In politics he was always a good Republican.

JOHN CARLANCE, of Reading, was born in Caserta, Italy, Oct. 12, 1856, and until he came to America was a day laborer.

Mr. Carlance's first experience was anything but encouraging. Landing at Castle Garden in 1883, he was at once employed by a railroad contractor and sent to Philadelphia, where he worked for seventeen days with out receiving any pay for it, and with very little food. But he had the courage of youth, and, undismayed, sought other work, which he soon secured on public works. He was thus engaged for several years, and being both industrious and provident, he accumulated some money and was able to take life a little more easily. Meantime he had become quite familiar with the English language and had no difficulty in getting employment as a foreman of a construction gang. His first months, after leaving Philadelphia, were spent at Limerick and Pottsville, Pa., but since 1884 he has remained permanently in Reading. He became in time an agent for furnishing laborers to the contractors of the different railroads, and at present supplies men for Nolan & Bros., general contractors on railroad work. He has charge of from fifty to five hundred men. He furnishes shelter and provisions for the men, as well as providing medical attendance when needed and being very well adapted for his work, has produced unusually good results.

In 1901 Mr. Carlance was united in marriage to Mary, daughter of Joseph Rosline, and two children have been born to them, as follows; Nicholas, Sept. 19, 1902; and Lucy, Jan. 8, 1905. Both parents belong to the Catholic Church. Mr. Carlance took out his naturalization papers in 1904, and joined the ranks of the Republican party.

CHARLES F. HEILMAN, a veteran of the Civil war, residing in Reading, is a German by birth, but from early childhood has lived in America. He was born in Wurtemberg, in 1845, son of John B. Heilman, for many years one of the most respected residents of Reading.

John B. Heilman followed the calling of a shepherd in Germany, and remained in that country for a long time after his marriage. In 1852 he came to America to better his fortunes, and as he knew no one here, and had no special objective point, upon landing in New York, he went with a Mr. Haak, whom he had met on the boat, and who was going to Reading. Soon after his arrival in that city he secured employment in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and remained with that company for a period of forty years, an unusual and honorable record. He made one trip back to his native home in Germany. John B. Heilman died May 10, 1903, aged eighty-five years. His wife, whose maiden name was C. Frederika Sturgzboch, had died many years before, Feb. 16, 1888, and both are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Their children were as follows: William T., a retired cigar manufacturer, residing with his sister, the widow of Judge Bruckman; Charles F.; Mark G., who is in the cigar business in Pottstown; John B., Jr., of Hot Springs, Ark.; and Caroline H., who married the late Judge George W. Bruckman.

Charles F. Heilman was seven years old when his parents came to Reading, and all of his education was received in American schools. After leaving the Reading public schools he learned cigarmaking with Charles Breneiser, remaining with him until the time of the Civil war. In 1864, at the age of nineteen he enlisted in Company E, 205th Pa. V. I., under Capt. William Walter, and during his term of service he was in the battles of Fort Steadman and Petersburg. He was discharged at Alexandria, Va., and mustered out at Harrisburg. Returning to Reading he spent three years in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, as a molder, but at the end of that time he gave that trade up, and again took up cigarmaking, at which he has continued to work ever since. At present he is employed by the Yocum Brothers.

Mr. Heilman married Miss Ellen Nuss, daughter of Charles and Sarah (Rowe) Nuss. A family of six children has been born to this union, namely: Sadie, wife of Harry German, residing at No. 941 Washington street, Reading; John, employed at the Perkiomen Brick Plant; Maude E., at home; Harry, a cigarmaker by trade and a musician who is well-known locally; Luther, a musician, who married Miss Ada Geist; and Carrie, at home. The family reside at No. 115 North Ninth street, Reading. Mr. Heilman as an old soldier naturally is connected with the G. A. R., a member of Post No. 76, and he is also an Odd Fellow, belonging to Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 518.

ALFRED BORDES, Reading, Pa., is a native of France, born in 1849. He received his education in the schools of his native country and when only eighteen years of age enlisted in the French army. He was wounded in battle, and still bears the scar of the bullet between his thumb and forefinger on his left hand.

Mr. Bordes has always been engaged at his present occupation and it is doubtful if he has a superior in his line in this section. When still a lad, wishing to see this country, he sailed from France, landing in New York City in 1875. There he remained a short time, going thence to Philadelphia, P., securing employment at the best hotels. In 1878 he was made chef at the "Aldine Hotel," and was the first chef at Willow Grove, Philadelphia, also being employed at the best mountain and sea-shore resorts. He came to Reading in 1898, and since that time has been employed with W. B. Krick, proprietor of Bissinger's Café.

Mr. Bordes was married to Miss Rosa Levan, daughter of William B. Levan, of Reading, and to this union one child has been born, Raymond, who is attending school. Mr. Bordes was the organizer and first president of the Cooks' Association, at Philadelphia.

JOHN BABST, a well-to-do citizen of Reading, Pa., who has been living retired at his home since 1896, is a native of this city, born April 8, 1842, son of Adam and Margaret (Exmoyer) Babst.

Adam Babst was born in Bavaria, Germany, and while in his native country followed gardening. He came to America in the fall of 1841, and remained at Philadelphia a few weeks, before going to Reading. He started the vineyard of Mr. John Fair, who kept a wine house on Penn street, below Seventh, and then bought six acres of land at the foot of Mt. Penn, where he started a vineyard. Mr. Babst died at this place in 1847, when about fifty years of age, while his wife passed away in her sixty-eighth year, both being buried at the Alsace Church, they being Lutherans in their religious belief.

John Babst, the only child of his parents, attended the school situated at the corner of Tenth and Washington streets, and early in life learned the hatter's trade, following this occupation for twenty-five years. He then went to the Philadelphia & Reading shops, where he was employed in different departments for a period of fourteen years, retiring in 1896. He now spends his time on his fine property left him by his mother, most of which he has since sold for building lots, although he still possesses a desirable tract. The view from these grounds is very beautiful and it is a charming place for a home. Mr. Babst erected his present residence in 1863, at No. 331 Lombard street, and an interesting incident concerning the tearing down of the old home was the finding, by Mr. Babst, of a string of unique brass beads. These beads must have been wrought by an Indian, skilled in such workmanship. Mr. Babst is a member of the Odd Fellows, No. 158, and a charter member of the Veteran Firemen's Association, joining the Rainbow Fire Co., in 1860. In politics Mr. Babst is a Democrat, and he has served his ward, the Ninth, as a member of the Council. He is religiously connected with the Alsace Church.

Mr. Babst married Lovina, daughter of Jacob Meitzer, a farmer in Lehigh county, and to this union there were born: Catherine, deceased, who was the wife of John Frederick, had two children, Charles and John; Margaret, the wife of Lewis C. Hohl, a policeman of the Ninth ward, has one daughter, Emma; Emma, the wife of William R. Harbster, has one daughter, Helen Irene; Elizabeth, the wife of William A. Winter, has two children, Nora and Howard; and John J., a cigar maker, is single. "

GERHARD LAUTER, for thirty years the owner and manager of the "Madison House" in Reading, was born in Baden-Baden, Germany, June 15, 1829, son of Philip and Paulina (Vogel) Lauter.

Philip Lauter was a shoemaker by trade, but also owned a small farm which he operated, and a vineyard from which he made and sold wine. He was quite a prominent man in his native town, and bore a good reputation for character and abilty. He and his wife died in the Fatherland, he in 1858, and she in 1850, both devout Catholics. They had five children: Charles, Joseph, Gerhard, Volborga and Martha, the last named the deceased wife of Mr. Shultheiz, of Rochester, New York.

Gerhard Lauter came to America at the age of seventeen, landing on June 3, 1847, at Castle Garden, after a voyage of fifty-three days on a French sailing vessel named the "Carolina." The passage was a very rough one, with two weeks of steady storm. The ship creaked and cracked until the passengers, giving up all hope, thought every moment their last, while one of Mr. Lauter's companions, Joseph Yeager, had a very narrow escape from being washed overboard. Gerhard Lauter had learned shoemaking from his father, and when he reached New York he followed his trade there for a short time, and spent some months similarly employed in Trenton, N. J. In April, 1848, he came to Reading, and was engaged there in making shoes for four years, but at the end of that time, in response to frequent letters from an uncle, Felix Lauter, he joined the latter in Rochester, N. Y., and was employed there for the next three years.

In 1855 Mr. Lauter returned to Reading and worked in Mr. Felix's shoe store, making women's shoes, and then, abandoning shoemaking entirely, he went into business for himself. Mr. Lauter's first venture was the purchase of bottling works, for putting up carbonated drinks, and he succeeded so well that he was encouraged to buy the bottling establishment of Mr. Philipson, which was on a much larger scale than his first plant. He conducted this in company with Gottlieb Byerly for three years, when he sold out to his partner, and in 1867 he started in the hotel business. He was first located at the old "Borrell" place on Penn street, above Seventh, and after a year in these quarters he built in 1868 the "Madison House." It was ready for occupancy in March, 1869, and for a period of thirty years from that date he conducted that popular hostelry. He then sold out to the Deppen Brewing Company. This was in 1896, and since that date he has been living in retirement. Mr. Lauter has served the municipality and has a splendid record as an honorable and efficent police officer, having filled that position for six years. He has always voted the Democratic ticket, since his naturalization in 1858.

Mr. Lauter was twice married. In 1854 he married (first) Miss Catherine Rebholtz, of Reading, who was born in Germany, the daughter of Michael Rebholtz, who died in Reading, at the age of 101 years. In his day Michael Rebholtz was known as a noted cattle drover of Reading. To the union of Mr. Lauter and Catherine Rebholtz were born thirteen children, six of whom are deceased, as follows: Peter, Charles, Katie, William, Clara and Francis. The others are: Mary, the widow of Hayward H. Heckman; Amelia, married to William Wilson; George, married to Miss Annie Hoffert; Annie, married to Richard Coombs; Louisa, married to George N. Jacobi; Joseph, married to Miss Bertha Grookett; and Kate, who first married John Blessing, and later married Charles G. Boyer, of Reading. The mother of these children died in 1877. On Sept. 28, 1886, Mr. Lauter married (second) Miss Sophia Fleishute Reith, daughter of Christian and Elizabeth Reith, of Pottsville, Schuylkill Co., Pa. They have had four children, as follows: Leo, a linotype operator, employed on the Reading Eagle; Albert, also a linotype operator, and employed on the same paper; Ada, and Helena. Mr. and Mrs. Lauter and their children are Catholics in their religious faith, and are people highly esteemed in the community. The family home is at No. 15 South Second street, Reading.

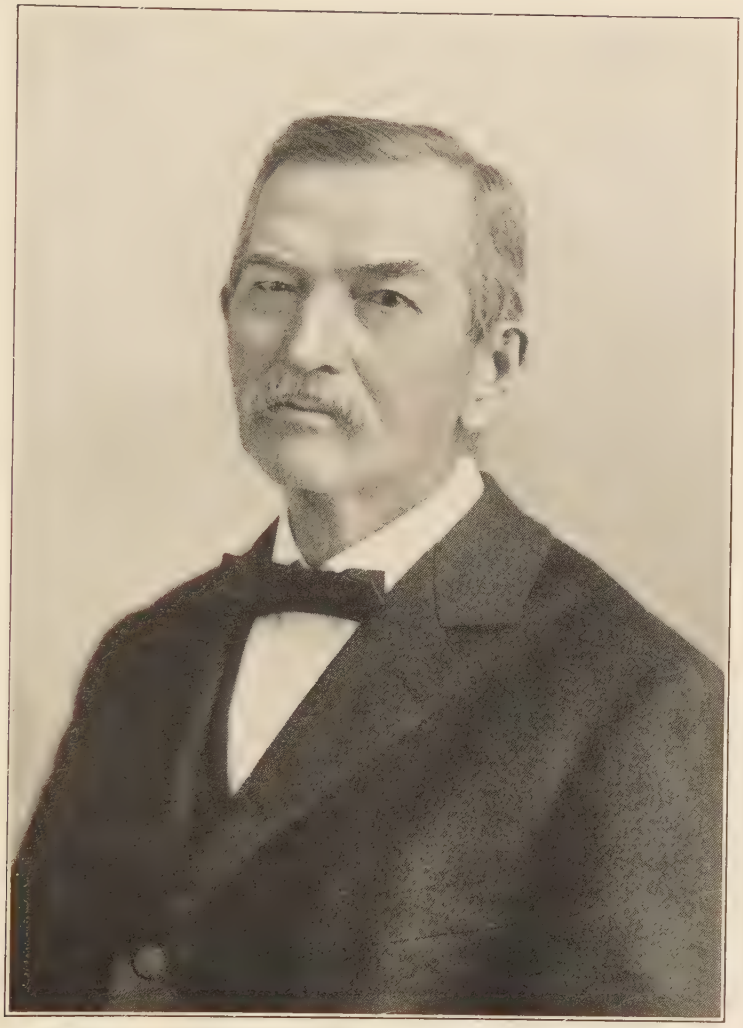
HENRY E. KEELER, of Reading, was born in Montgomery county, Pa., Nov. 24, 1859, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Heist) Keeler. During his earlier years he was a student in the county schools and then went to Trappe Seminary, which was conducted at that time by Prof. Rambles. When he was ready to choose a trade, he decided upon that of painting and paper hanging, but after working in that line for several years, he abandoned it, and for a time was clerk in a shoe store at Royersford.

Mr. Keeler's connection with Reading began when he established himself at No. 624 Laurel street, opening a restaurant there which he conducted successfully for a period of seven years. This property is still in his possession but since July, 1904, he has rented it and devotes his own time to managing the South Market Restaurant for George Albright. As a caterer Mr. Keeler has few equals in Reading, is thoroughly up to-date and conducts a first-class restaurant.

Mr. Keeler's wife was Miss Ida Boas; she is a daughter of Henry Boas, a resident of Reading. Their only child is a daughter, Edith, a graduate from the Girls' high school, of Reading, who is now making teaching her profession.

On political issues Mr. Keeler has always been a faithful supporter of the Democratic party, and has been quite active in its ranks, serving three terms as ward assessor. In the spring of 1906 he was appointed school controller for the Second ward, to fill an unexpired term, and is well qualified for such a position, as educational questions have always received his close attention and interest. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

DAVID STEPHAN, deceased, of Reading, was of German birth, a native of Baden, and came to this country early in life, in 1817.



Gerhard Lauter

Before coming to America Mr. Stephan had learned the trade of a carpenter and was a thoroughly competent workman. After reaching this country he located in Reading, and before long was in business for himself as a contractor and builder, becoming one of the most prosperous men in his line, and holding a prominent place among the other contractors of the city. He was married May 11, 1856, to Julia A., daughter of William and Barbara (Zerby) Berger, and four children were born to their union, viz.: Augustus, who married Miss Rebecca Morrison; Ida, Mrs. Albert Mercer; Alice, Mrs. John Kline; and Lewis, who married Miss Ella Schuman. Mr. Stephan's religious faith was that of the Lutheran Church, and his adherence in political matters was given to the Democratic party. He was a man held in general esteem, and his death was felt as a personal loss to many beyond the family circle.

Mrs. Stephan was one of six children born to her parents, viz.: Jonathan; William and Gerard, who were both soldiers in the Civil war; Julia; Sarah; and Susan. Both Mr. and Mrs. Berger died at Millersburg, Berks county, he at the age of ninety-six and she at seventy-eight, and their remains lie in the cemetery in that town. Mr. Berger was a carpenter and journeyman by trade. He and his wife were members of the Reformed Church. Mrs. Stephan owns a comfortable property, including two houses in Oakland, a suburb of Reading.

FERDINAND WINTER, who for many years was a well-known business man of Reading, and a member of the leather manufacturing firm of Winter & Getz, is now living retired at his home No. 900 Centre avenue in this city. Mr. Winter's birth occurred in 1838, in Austria, son of Anton and Marie (Ansorge) Winter.

After receiving a good education in the schools of his native country, Mr. Winter learned the process of tanning chamois and other fine hides for glove and shoe purposes, and followed this occupation as a journeyman for eleven years in Bavaria. On Aug. 28, 1867, he emigrated to America, landing at Castle Garden, on the steamship "Northern Light," and settled in Philadelphia for two and one-half years, after which he came to Reading and entered into a partnership with Anton Blatz, who had established, a short time previously, a small tannery. This partnership existed under the name of Blatz & Winter from 1869 to 1875, when Mr. Winter purchased the business, and admitted as a partner Ferdinand Getz, they carrying on the business on the Canal street site of the Pennsylvania railroad, which line purchased the plant in order to clear their right of way. The firm then located on the property now owned by the Ferdinand Getz Sons Co., where they continued until 1904, in which year Mr. Getz died and Mr. Winter retired from the business. The reputation that Mr. Winter made for his goods was far reaching and much of the leather passed inspection and sold in Philadelphia, New York and other large cities as imported leather, but in fact this was not doing his product justice, as it was in many instances superior to the imported goods. He also exported to foreign countries, including Germany, France and England. Mr. Winter is a great traveler, and in addition to traveling many miles in America, he has crossed the Atlantic thirteen times, and each time visited his old home. Mr. Winter is a director in the Keystone National Bank.

In 1874 Mr. Winter was married to Clara Kuchler, and the following children were born to this union: Edward, at home; Martha, deceased; Louis, manufacturer's agent for a German patented fountain pen with offices in the Baer building; Rose, Maria and Louisa, at home; and two that died in infancy. Fraternally Mr. Winter is connected with Teutonia Lodge, F. & A. M., Excelsior Chapter, Reading Commandery and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

WILLIAM W. LESHER, proprietor of the "Washington Avenue House" at Reading, was born in Perry township, Berks county, Sept. 3, 1873. The Lesher family have been represented in Berks county through several generations.

Abraham Lesher, the great-grandfather of William W., lived at Moselem, and owned a number of farms in the territory now embraced in Perry township, being one of the very rich men of his day. Through the Hunters, the iron masters at Moselem, whom he served as surety, he lost about $40,000, and this preyed on his mind until he committed suicide by shooting himself. He was of Irish descent, and physically was a man of fine proportion, being tall, broad-shouldered and of dignified bearing. His children were: Abraham K.; Jonas, who lived in Lebanon county; Mrs. Diana Motes, of Richmond township, Berks county; Mrs. Knerr, of Lehigh county; and Mrs. Kemp, who with her husband and family moved West.

Abraham K. Lesher, son of Abraham, was born in Perry township, in 1810, and he died Nov. 26, 1874, and is buried at St. Peter's Church in Richmond township, of which he and his family were Reformed members. He was a millwright by trade, and also carried on farming, owning a tract of 140 acres of land located at Moselem Bridge in Perry township. He married Catharine Moyer, born Feb. 15, 1815, and died May 6, 1884. Their children were: Amos, of Richmond township, who died in Reading, where for a few years he had been conducting a hotel; Reuben, a farmer near Gernand's Church, in Ontelaunee township; Ephraim, who was drowned in Reading in June, 1873; John M. (1846-1905), of Kutztown, whose widow, Malinda Kline, now lives at Kutztown with her son, Alvin K. (her children were Alvin K., Agnes, Walter and Laura); Samuel, who died in Perry township, Dec. 31, 1880; and Alfred M.

Alfred M. Lesher, son of Abraham K., was born in Perry township, Dec. 14, 1853. He attended the common schools and later the Normal School at Kutztown. He early learned the duties of a farmer, and this was his work until his twentieth year, when he became engineer at Moselem furnace ore mines, where he remained eight years. The next year he worked on the railroad in Lehigh county, and then for twenty-two years he followed huckstering, buying his produce in Richmond and surrounding townships. In 1905 he came to Reading, and he has since been employed by the Reading Railway Company as an engineer. In politics Mr. Lesher is a Republican, and for eighteen years he was committeeman of Richmond township. In 1898 he was elected prison inspector of Berks county, and after serving in this office for three years he became a candidate for county commissioner, and at several county conventions showed considerable strength. He still owns a nice property of six acres in Richmond township. On Feb. 24, 1872, he was married to Ellen M. Kline, daughter of Nathan R. and Sallie (Merkel) Kline. To this union have been born children as follows: Jeremiah, a policeman of Reading; William W.; Edwin K., who lives on the homestead in Richmond township, where he conducts the "Pennsylvania Hotel," established by his father in 1902; Sallie, widow of William Helbert, of Reading; and Annie, who married George D. Heffer, and lives at Reading.

William W. Lesher was reared at Moselem, attending the public schools of that district. He clerked in Shepel & Stillwagon's general store at Moselem for one year, and the next year he worked on their farm connected with the furnace. He was licensed to teach school by Prof. W. M. Zechman, county superintendent, in 1890, and he taught his first term at Shoemakersville, and his second at the Birch Hill school at Mohrsville. He then went to Lancaster, Pa., where he clerked in Capt. John Britton's hotel for a year, after which he came to Reading and for two years was bar clerk for his brother, and for two years for H. H. Christinson. Returning to Lancaster he worked for Peter G.

Ammon, at the "Franklin House" for one year, after which he returned again to Reading. In the spring of 1899 he engaged in the hotel business for himself at Eighth and Oley streets, conducting the "Brunswick Hotel" for five and one-half years. In 1904 he took charge of his present place, the "Washington Avenue House," where he has been very successful.

Mr. Lesher is a Democrat, and he has served the Twelfth ward as treasurer, and has otherwise shown a keen interest in the welfare of his party. He is a member of Vigilance Lodge No. 194, I. O. O. F.; Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.; Independent Order Progressive Americans, No. 1; Twentieth Century Quakers, No. 2; Bavarians, all of Reading.

On Aug. 8, 1898, Mr. Lesher married Emma S. Berstler, daughter of Henry and Mary (Machmer) Berstler, the former a blacksmith in Maiden-creek township. Her grandparents were Henry and Mary (Bossler) Berstler. Mr. Lesher has always been pardonably proud of the fact that his first examination for a teacher's certificate was passed when he was but fifteen years of age—two years under the legal age for teachers—and the superintendent could not sign it until he had attained the required age. Mr. Lesher owns his comfortable home at No. 959 North Ninth street, Reading.

AUGUST SCHNEIDER, a well known business man of Reading, Pa., where he has extensive brewing interests, was born July 16, 1855, in Wurtemberg, Germany, son of Antone and Caroline (Houey) Schneider.

Mr. Schneider learned the brewing business with his father in his native country, and worked there at his trade for seven years, and was a brewmaster in Zurich, Switzerland. He came to this country May 1, 1880, and for four years resided at Philadelphia, where he had first located. He then went to Carlisle, to accept a position as brewmaster, which he successfully filled for two years, and then returned to Philadelphia, where he was employed by the Bergner Engle Brewing Company. The succeeding three years he was employed as brewing master in Bethlehem, Pa., and from there went to Altoona, Pa., where he served in the same capacity for Martin Helle, at the old Hickory Brewery. After four years with this firm he went to Millville, where he was engaged as brewing master for the Millville Enz Brewing Company. Feeling that he had mastered all the details of the business with which he had been connected for so many years, Mr. Schneider decided to enter the brewing field on his own account, and subsequently organized the American Brewing Company, of which he was manager for four years, at the end of which time he went to Latrobe, Pa., and there established the Loyalhanna Brewing Company, in partnership with Philip Herrmann and others. This became a large corporation. He served as superintendent and general manager of this company until coming to Reading, April 8, 1907, when he purchased the Stocker estate, now called Fairview Brewery, as well as the Augustiner Brewery, where the famous Augustiner Beer is brewed, a beverage that has since won great popularity. Mr. Schneider's son, Joseph A., is the brewmaster, and is a man of capability, being a graduate of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology, Chicago, as well as having much practical experience. He is consulted by his father in all business matters, and by his sound judgment and aptitude of mind has made himself an invaluable man in the managerial affairs of Fairview Brewery. Since the Schneiders have taken charge of the brewery they have built up a large business, and have increased the value of the property by $40,000, making many improvements, including the building of the bottling house, a structure 40x64 feet in dimensions. Mr. Schneider resides at No. 1700 North Eleventh street, which was formerly the Stocker home.

Fraternally Mr. Schneider is a member of the B. P. O. E., No. 905, of Latrobe; and the F. O. E., No. 1188, also of Latrobe. Since coming to Reading he has joined the Reading Lodge of Elks, No. 115, and Aerie No. 66, F. O. E. He has also become a member of the Bavarians, the Liederkranz, the Family Circle and other social clubs. He is a member of the German Catholic Church of Reading, and belongs to the Knights of St. George, which he was instrumental in founding in Latrobe before coming to this city.

On Jan. 19, 1878, Mr. Schneider was married to Louisa Herzog, who was born April 7, 1856, daughter of Andrew and Caroline (Bachele) Herzog, of Baden, Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Schneider were married prior to coming to this country. Their twelve children were as follows: Alfred A., born Dec. 7, 1878, died Feb. 14, 1904; Otto E., born Dec. 7, 1879, died in infancy; Louise, born Dec. 28, 1880, married John V. Schissler, of Latrobe, and they have one daughter, Louisa Augusta; Frank J., born Dec. 26, 1883, died March 28, 1884; Joseph A., born Jan. 24, 1885; Amelia C., born April 7, 1887, died Feb. 16, 1889; Matilda K., born Sept. 29, 1889; Charles F., born Oct. 29, 1891; Aloysius A., born April 7, 1894, died Sept. 9, 1898; Wilhelmina P., born March 2, 1897; Julius H., born July 23, 1899; and Stella M., born Feb. 9, 1902.

GEORGE B. MOYER, of Reading, was born Jan. 10, 1863, at Schuylkill Haven, Pa., a son of George and Mary (Stamm) Moyer.

Isaac Moyer, grandfather of George B., lived and died at Schuylkill Haven. He had the following children: Jacob, of Fairmount Locks, Philadelphia, Pa.; Henry, of near Hamburg, Pa.; Adam, deceased, formerly of Schuylkill Haven; George, father of George B.; Ellen, deceased, wife of David Eck, Reading; Clementine, wife of a Mr. Strasser, near Milton, Pa.; Adaline, wife of Jacob Casper, of Hamburg, Pa.; and Emma, wife of Henry Casper, of Hamburg.

George Moyer, father of George B., lived and died at Schuylkill Haven. Like his father he was a boatman. He married Mary Stamm, daughter of David Stamm, and they had one son, George B.

George B. Moyer accompanied his parents to Reading when seven years of age and has been a resident of this city ever since. When nineteen years old he learned the painting trade from H. H. Heckman, following that trade exclusively until 1894 when he added paper hanging to his other line. In 1886 he formed a partnership with Albert S. Kercher under the firm name of Kercher & Moyer. This firm has its store and place of business at No. 526 West Ninth street, where they have a complete and well selected stock of wall papers, paints and mouldings. They do a large business which covers the city and many of the surrounding towns, giving constant employment to from eight to fifteen men. The business reputation of the firm is excellent.

In 1882, Mr. Moyer was married to Mary J. Moyer, daughter of Thomas L. and Mary Ann (Hart) Moyer, of Shartlesville, and a granddaughter of Jacob Moyer. Mr. and Mrs. Moyer have had six children, namely: Virginia A., Stella A., G. Robert, Marion, Paul and Forest. G. Robert died aged seven years. The family belong to St. Luke's Lutheran Church. Mr. Moyer is a member of the Senior American Mechanics organization, No. 46, Reading.

FRANK PHILLIPS, of Reading, was born Dec. 26, 1864, at Avondale, Chester county, Pa., a son of Chalkley and Emma (Taylor) Phillips.

Mr. Phillips belongs to an old and honorable family of Chester county. His great-grandparents were John and Mary (Davis) Phillips and they had the following children: Sarah married Breese Lyons; Lavinia married Joseph Colum; Margaret married William Reyser; Mary is unmarried; George married Susan Meyers; and Thomas.

Thomas Phillips, grandfather of Frank, was born at Wilmington, Del., in 1810. When he was seven years of age his parents moved to Malvern, Pa., where he later learned the blacksmith's trade and was there engaged in business until he removed to a farm that he bought in the vicinity of Avondale, on which he resided until his death, in 1889. He married Edith Chandler and they had the following children: Phebe, who married Edwin Conard, had four children, Everard, Thomas, Emma and Mary L.; John, who married Sarah Gray, had five children, Matilda, Thomas, Laura, Ella and Ada; Mary, who married Elwood Hallowell, had four children, Joseph, Annie, Edward and Bertha; Hannah died in infancy; Chandler, who married Mary A. Watson, had one child, Florence E.; Annie, who married C. C. Hallowell, had three children, Flora, Edith and Josephine; Margaret, who married H. C. Greenfield, has one daughter, Ida M.; Lydia P., who married Morris Watson, has two children, Mary E. and Wilmer P.; and Chalkley, who married Emma Taylor, has four children, Frank, Eugene, Charles and Leona.

Chalkley Phillips, father of Frank, was born at Avondale, Chester county, Pa., March 26, 1840. During his life spent in Chester county, he engaged in farming, owning one farm of 100 acres, in Franklin township, and a second one of forty-five acres in London, Brittain township. For four years he conducted a hotel at Krebsville and then engaged in different lines of business until 1895, when he came to Reading, where he now lives retired. He married Emma, a daughter of Joseph and Margaret Taylor, of near Newark, Delaware.

Frank Phillips attended the public schools, the New London Academy, at New London, the Shortledge Boarding School and the West Chester State Normal School. He then went to St. Louis, Mo., where he entered the employ of an uncle, a very prominent citizen there, a large contractor and former mayor. Mr. Phillips remained there until 1884, when he went to Texas and became a cowboy on a large ranch, and when he tired of that life he returned to Chester county and followed farming on his father's farm in Franklin township. After a time he embarked in a livery business at Kennett Square, which he conducted for four years, and from that went into the hotel business and conducted a hotel at Delaware City, Del., meeting with success in this line which he subsequently followed at Elkins, Md., Harrisburg, Pa., where he operated the "Park Hotel," the "Three-Mile House," at Shillington, Berks county, and then bought the "Cecil Hotel," in New York City. After conducting the latter for three years he sold out and then took charge of the "Imperial Hotel," at Phillipsburg, N. J., going from there to the "Cross Keys Hotel," at Doylestown, which, for 150 years has been a licensed hotel. Mr. Phillips then became proprietor of the "Surf House," at Surf City, N. J., which is the most easterly point on the Atlantic coast.

After this long experience, Mr. Phillips came to Reading and on April 1, 1908, became proprietor of the "Colonial Café," Penn Square, which, under his management, has proved a money-maker. It is equipped with modern comforts and is conducted along the most approved lines.

Mr. Phillips married Bessie Behm, who is a daughter of William and Ella Behm, and they have two children: Ruth V. and Norwood V.

FRANCIS L. CLOUSER, one of the successful young business men of Reading, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, Jan. 7, 1867, son of Daniel S. and Mary (Lord) Clouser.

John Clouser, great-grandfather of Francis L., moved from Oley to Robeson township many years ago, and bought the old George Moore farm that is now owned by one of his grandsons, Simon Clouser. He followed farming and lime burning for the remainder of his life, also owning and operating canal boats on the Schuylkill canal, which he used to carry his lime to market. Mr. Clouser died about 1841 or 1842, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which his wife, Catherine Feigle, was also a member. They had children as follows: Daniel; John; Benjamin; Samuel; Lydia, who married Henry Moyer; and Sarah, who married Isaac Moore.

Daniel Clouser, son of John, was born Jan. 28, 1810. On Dec. 9, 1834, he married Susannah Seifert, born Dec. 14, 1812, daughter of Daniel Seifert. Eight children were born to them, as follows: Clement, born April 23, 1836, married Mary A. Wingert, and has children—Ida, Milton, Matilda, Mamie, Elmer, Annie, Oscar and Iva; Christina, born Oct. 15, 1837, married John Thompson, and has a son, Heber; Lucy Ann, born Dec. 31, 1839, married Samuel Zacharias, and has children—Sadie, Sue and Minnie; Daniel S., born Jan. 23, 1842, married Mary Lord; Ann Elizabeth, born June 29, 1844, died Jan. 25, 1868; Edward, born Sept. 29, 1847, died Oct. 8, 1847; Amos, born Dec. 11, 1848, married Amanda Reed, and has children—Emma, Minnie and Clayton; and Simon, born Nov. 1, 1852, married Mary Bitler, and has a son Harvey.

Daniel S. Clouser, son of Daniel and Susannah, was born in Robeson township Jan. 23, 1842. He followed farming there until his marriage, when he came to Reading, and found employment with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, where he has since continued. On Sept. 2, 1866, he married Mary Lord, and the nine children born of their union are as follows: Francis L., born Jan. 7, 1867; Rose, born March 10, 1868, married George Rouch, and has a daughter, Carrie M.; Howard, born April 29, 1869, married, and has children, Florence, Eddie, Carrie, Fred, Francis, and the family home is in Pittsburg; Henry, born July 21, 1870, living at Shillington; William, born Feb. 2, 1872, now living at Reading, has two children, Francis and another; Charles, born March 27, 1873, is at home; Irwin, born June 25, 1874, died May 10, 1882; Anna A., born March 12, 1876, married Solomon Fisher, and has a daughter, Edna M.; and Florence M., born Nov. 12, 1884, married Edward Fidler.

Francis L. Clouser, son of Daniel S., accompanied his parents to Reading when he was seven years old. He attended the schools of Reading, and then learned bolt and nut making, a trade he followed until 1897 when he engaged in the retail liquor business at Eleventh and Elm streets. In 1904 he moved to Ninth and Penn streets, and now enjoys a lucrative trade.

Mr. Clouser married Maude High, daughter of Joel High, and they have a charming home at No. 1004 North Eleventh street. Mr. Clouser is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. E.; Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.; the Twentieth Century Quakers; Owl Beneficial Association; and the Ivy Leaf Association. He has been treasurer of the Junior Fire Company since 1893.

WILLIAM C. THORNBURG, of Reading, at present serving in the common council as alderman from the Eighth ward, is a son of Thomas L. Thornburg. He is a descendant in the fifth generation from

(I) George Thornburg, a native of Dauphin county, Pa., who was a farmer by occupation. He died at Hagerstown, Md., where he is buried. His children were: Solomon, George, Thomas, Joseph.

(II) Solomon Thornburg, son of George, born Aug. 2, 1796, died Aug. 7, 1874, and is buried at Pottsville, Pa. He was a patternmaker by trade. He married Matilda Schoener, daughter of Jacob Schoener, of Womelsdorf, and they had children as follows: Thomas O. is mentioned below; Catharine married Robert Allison; Sarah (deceased) married Richard Welsh; Robert, who is engaged as a machinist at the Philadelphia & Reading railway shops in Reading, married Charity Welsh.

(III) Thomas O. Thornburg was a blacksmith by trade and well known in that capacity, having for many years followed his trade at Mechanicsburg and Lisburn, in Cumberland county, Pa. Finally selling out that business, he took up farming. He died in Reading in 1888, at the age of sixty-six years. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. His wife, Elizabeth Mason, was of Welsh descent. She now resides at Philadelphia with her son Frank. To Thomas O. and Elizabeth (Mason) Thornburg were born children as follows: Thomas L.; Daniel C.; Martha; George; Mary; Katie; Carrie; Frank; and three who are deceased.

(IV) Thomas L. Thornburg, born Jan. 12, 1853, at Mauch Chunk, Carbon Co., Pa., attended school in Cumberland county, and learned cigar-making at Mechanicsburg. He then went to Port Carbon, Schuylkill county, for a time, was later at Easton for a brief period, and then returned to Port Carbon, where he engaged in business, continuing same for three years. He then went to Easton again, then back again to Port Carbon, was later at Shenandoah and then moved to Womelsdorf, Berks county. In 1885 he settled in Reading, where he is still engaged at his trade. He is a member of the Reformed Church and a Republican in politics.

On Dec. 25, 1873, while at Easton, Pa., Mr. Thornburg married Ella Flynn, daughter of Bertolette Flynn, and they have had the following named children: William C.; Harry O., chief clerk to the Berks county commissioners; Edward G., a cigar-maker; Robert D.; Thomas L., Jr.; Mamie, and Ethel—all living; Lizzie, Maude and Beulah are deceased.

(V) William C. Thornburg was born in October, 1874, in Port Carbon, Schuylkill county, Pa., and was eleven years old when his parents came to Reading. Here he completed his education in the public schools, and he has followed his father's trade, being a cigar-maker by calling.

In the fall of 1908 Mr. Thornburg became alderman of the Eighth ward, to fill the unexpired term of Eugene I. Sandt, whose office on North Seventh street he has since occupied. He has lived in the ward for sixteen years, and in the Second precinct for a dozen years, and he was the unopposed Republican candidate at the spring election for the full five-year term, which commenced May 1, 1909. It is worthy of note that he is the youngest member of the common council, and though this is the first time he has aspired to office he has long been one of the most active local workers in the Republican party, with which he has been identified since attaining his majority. He was a delegate to city and county conventions under the old system.

ELMER H. BEARD, city engineer of Reading, is one of the busiest men in the busy, bustling city of Reading, for, with the fifty-one men in his charge, he is carrying out the enormous amount of work consequent upon the expenditure of more than a million and a half dollars for improvements to the city.

Mr. Beard's paternal grandfather, Henry Beard, was born in Robeson township, Berks county, and married Catherine Warren, who was descended from General Warren, of Bunker Hill fame. Our subject's father Amos H. Beard, was master carpenter for the Reading division of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, served as a member of the 196th P. V. I., during the War of the Rebellion, serving a nine-months term and veteranizing, and was a member of the select council for twenty-two years. Amos H. Beard married Catherine Hipple, daughter of Adam Hipple, of Montgomery county, master carpenter of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Beard: William, an insurance broker of Reading; Harry, city chemist of Reading; Elizabeth, who died March 6, 1904, aged twenty-two years, two days; and Elmer H.

Elmer H. Beard was born on the old homestead in Robeson township, Sept. 7, 1865, and was educated in Reading, graduating from the high school in 1881, and then joined the engineering corps of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, being advanced, in 1888, to the position of assistant engineer of the Reading division. He was made supervisor in 1890, and left the service the following year to become resident engineer of construction, at Hurley, Wis., for the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western railroad, in which position he remained until 1896. He then became assistant supervisor of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, at Pottsville. Mr. Beard became assistant engineer of the city of Reading in 1897, and in April, 1900, became engaged in the contracting and building business, erected many of the fine buildings and homes in the city, including those of Judge Endlich and Frank S. Livingood, Esq. In three years Mr. Beard built 285 houses, and in one of these years the record reached 103 buildings built by him, which exceeded the record of any other builder up to that time. In April, 1903, Mr. Beard was elected city engineer of Reading.

Mr. Beard was married Sept. 26, 1889, to Lottie E. Hartman, daughter of Harrison S. Hartman, in the Traction Company's service in Reading, and one child was born to this union—Helen, at school. Mr. Beard is a thirty-second degree Mason, belonging to Rajah Temple of the Mystic Shrine and is a member of the Sons of Veterans and the Elks. He is a stanch Democrat, and belongs to St. Barnabas Episcopal Church. He is a whole-souled, intelligent, genial gentleman in every walk of life.

JOHN M. BROWN (deceased,) for many years a prominent farmer of Robeson township, Berks Co., Pa., was born in Lebanon county, near Millbach, son of Philip Brown, and grandson of Philip Brown, the emigrant ancestor of this branch of the Brown family in America.

Philip Brown came from Germany to the United States, and, settling in Lebanon county, engaged in agricultural pursuits, an occupation which he followed for the remainder of his life, accumulating much property and becoming quite prominent. He was the father of a large family, among whom was Philip, the father of John M. This Philip Brown married a Miss Mountz, of Lebanon county, and to them were born these children: Daniel, Peter, David, John M., Mrs. Eva Getz, Mrs. Lydia Kuntz, Mrs. Elizabeth Garber and Mrs. Kate Griffith. Mr. Brown at one time owned the land now occupied by the Berks county Alms House where he carried on farming and conducted a distillery.

John M. Brown was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and was reared on his father's farm, which he was compelled to leave on account of his father losing his property as a result of the dishonesty of others whose notes he had indorsed. Young Brown secured employment driving a team for Jonathan Seidel, and he remained in that gentleman's family for several years. He later engaged in farming on his own account, on a property known as the "Gaul," situated near Gibraltar, and also owned the Seidel property adjoining, which, at the time of his death he divided among his two daughters.

Mr. Brown married Miss Margaret Haas, daughter of George Haas, a native of Robeson township, and a member of a highly esteemed Berks county family. George Haas was a wheelwright by trade, and during the days of heavy staging between Philadelphia and Pittsburg manufactured many of the heavy wagons for freighting. He was an expert mechanic and samples of his work are still to be found in this locality. He married Eve Phillips, a native of Chester county, of Welsh ancestry, and to them the following children were born: Samuel, John, Ann, Ruth and Margaret. In religious belief they were members of the Lutheran Church.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. John M. Brown were: Ruth, who died in infancy; Mary, Mrs. Bodder, who had one child, Maggie, who married S. A. Yeich; and Maggie, who married H. H. Weinings. The Brown family are members of the Lutheran Church.

LEWIS GANSTER, now living retired at his home on Chestnut street, Reading, was for many years known to the citizens of the city as a retail milk dealer. Mr. Ganster is a native of Germany, born in Alsace April 4, 1849, son of Joseph and Sophia (Aldman) Ganster, also natives of the Fatherland.

In 1849 Joseph Ganster came to America, being sixty-three days on the ocean. With his wife and three children, Willie, Catherine and Lewis, he came at once to Reading, and here became well known as the builder of all the French forges for the manufacture of charcoal iron in this section of the State. Mr. Ganster died at the age of eighty years, eleven months, while his wife passed away in her seventy-second year. Eight children were born to Joseph and Mrs. Ganster in America: George, Mary, John, Joseph, Henry, Sophia, Frederick and Jacob.

In religious belief Mr. Ganster was a Catholic, while his wife was an adherent of the faith of the Lutheran Church.

Lewis Ganster received his education in the schools of Reading, and when still a boy learned the forgeman's trade. He was employed in a rolling mill until 1873, when he engaged in engineering at Lauer's Brewery, leaving this position in 1881 to engage in the milk business, this enterprise being continued until 1901, when he sold out. Mr. Ganster is still the owner of a dairy but engages only in a wholesale trade. Mr. Ganster has been prominently identified with various other business enterprises, and was for some years president of the Ringgold Building Association and director in the Mechanics and William Penn Building Associations. He is a large real estate owner, having five properties in the Tenth ward, one in the Sixteenth and one in the Second. He is a Republican in political matters, while he and his family worship in the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Ganster was married to Emma Tyson, daughter of Jacob Tyson, and to this union there have been born five children: Frances is deceased; Mary m. George Stichter, of Reading; Emma is unmarried; Louis J. m. Anna Bupp; and Edward.

HENRY HOLL, deceased. Among the business men and public officials of Reading, Pa., was the late Henry Holl, for many years an alderman of the city and later clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Berks county. Mr. Holl was born in 1843 in Reading, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Saylor) Holl.

Henry Holl received his education in the schools of his native city, and when a young man clerked in several dry goods and notion establishments. For two years he was in the grocery business and then was appointed deputy clerk of Quarter Sessions, in which capacity he served faithfully for nine years. At the end of this time Mr. Holl was elected clerk, and he had served one year and three months when his death occurred, in the spring of 1894. In 1867 Mr. Holl was married to Miss Esther DeTurk, daughter of Jacob and Esther (Goodhart) DeTurk, whose other children were: Frederick, Catherine, Mary, Benjamin, Jacob, Joshua, Samuel and William.

Mr. Holl was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., of Reading. In his religious belief he was connected with the Reformed Church, which his widow attends. They had no children. Mr. Holl was a Republican in political belief, but such was his fairness and integrity that he had hosts of friends in both parties. He was a good and useful citizen, and in his death the city of Reading lost one of its representative, public-spirited men.

GEORGE G. RITTER, a substantial business man of Reading, Pa., who is engaged in the manufacture of steel office furniture and also a director of the poor of Berks county, resides at No. 303 South Sixth street. Mr. Ritter was born in 1860, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Israel S. and Amelia (Chase) Ritter.

Israel S. Ritter was a millwright by trade, and was a man of much mechanical ability, but the greater portion of his time was spent in conducting hotels in Reading, his last occupation being that of proprietor of the "Three Mile House," after giving up which he retired and so lived until his death in 1892, at the age of seventy-two years. His wife died in 1902, when seventy-eight years of age, and she like her husband was a member of the Reformed Church. They were the parents of five children, three of whom are now living, namely: H. J., of Tippecanoe City, Ohio, a manufacturer and representative in the State Legislature; S. Alice, m. to E. S. Ammon; and George G. Mr. Ritter was a Democrat in his political views.

George G. Ritter received his education in the schools of Reading, and learned the tinsmith's trade with George W. Dauth, after which he secured employment with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, for whom he worked five years. He then opened a shop for himself which he operated successfully from 1883 to 1905, and in the latter year, in company with D. H. Keyser, he engaged in the manufacture of steel office furniture, a business which has grown to large proportions. The company has handled some large contracts in Reading and vicinity, and are now engaged in equipping the Boy's high school. Mr. Ritter has taken an active interest in political matters, and in 1905 was elected a member of the board of directors of the poor of Berks county, on the Democratic ticket, to serve a term of three years.

Mr. Ritter married Marian A. Nein, and to them have been born two children: George H. and Harry H. Mr. and Mrs. Ritter attend the Reformed Church.

LEONARD A. VATH, JR., whose hardware establishment is situated at No. 826 North Tenth street, Reading, was born in 1870, in Bavaria, Germany, son of Leonard and Mary (Millerman) Vath, and was brought to this country when ten months of age.

Mr. Vath was educated in the schools of Kingston, N. Y., where he learned the cigar making business, but on coming to Reading entered Joseph Ganter's hardware store. In 1903 he decided to embark in business on his own account and purchased his present store and stock. This business, under the name of the Northern Hardware Store, has been very successful, and this success may be attributed to Mr. Vath's upright business methods, his energy and enterprise and his happy faculty of making friends. He handles hardware, glass, oils, paints, varnishes, brushes, seeds, cutlery, tools, amunition and house furnishing goods, and in fact any and all articles to be found in a first-class, up-to-date hardware establishment. Fraternally Mr. Vath is connected with the Knights of the Maccabees, the Order of the Holy Cross and St. Boniface's Society. He and his wife attend St. Paul's Catholic Church.

Mr. Vath was united in marriage with Miss Gertrude Breim, and to this union there have been born two children, namely: Frederick and Catherine.

LEWIS R. HENRY, one of Berks county's good practical farmers, whose fine tract of land is situated along the electric railroad in Robeson township, was born Sept. 9, 1855, in Albany township, Berks county, son of John and Lydia (Rheinhardt) Henry.

Adam Henry, grandfather of Lewis R., was a native of Lehigh county, Pa., and owned a farm near Steinsville, where he died. He married and became the father of John, the father of Lewis R.; Levi; Elizabeth, who married a Mr. Hottenstein; and Sarah, who married George Peifley. In religious connection the family were members of the Luthearn Church. Mr. Henry was a Democrat in politics.

John Henry was also born in Lehigh county, but early in life removed to Albany township, Berks county, and there purchased a farm. Later he bought the old homestead in Lehigh county, to which he returned, and there his death occurred in 1905, in his eighty-first year, his widow still surviving and living in Lehigh county. They had children as follows: Daniel; Lewis R.; Jonathan; Levi; Wilson; Mary, who married Peter Weasner; Sarah, who married Erastus Gehris; Lydia, who married George Dries; Amanda, who married Charles Deeter; and Amelia, who married James Leipelsberger. Mr. Henry was a member of the Lutheran Church in which he held the office of deacon. He was a stanch Democrat and for many years was township supervisor.

Lewis R. Henry was educated in the common schools of Albany township, and was reared on his fathers' farm until about seventeen years of age. At the age of twenty-two he engaged in the hotel business at Drehersville, Schuylkill county, but one year later removed to Schuylkill Haven, where he continued in the same line as proprietor of the "Swan Hotel." After four years at that place Mr. Henry sold out and removed to Port Clinton, being proprietor of the "Central House" for two years, when he again sold out and went to Auburn, where he conducted the "St. Elmo Hotel" for five years. In 1891 Mr. Henry sold this property and removed to Birdsboro, where he conducted the "Mansion House" until 1905, and in April, 1906, he located on his present property, a fine farm of fifty acres, situated about two miles from Birdsboro and seven miles from Reading. This property, which is well supplied with water, is one of the most fertile in the township, and yields large crops of fruit.

In 1878 Mr. Henry married Ellawine Leiby, daughter of Jacob Leiby, of Lehigh county, and eight children were born to this union: Effie L. m. Howard Deem, has two sons, Gerhardt and Harry; Mary Etta m. Daniel Hahn, has one son, Harold; Estella m. John Rhoads; Curtis L. m. Florence Hohl; Alberta L.; Welmar L., and Ellawine R., and Warren W., who died at the age of ten years. The latter was a bright and studious little fellow who made friends with all about him, and his death was a great blow to his parents. Mr. Henry is member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Henry is a Republican, and while in Schuylkill county held the office of councilman.

MARTIN H. HIPSCH, who has been in the employ of the Reading Iron Company, at its Oley street mill plant, as an assistant roller, since May 30, 1895, is an experienced steel worker and a competent man in his special line. He was born at Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., Jan. 28, 1868, a son of William and Mary (Miller) Hipsch.

William Hipsch was born at Berlin, Germany, in 1829, and died at Steelton, Pa., in 1897, aged sixty-eight years. He was educated in the German schools and came to America before his marriage, locating at Columbia, Lancaster Co., Pa., where he worked at a blast furnace. Later, after he moved to Steelton, he worked as a fireman in a boiler establishment for many years. He was provident and acquired property and reared his family in comfort. He was a man of religious conscience, a strict Lutheran and was well versed in the Scriptures. He married Mary Miller, born in 1841, who died in 1893, aged fifty-two years. The memory of both father and mother is revered by the survivors of their family of seven children. They are: Annie, who married Henry Miller, residing at Steelton; Ella, who married Fred Marklewitz, residing at Endhaut, in Dauphin county; William, unmarried, residing at Steelton; John, an iron worker, residing at Homestead; Martin H., residing at Reading; Frank, who is a resident of Michigan; and Dora, who died in November, 1907, aged forty-six years.

Martin H. Hipsch was six years of age when his parents moved to Steelton and there he attended the public schools until he was fourteen years of age, when he entered the Pennsylvania steel works, where he learned the hammerman's trade, which he followed for nine years. He then went into the rolling mill business at Reading and, as noted above, holds a very important position, one that entails responsibility and requires great skill. Mr. Hipsch is a self-respecting, reliable citizen and is the owner of his comfortable home at No. 627 Ritter street, Reading, where he resides with his wife and one son. He was married March 12, 1891, to Mary Haas, born March 7, 1868, daughter of Joel and Sallie Haas, of Pricetown, Berks county, Pa. Their son, Charles William, who was born July 16, 1892, is in the employ of the General Advertising Company of this city. Mr. Hipsch and family belong to the Lutheran Church.

In his political affiliations, Mr. Hipsch is a Republican. He is a member of Mt. Penn Lodge, No. 627 I. O. O. F.; of the Daughters of Rebekah; of the Brotherhood of Odd Fellows and of the Royal Arcanum, all of Reading. He is a member of Oley Street Relief Association and of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers of America.

SAMUEL BOBST. One of the early settlers of Alsace township, Berks county, was John Bobst, a large landowner and farmer there, and the family has been represented in the county ever since. John Bobst married Lizzie Ernst, and they both lived to reach the advanced age of eighty-two years, both dying in Maryland. In religious belief they were Lutherans, while in politics Mr. Bobst was a Democrat. Their children were: Yetta, the wife of Daniel Helfroth; Lizzie, who died young; Samuel; and Daniel.

Samuel Bobst, elder son of John, was born in Alsace township, and as he inherited the home farm his life was spent on the old homestead, which he operated most successfully. He married Lydia Helfroth, who bore him eleven children, namely: Catherine and Emma both died young; Lizzie m. George Gnau; John; Ellen, deceased, m. John Hauck; Samuel; Daniel M.; one died in infancy; Harry is deceased; and two others died in infancy. In this generation the family also adhered to the Lutheran faith, and Mr. Bobst sustained the family tradition politically as a loyal Democrat.

Samuel Bobst (2) was born on the homestead in Alsace township, April 17, 1860, and during his boyhood attended the public schools of that section. He remained on the farm till his father's death in 1874, at which time he moved with his mother to East Reading. For a time he did general work, till he secured a place in the Philadelphia & Reading foundry, and he remained there quite a while resigning finally to accept a place as driver and street car conductor on the horse car line. Under the present United Traction Company, he has been employed as a general contractor and builder, during 1903 and 1904, and during the latter year built seven and a half miles of the nine-mile Birdsboro branch. In 1905 he put up seven residences on South Eighteenth street and is still actively engaged in general contracting work in Reading, where he bears a reputation as a capable builder.

Mr. Babst married Sarah, daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Schultz) Bingaman, of Reading. To this union six children have been born, namely: Gertrude m. George Kemp; Sallie m. Simon Spangler; Charles m. Miss Bertha Schell; Florence; Kate; and Samuel died aged eighteen months. Mr. and Mrs. Bobst are members of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Bobst is affiliated with several fraternal organizations, and belongs to Camp No. 663, P. O. S., of A., and to the Bavarians, while he is also a member of the Union Fire Company and a trustee of that association.

EDWARD DAVIES SMITH, deceased, who was born March 12, 1816, in New Holland, Lancaster county, was a son of Edward and Elizabeth (Mathai) Smith, and was descended from one of the old families of Pennsylvania.

On the paternal side, Mr. Smith counted among his ancestors the Thomas Smith, who was married to Priscilla Allen, before the Friends' Meeting in Philadelphia, in 1684. Passing down to later times, his grandfather, William Smith, was sheriff of Lancaster county from 1758-1762. In 1774 he was one of the committee of observation and was sub-lieutenant for the eastern townships of the county from 1781 to the close of the Revolution. With his brother he built and operated the Martin furnace and forge from 1752 till he moved to Earl township.

Edward Smith, Sr., died in 1842, when his son and namesake was only eight years old, and the mother was left with six children to bring up. Mrs. Smith was a granddaughter of Colonel Jonathan Jones, who raised a company in Caernarvon township and was with the expedition to Canada in the winter of 1775-76.

Edward D. Smith was next to the youngest in the family. He was obliged to go to work early and when only in his eleventh year was taken out of the public schools and put to work in the general store, owned by William and Isaac Eckert, at the northwest corner of Fourth and Penn streets. He remained there ten years and then in 1837, in partnership with Philip Zieber, he bought out the business and they established the firm of Zieber & Smith. After a short time, however, they dissolved partnership, Mr. Zieber taking the grocery and queensware departments and Mr. Smith the dry-goods. The latter continued in business till 1862, when he sold out to Knabb & Thomas. Meantime he had become closely identified with the gas interests in Reading. In 1857 he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Reading Gas Company, whose affairs were at that time in very bad shape, the stock selling at $12.50, fifty per cent below par. Up to that time the company had never earned nor paid dividends, but under Mr. Smith's careful management, the property was developed, the service extended and the consumption so rapidly increased that dividends were soon declared and the shares rose in value till they sold for $60. Later the works were leased to the Consumers' Gas Company, but Mr. Smith continued as secretary and treasurer of the old company till his death. He was also a director in the Farmers' National Bank and afterwards on the board of the First National, remaining in the latter position till his demise.

Mr. Smith was married Dec. 31, 1838, to Miss Henrietta Stichter Hahs, daughter of Henry and Catherine Hahs, the former of whom was at one time treasurer of Berks county. The children born to this union were as follows: Emily R., Mrs. William R. McIlvain, of Reading; Catherine E., Mrs. Jonathan C. Illig, of Reading. Mr. Smith passed away on Sunday morning, Jan. 12, 1902, aged eighty-five years and ten months, and his remains are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He was a member of Christ Episcopal Church for upward of fifty years, was vestryman, and at the time of his decease was serving as senior warden. Fraternally he was a charter member of Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F. Mrs. Smith survives her husband and continues to occupy the old home on Fourth street.

MOSES MERVINE, of No. 929 North Third street, Reading, who now lives a retired life except for taking care of his real estate interests in Centre and Amity townships, Berks county, was born in 1836, in Shoemakersville, Berks county, son of William P. and Mary M. (Yeiser) Mervine.

William P. Mervine was born on a farm situated along Maiden-creek, which is now owned by the Halley estate, where he lived until fourteen years of age, when he went to Centre township and there engaged in farming, later purchasing a property, which he operated for the balance of his life, and which is now owned by his son, Moses. Mr. Mervine died aged about seventy-two years, and his wife passed away in her sixty-fifth year, both in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Mervine was a Whig until 1858, when he joined the ranks of the Republican party. They were the parents of five children: a son and a daughter who died in infancy; Moses; John, of Reading, and William, deceased.

Moses Mervine received his education in the schools of Centre township, and when still a lad engaged in farming on the home place, where he remained until thirty years of age. He then embarked in the butchering and cattle business which he carried on extensively for twenty-four years, but since 1903 he has lived practically retired. Mr. Mervine was married (first) to Angeline Becker, daughter of Samuel K. Becker, and to this union there were born nine children, five of whom are now living: Thomas; Joseph; Annie, who married Mahlon Clearer; Fannie, who married Dr. Miller; and Sallie, who is single and resides at home. Mr. Mervine's second marriage was to Mrs. Emma (Snyder) Hepler. Mr. and Mrs. Mervine attend the Presbyterian Church, and are well known and esteemed people of their community.

GEORGE ERNST, a highly esteemed retired citizen of Reading, Pa., who through his own energy and enterprise became a successful man, is a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, son of John and Augusta (Berringer) Ernst and grandson of George Ernst.

George Ernst was an extensive land owner in Germany, building a large castle upon his immense estate, and was the father of eight children, of whom John was the eldest. John Ernst spent his entire life in his native country, engaged in farming during the summer months and in tailoring in the winter time. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Michael, who lives in Germany; Conrad, a resident of Reading, and George.

George Ernst received his education in the schools of his native country, and when yet a youth, in 1852, came to America, and located in Reading, where he was first employed by Paul Blessing, who owned a farm within the city limits. There he remained for a short time and was next employed on a truck farm belonging to Michael Hausser, with whom he continued for about one year when he secured employment at the old Eckert Furnace as a stone mason, a trade which he had learned in his native country. Mr. Ernst helped to build the foundation and stack of the furnace, and while employed on the latter fell a distance of forty feet, breaking both arms, an accident which confined him to his bed for nine weeks. Upon recovering he assisted in building the Reading Company's depot at Seventh and Chestnut streets. In 1860 Mr. Ernst turned his attention to street paving and asphalt work, being the pioneer of this class of work in the city of Reading, and from the start was very successful. Through hard work and close application to business he accumulated a competency, and in 1891 retired from active life. On coming to America Mr. Ernst had hardly enough money with which to reach Reading, but he is now in very comfortable circumstances, and is the owner of nine valuable properties. He is much esteemed in his community, where his neighbors and acquaintances know him as a good, steady citizen, with a reputation for honesty and integrity.

Mr. Ernst was married in 1854 to Christianna Bussard, born in Germany, and to this union were born children as follows: George and Gotleib, twins, deceased; Annie, deceased; Barbara, deceased; Rosa, a teacher in the public schools of Reading; and Ella, who married a Mr. Bussard, of Philadelphia. Mr. Ernst is a member of the Lutheran Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

JOSEPH L. LEINBACH, one of Reading's good, reliable citizens and enterprising business men, who is carrying on a thriving plumbing and steam-heating business at No. 420 North Sixth street, was born in Fleetwood, Pa., Nov. 2, 1877, son of Jonas L. and Harriet (Lord) Leinbach.

As Joseph L. Leinbach was but ten years of age when his father died, he knows little about the latter, except that he was employed in the passenger department shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and that later he engaged at farming on one of Judge Stitzel's farms at Fleetwood. Jonas L. Leinbach died aged seventy-two years, and his wife when sixty-two years old, their children being: Jonas; Henry; Joseph; Minnie; Nora; Lillie; Alice and Laura. The parents of these children were Lutherans in their religious belief, and Mr. Leinbach was a Democrat.

Joseph L. Leinbach received his literary training in the schools of Fleetwood, and when twelve years of age came to Reading, here finding employment in the polishing and plating department of the National Brass Works. Afterward he was employed by Leinbach & Bros., clothiers. He later apprenticed himself to learn the plumbing trade with G. A. Hagey, at No. 40 North Sixth street, and after completing his term of apprenticeship worked four years as a journeyman. He was later engaged with E. S. Summons and in 1904 he went to Lebanon, Pa., taking charge of George C. Unger's plumbing and steam-fitting establishment until 1905, when he returned to Reading and engaged in business on his own account at No. 428 North Sixth street, remaining there about eight months. He then removed to his present location, No. 420, where can be found a complete line of goods. He employs four men the year around and during the busy season is compelled to employ extra workmen. Mr. Leinbach makes a specialty of jobbing and repairing and guarantees satisfaction in every case.

In 1899 Mr. Leinbach married Mary E. Christ, daughter of Jonathan and Isabella (Reber) Christ, and to this union there have been born three children: Forrest, Clarence and Paul. In religious belief Mr. Leinbach and his wife are members of the Reformed Church. He is fraternally identified with the Eagles, I. O. R. M. and the P. O. S. of A.

CHARLES C. BROWN, of Reading, was born Feb. 25, 1843, near Kutztown, Berks county, Pa., son of Daniel and Mary (Christman) Brown.

The progenitor of this old and honored Berks county family was Jacob Brown, who in 1759 was a taxable of Ruscombmanor township. He has numerous descendants, consequently so many bear the same family name, that the tracing of the genealogy is very difficult and the authenticity doubtful.

George Brown, a grandson of Jacob the ancestor, has a son Daniel (1806-1884), who was born near Pricetown, where at an early age he learned the tailoring trade, which he followed all of his active life. He married Anna Bush, and they had the following six children: Levi, born at Pricetown in 1830, died at Lobachsville in 1872, was a merchant, m. Mary Brandt, and had four children, Seth A., George, Howard and Mary, the latter of whom died young; Amelia, deceased, m. Augustus Hoch; Catherine m. Daniel Rauenzahn; Sallie, deceased, m. Abraham Breil; Caroline m. Jacob Rauenzahn; and Edwin T., born Sept. 1, 1848, a successful box manufacturer of Reading, m. in 1868 Esther A. Yoder, and they have had ten children, six of whom are living, as follows: W. Warren, Charles O., Edwin, Lillie, Hettie and Daniel, the last named a graduate of the Reading high school and an architect. Daniel Brown, above named, made his will Feb. 10, 1882, and it was probated Dec. 23, 1884, the witnesses being Daniel Brown and Daniel Buskirk, and the executors Edwin T., his son, and Daniel Rauenzahn, his son-in-law.

There was another Daniel Brown, also of Ruscombmanor township, who made his will July 10, 1868, and it was probated March 24, 1874, his son David obtaining the eighty-acre farm in Ruscombmanor township which was bounded by the lands of Charles Levan, S. B. Ohnmacht, John Keller and Daniel Buskirk. The children mentioned in the will were: Jacob; David; Elizabeth; Catherine; Sarah; Maria; Lydia; Hannah; and Daniel, deceased, who left children who were provided for in the will.

Daniel Brown, the grandfather of Charles C., was the owner and operator of a large farm at Pricetown. His wife was Hannah, a daughter of Jacob and granddaughter of Tychicus Weidner, of Oley township. Mrs. Daniel Brown lived to the remarkable age of ninety-eight years, and was the mother of six children: Jacob, who had no issue; David, who had eight children; Daniel; Mrs. Haas; Mrs. Gideon Rauenzahn; and Mrs. Rothermel.

Daniel Brown, the father of Charles C., was born at Pricetown, Berks county, about 1809, and died on his farm in about 1867, having been a lifelong resident of Pricetown, where he was a farmer and wheelwright. He was the owner of two small farms, one of which he cultivated, and was a highly esteemed resident of his community. Mr. Brown was married to Mary Christman, who was born about 1807, and died about 1877, daughter of Michael Christman. Mr. and Mrs. Brown had these children: Lovina; David; Amos; Edwin; James; Daniel; Franklin; Charles C. and Hannah.

Charles C. Brown was educated in the local schools, and in his youth learned the milling business, which he followed for many years. In the spring of 1863, he enlisted at Lancaster, Pa., in Company A, 47th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served for 100 days, being mustered out at Harrisburg, in July, 1863. He again enlisted in Company G, 195th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, Captain Philip Spracher, and served four months, being mustered out again at Harrisburg. He served in a number of skirmishes and minor engagements, and was in active engagement at Monocacy Junction, and throughout his service proved a brave and faithful soldier.

After returning from the war, Mr. Brown became a photographer at Mauch Chunk, Carbon county, Pa., and for about three years was a traveling photographer, after which he located at Birdsboro, where for nine years he carted iron, and later had charge of a furnace for a like period. In 1896 the family came to Reading, where Mr. Brown worked at the Carpenter Steel Works for four years, and since 1903 he has been in the employ of the hardware firm of Bright & Company, being in the shipping department. He resides in his own home at No. 616 Washington street. Mr. Brown is a member of the Carpenter Steel Beneficial Association. With his family he attends the First Reformed Church.

On Jan. 1, 1870, Mr. Brown was married to Rebecca Reider, who died in 1908. She was daughter of John and Elizabeth (Ohnmacht) Reider, and to this union there were born eight children: Howard A., a resident of San Francisco, Cal.; George C., of Reading; Elizabeth O., m. to George B. Rickenbach; Laura; Mary R., who died aged twenty-three years; Edward R., of Reading; and Eva E. and Carrie M.

FRANCIS F. VOGEL, a well-known business man of Reading, Pa., who conducted a restaurant for a number of years at No. 833 Penn street, died in Reading Oct. 1, 1901. Mr. Vogel was born in this city in 1858, son of Felix and Margaret (Swenk) Vogel.

Felix Vogel was born in Germany, and there grew to manhood. He emigrated to America, and from New York City, where he had landed, removed to Lehigh county, Pa., and thence to Reading, being engaged in the contracting business for the Philadelphia & Reading Company, at a saw-mill, sawing wood for fuel for the engines. Mr. Vogel died at the age of fifty years, his wife living until seventy-three, and both were interred in Reading. Their children were: William; Mary, the wife of Francis Houser; John; Joseph; Charles; Adam; Annie, the wife of August Gehring; and Francis F.

Francis F. Vogel attended the schools of Reading, and when a young man was employed with his brother-in-law, Mr. Houser, who was a florist. He was later employed at the Philadelphia & Reading shops continuing there for fifteen years, after which he engaged in the restaurant business at No. 833 Penn street, and in this line continued until his death. Mr. Vogel was a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church, and was buried at the new Catholic cemetery, Reading. In his political belief he was a Democrat.

Mr. Vogel married Miss Annie E. Liebeck, daughter of Nicholas and Margaret (Scheafer) Liebeck, and she survives him and resides at No. 354 North Eleventh street. She continued the restaurant business for one and one-half years after her husband's death, when she sold out. To Mr. and Mrs. Vogel were born children as follows: Mary, the wife of Edward Housman, lives at No. 645 Moss street, Reading; George F., a foreman in the Textile Machine Works, married Mary Crowman, and resides at No. 749 North Eighth street. During the Spanish-American war he enlisted for service, was promoted to corporal and later to quarter master sergeant, served in the Philippines, and was honorably discharged; Sadie, who died when ten years old; and Edith, at home.

LEWIS O. DAVIES, proprietor of the People's Laundry, at No. 1107 Elm street, Reading, was born in that city in March, 1874, and is the only surviving child of Howard and Maud (Rauck) Davies.

The elder Mr. Davies is a patternmaker by trade, at one time employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Company, and later at the Scott Works, where he was working when he retired. Mr. and Mrs. Davies had one other child, their first-born, Charles R., now deceased. Mr. Davies is a member of the I. O. O. F., the K. P., the Philadelphia & Reading Relief Association and the Cramp Association of Philadelphia. His religious creed is that of the United Brethern Church, of which he is a member.

Lewis O. Davies, after completing his education in the Reading schools, began his business career by taking a position under I. A. Schlechter, a jeweler. From him he went to Mr. Luden, also in the jewelry line, and later to the Reading Stove Works. This, too, was not a permanent place, and Mr. Davies was next employed by David Reber in the express company. His services were then given successively to B. & J. Saylor, grocers, to J. H. Carth and to J. D. Miller & Sons. With the experience thus varied behind him, Mr. Davies finally determined to go into business for himself and in 1902 he established the Peoples' Laundry, and has since that time occupied the premises at No. 1107 Elm street. He employs six people, and runs a wagon. Only Troy hand work is done and Mr. Davies has built up a good patronage, which is constantly increased by his satisfactory service. He maintains about 100 branch offices throughout the city.

In 1897 Lewis Davies and Miss Annie De Binder were married, and they now have two children, a son and a daughter, Herbert and Emma. Mr. Davies holds membership in the fraternal orders, namely: Wyomissing Council, Royal Arcanum, Emblematic Lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F.; and the United Workmen. Politically he has always maintained an independent stand.

EDGAR AMOLE, of Reading, Pa., who is serving as secretary and treasurer of the Reading Stove Works, was born Dec. 9, 1872, in Mahanoy City, Schuylkill county, son of Daniel and Emma (Wenrich) Amole.

Mr. Amole received his education in the schools of Reading, whence his parents had moved when he was a child, and also attended the Reading high school for a few terms. He then engaged at Orr, Painter & Company's Stove Works, as office boy in July, 1889, and by close application to his duties soon won promotion. He represented the firm as traveling salesman throughout Pennsylvania, and later was called in from the road and made assistant treasurer, a position which he retained one year. He was made secretary and treasurer, and upon the reorganization of the company when it became the Reading Stove Works, he was again tendered this position which he has continued to fill with much credit to the present time. He is a man of more than ordinary business ability, and is popular with employees and employers.

Mr. Amole stands high in social circles of Reading, and is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M.; Reading Chapter, R. A. M.; De Molay Commandery, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory, thirty-second degree; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. of Reading; the K. G. E., and the Junior Fire Company.

ANDREW GOSSLER, an energetic and enterprising business man of Reading, Pa., and the proprietor of a tonsorial parlor at No. 46 South Fourth street, was born on the property he now occupies, April 26, 1850, son of Andrew S. and Sarah (Ely) Gossler.

The Gosslers were of German descent, and the first of the name to come to America were three brothers, one of whom settled in Reading, another, it is believed, in Lancaster county, and the third in Chester county. The first of the family of whom there is anything definitely known was one Henry Gossler, the grandfather of our subject. He was born in Reading, educated in the schools and became a carpenter by trade. He died in the early part of the eighteenth century, while yet in the prime of life. He married a Miss Snell, by whom he had children as follows: Jacob, a tailor by trade, who lived in Reading; Andrew S., father of our subject; James, who died young; and Polly, who was married to Mr. Joseph Rorke, and for many years lived in Phenixville. In religious belief our subject's grandparents were Methodists.

Andrew S. Gossler was educated in the schools of Reading and while yet a boy learned the barber's trade, following this for fifty-six years. He died in 1881, aged seventy-one years, and his wife in 1888, aged eighty-seven years. They were the parents of eight children, as follows: James married (first) a Miss Shively, and (second) Ada Clemson, and had children by the latter marriage: Frank, Ellen, Walter, Chester, James, Joseph and Ione; Joseph married Anna E. Hinnershitz and had two children, William and Sarah; Washington married Kate Lants; Emma, single, is deceased; Rebecca married Washington Heffelfinger, and has four children, Andrew J., Edwin, Wallace and Minnie; Sarah and Clara A. are unmarried; and Andrew, our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Gossler were members of the M. E. Church, and took an active interest in the work of that denomination, giving liberally to its support. He was a member of Montgomery Lodge, I. O. O. F., and was a Democrat in politics, although he never sought political preferment.

Andrew Gossler, our subject, was educated in the common schools of Reading, and in September, 1865, commenced to learn the barber's trade with his father, in a place on Penn street, below Fourth, and remained in that shop for twenty-five years. He then removed to his present place, and here he has continued to follow his trade to the present time. Mr. Gossler is very fond of all out-door sport, and with his faithful dog "Colonel" has gone on many a rabbit-hunt. Mr. Gossler is exceptionally vigorous, and on many hunting and fishing expeditions has tired out men of one-half his years.

Mr. Gossler was married in 1888 to Miss Sabilla Espenshade, daughter of Joseph Espenshade. Although a member of no church, Mr. Gossler is a good Christian gentleman. In politics he is a Democrat, but will accept no public office, preferring to give his time and attention to his business.

J. E. DELNER VAN DENBERG, former plumbing inspector for the city of Reading, and now a partner in the plumbing firm of Eagle & Van Denberg, in that city, comes from sturdy English ancestors, and is a good American citizen in all the word implies. He is a son of Peter W. and Margaret A. (Van Denberg) Delner.

Edward Delner, his paternal grandfather, was born in England, coming from there first to New York City, and later to Rochester, N. Y. His son, Peter W., father of J. E. D., was a contracting stone and brick mason, and died in 1902, aged sixty-four years. He married Margaret Van Denberg, daughter of Philip Van Denberg, for years a whaler, but later a contracting plasterer. Five children were born to this union, four daughters and one son. Two of the daughters live in Brooklyn, N. Y., one in Albany and one in Amsterdam, N. Y. The only son, J. E. Delner, is a resident of Reading.

J. E. Delner Van Denberg, only son of Peter W. and Margaret A. (Van Denberg) Delner, was born July 5, 1868, at Glenville, N. Y., where he attended the public schools. While still a lad he left home and found employment on a steamship, but tiring of this he started out with the idea of seeing something of the world, and visited many portions of this country before returning to his home in Rochester. There he learned the plumbing trade, and this he followed from 1888, in that city, until 1896, when he came to Reading. Soon after his arrival he was appointed plumbing inspector for the city by Mayor Adam Leader, who preceded Mayor Yeager. He was admirably qualified for this important office, and many improvements in the sanitary matters of the city were due in a large degree to the careful supervision of Mr. Van Denberg.

Mr. Van Denberg married Nora Schaeffer, daughter of Franklin and Sallie Schaeffer, well-known residents of Neversink, Berks county, and they had one child, Edward, who died at the age of five months.

Mr. Van Denberg is a member of the Plumbers' Union of Reading, and of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. He belongs to the Reformed Church.

JOHN P. LEWIS (deceased), for many years in the employ of Orr, Painter & Co., was born in Chester county, Pa., in the year 1828, and was a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Painter) Lewis, prominent people in that section.

Probably no man of his day was held in greater esteem in Chester county than Samuel Lewis, whose noble character and upright principles won him not only universal respect but warm personal admiration. Born in Chester county, Nov. 17, 1802, he spent his entire life in that part of the State, and there died. Reared to farm pursuits, he made agriculture his life calling and was one of the representative farmers of his section. He was united in marriage, Jan. 4, 1828, to Miss Elizabeth Painter, whose birth occurred April 17, 1808. Children were born to them as follows: John P.; Margaret A., Jan. 27, 1830; Caroline, May 7, 1832; Adeline, Sept. 1, 1834; Samuel, Feb. 1, 1837; William, Nov. 22, 1839; and Oliver, Dec. 1, 1843. The family were devout members of the Methodist Church, and their many acts of kindness and charity bore testimony to the sincerity of their professions. Politically Mr. Lewis was a Democrat.

John P. Lewis attended the schools of Chester county and was early made acquainted with the routine of a farmer's life. He continued to follow that occupation on his own account till 1877, when he moved into Reading and took a position with the well known stove firm, Orr, Painter & Company. In one capacity or another he worked for them until he was transferred to the shipping department and given the responsible position there that he filled so efficiently up to the time of his death. That event occurred June 6, 1901, in the seventy-third year of his age, and he was survived by his wife and a large family of children and grandchildren. Mrs. Lewis bore the maiden name of Mary E. James. She became the mother of the following children: Frank J., deceased, m. Miss Pauline Albert; Samuel P., deceased, m. Miss Emma Gnau, and has three children, Florence, John and Russell; Lizzie m. Samuel Price, and has one daughter, Mary; Charles M. m. Miss Clara Miller and has had four children, Robert, Edmund, Grace and one that died in infancy; John H. m. Miss Martha M. Yeeger and has two children, J. Frank and Maria; and George O. m. Miss Laura Gibbs. Mr. Lewis was a man who believed strictly in attending to his own affairs, and both in his private and business life was a good example of the model citizen. Devoted to his own home and family, his leisure was spent with them and their home life was unusually happy. Politically Mr. Lewis was a strong Democrat, and he and his family were members of the Methodist Church.

GEORGE WILLIAM FRIES, who was for a number of years prominent in Reading as a member of the bottling firm of Fries & Croessant, and as a hotel keeper, has been living retired since 1900. Mr. Fries was born Jan. 16, 1850, in Reading, son of John Fries, a native of Germany.

John Fries came to America from Bavaria in 1833, and landed at Baltimore, Md., from whence he went to Marietta, Lancaster county, and thence after a short time to Lancaster City. There he engaged in the hotel business, conducting what was then known as the "Indian Queen Hotel" on the Philadelphia pike. On coming to Reading he engaged in the huckstering business for a time, and then took up general contracting, digging cellars. He was a well-known man and was highly respected by all. Mr. Fries died in 1883, at the age of seventy-four years. He married Mary M. Banning, who died in 1876, and they had the following children: Joseph A., born in Lancaster county, was for a number of years a member of the Ringgold Band in Reading, and now resides in Philadelphia; John W., who was one of the first to enlist in the Civil war from Reading, resides in the city; Michael A. is of Reading; George William; Adam, who also enlisted among the first from Reading, served as assistant fire chief under Chief Howard Boyer; George was killed during the Civil war while carrying dispatches; Valentine is deceased; and Mary married Joseph A. Huck.

George William Fries attended the public schools of Reading and when a young man learned the molding trade, which he followed until 1882, and then engaged in the bottling business at No. 640 Cherry street, for one year. His next location was at No. 215 Moss street, where he and his partner, Mr. Croessant, erected a fine building, and continued in the business for sixteen years under the firm name of Fries & Croessant. Mr. Fries withdrew from the firm in January, 1898, and engaged in the hotel business at Moss and Walnut streets, retiring therefrom in April, 1900. Since that time Mr. Fries has lived a quiet life at No. 925 Walnut street.

On April 18, 1870, Mr. Fries married Mary Ganter, daughter of F. X. Ganter of Reading, and to this union have been born the following children: John V., who married Nora Helfrich, of Wilkes Barre, Pa., died Jan. 31, 1882, leaving two children,—Maria and Florence; Edward G., a jeweler, married Carrie Flood; Francis W. died in 1905, at the age of twenty-eight years; Lena died when four years old; Gertrude, the wife of Jacob McQuaite, lives at No. 1030 Walnut street; William A. is a shoe cutter; and Vincent is an apprentice to the machinist's trade.

Mr. Fries is a Democrat in politics and served as a judge of elections of the first precinct of the Ninth ward. He is a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church, and of two church organizations. He is greatly interested in the fire companies, is a member of the Veterans' Fire Association, which he joined in February, 1904, and is also connected with the Rainbow Fire Company, which he became a member of in September, 1868, when Lewis Moyer was president thereof.

CHRISTIAN WREDE, of Reading, Pa., whose baking establishment is situated at No. 1355 North Tenth street, is a native of the city, where he was born in 1866, son of Christian and Minnie (Leisz) Wrede.

Christian Wrede, Sr., was a native of Germany, and came to America when a young man, settling in Reading, where he spent the rest of his life at laboring, accumulating a comfortable property. He and his wife had three children, namely: Lizzie and Annie, deceased, the latter of whom was a Sister of Mercy and was known after taking the vow of Sisterhood as Sister Pencratia; and Christian. By a previous marriage, to a Mr. Dalling, Mrs. Wrede had six children: Emma, who married Augustus Wilke; Lena, deceased, who was the wife of Tender Trickel; William, deceased, Matilda, known as Sister Italbirda; Charles, deceased; and Rosie, deceased, who was the wife of William H. Bain. In religious belief the family were Roman Catholics, and have always been prominent in the work of the church and charitable institutions. Mr. Wrede was a Democrat in his political views.

Christian Wrede received his education in the schools of Reading, after leaving which he learned the baker's trade, a business which he has followed ever since, a period of twenty-eight years. He is well known in his line in Reading, and in his home community his sterling traits of character and genial manner have made him many friends. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, and is connected with the Knights of St. John and the Maccabees. Politically he is a Democrat.

On Sept. 30, 1890, Mr. Wrede was united in marriage with Miss Barbara Heinrich, and to them there were born children as follows: Charles E.; Christian A., who died aged eight years, one month, ten days; Annie M., who died aged two months, twenty-eight days; Marie M., who died aged four months, twenty-eight days; Edna M., who is at St. Joseph's parochial school; Raymond L., who died aged three years, four months; and Paul J., who died aged two months, five days.

PETER S. HOLL, the efficient clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions, and for many years holding important official relation to the city of Reading and the county of Berks, is a native of Reading.

Of Swiss ancestry originally, the Holl family have been in Berks county for many generations. Grandfather Peter Holl was a prominent citizen of Cumru township. Peter S. Holl is the son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Sayler) Holl, the father being a cooper by trade. He died about 1869, at the age of fifty-three years. The mother was a daughter of Peter Sayler, a farmer residing in the northeastern section of the county. To them were born eight children: Two died in childhood; Henry, clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions died in the spring of 1894, at the age of fifty-one years; and Emma died at the age of fifty-five. Those now living are: Samuel S., molder, Reading; Hattie, wife of Richard Engle, Reading; Catherine, widow of Thomas Deen, Chicago; and Peter S.

Peter S. Holl was born Feb. 23, 1859, in Reading. With a common school education, he began life as a clerk in a grocery store. After three years he spent a period in a lock works, then learned the cooper's trade, which he followed for a number of years in Reading and Birdsboro. He then decided to change his occupation and took up the real estate business in Reading, at the same time collecting city taxes. This occupied him for several years. In 1894 he for the first time became connected with the Quarter Sessions court as deputy clerk. In 1896 he was appointed chief deputy under Henry Dumn, and again filled the place of Deputy under Daniel O. Banshaw. Again in 1902 he received the appointment, from Jacob B. Esser, and 1904 was elected to fill the clerkship; making a continuous record in the office of eleven years.

Mr. Holl has always won the confidence of the public. Beginning at the age of twenty-one, he has held various offices, and has served as a member of the select council for eight years. At one time he was president of the select council, at the same time holding three other important offices. He is at the present time one of the trustees of the Public Library of Reading. He is a Democrat in politics; and a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Holl is a member of several of the best fraternities. He belongs to all the branches of Masonry; is an Odd Fellow; and holds membership in the P. O. S. of A. organization; and has also been a member of the Washington Fire Company for over twenty years.

JOSEPH ZERBE ROWE, one of Reading's well known men, was born March 24, 1844, at Mt. Rock, Cumberland Co., Pa., son of Henry B. and Elizabeth (Zerbe) Rowe.

Henry B. Rowe was a blacksmith by occupation, a trade which he followed at Shippensburg until 1847, when he came to Reading, being blacksmith at the County Home for two years. He then opened a shop on North Third street, at the present site of Kershner's ice cream factory, and there continued until his death, July 4, 1867, in the faith of the Baptist Church. In political matters Mr. Rowe was a Republican. He was well-known throughout his community as a man of worth, and was known to be a thorough workman and skilled mechanic. Two sons were born to him and his wife: William, now deceased, who served as mayor of Reading; and Joseph Z.

Joseph Zerbe Rowe was but two and one-half years old when his parents located in Reading, and his education was secured in the common schools of that city, which he left at the age of thirteen years, at the time of his father's death, to go to work. When seventeen years of age he enlisted in Company H, 104th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel W. W. H. Davis, of Doylestown, Captain William Walter, who resigned, and Captain D. B. Groft. He served three years and two months, and at one time when taken with typhoid fever, was not allowed to be taken to the hospital, but was cared for in the officers' quarters, a lieutenant of his regiment giving over his bunk to him until he was able to be taken home. After six weeks he returned to his regiment, although he could have easily obtained his discharge. After the war Mr. Rowe returned to Reading and took up his business, which he has continued to the present time, although his son has been in active charge thereof since July, 1906.

Mr. Rowe was married in 1867 to Sarah Leyenburger, of Newark, N. J., and the children born to this union are: Henry, a blacksmith on Eighth street, Reading; Kate, who married a Mr. Kocher, and has seven children; John W., who is carrying on his father's business; Joseph, of Elmira, N. Y., connected with the meat packing firm of Swift & Co.; and Marcus, of the Duryea Power Co., Reading. Mr. Rowe was made a Mason in Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., and is a member of Reading Chapter, Reading Commandery, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also connected with the Union Veteran League, No. 43, of the United States. In political matters Mr. Rowe is a Republican.

HARLAN N. PEPPER, deceased, business man of Reading, who was proprietor of the "White House Lunch Wagon," located in front of the Second National Bank Building, was a native of Massachusetts, born in Southbridge, in 1846, son of Joseph Pepper, originally a shoemaker by trade, who in later years engaged in farming in Massachusetts and died in that State, aged sixty-three years.

Harlan N. Pepper received his education in the public schools of his native State, and when seventeen years of age enlisted in the Civil war, becoming a private in Company F, 51st Mass. Volunteer Infantry. He served nine months, taking part in many important engagements, and after being honorably discharged was employed at one of the large shoe houses of his native place for a period of fifteen years. The next two years he spent in traveling for a company in the erection of machines, then removed to Worcester, Mass., for a short time, later going to Providence, R. I., where the next five years of his life were spent. In 1900 Mr. Pepper came to Reading. Erecting a small lunch wagon he began business, his trade increasing so rapidly that he was soon compelled to erect a building for his business, which he enlarged from time to time. The "White House Café," as it was known, was largely patronized, remaining open from six o'clock in the evening until six o'clock in the morning. Mr. Pepper was also the owner of a large four-story building, 30 x 80 feet, at Madison avenue and Washington streets, which is occupied as a garage, and in which he had a four and one-half horse power motor. Mr. Pepper resided at No. 422 Washington street. He died Feb. 4, 1909, the last of a large family.

Mr. Pepper was considered a substantial man, and it can be readily seen that he was a self-made one. His success was due to his own energy and enterprise, and his honesty and integrity in business dealings. He was of cheerful and happy disposition, and of great kindness of heart. Besides his own son, Charles, of New York, he reared five other children.

HARRY ZABLE, proprietor of the Reading Furniture Company, of No. 8 North Ninth street, is a native of Russia, in which country he was born in 1876.

Mr. Zable received his education in his native country, and in 1891 came to America, landing at Castle Garden with but two cents in his pocket, which he proceeded to invest in postal cards, with which to notify his parents of his safe arrival. He remained for four days in New York City and then made his way to Reading when he found employment in the establishment of Michael Lewis, with whom he remained until securing a position with Clinton Rhodes & Company, of Chicago, Ill. He remained in this company's employ as a traveling salesman for eight years, at the end of which time he returned to Reading, and opened a small installment house at No. 306 North Ninth street. The business, which has since grown to be one of the largest of its kind in the city, increased so rapidly that Mr. Zable soon found it necessary to enlarge his quarters and subsequently removed to No. 12 North Ninth street, but this place also proved too small, and in April, 1905, he again moved, this time to his present place of business, which is fully equipped and stocked with a complete line of furniture, carpets, rugs and jewelry, the floor space being four floors, 80 x 21 feet. Here Mr. Zable's fair business methods and excellent goods have won him a wide reputation and a constantly increasing trade. Mr. Zable has been prominently identified with educational matters in his adopted city, and is the founder of the Hebrew Free School, of which he is president, is a member of the Independent Order of Brith-Abraham, superintendent of the Hebrew Sabbath-school, and an active member of the Synagogue. He was naturalized in 1897 by Judge Ermentrout. In political belief he is a Democrat, but his views are liberal. In 1892 Mr. Zable sent for his parents in Russia, and in 1893, after being here about one year, the father died, aged fifty-two years. Mrs. Zable survives her husband and resides with her son in Reading.

Harry Zable was married to Rebecca Beilin, daughter of Rabbi Jonas Beilin, of Easton, Pa., and three children have been born to this union: Benjamin, Jonas and Esther.

HENRY BOYER, who was one of Reading's well known business men, was born in that city in 1766. A butcher by trade he became at one time a man of means and a prominent citizen, but through different ventures he lost much of his wealth. He lived to the ripe old age of eighty-one, dying in 1847. His wife, bore him six children, John, Henry, George, Charles, Jacob and Elizabeth. The daughter married Abraham Kerper, and became the mother of two children: William, of Reading; and one who died in infancy. The members of this family were all devout communicants of the Lutheran Church, while in politics the men were invariably Democrats up to the time of Lincoln, when they joined the Republican ranks.

Jacob Boyer, youngest son of Henry, was born in Reading in 1801, and received as good an education as the primitive schools of that day afforded. He learned the butcher's trade from his father, and made it his lifelong calling. His wife was Miss Susan H. Nagle, who died in 1890, at the age of ninety, surviving her husband by nearly twenty years, as his death occurred in 1871, at the age of seventy years, one month and twenty-eight days. The children born to them, all of whom outlived their parents, were as follows: Harriet, who married John G. Shaneman, and was the mother of ex-Mayor Shaneman; Peter N., of Alabama; Mary A., Mrs. Joseph G. O'Brien; Alvin N., of Reading; Sarah L., wife of the late John C. Strohecker; Esther, of Reading; and Jacob N., now deceased. This generation remained true to their early religious teaching and were all Lutherans.

Mrs. Susan N. Boyer was the daughter of Peter Nagle, who was the first justice of the peace in Reading, and held that office for forty-four years. He was a prominent man in his day, and on one occasion when General Washington visited Reading, Mr. Nagle had the honor of entertaining him.

WILLIAM LINK, who since 1902 has been conducting a grocery establishment at the corner of Twelfth and Robeson streets, was born Nov. 25, 1855, in Reading, son of John and Caroline (Snyder) Link.

John Link was a native of Germany, and met his death at the East Pennsylvania Junction, while working as a section boss. He lived on Washington street, Reading, for some time where his children, among whom were John, William and Henry, were born.

William Link was educated in the schools of Reading, after leaving which he engaged at brushmaking for Heller & German, with whom he continued about one year. He then worked in a brickyard for Daniel Schrader for five years, leaving to engage in foundry work, and after one year became connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, with which road he was connected for eighteen years as a carpenter. Mr. Link was then appointed to the police force under Mayor Merritt, and after serving three years returned to the employ of the railroad company, but during Mayor Weidel's administration he was again appointed city policeman. On the expiration of his term, Mr. Link secured employment as a brick molder with Thomas Bauscher, with whom he continued for one year, the next two years being spent in carpenter work, and in 1902 he embarked in his present business, in which he has been successful. Mr. Link carries a line of staple and fancy groceries, and enjoys a good patronage.

Mr. Link was married to Miss Annie Kline, of Fleetwood, Pa., and to them three children have been born: Frank, Charles and John. Mr. and Mrs. Link are Lutherans in religious belief. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and a Democrat in politics, having been very active in the ranks of his party.

MARTIN ERNST, founder of the grocery business situated at the corner of Front and Buttonwood streets, and later conducted by Ernst & Troop, was one of Reading's prominent citizens who passed away May 16, 1902.

Martin Ernst was born in Alsace, Germany, in 1835, and served seven years in the French army. He learned the tanner's trade in his native country, and on coming to America in 1864, engaged therein, first at a large tannery in Elizabeth, N. J., as a finisher, and in 1872 at Reading, in Platz & Winter's tannery. Later, when Mr. Platz retired from the firm, it became Winter & Getz, and Mr. Ernst was employed for a time by this firm, but in 1884 started in the grocery business on North River street, between Washington and Jefferson streets. There he remained until 1892, and in that year removed to Front and Elm streets, and was there doing business at the time of his death. In religious belief Mr. Ernst was a Roman Catholic, being connected with St. Paul's German Church of Reading. In politics he was a Democrat. He was one of Reading's honored and respected business men, and his loss was felt not only by his family and immediate friends, but by the entire community.

Mr. Ernst was married to Mary Ann Kleffer, a native of Germany, who was reared in the same village as her husband, and to them were born: Matilda, who died April 18, 1908, aged forty-five years; Magdalena, who married Isaac Troop, and has two children,—Annie and Mary; Ida, who married Allison Deibert, and has two children,—Leroy and Martin; and Frank, who married Sophia Derry.

After the death of Mr. Ernst, Mrs. Ernst and her daughter, Matilda, took up the business together, and conducted it for one year, when Mrs. Ernst retired, Mrs. Troop being admitted as a partner. Under the able management of the sisters, the business thrived, and they had a large and lucrative trade. After the death of Matilda in 1908, her sister Mrs. Troop and her two daughters,—Annie and Mary, conducted the business until April, 1909 when they retired to private life, and are now living in their own home at No. 374 Schuylkill Avenue.

SCHWEITZER. Four brothers of the name of Schweitzer emigrated from Wurtemberg, Germany, about 1740, settling in eastern Pennsylvania, as follows: Peter, in Brecknock township, Lancaster county (now in Berks county), the second in Northampton county, the third in Cumberland county, and the fourth in Lancaster (now Dauphin) county. Peter Schweitzer was married to a young woman named Heffelfinger, who came to America at the same time he did. They had seven children: Frederick, Peter, Susan, Christina, Catharine, Elizabeth and Margaret.

(II) Frederick Schweitzer, son of Peter, was born in Brecknock township, and carried on farming in the primitive way of his day in a new country; his farm was the present property of Augustus Bixler. He married Barbara Burkhardt, and their children were: John, Frederick, Jr., Peter, Jacob, Elizabeth, Barbara, Susan (who married Jacob Mohr) and Catharine. Of these, John, born Aug. 28, 1791, married Mary Ziegler (daughter of Abraham), and died Dec. 5, 1871, the father of four children: Samuel Z.; John, who married Mary Suader; Salome, who married John Kachel; and Elizabeth, who married Peter Bixler. Samuel Z. Schweitzer, son of John, born Jan. 1, 1816, is still living, and is active in mind and body. He was well educated, and for years was a sucecssful teacher, but his later years were devoted to farming on a large scale, and to his work as a director of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Sinking Spring. His wife was Elizabeth Haller, daughter of Samuel, of Lancaster county. It is given to but few men to so merit and receive universal esteem through a long life such as Samuel Z. Schweitzer has enjoyed.

(III) Frederick Schweitzer, Jr., son of Frederick, was born in Brecknock township, Feb. 20, 1794, and died May 22, 1882, aged eighty-eight years, three months, two days. He devoted his life to farming and his farm in now the property of his grandson Phineas. His wife, Elizabeth Moore, daughter of John Moore, was born Aug. 15, 1796, and died Feb. 11, 1875, in her seventy-ninth year. Their children were: Daniel, who married Leah Bixler, and died at Birdsboro, Pa.; Peter, who married Mary Bressler, and owned a farm adjoining that of Phineas, a part of the old homestead; Elizabeth, who married Peter Beam; Mary, who died unmarried; Samuel M.; and William M., who married Sophia Burkhart, and was of a roaming disposition.

(IV) Samuel M. Schweitzer, son of Frederick, Jr., was born in Brecknock township Aug. 28, 1828, and died Nov. 7, 1905, aged seventy-seven years, two months, nine days. He was a farmer for many years, and from 1861 to 1865 owned the "Three Mile House." In his political faith he was a Republican, and in religious belief a Lutheran, and for many years he was a deacon in the Allegheny Church, but late in life he joined the Plow Church, which he helped to build. He served on the building committee, and was an elder there for eight years. He was also instrumental in the erection of the church in 1888, and was a liberal contributor toward its erection, also helping to raise funds. Mr. Schweitzer was a man of genial disposition, and was greatly beloved by all who knew him. He married Mary S. Slouch, born Oct. 31, 1834, died March 2, 1904, in her seventieth year, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Séifrit) Slouch, and granddaughter of George Slouch. George Slouch was a son of Michael Slouch, who in 1759 paid £4 tax in Brecknock township. To Samuel M. Schweitzer and his wife were born two children: Phineas and Maggie. The latter married Otis Schweitzer (son of Benaniah and grandson of John), a farmer of Robeson township.

(V) Phineas S. Schweitzer, son of Samuel M., is a representative citizen of Brecknock township. He was born Oct. 24, 1858, on a Slouch farm adjoining the Schweitzer homestead. He grew to manhood on a farm, attending the district schools and later Churchtown Academy, in Lancaster county. The latter institution was then under the able management of Prof. J F. Foltz. He then taught school for some time and afterward assisted his father on the farm until the latter's death, at which time he assumed the management. This property lies in Brecknock township, at the extreme eastern end, in what is known as Potato Valley, and it consists of 133 acres of good land. They raise all kinds of fruit and vegetables, and the property is abundantly supplied with water. Mr. Schweitzer is a man of intelligence, and is one of the progressive and useful citizens of the community. In politics he is a Republican, and he has served as township committeeman, secretary of the school board for six consecutive years, township clerk two years, township auditor six years, and delegate to county conventions many times. He and his family are Lutheran members of the Plow Church in Robeson township. Mr. Schweitzer has been organist of both congregations since the erection of the church in 1888, and also president of the Sunday school for the same length of time. In 1883 Mr. Schweitzer married Sarah A. Kramer, daughter of Samuel and Julia (Ziemer) Kramer, well known citizens of Brecknock township. Two daughters have blessed this marriage, namely: Gertie M., who married Lewis Wickline, a trucker on his father-in-law's place, and has one daughter, Esther May; and Mamie E., who is at home.

(II) Peter Schweitzer, second son of Peter, the emigrant from Wurtemberg, married and reared a family, in which was a son, Peter.

(III) Peter Schweitzer, son of Peter and grandson of the emigrant, passed his active life as a farmer and tanner on the place where Harvey Kramer now lives. His wife was an Ammon, and their children were: Bevvy, who married Samuel Eshelman; Sally, who married John Kramer; Kate, who married Jacob Sengner; John; William, a farmer in Exeter township; Peter, who lived in Brecknock; and Mrs. William Whitman.

(IV) John Schweitzer, son of Peter, was born March 27, 1803, and died April 9, 1874, when he was in his seventy-second year. By occupation he was a tanner, and his tannery was located where Harvey Z. Kramer now makes his home, in Brecknock. The latter years of his life he devoted to farming, owning a farm of 200 acres in Potato Valley—so named by Christian Ziegler, in a joke, but the name has clung to this particularly rich agricultural valley ever since. He married Elizabeth Wagner, born Feb. 13, 1803, who died May 9, 1888. They had nine children, namely: Benaniah, who owned the homestead; Maria, who married Jacob Schnader, of Fairville; Lovina and Jackson, who both died young; Nathan, of Lycoming county; Augustus W.; Edward, a farmer in Robeson township; Obed, also a farmer in Robeson; and Christanna, who married Benjamin Remp, of Brecknock. John Schweitzer and his wife erected in 1854 a fine double-deck barn, 92 x 75 feet, the only one of its kind in the State. In 1859 the present residence, a large stone mansion, was erected. On the premises is an old log house that was erected in 1775 by Peter Schweitzer, the great-great-grandfather of the present generation, and this is now used as a truck house.

(V) Benaniah Schweitzer, son of John, was born at the family home Feb. 10, 1829, and after a useful and active life of more than seventy-seven years passed away Sept. 16, 1906. He owned a large farm near Adamstown, Lancaster county, where he lived for fourteen years. In 1875 he bought the home now in possession of his sons, and on it he spent his last days. In politics he was active as a Democrat, and was school director in both Lancaster and Berks counties, ably serving his districts. He was a Lutheran member of the Allegheny Church, and for many years served as an elder. He was a good and useful citizen of his community, and was honest and upright. He married Susanna Gring, who was born in 1839, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Kessler) Gring, the former a farmer and carpet weaver in Lancaster county. They became the parents of ten children: Elizabeth, who married John Kramer, of Brecknock; Otis, who married Maggie Schweitzer; Emery; Nathaniel, who married Mary Griffith; Emeline, who married Harvey Hoffert; Susan, who married Michael Witwer; Charles, who married Bessie Kachel; Franklin, who married Cassie Trostle; Harry K.; and Theodore.

(VI) Emery Schweitzer, son of Benaniah, was born April 29, 1864, and was educated in the township schools, which he attended until he was eighteen years of age. He was early trained to farm work, and remained at home, assisting his father, until he attained his majority. He continued at home working for wages from that time until 1892, when he took a trip through the West, going to San Jose, Cal., where he was in the employ of the famous lawyer, D. M. Delmas, recently so much in the public eye as the defender of Harry K. Thaw in New York City. Mr. Schweitzer remained there for a period of three years, working in the vineyard. In the latter part of 1905 he went to St. Paul, Minn., and from there to Faribault, Minn., where he remained from July to November of that year. His western trip was quite a success, and as well a most enjoyable experience. Returning to his native county, he began farming the original homestead of the family in Brecknock township, which consists now of 210 acres of the best land in this section. He and his brothers are successful farmers and truckers. They attend the Reading market once or twice a week the whole year round.

In political belief Mr. Schweitzer is a Democrat, but he has given little time to public affairs, his own business engrossing his entire time and attention. However, he was induced to serve one term as township auditor. He is a Lutheran member of the Allegheny Union Church. He was president of the Maple Grove Sunday-school, and was also organist for a time. He is a worthy representative of an intelligent family, and is a man of sound judgment and of considerable tact and ability in dealing with his fellow-men.

(VI) Harry K. Sweitzer, son of Benaniah, and brother of Emery, was born June 29, 1881. He grew up on the farm and after attending the township schools entered the Adamstown high school, then in charge of Prof. Henry Matz. In the spring of 1898 he entered the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, in the E Division, but left as a Junior in 1900 to engage in farming. He began for himself in 1907. In politics he is a Jeffersonian Democrat, and in 1906 he served efficiently as register assessor of his township. He is a Lutheran member of the Allegheny Church, and has been an official member of that Sunday-school. In 1907 he married Mary E. Zerbe, daughter of William and Ellen (Frees) Zerbe, of Brecknock township, Lancaster county.

(VI) Theodore Schweitzer, son of Benaniah and brother to Emery and Harry K., was born on the home farm on Aug. 4, 1883. He obtained a fair education in the Maple Grove school, and early learned the duties pertaining to the successful management of a farm. In 1907 he and his brother Emery bought the father's fine farm of 210 acres, and this they now jointly cultivate. In May, 1904, Mr. Schweitzer was married to Viola Kramer, daughter of Harvey Z. Kramer, a well-known tobacco dealer. Mrs. Schweitzer is a highly educated woman. She attended the Keystone State Normal, and taught school before her marriage, two terms at the Maple Grove school and two terms at Gebhart's school. Mr. and Mrs. Schweitzer have a son, Mark D., born Oct. 19, 1905. They are Lutheran members of the Allegheny Church, and in politics he is a Democrat.

(V) Augustus W. Schweitzer, son of John and brother of Benaniah, is the merchant and postmaster at Hummel's store, Brecknock township. He was born May 30, 1839. He was a farmer's son, and he has not departed from his early training, but has devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits. He owns a tract of seventy acres and attends the Reading market. In 1872 he purchased his property from Daniel Hummel, after whom the post-office was named, and he began trading in merchandise on a small scale. Since then he has conducted the store and served as postmaster. As a Democrat like all the Schweitzers, he has taken an interest in public matters, and has been school director of the township. He and his family are Lutherans, and attend the Allegheny Union Church. In 1869 he was married to Mary Ann Paulsgrove, who was born May 1, 1847, daughter of Jacob and Anna Mary (Rintz) Paulsgrove, and eight children were born of this union, namely: Annie, who married Fred Mint, of Brecknock township; Ella, who married Mahlon Ziemer, a sawmill proprietor of Brecknock; Howard A., at home; Irwin J., who married Bessie Sengner, and lives in Brecknock; Irene, wife of Henry Ziemer, of Brecknock; Raymond A., a mute, at home; Emanuel, who died in infancy; and Elva, at home. The family are very popular in the community.

CHRISTIAN UMBLE STOLTZFUS, a minister of the Amish Church, and a highly respected citizen of Caernarvon township, Berks county, where he is operating a fine farm of seventy acres, was born Aug. 3, 1845, near Morgantown, son of John and Elizabeth (Umble) Stoltzfus.

Nicholas Stoltzfus, the ancestor of this old and honored Berks county family, came in 1766 from Zweibrucken, Germany, to America, and with his children, a son and three daughters, settled on a farm near Reading. He is buried in the old Reading cemetery along the Schuylkill river. His son, Christian, was but sixteen years of age when he arrived in this country. Here he married (first) a Miss Garver, by whom he had three sons; John, Jacob and Christian, all of whom are buried in the Moyer burying ground, the mother being buried near Reading. The father married (second) the widow Lantz, whose maiden name was King, and who had by her first marriage two sons: John and Samuel Lantz. To her marriage with Mr. Stoltzfus there were born these children: Abraham, Daniel, Solomon, Catherine Elizabeth, Anna, Barbara, Esther and Magdalene, all buried in the Mill Creek burying ground.

Christian Stoltzfus, son of Christian by his first marriage, married Anna Blank, by whom he had these children: Samuel m. Elizabeth, daughter of David Boiler, deceased in 1860, aged forty-five; Christian; John; Catherine; Rebecca; Anna; Barbara; Elizabeth; and Susanna m. a Mr. Lapp.

John Stoltzfus, son of Christian and Anna (Blank) Stoltzfus, and father of Christian U., was born Jan. 13, 1810, and was married, March 7, 1830, to Miss Elizabeth Umble. She died Oct. 21, 1853, and her husband, March 27, 1897. Mr. and Mrs. Stoltzfus had these children: Anna, born March 27, 1831, m. Christian Lapp; Mary, born April 25, 1832, and Jacob, born Sept. 22, 1833, are both deceased; John was born Sept. 11, 1835; Jonas was born May 19, 1837; Fannie, born Sept. 17, 1840, m. Henry Fisher; Daniel was born Oct. 29, 1841; Henry, born Jan. 3, 1843, died in December, 1901; Christian U.; and Elizabeth, born Feb. 20, 1849, m. Joel Fisher, of Lancaster county, born Nov. 1, 1851. Mr. Stoltzfus was married (second) Feb. 5, 1857, to Elizabeth Nofsinger, who was born Jan. 16, 1820, and to them two children were born: J. Bena, July 22, 1859, m. John Schmucker; and Isaac, Dec. 15, 1861.

Christian U. Stoltzfus was educated in the public schools of New Holland, Lancaster county, and after-completing his literary training engaged in agricultural pursuits, at which he has continued ever since. He now owns a beautiful farm of seventy acres, located in Caernarvon township. Mr. Stoltzfus is a minister in the Amish Church. In politics he is a Republican. His property is a portion of the old Morgan homestead, and he resides in a large stone structure which bears the date of 1731 and which was erected by Isaac Morgan.

Christian U. Stoltzfus married Malinda Mast, born Oct. 2, 1852, near Morgantown, and four children have been born to this union: (1) John H., born Aug. 21, 1875, m. Priscilla Mast, daughter of Stephen and Catherine (Ash) Mast, by whom he has three children,—Myra, born Nov. 14, 1902; Malinda, March 23, 1905; and Martha, Dec. 11, 1902. (2) Lydia was born in 1887. (3) Sylvanus and (4) Stephen.

BENJAMIN D. DRUCKENMILLER, a well-known business man of Kutztown, Pa., who is engaged as an ice-cream manufacturer, confectioner and proprietor of a restaurant on Main street, was born Nov. 12, 1855, on his father's farm in Hereford township, Berks county, son of Enos and Elizabeth N. (Desch) Druckenmiller.

Enos Drunckenmiller was born Dec. 14, 1821, and died of apoplexy at Zieglersville, Lehigh county, March 29, 1899. He was a mechanic and farmer all his life, and was an elder of Zieglersville Lutheran Church, where he is buried. He was on the building committee when the new church was erected, and took a profound interest in the work of the church and Sunday-school, teaching in the latter for many years. In life he was honored and respected and in death he was missed and mourned. Mr. Druckenmiller married Elizabeth N. Desch, daughter of George and Marguerite (Marsteller) Desch, and to this union there were born children as follows: Benneville died of measles and brain fever, aged twenty-two years; Rev. Joel settled in Michigan about 1880, and serves a charge at Rogers City; Tilghman m. Barbara Frey; Elizabeth m. Milton Kleinsmith; Henry m. Ellen Wagenhorst, and resides at Atlanta, Ga.; David m. Katie Nuss, and resides at Sellersville; Benjamin D.; Emma died of diphtheria in her ninth year; Mayme m. (first) William Weiss, and (second) Hiram Welker; Susanna m. Benjamin Frey; Rosa m. Allen W. Sheimer; Sallie m. John Sweitzer; George m. Ella Lersh; Maggie m. William Shubert; Laura m. Richard Reese; and Annie m. Allen Snyder.

Benjamin D. Druckenmiller was reared on his father's farm, and attended the public schools of the locality. He lived with his parents until his twenty-third year, when he hired himself out to a farmer in Roxboro, Philadelphia county, for one year, and for two years worked on a farm in Maxatawny township. In 1881 he commenced working in the Kutztown creamery, and there he continued for twenty-four years. During the first five years he was an employe, but in 1887 he bought the place. He averaged 1,800,000 pounds of milk per annum, but in December, 1905, he rented the place, and engaged in the ice-cream and restaurant business. Mr. Druckenmiller and his family worship in St. John's Lutheran Church of Kutztown, and he is a member of the choir. He is independent in political matters, and does not hesitate to vote for the man he thinks is the best one for the place, irrespective of party lines. He owns a nice brick residence on Noble street, next to the creamery.

In June, 1885, Mr. Druckenmiller married Caroline Deisher, daughter of John D. and Hannah (Kohler) Deisher, and two children have been born to this union, Harvey Luther and Mabel Cora.

The original form of the name was Truckenmiller, but in some way the first letter became changed to D. The following immigrants of the name of Truckenmiller are recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives as having come to Pennsylvania:

Sebastian Truckenmiller and wife Catharine came on the ship "Pink" in 1732.

John Michael Truckenmiller came in the ship "Francis and Elizabeth" in 1742.

Jon. Ludwig Truckenmiller came on the ship "Robert and Alice" in 1742.

Peter Truckenmiller came on the ship "Beulah" in 1756.

The Federal census report of 1790 records George Truckenmiller a resident of Hereford township, Berks Co., Pa. In that year he had a son who was under sixteen years of age, and one daughter. The same report records Charles Truckenmiller as also of Hereford township, and the head of a family consisting of nine members, four males and five females. The same report records John Truckenmiller as a resident of Rockland township, which adjoined Hereford, as the head of a family, made up of father and mother, one son and two sons under sixteen years of age and three females. George, Charles and John Truckenmiller are said to be the sons of Johan Michael Truckenmiller, who landed in Philadelphia on the ship "Francis and Elizabeth," Sept. 21, 1742.

Berks Court Records show that in 1801 letters of administration were granted from Frederick Truckenmiller to Louisa Truckenmiller, probably his wife.

GEORGE J. MILLER, a well-known resident of Mount Penn borough, whose substantial brick residence is situated on Twenty-third street, was born Aug. 14, 1864, in Reading, Pa., son of Joseph H. and Elizabeth (Merget) Miller.

Joseph H. Miller was born May 29, 1839, at Honeybrook, Chester county, Pa., and when a young man learned the machinist's trade. In 1885 he went to Chicago, Ill., where he spent one and a half years, but returned East to become foreman of the Reading Hardware Works, where he remained seventeen years. This position he resigned to become connected with the Navy Yard, at Washington, D. C., where he is now employed. In political matters Mr. Miller is a Republican. He was married Jan. 9, 1862, to Elizabeth Merget, born March 30, 1844, who died Nov. 25, 1886, in Reading, daughter of Jacob and Helena Merget, and to this union there were born children as follows: Charles A., a machinist of Reading, who married Amanda Dersch; Wilmer J., who is single and a moulder of Reading; Mary H., who married A. L. Hook, of Washington, D. C.; Dorothy, who married W. F. Mohr, of Reading; Alice A., a dressmaker of South Fifth street, Reading; Rosa, who also lives on South Fifth street; Katie G., who for six years has been a teacher in the public schools of Reading; and Elizabeth V., who has been a teacher for three years.

George J. Miller attended the public schools of Reading until about fifteen years of age, and then learned his trade with Miller, Printz & Company, of South Ninth street, manufacturers of all kinds of machinery, with whom he remained for a full apprenticeship of five years. Since that time he has followed the trade as a journeyman. He worked in all for Miller, Printz & Co., for a period of eight years, and in 1886 connected himself with the Scott Foundry, where he remained one year. He then entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company, but since 1902 he has been working in the tube works of the Reading Iron Company's plant. In the spring of 1905 Mr. Miller erected a substantial residence on Twenty-third street, Mount Penn borough, and here he has lived since Sept. 26th of that year, previous to this time having been a resident of the Second ward of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are attendants of St. Luke's Lutheran Church of Reading. In political matters he is a Republican, while fraternally he is connected with the P. O. S. of A., No. 417, Birdsboro; the Reading Hardware Co. Beneficial Association; and Reading Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.

On Oct. 4, 1890, Mr. Miller was married to Annie E. Borkert, and to them were born two daughters: Edith Violet, and Alva, the latter of whom died when three years old.

Daniel Borkert, the grandfather of Mrs. Miller, was born in 1800 in Reading, and died in 1880. He was the son of Caspar Borkert, the founder of the family, and was a bricklayer by trade. He married Catherine Gontz, and to them were born twelve children, as follows: William, born in 1825; Daniel, born in 1829, died in 1886; Franklin, born in 1832; Mary, born in 1835; Sarah, born in 1834, died in childhood; Albert, father of Mrs. Miller; Augustus, born in 1838; Richard, born in 1840; Susan, born in 1843; Amanda, born in 1845; John, born in 1847; and Thomas, born in 1849, died in childhood.

Albert Borkert, who has been a lifelong resident of Reading, Pa., was born in that city Sept. 14, 1835, and was married in 1858 to Malinda Wentzel, by whom he had twelve children: Thomas m. Alice Reber and lives in Reading; Sallie m. George Faber, of Reading; Annie E., Mrs. Miller; Susan, who died in childhood; Kate m. Harry Swoyer, deceased; Emma, who died in infancy; Maggie m. Jacob Burkholder, of Philadelphia; Harry, single, at home; Nora m. Charles Eagle, of Reading; Bessie, m. Howard Koch, a tailor of Reading; Lillie m. Aloysius Wondrough; and Albert, who died in childhood.

PEIFER. The Peifer family of Spring township, Berks county, is worthily represented by several substantial and highly respected citizens, descendants of the sturdy German race that has done so much for the development and progress of the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

(I) Frantz Peifer was a farmer in the town of Marienberg, about two hours from Hachenburg, Nassau, Germany. He married Elizabeth Kessler, and they had children: Gerhart, Christ, Frantz, Martin, Barbara and Elizabeth.

(II) Martin Peifer, son of Frantz, was born in Nassau, Germany, at his father's farm, July 26, 1794, and came to America with his brother in 1818, landing at Baltimore. He at once became a redemptioner with George Gernand, who paid eighty dollars for his passage at Baltimore. His bondage lasted two years, and he then worked at farm labor until in 1832 he bought a tract of thirty-one acres, to which he added in later years. At his death he left an estate of about $20,000. He was genuinely respected, and the competence he acquired was the result of hard work, economy and good management. He was a member of Hain's Church, to which he contributed liberally. He died Dec. 7, 1870. On Dec. 31, 1826, he married Hannah Krick, born June 6, 1803 (daughter of Peter Krick), who died Sept. 30, 1872. They had two children, Jeremiah and Peter. The former, born Dec. 22, 1828, died unmarried Sept. 20, 1895, and was buried at Hain's Church, in the old churchyard. The parents are also buried in the old churchyard, there being no cemetery when they died.

(III) Peter Peifer, son of Martin, was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, April 17, 1840. He lived with and worked for his father until he was thirty years of age, in 1870 beginning to farm one of his father's farms, continuing thus until 1894. On June 21, 1894, he moved to Fritztown, where the year before he had built a nice brick house on the Fritztown road, and there he and his family have since resided. He owns one of the finest farms in Lower Heidelberg township, consisting of 154 acres, well improved with a brick residence which Mr. Peifer erected in 1886, with ten good rooms, double porches, and surrounded by a beautiful large yard. Excellent water is found on the place. He owns in all six farms, a total of 800 acres of valuable land, including the original homestead near Hain's church, consisting of sixty acres; a farm of forty-nine acres near Sinking Spring; a farm of 105 acres near Kulp's Mill in Spring township (which he bought from his son Robert L.); another of 187 acres in the same township; and he bought the old Marshall homestead in Spring township, consisting of 125 acres at the Cacoosing. He also owns the Hain's Woolen Mills, located one and one-half miles back of Wernersville, with one of the best water-powers in the country. The buildings are of brick, three stories high, 30x60 feet. Mr. Peifer is one of the most substantial and successful farmer in his section. He has, however, not confined his real estate investments to farms, also owning six dwellings in Fritztown, which he rents. He has 100 acres of woodland. In politics Mr. Peifer is an ardent Democrat, firmly believing in the old Jacksonian principles. He is a firm adherent to Free Trade doctrines, and delights in tariff discussion, believing in a constitutional tariff which no President need fear to sign. He is well informed, and skilled in argument. He is a Reformed member of Hain's Church, and has a fine lot there.

On Oct. 19, 1869, Mr. Peifer was married to Mary Hassler, born Dec. 10, 1838, daughter of Benjamin and Sophia (Ebling) Hassler, the former a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township. Her paternal grandfather was John Hassler. Three children have been born to them, namely: (1) Robert L. is mentioned below. (2) Hannah E., born Jan. 30, 1874, married Frank N. Brown, of Fritztown. (3) Jefferson D., born Oct. 28, 1881, is at home.

IV) Robert L. Peifer of Brookside, engaged in the coal and feed business, was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, Sept. 4, 1870, son of Peter and Mary (Hassler) Peifer. He attended the public schools of his native township and then was employed with his father, and afterward farmed for himself on his father's farms in Spring township. Later he went to Sinking Spring, where he bought the Sharman farm of forty-nine acres, upon which he farmed two years. He then went on his father's farm in Lower Heidelberg township for one year; then went to Spring township and bought one of Eli Reigel's farms, near Kulp's Mill, of 105 acres, and remained there until he came to his present place of business, in November, 1908. Mr. Peifer built a brick warehouse 30 by 40 feet, three stories high, and is located at Angelica and Good streets, where he does a wholesale and retail business. He has one of the best equipped plants in Pennsylvania, with every facility for transferring the coal from the cars to the wagons by machinery; a shovel is never needed except to correct the weight on the scale. The plant cost about two thousand dollars.

Mr. Peifer married Louisa Fry, daughter of Eli Fry, of Spring township, and has the following children: Martin, Hannah (living with her grandfather Peifer), Emma, Peter and Jay. Mr. Peifer is a Democrat and a member of Hain's Church.

ALLEN S. UNGER has been a resident of Sinking Spring, Berks county, for forty years, and has been engaged in his present business there since 1874. He is a native of Perry township, this county, born at Shoemakersville Sept. 22, 1847, and belongs to one of the old families of the county. The branch to which he is related was early settled in Windsor township. All the Ungers are noted for musical tastes and ability and a number have attained prominence as professional musicians, among these being Prof. C. H. Unger and his son, Solomon W. Unger, of Reading, well-known teachers of music. Frederick Unger, of Leesport, Pa., the war correspondent, is also a member of this family.

(I) Christian Unger, the emigrant ancestor of the family, came to this country on the ship "Edinburgh," landing at Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1752. In 1756 he was a taxable resident of Greenwich township, Berks county. He had these children: Michael, who was a taxable in Greenwich township in 1759; John, who settled in the vicinity of Shamokin, Pa.; Herman; one son (name unknown) who settled in the State of Maryland; Susanna, who married John Schappel; Elizabeth, who married George Heffley; and Mrs. Christian Reeser.

Peter Piper

(II) Herman Unger was born in Greenwich township. He married Elizabeth Keim, and they had the following children: Daniel, who settled in Windsor township, and who had an only son Isaac; Samuel, who also settled in Windsor township; Jacob, who settled in Wabash county, Ind.; Abraham, who settled in Sandusky county, Ohio; Christina, who married John Hollenbach; and Mrs. Coleman.

(III) Samuel Unger, son of Herman, was born in Windsor township in October, 1793, and died July 6, 1843. He was a prominent citizen of his day, owning about five hundred acres of land in the vicinity of Shoemakersville, where he spent his entire life. He was married Dec. 25, 1819, to Elizabeth Snyder, daughter of Philip and Elizabeth Snyder, and they had children as follows: Anna, born Nov. 24, 1820; John, born Aug. 2, 1822, who died in infancy; Samuel, born July 9, 1824; Daniel, born May 27, 1826; Elizabeth, born Dec. 24, 1828; Catherine, born Sept. 29, 1831, who married Abraham Witman, and died Sept. 27, 1902; Reuben, born April 3, 1834; and Maria, born Dec. 29, 1837.

(IV) Daniel Unger, born May 27, 1826, at Shoemakersville, lived near Bernville, where he died, aged seventy-five years. He is buried at the Blue Mountain Church. Mr. Unger was a farmer by occupation, and also carried on cigar-making. Outside of his own affairs his greatest interest was in the church, and he was a well and favorably known citizen. He married Rebecca Schappel, daughter of Brig.-Gen. Jeremiah Schappel, of Berks county, and to them was born a family of nine children, namely: Angelina married Isaac Bunes; Sassaman died unmarried; Emeline m. Aaron Degler; Annette died unmarried; Levi, who lives at Mt. Pleasant, Pa., m. Kate Weise; Allen S. is mentioned below; Hettie m. James Annsbach; Mary m. Charles Clouser; Daniel died young.

(V) Allen S. Unger was only two and a half years old when his parents moved to a location between Shartlesville and Bernville, where he was reared upon the farm and continued to live until 1864. In that year he went to Mahanoy City, Pa., where he worked in the coal mines for three years. He returned thence to Berks county, and on Nov. 16, 1869 came to Sinking Spring, where he has since made his home. Here he learned his trade of marble and stone cutter from Henry Hettinger, whom he succeeded in business in the fall of 1874. He has carried the establishment on ever since, making a specialty of monument work, and also dealing in marble and granite, and he has all the work he can attend to, his patronage being steady and lucrative. For some years he employed from three to five men. He is honest in all his relations with his fellow-men, and respected wherever known. Industry and economy enabled him to accumulate some property, and he still owns a house in Sinking Spring, but he disposed of considerable real estate which he formerly possessed in order to lessen his cares.

On Nov. 19, 1872, Mr. Unger was married to Amanda E. Ruth, born Aug. 23, 1844, daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Ruth) Ruth, of Spring township. Mrs. Unger passed to her reward Feb. 5, 1905. Like her husband and family she was a devout member of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring, and was ever an active worker in the congregation and a teacher in the Sunday-school for many years. She was a member of the church choir from her youth until her death. Mr. Unger, also, has been prominent in the work of the church, and he was the choir leader from 1875 until 1889, beside taking part in other phases of its life. Since 1889 he has served as janitor of the church.

Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Unger, namely: Lottie M. married Dr. V. M. Murray, of Patton, Cambria Co., Pa., and has one child, John Allen; George I., an electrician, living at Newcastle, Del., married Fannie Tembler, and has one daughter, Edna Marie.

BENJAMIN BRIGLE, a well known citizen of Heidelberg township, Berks county, who owns an excellent farm of fifty-five acres three miles south of Robesonia, in the South Mountain, was born May 18, 1840, in Heidelberg township, above Robesonia, son of Adam and Sarah (Foltz) Brigle.

Adam Brugle (as the name was spelled in German), the grandfather of Benjamin, was a native of Germany, and came to this country from Germany via Rotterdam on the ship "Commerce," landing at Philadelphia Oct. 9, 1803. Soon thereafter he located in Heidelberg township, Berks county, above Robesonia, in the South Mountain, and died well advanced in years, being buried in the Corner Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. Mr. Brigle married Barbara Weinhold, and to them were born these children: Isaac, born Dec. 12, 1824, died unmarried March 23, 1882; Daniel; Adam; George lived and died at Hokendauqua, Pa.; William died in Lebanon, where he lived with his children; Ann died unmarried; Ellen also died unmarried; Polly married Charles Kepley; Elizabeth married Fred Foreman; Sarah married and remove to the West.

Adam Brigle, father of Benjamin, was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, Oct. 17, 1817, and died at Womelsdorf Station, in May, 1890. For a number of years he owned and cultivated a tract in the South Mountain, consisting of fourteen acres. After his wife's death he sold this land and removed to Womelsdorf Station, where he lived until his death. He was a good and useful citizen, and was buried in St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, of which he was deacon, elder and trustee for several years. Mr. Brigle married Sarah Foltz, born in Heidelberg township, June 13, 1817, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Hossler) Foltz. They were married Aug. 12, 1838, by Rev. William Hendel, and had eleven children as follows: Benjamin, born May 18, 1840; Amelia, born Jan. 27, 1842, died in May, 1843; Amanda, born May 14, 1844; Isaac, born Dec. 12, 1845; Barbara, born Oct. 20, 1847, lives at Robesonia; Elinda E., born May 5, 1850, died in July, 1855; Adam, born in April, 1852, died in November, 1854; Sarah, born July 20, 1853; Angelina, born Oct. 26, 1855; Lemontina Louise, born July 3, 1858, married James Wenrich, of Robesonia; and Hannah, born in July, 1861, died in September, 1864.

Benjamin Brigle attended the schools of his district, and at the outbreak of the Civil war went to the front as a private in his country's defense. Mr. Brigle is tall, erect and of commanding appearance, and made a brave and faithful soldier. After his return from the war, he worked in the Robesonia furnace working there for a period of nineteen years. Later he purchased a good farm of fifty-five acres, three miles south of Robesonia, in the South Mountain, where he has resided to the present time. Mr. Brigle has specialized to some extent in fruit growing, has brought his property to a high state of cultivation, and through hard and earnest effort has cleared it of all incumbrances. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family are Lutheran members of the Corner Church.

Mr. Brigle was married to Mary Hoover, daughter of William Hoover, of Heidelberg township, and to this union there have been born five children, all of whom are single: Fannie E.; Adam; William E.; Mamie M.; and Isaac, who died in childhood.

JOHN G. MOSSER, a well-known citizen and substantial business man of Cumru township, Berks county, who is carrying on an extensive butchering business at Mohnton, was born Jan. 14, 1858, in Cumru township, son of Nicholas Mosser.

Nicholas Mosser, great-grandfather of John G., came from Germany and settled in Brecknock township, Berks county, and it is traditional that he was a brother of that Mosser, around whom centered the great litigation for valuable coal lands in Schuylkill county. Besides several daughters, he had two sons; Samuel, who died a bachelor; and John. The latter was born in Brecknock township, and is buried at Allegheny Church. He was a farmer and owned land near Alleghenyville. He and his wife, Maria Hornberger, daughter of Conrad Hornberger, had these children: Polly, who married Abel Major; John, a blacksmith who married Betz Adams, lived in Lancaster, later came to Cumru township, and died in Spring; Rebecca married Reuben Messinger; Benjamin, who was a laborer of Cumru township, m. Polly Kissinger, and had two children, William and Mary; Nicholas; Daniel, also a laborer of Cumru township, m. Catherine Stafford, and had these children,—James, Henry, Augustus, Lydia, Catherine and Sarah; and Catherine, m. Jacob Schnabel.

Nicholas Mosser, father of John G., was born in Cumru township, Berks county, Oct. 22, 1819. He attended the pay schools of his day from thirty to sixty days each winter, and these schools were from three to four miles from his home. Until twenty-five years of age Mr. Mosser worked on his father's farm, and he then started out on his own account working on farms, at carpentering and as a stone mason. From 1856 to 1896 he lived on a small tract of land in Cumru township, and in the latter year retired from active life and has lived ever since at Mohnsville. He has always been an ardent Democrat, and for four years was supervisor of Cumru township. His religious belief is that of the Reformed Church, which he attends at Gouglersville, and he is elder there.

In January, 1855, Mr. Mosser was married to Sarah Grill, daughter of Adam and Catherine (Moler) Grill, and to this union there have been born ten children: Frank m. Beckie Mengel; John; Catherine m. Josephus Hornberger; Benneville G. m. Sallie Bickel; Adam m. Emma Weidner; Henry m. Agnes Hatt; Charles m. Maggie Kessler; Sallie m. Frank W. Schlichter; Mame m. Hiram M. Griffith; and Amanda m. William C. Miller. Nicholas Mosser, the father of these children, is one of the oldest men in Cumru township, and is remarkably well preserved, possessing a marvelous memory. He is a good conversationalist, and relates many interesting incidents of the earlier days of Cumru township, vividly recalling happenings of his childhood days. He can still remember, and often points out the spot, where, when he was three years old, his father shot a pet dog. Mr. Mosser furnished the data for the foregoing record, on Jan. 3, 1907.

John G. Mosser attended the township schools and was reared on the farm, and when a young man learned the hatting trade, also working for some time as carpenter. In 1883 he became head butcher at the County Alms House, a position in which he continued for one year, and then engaged in butchering business, which he has followed ever since at Mohnton. He has a large and ever increasing trade, having two delivery wagons constantly on the go, and his trade extends also into Reading. Carrying nothing but first-class goods, and dealing always with honesty and fairness, he has won the confidence and patronage of the community, where he is known as a substantial business man and good citizen. Mr. Mosser is a member of the Gouglersville Reformed Church, and for a period of fourteen years has been trustee of the church. His fraternal connections are with the P. O. S. of A., Camp 311, and the Knights of Pythias, in both of which orders he is very popular.

Mr. Mosser married Emma Louders, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Miller) Louders, and to this union were born children as follows: Charles, who is assisting his father, married Miss Sidney Wanner; Minnie, who is a trained nurse, is at the Homeopathic Hospital, Reading; Eva, who was a graduate of the Cumru township high school at the age of fourteen years, being one of the youngest of her class; Neoma, who is also a graduate of the same school; Pearl and Alverta, attending school; and John.

Mr. and Mrs. Mosser and their pleasant family, reside in their home in Mohnton, and are among the most highly esteemed people in their community, where they have many friends.

Reifsnyder

JOHN R. FOLK, a prominent citizen of Mt. Penn borough, who has been closely identified with the growth and development of this section for some years, and where he is now serving as assessor and tax collector, was born Nov. 9, 1866, in Lower Alsace township, Berks county, Pa., son of John A. and Hannah Mahela (Reifsnyder) Folk, and grandson of Jacob and Lydia (Aldenderfer) Folk.

John A. Folk, father of John R., was born Sept. 23, 1834, in Richmond township, and died Dec. 4, 1894, in Mount Penn, where for many years he had been engaged in wheelwrighting. Mr. Folk owned his own home in the borough three weeks before his death, when he sold out. In political matters he was a Democrat, and served ably as a school director in Lower Alsace township. Mr. Folk and his family were members of Spies's Church until the organization of Trinity Lutheran Church at Mount Penn, when they identified themselves with the latter, Mr Folk becoming an official member. In the year 1858, Mr. Folk was united in marriage with Hannah Mahela Reifsynsder, daughter of Samuel Reifsnyder, and to them were born children as follows: Mary, born Feb. 15, 1859, married Thomas Hartman of Reading; Catherine, born Sept. 21, 1860, married William H. Homan, of Mount Penn; Emma R., born July 30, 1862, died Jan. 11, 1868; Charles A., born Sept. 16, 1864, married Hattie Machmer of Reading; John R.; Sallie A., born Oct. 3, 1869, married John Keim of Reading; Samuel, born Sept. 11, 1870, married Mary Mohn; Jacob, born June 4, 1873, married Mary Stoudt of Reading, where they now reside; William, born March 5, 1875, died Nov. 3, 1877; Lydia, born March 29, 1878, died Nov. 5, 1882; Bessie, born Sept. 3, 1880, and Sadie, born Nov. 12, 1882.

John R. Folk attended the public schools of Lower Alsace township until fourteen years of age, and then worked for three years on the farm of Judge G. A. Endlich's father. For the next fourteen years he was a pipe cutter at the Reading Iron Works, but in 1893 he engaged in the retail milk business, supplying a large route in Reading and disposing of a daily average of 110 quarts. This business, however, he was forced to abandon in 1897 on account of ill health. In that year he was appointed supervisor of Lower Alsace township, an office in which he served very efficiently until the incorporation of Mount Penn in 1903. In 1898 he was appointed tax collector of Lower Alsace township, served in that position until the incorporation of the borough, and has continued in the office to the present time giving general satisfaction. He has also been assessor of the borough since its incorporation. Mr. Folk is a man of high sense of honor, and he commands the esteem and confidence of the entire community. He has been thrifty and industrious and resides in his own home on Cumberland street, which he erected in 1896. In political matters he is a Democrat, and in addition to his present office, has been delegate to numerous county conventions. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Friendship, No. 28, of Reading, and Neversink Tent, Modern Woodmen of America, of Reading. He is a member of Faith Lutheran Church of Mount Penn, of which he was an elder and treasurer from 1893 to 1907, and at the expiration of his term of office was elected deacon. Mrs. Folk is connected with Zion's Reformed Church of Reading.

On June 2, 1888, Mr. Folk was married to Hattie Schucker, born Feb. 8, 1867, daughter of William and Maria (Ginder) Schucker, the former born in Richmond township, Sept. 12, 1831. To. Mr. and Mrs. Folk have been born children as follows: Edna M., born Oct. 11, 1889; Calvin M., born Sept. 5, 1891; Cora E., born May 2, 1894; William Raymond, born Aug. 27, 1897; J. Harold, born Jan. 1, 1901; and J. Elmer, born July 15, 1906.

FRANK W. SLICHTER, a resident of Mohnton, Pa., where he owns considerable property, was born Feb. 26, 1867, on what is now the Yocum farm in Cumru township, son of David and Catherine (Warner) Slichter.

The grandfather of Frank W. Slichter, who came from Alsace township, was a farmer by occupation, and met his death accidentally while shaking an opossum out of a tree. His children were: Jacob, deceased, was a minister of the Methodist Church; Joseph is in the trucking and fruit business in Robeson township; Henry, of Exeter township; and David.

David Slichter also met an accidental death in his fifty-sixth year. He was a farmer by occupation in Cumru township, near the Old Yeager farm, now owned by Mr. Yocum, of Reading. He served as a private in the Civil war. Mr. Slichter was a member of the Lutheran Church, serving as an elder at Gouglersville, where he is buried. In politics he was a Democrat, but never took an active part therein. He was married to Catherine Warner, daughter of Levi Warner, and she died in 1904, having been the mother of these children: Mary, who married Ellsworth Mills, of Sinking Spring, Berks county; Frank W.; John, who married Sallie Keller, of Mohnton; and William, who married Mary Kessler, of Mohnton.

Frank W. Slichter attended the schools of Cumru township, and as a boy worked with his father. At the age of sixteen years he began to learn the hatting business at Edison with George Hendel & Son, with whom he continued for five years and then went to Reading, being with John Hendel for five years, Henry Hendel for three years and with J. G. Mohn & Company for five years. He then engaged in business with Isaac D. Spatz and Joseph Hornberger, under the firm name of the Globe Hat Company, as superintendent and general manager, continuing with this firm for four years, this being at Mohnton. Since 1901 he has been employed by J. G. Mohn & Company, at Reading, as a skilled mechanic in the hat department.

Mr. Slichter married Sallie Mosser, daughter of Nicholas and Sallie (Grill) Mosser, whose sketch will appear elsewhere in this volume, and to this union there have been born: Earl, an apprentice to the molder's trade; and Emma, attending school. In his political belief Mr. Slichter is a Democrat, and he served as school director of Cumru township from 1903 to 1906, with much ability, being greatly interested in educational matters. He refused a second nomination. He is interested in the movement to have Mohnton made a borough, and is a leader in that enterprise. He is a member, trustee and steward of the Salem Evangelical Association of Mohnton, and a teacher and treasurer of the Sunday-school. He owns five fine properties in Mohnton. Mr. Slichter is a leading raiser of poultry, having some of the best stock in the county.

HARRY J. PAUL, tinsmith and dealer in stoves at Strausstown, Berks county, was born Nov. 27, 1875, at Shartlesville, in Upper Bern township, this county. He is a grandson of Daniel Paul, a stone mason, who lived and diel at Reading, Pa., and whose children were Daniel, Irwin, Emma (who married Joseph Dann) and John A.

John A. Paul was born at Reading. He has long been a resident of Shartlesville, where he is still engaged at painting, being a tradesman of excellent reputation. He married Rebecca Reichert, daughter of Jacob Reichert, and to them have been born five children: Harry J., Irwin (living at Scull Hill), Katie (deceased), Jennie (deceased) and Calvin (deceased).

Harry J. Paul received his education in the schools of Upper Tulpehocken township. He learned the painter's trade under his father, and followed that occupation for a period of six years, until his enlistment for service in the Spanish-American war. He entered Company E, 4th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and went with his command to Porto Rico, where he was in active service for six months under General Miles. Returning home, he was engaged at farm work for a few years, in 1902 embarking in his present business, in which he has enjoyed a good patronage from the start. He employs three or four men constantly, doing all kinds of roofing, roof drain and repair work, and beside this regular line deals in automobiles as agent for the Ford car and conducts a repair shop for automobiles. Mr. Paul holds the contract for driving the mail between Hamburg and Strausstown, but at present lets this contract, though he drove it himself for two years. He became very well known in this connection throughout this section of the county.

On Oct. 8, 1898, Mr. Paul married Miss Sallie Himmelberger, daughter of Levi W. and Sarah (Miller) Himmelberger. Mr. Paul is a member of the Reformed Church, and in politics quite active as a Democrat. He has served as committeeman, election judge and inspector of elections, and was elected constable of Upper Tulpehocken township in April, 1908.

CHARLES SCHUEZ, one of the representative farmers of Caernarvon township, Berks county, whose farm is located near Joanna, Pa., was born in 1861, in Wurtemberg, Germany, son of Paul Schuez, who was born in 1828 and died in 1869. The mother of Mr. Schuez was born in 1830 and died in 1865. Both parents were buried in Germany. Mr. Schuez had one sister, born in 1858, who married Professor Augustus Rettisch, a teacher in the high school at Stuttgart, Wurtemberg, Germany.

Mr. Schuez spent his early life in his native country, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1885 he emigrated to America, landing in New York City, and after spending a year in Philadelphia, in March, 1886, he purchased his present farm, a fine tract of land near Joanna, Pa., and here he has continued successfully until the present time.

Mr. Schuez married Miss Rosa Amm, who was born in 1861 in Sachsen-Meiningen, Germany, daughter of Christian and Freitega (Eichhorn) Amm, natives of Germany. Christian Amm was born in 1833, and died in Philadelphia in June, 1904, while his wife, whose birth occurred in 1836, survived until January, 1905. They came to this country in 1884, and both are buried in Mount Peace cemetery, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Schuez have had three children: Sophie, born March 18, 1887; Mary, Sept. 15, 1889; and Pauline, Jan. 28, 1895.

GEORGE W. SMITH, until his death April 20, 1908, a citizen of Caernarvon township, Berks county, and who, for many years was engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits near Joanna, Pa., was born Jan. 25, 1829, near Elverson, Chester county, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Bailey) Smith.

Benjamin Smith was born in 1795, and died April 14, 1854, while his wife, who was born in 1797, passed away in 1851. Both were buried at St. Marys, Chester county. In 1835 Benjamin Smith located on the farm later owned by George W., and here he spent his life engaged in farming. He and his wife had the following children: John; Joseph; Levi; George W.; William; Phoebe, who married Robert Retten; Sara; Anna; Hannah, who married William Finger, now deceased, and lives with her brother; and Margaret.

George W. Smith engaged in agricultural pursuits all of his life. He owned a beautiful home; his farm is now operated by his son-in-law. Mr. Smith was of robust constitution, and to the time of his death retained his faculties. He was prominent in political matters, and for more than twenty years was township auditor, assessor and school director, having been elected to these positions on the Republican ticket. For over half a century Mr. Smith was a member of the Methodist Church, where he was for many years an exhorter and steward.

Mr. George W. Smith was married to Miss Matilda S. Geiger, born in 1834, and died Aug. 15, 1892. The following children were born to them: (1) Jane, born in 1855, m. John Kern, and they are the parents of these children: (a) Edgar m. a Miss Murry and had three children; (b) Frank; (c) Elsie m. William Smith; (d) Mabel lives at home; (e) Rena; and (f) Florence. (2) Emma, born in 1859, m. James Roberts, and they have three children. (a) George S. lives in Reading; (b) Roy died in 1896; and (c) Matilda. (3) Hattie, born in 1861, died in 1884. She m. Howard Jones, and lives in Unionville, Berks county. They have four children.

HENRY F. KRAMER, a successful contractor and builder, who is well known throughout Muhlenberg township, was born in Bern township, Berks county, March 24, 1856, son of Daniel R. and Catharine (Fisher) Kramer.

The name Kramer is a common one in Berks county. Bernhard Kramer, the ancestor of most of the name in the county, settled in Albany or Allemangell township. His wife was Susanna Catherina Lutz. They had a son Johannes, born Sept. 11, 1777, and baptized in Weisenburg Church on Oct. 19th following, the sponsors being Johannes Furg Hand and his wife Anna Margaretha. The birth certificate is in the hands of Daniel F. Kramer, of Bern township, who had also an interesting relic in the shape of the old road tax book of Bern, showing expenditures in that line from 1774 to 1848. The first records are made in fine German script with a quill pen.

John (Johannes) Kramer, son of Bernhard, born Sept. 11, 1777, died at the age of eighty-nine years. His wife, Catherine Ruhl, born March 29, 1780, died at the age of sixty-eight years and both are buried at Epler's Church. He became a stone mason and followed that trade in Bern township. He also owned a small tract of land situated in Bern township, between Bern and Epler's Church. His children were: Elizabeth, born Jan. 2, 1803, m. Christian Roth, and died at the age of eighty-eight years; Anna Maria, born Dec. 17, 1804, m. James Richardson, and died at the age of seventy-five years; Catharine, born Aug. 28, 1806, m. John Christ Heister, and died at the age of eighty-two years; John, born in 1807, m. Kate Bohn, and died at the age of ninety-three years; Margaret, born Jan. 12, 1809, m. Peter Harbach, and died at the age of eighty-two years; Sallie, born in 1811, m. Jacob Bady, and who died in 1904; Daniel R., born Oct. 20, 1813, m. Catharine Fisher, and died at the age of seventy-two years; Susanna, born July 25, 1816, m. Jacob Heister, and died at the age of forty-one years; Jacob, born Sept. 11, 1819, m. Mary Krick, and died at the age of seventy-six years. The average length of life of these children was seventy-eight years.

Daniel R. Kramer, son of John (Johannes), was born in Bern township Oct. 20, 1813. By trade he was a stone mason and this trade he followed all his life, in connection with farming a small tract of land in Bern township. For twenty-five years he was assessor and tax collector, and he gave good service to the public, faithfully and conscientiously performing the duties of his respective offices. He died June 21, 1886, and is buried in Bern cemetery. He was a deacon and elder in the Bern Church, and in his political faith he was a Democrat. He married Catharine Fisher, daughter of John Fisher, of Heidelberg township, and this union was blessed with children as follows: (1) A son that died in infancy. (2) John F., born May 24, 1837, enlisted for the Civil war in 1861 and served nine months. Afterward he settled in the State of Wisconsin, where he was married to Catherine Koenig, and they were blessed with four children, David, Charles, Lizzie (deceased) and Lawrence. (3) Daniel F., born in Bern township May 23, 1839, was twice married, (first) to Lovinia Lash, by whom he had five children, Maria, Milton, Ellen, Adam and Clara. He married (second) Elizabeth R. Hartman, and by her had two children, George William and Carrie (Mrs. Samuel Stout). (4) Benneville F., born in Bern township, April 25, 1841, was married to Rebecca Lerch. None of their children are living. Mr. Kramer served four years in the Civil war, and died at the age of sixty years. (5) Albert F., born in Bern township, Sept. 27, 1843, married Anna De Turk, and their union was blessed with four children, Harvey, Edith, Esther and one deceased, all of Reading. (6) Catharine, born in Bern township, May 17, 1845, married Jacob Snyder, and they were the parents of six children, Clara (married to Jonathan Reber), Ida (married to Jacob Kirkhoff), Eva (married to W. Spatz), Irwin (a farmer, married to a Miss Weitzel), Howard (married to a Miss Mogel, is at present a teacher in the West Leesport high school) and Allen (unmarried, and the overseer of public schools in New Jersey). (7) Eliza, born in Bern township, Jan. 1, 1848, is unmarried and living in the same house where she was born. (8) Louisa, born in Bern township, Aug. 8, 1850, was married three times, first to Franklin Winter (deceased), second to David Shiffert (deceased), and third to Daniel Lindemuth. (9) George F., born in Bern township March 1, 1853, died March 27, 1909, and is buried at Bern Church. He was tax collector of his township. He was twice married, (first) to Louisa Suenders, and by her had two children, Charles M. and Jennie B. He married (second) Susan E. Lerch, and by her had two daughters, Annie R. and Mary C. (10) Henry F. is mentioned below.

Henry F. Kramer was educated in the schools of Bern township, and first learned the stone mason's trade with his father, which he followed for eight years, and then learned the butcher's trade with Daniel Deem and Daniel Holdry. This was his occupation for twenty-one years, during which time he established the business stands now conducted by Mahlon Gehris, Frank Rothermel and E. K. Messenger. In 1898 he sold out to the latter two gentlemen, and engaged in the building business, his first building being at Twelfth and Robeson streets, where he erected in all seventeen buildings. He then erected forty structures on Front street, between Green and Oley, Mr. Charles Amarell being in partnership with him in this deal. Later he erected ten houses on Kutztown road, near Alsace Church. Mr. Kramer's fine residence is situated in Muhlenberg township, on the Pottsville pike, an extension of Centre avenue, Reading, where he is well known and highly esteemed.

Mr. Kramer married Emma H. Dunkelberger, a daughter of John and Mary Ann (Heck) Dunkelberger, of Spring township, and three children were born to this union: Bertha, who married Frank Rothermel, of Reading, has one child; Macie died when one and a half years old; and John is at home. In religious belief Mr. and Mrs. Kramer are Lutherans. He is a Democrat in politics and for nine years has been a member of the school board of Muhlenberg township, serving now as its president, and he was its treasurer for six consecutive years.

WELLINGTON G. SWAVELY, who is engaged in farming in Amity township, Berks county, Pa., near Yellow House, was born in Earl township, the early home of the family, April 24, 1859, son of Peter H. and Ann (Swavely) Swavely.

Adam Swavely, the founder of this family, was a native of Hessen, Germany, and came to this country at the time of the American Revolution, serving as one of the soldiers in King George's army. In 1782 he located in Earl township, and his name appears that year among the taxables. He was a laborer and wood chopper, and acquired a small tract of land in what is known as Woodchoppertown, in Earl township, and is buried there in a private cemetery, located in the timber southeast of William C. Shane's place—now a forlorn and neglected spot. On the tax list of 1782 his name is spelled Swable, and in the census of 1790 it appears Adam Swebely, Sr. On the latter list also appear: Adam Swebely, Jr., Leonard Swebely and Michael Swebely. Among the children of Adam Swavely were: Adam, Jr., Leonard, who had a son, John; Jacob, who had a son, Peter; Michael; and Peter.

Peter Swavely, grandfather of Wellington S., was born in Earl township, and died in 1863, aged seventy-eight years, and is buried at Oley Churches, as is also his wife, whose maiden name was Kate Hartman. He was a laborer and woodchopper in Woodchoppertown. They were the parents of seven children, namely: Isaac; Betzy; Kitty; Polly; infant daughter; Peter H. and Daniel.

Peter H. Swavely, son of Peter and Kate (Hartman), was born in Earl township, in 1833, and died in the same township May 3, 1906, aged seventy-two years. He was a shoemaker by trade, and completed his apprenticeship when only eighteen years of age. His tract of seven acres of good land was located about three-quarters of a mile west of Shanesville. He was a school director in the township. For three years he was an elder at Oley Churches, of which he was a Lutheran member, and he is buried on the Swavely plot at that place. In 1858 he married Ann Swavely, daughter of John and Catharine (Kemmerer) Swavely, and they had ten children: Wellington S.; Amelia m. (first) Chester Davis, and (second) a Mr. Eck, of Reading; Emma m. Daniel Hartman; Ellen m. Isaac Hinkel; Andora; Elvina m. Samuel Mest; Clara m. William Hartman; Mandilla m. Charles Haring; Mary m. Rudolph Rhoads; and Adda m. Frank Rhoads.

Wellington S. Swavely attended the district schools in Earl and Oley townships until he was eighteen years of age, the school term at that time being from four to five months. He was hired out among the farmers of Oley township between the ages of twelve and thirty years. In the spring of 1890 he began farming in Oley township, on the farm of Mrs. Solomon De Turk. This consisted of 100 acres, and he gave it his close attention for four years. In the early months of 1895 he located in Amity township, on the Col. Jeremiah Weaver farm of 234 acres, and there he has since made his home. In 1901 the farm become the property of Reuben Nagel, but is now owned by Mr. Swavely. He has been very successful, and has nine head of good horses, and thirty-two head of cattle, and a full line of modern machinery. Mr. Swavely is strictly a self-made man, beginning life for himself with nothing but an honest name. In addition to the property above mentioned he owns the homestead of his father in Earl township, near Shanesville, consisting of seven acres of land and good buildings, and he also owns eighty acres of woodland in Earl township.

In politics Mr. Swavely is a Democrat, and for three years he served as school director in Amity township, and he was also a delegate to the county convention under the old system. He is a member of the creamery board at Yellow House. He and his family all belong to Christ Lutheran Church in Oley. He was a member of the building committee when the present beautiful church edifice was built in 1908. Since 1898 he has officiated as deacon, and he has given liberally toward the support of all its worthy endeavors. Fraternally Mr. Swavely is a member of Amity Castle, K. G. E., of Amityville; and also of the I. O. R. M., of Yellow House.

On March 9, 1889, Mr. Swavely married Katie Kauffman, daughter of Daniel and Annie (Guldin) Kauffman, and granddaughter of Simon Guldin (whose wife was a Ludwig). Six children have blessed this union, as follows: Annie A. m. Edwin Griesemer; Nathan W.; William M.; Irene; Ethel A.; and Edith S.

GEORGE SHERMAN GAUL, who since 1889 has been general manager of the "Grand View Sanatorium," near Wernersville, was born in Lower Heidelberg Dec. 5, 1859.

George Gaul, grandfather of George S., was a farmer of Cumru. He was married to Catharine Potteiger, and by her had five children: Henry, who died unmarried; Aaron, m. to Magdalena Ruth, daughter of Francis; John; Mary, m. to Edward Medlar; and Catharine, m. to Gabriel Dundore.

John Gaul, father of George S., was brought up in Spring township on a farm, and carried on farming in Lower Heidelberg. He died at the age of thirty-five years. He married Catharine Sherman, daughter of Isaac Sherman, of Heidelberg, and they had two children, George Sherman and Sallie, the latter marrying Charles F. Lamm, a son of Joshua Lamm.

When only five years old, George Sherman Gaul lost his father by death, and he was placed with uncles until he was twelve years of age, during this time going to school and assisting at light work on the farm. The use of the German language prevailed in the vicinity where he lived, and wishing to acquire a knowledge of the English language he went to Cumberland county and found employment on a farm. He remained nearly two years, looking after live stock and attending the superior public schools of that county during the school term, and on his return to Berks county lived with an uncle on a farm in Lower Heidelberg until he was eighteen years old. In this time he attended the Krumbine Academy at Womelsdorf and the Oley Academy at Friedensburg. He then taught a public school in Lower Heidelberg for one term, and later securing employment in the general store of Deppen & Wenrich, at Wernersville, he continued with them for five years. When the senior partner, Dr. James W. Deppen, received the appointment of postmaster at that village, Mr. Gaul became his assistant and filled the position during the term from 1885 to 1889. During this time he also had charge of Dr. Deppen's large hotel there, the "Lebanon Valley House." Winning the entire confidence of his employers, they then gave him the management of the large health resort which they had purchased, south of Wernersville, and named "Grand View Sanatorium," and at this popular and prosperous resort he has continued until the present time.

Mr. Gaul married Gertrude Catherine Deppen, a daughter of his employer, Dr. Deppen, and by her had five children, two of whom died young; the survivors are Laura May (married to Earl O. Enrich), Mayme Catharine and Beulah Estella. The mother died and Mr. Gaul married Sallie Schaeffer, daughter of John Schaeffer, of Lower Heidelberg.

Dr. Deppen, the father of Mr. Gaul's first wife, was a successful physician and a citizen of great enterprise at Wernersville for many years. He was married to Mary A. Reber, a daughter of John B. Reber, and they had three children: J. Daniel m. Kate M. Ruth; Charles S. m. Mary Huber; and Gertrude Catharine m. George Sherman Gaul.

JOHN S. DREIBELBIS, one of the well-known hotel proprietors of Berks county, who is now conducting the "Washington House," midway between Rehrersburg and Womelsdorf, at Host, was born July 6, 1851, at Virginville, Pa., son of William and Hettie (Stoudt) Dreibelbis.

William Dreibelbis, grandfather of John S., was a son of Jacob, and in early life engaged in farming, but later was for over thirty years a merchant and hotel keeper at Virginville, where his death occurred at the age of sixty-five years. He was married to Elizabeth Miller, and to them these children were born: Reuben, who resided on the homestead and conducted a general store, had three children,—Winfield, Zeth and one daughter who died young; William was the father of John S.; Charles is engaged in farming in Missouri; Jacob, who was twice married, with seven children by his first wife, died in Virginville, aged about sixty-nine years; Augustus, who carries on farming and also conducts a hotel, is married and has eight children, four boys and four girls; Susanna, the widow of William Seidel, who died in Virginville in 1904, has nine children, all living; Hannah m. John Wanner, a farmer of between Hamburg and Virginville, Windsor township, and has eleven children; and Elizabeth, the widow of William Hottenstein, who died in 1904, resides in Ontelaunee township, and has one daughter.

William Dreibelbis, father of John S., was born in Virginville, Pa., Oct. 12, 1827. He conducted a hotel there for five years, but after his marriage engaged in farming, and so continued until his retirement in 1904, at which time he went to live with his son in Host. He died March 12, 1906. He was married to Hettie Stoudt, by whom he had one son, John S., and after her death married Kate Keim, who also preceded him in death, there being no children to the second union.

John S. Dreibelbis was educated in the common schools of his native town and assisted his father in work upon the farm until he was nineteen years old, when he took charge of the place on his own account. Two years later he purchased a farm which he operated for twenty years. The next three years were spent in conducting a creamery, and he then engaged in farming for another three years. After giving up agricultural pursuits Mr. Dreibelbis spent four years in the lime and quarrying business, and at the end of that time purchased his present well-known hostelry, the "Washington House," at Host.

In 1869 Mr. Dreibelbis was married to Sarah Yoder, daughter of John and Sarah (Baar) Yoder, and three children have been born to this union: Alice m. Emanuel Saul, son of John and Maria Saul, of Richland, Lebanon county, who is farming near Strausstown, and they have eleven children; Hettie m. John Strausser, son of Wilson and Mary Strausser, resides on a farm near Shoemakersville, Perry township, and has nine children; and William Y., who conducts the farm connected with the hotel, m. Cora Guildin, but has no children. The family are members of the German Reformed Church, where Mr. Dreibelbis served for a number of years as deacon and member of the building committee. He is a Republican in politics, but votes rather for the man than the party.

WARREN L. WISE, one of the progressive farmers of Douglass township, was born there July 24, 1866, son of William H. Wise. He grew to maturity on his father's farm, and worked then at the tin smith's trade for one year. He gave his services to his father until he was twenty-one, and in the spring of 1898 he began farming in Oley township, near the Yellow House, and was a tenant there on the Ammon Rhoads farm for three years. In the spring of 1901 he moved to Douglass township, and settled on the old home farm, which in 1903 he purchased from the estate. This farm is located north from the central part of the township, in School District No. 4. It was owned by his father many years and before him was the property of Henry Brunner. The farm has ninety-two acres of the best land to be found in the township. The present set of buildings were erected by William H. Wise, with the exception of a stone house which dates from the Revolutionary war period.

Mr. Wise is a Democrat in his political faith, and has always been alert to the best interests of his party. He and his family are Lutheran members of St. Paul's Church at Amityville, of which he was deacon for four years.

On Nov. 17, 1892, Mr. Wise was united in marriage with Ellen Spatz, daughter of Jacob and Lydia (Tobias) Spatz, of Jacksonwald, and granddaughter of Abraham and Catharine (Lorah) Spatz. Abraham Spatz was a farmer in Exeter township, and to him and his wife were born three children, as follows: Sarah, Ephraim and Jacob. Jacob Spatz had a fine truck farm in Jacksonwald. To him and his wife, Lydia Tobias were born: Ellen, Emma, Jacob, Abraham, and Daniel. Mr. and Mrs. Wise have been blessed with three children, namely: William J., Edgar W. and Marion Naomi. Mr. Wise is one of the enlightened men of his township, and is ever ready to lend his aid to any movement that tends to the progress and development of his town or county.

GEORGE B. BORTZ, a well known business man of Temple, Pa., who conducts a grocery and general merchandise store, was born in 1868, in Muhlenberg township, Berks county, son of Gideon and Priscilla (Boltz) Bortz, and a grandson of Daniel Bortz.

Daniel Bortz was a farmer in Muhlenberg township, an earnest supporter of Democratic principles and a pillar of the Reformed Church. He married a Miss Heck, and to them were born these children: Gideon; Charles; Amos; John; William; Elias; Sally, who married Daniel Snyder; and Mrs. Daniel Schlenger.

Gideon Bortz was a carpenter by trade, but later in life engaged in agricultural pursuits, and operated a farm for twenty-five years in Muhlenberg township, his death occurring at Temple, Feb. 21, 1902. His widow still survives him. Twelve children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bortz, six of whom are still living; Landis, Clara, Emma, William, George B. and Daniel. During the Civil war Gideon Bortz was drafted for service in the Union army, but was able to procure a substitute. He was a Democrat in politics, and held a number of township offices, and in religious belief was of the Reformed faith.

George B. Bortz was educated in the schools of Muhlenberg township, after leaving which he clerked for M. S. Adams for five years, at Rothermel's store at Blandon for a period, and at a store in Reading for two years. He then returned to Temple, where for one and one-half years he served in the capacity of clerk for Charles Kesling, and at the end of this time engaged with his brother Daniel Bortz in a general merchandise business at Temple. This partnership continued until Aug. 1, 1904, when George B. purchased his brother's interest, and since that time has successfully conducted the business alone, carrying a complete and up-to-date line of groceries and general merchandise. Mr. Bortz has a reputation for honesty and integrity, and his goods are always as represented, consequently he has a large, steady trade among the citizens of his community.

Mr. Bortz was married to Katie Wertz, daughter of Franklin Wertz, and one child, Helen, has been born to this union. Fraternally Mr. Bortz is connected with the I. O. R. M.; Washington Camp No. 107, P. O. S. of A.; and I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 470, of Reading. He is also a member of the Intermediate Relief Association of Reading, and the Temple Relief Association. In political matters he is a Democrat, and is now serving as township auditor.

SYLVESTER F. FRITZ, who is successfully engaged in the milk business, his route being located in the city of Reading, Pa., has his place of business at the "Mountain View Hotel," which hotel is conducted by his brother, Henry F. Fritz. He was born Jan. 13, 1868, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Lewis G. Fritz.

Sylvester F. Fritz attended the schools of Cumru township, and when a lad of fourteen years secured employment on an ore boat, where he did the work of a man. After about two years in this capacity he resigned and returned to the home farm, on which he worked for his father until his marriage. On March 9, 1893, he married Miss Ida A. Haak, daughter of Nathan and Lydia (Seidel) Haak. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Fritz spent one year in Reading, and they then returned to Cumru township, where he erected his pleasant residence in the summer of 1895. Since 1892 Mr. Fritz has been engaged in the milk business at the "Mountain View Hotel," which place was formerly owned by his father, and he has built up one of the best trades in the city of Reading. Since attaining his majority Mr. Fritz has been an ardent Republican, and has been active in the ranks of his party, serving on numerous occasions on the election board of his township. He and Mrs. Fritz are consistent members of Yocom's (Christ's) Union Church, of which they are liberal supporters.

JAMES MOORE, deceased, who for a number of years was a well-known agriculturist of Berks county, operating an extensive property in Spring township, was born in that township, June 15, 1850, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Matz) Moore, and grandson of Jacob Moore, a farmer and miller of Spring township, where he died.

Jacob Moore, the father of James, received a fair education in Brecknock township, Berks county, his native place, and later became a miller and farmer of Spring township, owning a fine mill and 100 acres of land. He also successfully conducted a hat manufacturing business for some years, having his factory in a part of his mill. He died at the age of seventy-one years. Mr. Moore married Miss Elizabeth Matz, daughter of George Matz, and they had these children: Elizabeth m. Martin Althouse, lives at Denver, Lancaster county; Martin m. Sallie Fitterling, is now the owner of the old homestead in Spring township, which has been in the possession of the family for a period of 150 years; and James.

James Moore attended the schools of his native township, and under his father learned the hatting business, which, however, he only followed for a few years. He then devoted all of his time to agricultural pursuits, being for a time employed by his father, after which he conducted the homestead on his own account for six years. Mr. Moore died April 21, 1894. He was a member of the Lutheran Church, a kindly, Christian gentleman, and a man of many sterling qualities of character. In political matters he was a Republican, but took only a good citizen's interest in public matters.

On Jan. 6, 1882, Mr. Moore was married to Amanda Hartz, daughter of Jesse and Catherine (Kachel) Hartz, and granddaughter of Samuel and Sarah (Ludwig) Hartz, the latter farming people of Brecknock township, Berks county. Jesse Hartz, father of Mrs. Moore, was a well-known farmer of Spring township, where he had a fine property, and where his death occurred at the age of seventy-one years. Two children were born to Jesse and Catherine Hartz, namely: Elizabeth, who is single; and Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore erected a fine double residence at Shillington in 1901, in one part of which she resides, and she also owns other valuable real estate in the town. She is a member of the Lutheran Church and has a wide social circle. "

DANIEL HELFRICH SCHWEYER, a representative citizen of Berks county residing at Bowers Station, operating one of the largest granite and marble works in the country, senior member of the firm of Schweyer & Leiss, manufacturers of monuments, and president of the Laurel Hill Lumber Company, of Somerset and Fayette counties, was born on his grandfather's homestead, Feb. 29, 1836, son of John and Elizabeth (Helfrich) Schweyer.

The name Schweyer has been variously spelled by the different branches, and even by members of the same family. Tradition says the original home of the family was in France and that about the middle of the eighteenth century there came to America four brothers, Christian, Heinrich, Samuel and Esau Schweyer (Sweyer or Schwoyer). But from authentic sources found in the Heraldic Library at Vienna we glean the following account of the Schweyer family, their origin and place of settlement.

The Schweyer family sprang from Pomerania, the eastern province of the Kingdom of Prussia, and the founder of the same was living in the year 1172. His name was "Edgar Schweyer," which name in the ancient Pomeranian language meant "saint." He held the office of Fellerber (that is, "high priest") of the clan of the Obetuter. His residence was on the island of Hiddensöe. His wife, "Thorga," was the daughter of a count from the island of Rügen. Edgar was a brave warrior. On his shield he bore an eagle with outspread wings, the symbol of courage and sagacity. On his helmet he wore two buffalo horns, the symbol of the god Woden, representing great strength. These symbols were also assumed by his descendants, as their coat of arms. Edgar in the year 1172 was converted to the Christian faith and baptized by the German missionary Orosius. He died on the island of Hiddensöe, A. D. 1213. He had three sons, namely: Pelagin, Orosius and Anagas; the two first named entered a monastery. Orosius had large possessions on the islands of Hiddensöe and Rügen, and his descendants were still flourishing in the same place at the time of the Emperor Sigismund. About the year 1412 two brothers of the family, Wendel and George Schweyer, were the only persons surviving of the name. Their descendants were still flourishing about the middle of the sixteenth century in Pomerania, and were still maintaining the old title of nobility. At the time when the glorious King of Sweden, Gustavus Adolphus, arrived at the court of Pomerania, two of the members of this family joined him at Hallem, these being Felix and Conrad Schweyer. Felix was killed in an assault on the city of Frankfort, near the river Oder. Conrad remained in the army during the war, which lasted thirty years, and finally settled at Rebuick, in the Dukedom of Hessen. He married Francisca Kleinger, dropped his title of nobility and lived as a farmer at Rebuick. He died in the year 1672. The name of his son was Augustus Schweyer, farmer and hotel-keeper at Rebuick, whose wife was Elizabeth Homer. He died in 1713, leaving three sons, whose names were: Nicholas, Leopold and Christopher Schweyer. From there the family spread over the Dukedom of Nassau, Hesse Frankland (Franklin) and the grand duchy of Baden.

Presumably from one of these sons comes the branch in Maxatawny township, through Nicholas Schweyer, great-grandfather of Daniel Helfrich Schweyer. He was born Oct. 18, 1721, and died March 25, 1800. His children were: George; Jacob, who was recruiting officer in Philadelphia, and served as lieutenant in the 5th United States Infantry, during the war of 1812; Peter, who died in 1828; Christian, mentioned below; Henry; Nicholas, whose son Nicholas was given the old family Bible by his grandfather; Valentine, and Barbara. Nicholas Schweyer, the great-grandfather, was an officer in the Prussian army. He was gathering arms and flannels to come to America to trade with the Indians, when he was arrested by the government and charged with inciting insurrection. He was disfranchised and his estate confiscated. He escaped and came to America, bringing with him the family Bible. His family followed him in care of a brother some years afterward. He was proved innocent and the franchise restored, but the estate was not looked after and was yet to be recovered.

From "30,000 names, German, Swiss, Dutch, French, Portuguese and other immigrants in Pennsylvania," edited by I. Daniel Rupp, Harrisburg, Pa., 1856, we learn that Nicholas Schweyer came to America, Oct. 4, 1752, on the ship "Neptune," Capt. John Mason, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes. Johannes (John) Schweyer came Oct. 13, 1768, on the ship "Betsy," T. Hank, captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes.

Christian Schweyer, son of the emigrant Nicholas, was born in 1780, and he made his home in Maxatawny township, where he was a farmer in early life, and later became an innkeeper at Rothrocksville. His wife was Elizabeth Keyser, born in 1784. He died in 1856, and she in 1858, and both are buried at Zion's Church in Maxatawny township. Their children were: Jonathan; John; Peter; Christian; Elizabeth (m. Isaac Kemp), and Matilda (m. a Mr. Boger). The Kutztown cemetery gives the record of two other children, that is, "Zwei kindern von Christian Schweyer & seiner Eha Gattin, Elizabeth born Keyser," Jacob, born Oct. 19, 1805, died Jan. 11, 1827, and Esther, born Dec. 23, 1808, died Feb. 12, 1824.

John Schweyer, son of Christian, was born in Maxatawny township, in 1800, and died in 1893, at the age of ninety-two years. In his youth he learned the duties pertaining to a farmer's life, and that occupation he followed during his active years. When he was nearing seventy years of age he retired, living at Rothrocksville. He was an official member of Maxatawny Zion's Church, belonging to the Lutheran congregation, and is buried there. His first wife was Elizabeth Helfrich, who died in 1844, aged thirty-four years. She was a daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Hoch) Helfrich, of Lehigh county. Nine children were born of this union, as follows: James; Allen; Henry; Daniel Helfrich; Jacob; Alfred; Francis; and George and Mary, who both died in infancy. Allen, Daniel H. and Francis are the only survivors of the family. The Christian name of John Schweyer's second wife was Elizabeth.

Daniel Helfrich Schweyer, son of John, was born in Maxatawny township on the property now owned by Alfred H. Smith. He attended the old pay schools of his day, and later was a pupil at Freeland Seminary, now Ursinus College. He also attended the Normal class at Reading, conducted by Profs. Lee and Bechtel, for one term. He taught school for six consecutive terms, beginning in Siesholtzville, and later teaching in Red Lion, Maple Grove and near Harlem, all in Hereford and Longswamp townships. At Siesholtzville he learned the stone cutter's trade from D. Y. Bittenbender, a brother-in-law, remaining there for three summers, while in the winters he still followed the teacher's profession. In 1856 he succeeded his brother-in-law in business and there continued for six years, when he came to Bowers Station, enlarging the scope of his business. At the same time in 1862, he was elected organist at Bowers Church, and he served in that capacity for sixteen years. When he moved to Bowers he formed a partnership with Levi H. Leiss, under the firm name of Schweyer & Leiss, to engage in the wholesale marble business. They also took up the iron ore business near Bowers, employing in both lines some thirty men. The iron business proved a source of profit for about ten years. In 1882 the firm purchased the marble quarries and mills at King of Prussia, in Montgomery county, and they now employ there as many as 125 men. They also owned and operated the Easton Marble and Granite Quarries at Easton, Pa. After the death of Mr. Leiss in 1902 Mr. Schweyer purchased the interest of the estate, and the plant at Easton was organized under the name of Henry A. Schweyer Company. The plants at Bowers and at King of Prussia are still conducted under the old firm name of Schweyer & Leiss. The Henry A. Schweyer Company is a corporation capitalized at $150,000 common stock and $50,000 preferred. They have a great deal of foreign trade.

Mr. Schweyer is also president of the Laurel Hill Lumber Company of Somerset and Fayette counties. On the land belonging to this company there are large deposits of bituminous coal, which is mined in great quantities. Mr. Schweyer operates a portable sawmill in Berks county, where he manufactures lumber of various descriptions. He owns a valuable farm of 125 acres, known as the old Hunter homestead and located one and one-half miles southeast of Bowers in Rockland township.

In politics Mr. Schweyer is a strong Democrat, and has always been active for his party's welfare. His first political office was that of school director of Maxatawny, in which he served with honor for six years. He was justice of the peace of his township for fifteen years, settling important controversies. He has settled up many estates, being executor, or administrator, and he has been guardian for a number of children. His term as justice of the peace ended only in 1888 with his becoming prothonotary. To the last named office he was elected with the largest vote given to any candidate on the ticket. He was made an elector by the State convention, representing the Ninth Congressional District, in 1888. In 1894 he was appointed by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction a trustee of the Keystone State Normal School, a position he continues to occupy.

Fraternally Mr. Schweyer is a member of Huguenot Lodge, No. 377, F. & A. M., Kutztown; Reading Chapter, No. 42, R. A. M.; DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, K. T.; and he was a charter member of Lyons Lodge, No. 634, I. O. O. F. With his family he belongs to Christ Reformed (De Long's) Church, at Bowers, of which he is an elder at the present time, and is also secretary of the consistory, besides having been treasurer of the church for a quarter of a century.

Mr. Schweyer was married, Feb. 6, 1856, to Catharine Bittenbender born April 16, 1836, daughter of Jacob and Susanna (Young) Bittenbender, of Hereford township. She died May 8, 1859. The only child of this union, Mary, died in childhood. Oct. 18, 1862, Mr. Schweyer married (second) Catharine Landis, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Hertzog) Landis, of Landis Store. Seven children were born to this union: Samuel and Anna, twins, who both died in childhood; Henry A., connected with his father in business, who married Maria Bittenbender, and has three children—D. Herbert, J. Leroy and Katherine M.; Harvey L., born in 1867, and died in 1891; Nora L., who m. Dr. W. T. Miller, of Wayne, Pa., and has a son, E. Dismant; Katherine L.; and Solon L., born 1874, and died 1901.

AUGUSTUS FRITZ, a well-known resident of Reading, who as operator of the elevator in the Pennsylvania Trust Company Building has made a large acquaintance, was born July 31, 1859, in Cumru township, Berks county, son of Isaac and Eliza (Maloney) Fritz.

Daniel Fritz, the grandfather of Augustus, was born in Cumru township, and there spent all of his life, dying at the age of eighty. He married and had these children: Benjamin; Augustus; Daniel, who was a soldier during the Civil war, and Isaac, father of Augustus. Isaac Fritz was born in Cumru township, and spent his life in agricultural pursuits among the farmers of his district. He died when comparatively a young man, in 1870. Mr. Fritz married Eliza Maloney, and both are buried at Yocom's cemetery, in Cumru township. Their children were: Henry, deceased; Annie E., of Philadelphia; Augustus; Isaac, of Reading; and Mary, who married William White.

Augustus Fritz secured his early education in the public schools, and as a young man entered the employ of the Van Reeds, at their paper mill, remaining in this employ for a period of twenty-two years. In 1893 he came to Reading and located at No. 525 Schuylkill avenue, where he still resides. He is employed as an elevator operator in the Pennsylvania Trust Company Building, and is well and favorably known. He is a member of Camp No. 560, P. O. S. of A., and of St. Mary's Reformed Church.

In 1882 Mr. Fritz was married to Alma Leinbach, daughter of Christian Rick and Louisa (Tobias) Leinbach, the former of whom was for many years a well-known paper manufacturer of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Fritz have four children: Harry L., a machinist and tool-maker employed at the Penn Hardware Company, married Estella Miller, and has two children,—Grace and Florence; Laura, the wife of Edward Froby; Charles A.; and Jennie L.

WILLIAM H. SPROESSER, a well-known citizen of Reading, Pa., who holds the rank of sergeant on the Reading police force, was born in the city of Philadelphia, Nov. 8, 1847, son of Charles E. and Elizabeth (Bowers) Sproesser.

The grandfather of William H. Sproesser was born in Germany, in a town called Winnenden, in Oberamt Waiblinger. He was engaged in the tile business and also operated a brick yard for the manufacture of ornamental brick, having a large business. He died in his native place at an advanced age, the father of these children: Gottlieb, who succeeded his father in business and died in Germany at the age of ninety-four years, married Fredericka Fuchs, by whom he had a family of fifteen children, of whom only two are living, Charles, of Richmond township, and Ernst of Glenside; Wilhelmina, who married Louis Stahley, died in Germany; Catherine, who married Gottlieb Bower; Caroline, who married her sister Catherine's husband's brother; Ludwig, who died aged seventy years; Christian, who died in Philadelphia, Pa.; Charles, the father of William H.; and one son who is engaged in the sugar refining business in Germany.

Charles E. Sproesser was born in Germany in 1821, and in his native country learned the blacksmith trade, but on coming to America took up the trade of pattern fitting with Lyall & McDonald, Philadelphia, with which firm he continued until 1868, coming in this year to Reading. He accepted a position with Orr, Painter & Company, and worked for that firm until 1873, when he engaged in the hotel business which he continued until his death, which occurred in 1895. His wife passed away in 1906, in the faith of the Lutheran Church, of which he was also a member. He was a Democrat in politics, and was fraternally connected with Herman Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Teutonia Lodge of Masons. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Sproesser, the only survivor being William H.

William H. Sproesser received his education in the schools of Philadelphia, and when a young man learned the trade of molder, which he followed with the firm of Lyall & McDonald until coming to Reading in 1868. On March 1st of this year he made the first cook stove manufactured in Orr, Painter & Company's stove works, and he continued with that firm until 1873, when he engaged in clerking in his father's hotel. After the retirement of his father, Mr. Sproesser carried on the business for ten years, but in 1901 retired from active life, living so until 1904, when he was appointed sergeant of police by Mayor Edwin R. Gerber, a position he has filled to the present time with much satisfaction.

Mr. Sproesser was married to Catherine Geltz, a native of Germany, and to them have been born two children: George W., who married Katie Sodders, has one child, Catherine; and Edward W., who married Minnie Herner, has three children, Irene, Ruth and Stanley. Mr. Sproesser is a member of the Lutheran Church. He is a Democrat in politics, and has given his party much valuable service, serving in 1880 as councilman of the Tenth ward, and as delegate to conventions on numerous occasions.

GEORGE RITNER, proprietor of the Neversink Ice Company, was born March 5, 1846, in Reading, son of Joseph and Leah (Lukens) Ritner, natives of this city.

Joseph Ritner was educated in the common schools and when a young man learned the dual trades of brick laying and hatting, following the former during the summer seasons and the latter in the winter months. He was a very good workman, was a kind neighbor and a useful citizen. Mr. Ritner's death occurred in 1876, when sixty-nine years of age, his wife having passed away the year before, aged sixty-four years. Like her husband she was noted for her kindness and charity, and was especially beloved by those who were suffering or in want. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ritner: Mary, died single; Frank, deceased; Sarah, married John Cahall; George; and Anna and Caroline, deceased. In religious belief the family were members of the Roman Catholic Church.

George Ritner received his education in the common schools of Reading, and during his vacations assisted his father. After completing his schooling he found employment at the Reading Cotton Mills, later apprenticing himself to the trade of machinist, in the machine shops of the company. He later worked in the McIlvaine Sons' sheet mill until 1864, when he enlisted in Co. I, 196th P. V. I., as corporal, serving until the expiration of the war. After receiving his discharge he returned to Reading and followed the machinist's trade until 1874, when he engaged in the ice business. For twenty years he handled natural ice, but for the past twelve years he has been producing artificial ice, his office being located at No. 311 South Sixth street. Mr. Ritner is one of the oldest ice dealers in business in Reading, and has a large, steady trade.

In 1872 Mr. Ritner was married to Miss Mary K. Nagle, daughter of Alexander Nagle, eight children being born to this union, six of whom survive, as follows: Joseph; Annie; Charles; Franklin; George and Genevieve. In politics he is a Democrat, and was alderman from the second ward from 1885 to 1890, serving also as register assessor. He and his family are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

MERKEL M. RAHN, proprietor of the Washington Hotel at West Leesport, Pa., and one of Bern township's best known and most highly esteemed citizens, was born in Ontelaunee township, Berks county, June 8, 1848, son of William and Susan (Merkel) Rahn.

Jacob Rahn, the great-great-grandfather of Merkel M., was born Aug. 8, 1728, and his wife, Margaretha, who was a widow, was born Aug. 4, 1714. They had two sons, Jacob and Adam. The latter, born in 1762, deceased in 1842, had a son Adam, who was born in 1809, and who had William, Isaac H., Sarah, Lewis, Adam and Mary.
